Britain has come to terms—a trader's terms—with the soviet government, and American business is coyly flirting in the same direction. Not quite yet can we accept Russian gold at Russia's hands; but if Sweden will first restamp it, we can accept it without moral taint at the hands of Sweden. Thus we vindicate our puritanism.

Lenine unprofitable is a demon; profitable he is a gentleman.

From such imbecility there is no salvation except through the uncovenanted mercies—or a good hearty laugh. And it is just here that Lenine permits himself this bit of satire: "I am afraid that I am becoming respectable."

New Words for Old Truths

BAPTISTS are blazing a road for the old faith through a new wilderness.

Much of our denominational bewilderment at present is due to the fact that a new situation has arisen which insists on asking some more searching questions at the doors of all the churches. The age of science and machinery has come. It is fact in the scheme of God's creation. It puts to every religion the question: Can your old faith function in any helpful relation to life as life must now be lived?

Old loyalty to the old faith in its old forms of expression can reply in the affirmative with all honesty and good-will. But the old forms of expression are not intelligible to a generation that has learned its language from a new group of facts and from a whole new system of thinking and living. Unless the old faith can learn to express itself in language of the present generation then it cannot hope to awaken in this generation a loyalty equivalent to that of the generation past or passing.

Can it so express itself?

Scientific methods applied to the study of the creative process, of human psychology, of biblical literature, of economics and industry and of social relations and organization (after making full allowance for the blunders of immature and careless study) have placed us in possession of a bewildering mass of new information, new problems, new conceptions not yet adjusted in their relations, new forms of duty, new states of mind, new and vast currents of social movement.

The writer of this note has lived in constant and quite intimate contact with the intellectual movement of the entire half-century past. He has held to the old faith steadily through all these years. The old terms, the very cant of fifty years ago, are familiar to him and still possess a sweet power of religious expression. But he knows well that while the facts of the inspiration and authority of the Bible, the Trinity and the atonement remain as unchanging as the hills, the definitions and explanations he received in boyhood no longer suffice to command the faith of this age. To a considerable extent they are a dead language.

The gospel of Isaiah was perfectly valid for his time. It is still valid. But when John and Jesus appeared they gave to it a rich, new interpretation in terms the men of their time could apprehend. Paul's message, valid, fit and final for his day, required a restatement by Luther and Calvin for their own times. So, for this age the same old gospel must be reconceived and restated. But in restating it our message will be a barren and denatured gospel unless we can at the same time conserve, appreciate and perpetuate the saving values it yielded to the fathers.

What does salvation mean in terms of a new psychology? What does duty mean in terms of a new speaking in our own language the old cry, "This is the in terms of a new social order? By and by we shall get answers to these questions and they will be answers that will validate and confirm the same glorious gospel of the ages gone.

On another page of this issue there appears one of the most remarkable symposiums on prayer which it has been our pleasure to read for some time. The items published are extracts from longer statements prepared by well-known men and women at the request of Dr. E. M. Poteat of the department of prayer and stewardship. The statements abound in suggestions of value both to individuals and to churches which desire to promote the prayer life of their members.

Three Mischievous Misses

THESE three misses are present in every church and society. They are very troublesome. It is a problem how to keep them quiet. One or more of them interferes with prayers and efforts for harmony. They are liable to slip into every committee meeting or conference on the sly.

One of them is very dull and always fails to grasp the meaning of what is said. Sometimes she delights in thinking a statement must have the worst possible meaning. Often people give her an occasion for not comprehending their meaning by their inaccuracy of expression. Too often people speak without realizing the full import of their words. So this mischievous miss has an opportunity to make trouble. She would not do so much harm if it was not for her two sisters. They spread the trouble.

One of them misconstrues the meaning of statements, not always intentionally but often disastrously. She separates the dearest friends.

"Alas! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison truth;
And constancy dwells in realms above;
And life is thorny and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we love
Doth work like madness in the brain."

When words have two meanings this miss accepts them in the more damaging sense. She suspects a wrong motive for the feelings and actions of others. Longfellow says, "Believe me, every heart has its secret sorrows, which the world knows not; and oftentimes we call a man cold when he is only sad."

The third miss is the most troublesome of all. She is the most blameworthy, as there is more of purpose in her mischief. She tells lies with her fingers, with her eyes, with interrogation points and exclamation points. She runs about from one house to another. She gets the opinions of people about their neighbors or fellow-Christians, and then with the aid of her two sisters causes turmoil. Matters become worse and worse. Old friends do not even speak now. Ant hills are magnified to mountains. A drop of fetid water becomes a large, miasmal swamp. Typhoid germs are planted even in the minds of people.

If these misses could be expelled from society how happiness would be augmented! They should be killed. There names are Misunderstanding, Misinterpretation, and Misrepresentation.

MISS BURRALL'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS AT STEPHENS COLLEGE, MARCH 13

"God Wants Me in Missouri"

By ROY IVAN JOHNSON

AN INCREASE of 27,000 per cent in the membership of a Sunday school class in three years! That is the record of the famous Burrall class of girls in Washington, D. C. And already the Burrall class of Columbia, Mo. bids fair to duplicate this record.

Picture to yourself a large, commodious theatre, packed from footlights to gallery with young women—happy, expectant, and attentive. But exclude from your picture the flickering movie stars and the whirling contortionists of the vaudeville burlesque. In their stead, put Jessie Burrall with her magnetic personality, her unwavering faith in God and her intense appreciation of life, and you have a Sunday session of the Burrall Sunday-school class of Washington.

From a nucleus of six in 1918, the Burrall girls grew to be more than 1600 strong. They were more than a class: they were a society—organized for purposes of religious devotion, Christian service and whole-some pleasure.

RESIGNED A GOOD POSITION

But Jessie Burrall has left Washington. She has resigned her position as associate editor of the National Geographic Magazine and is devoting her entire time to the organization of a department of religious education in Stephens College, Columbia, Mo. She took up her duties there the first of February and in less than a month she had another Burrall class one-third as large as the one in Washington, numbering 604 girls, a class larger than the entire attendance at the Baptist Sunday-school before Miss Burrall's arrival.

As a leader of girls, what is Miss Burrall's wonderful secret? She knows girls—and she knows God. "Nothing can succeed without His help and guidance," she says. "I am coming to Stephens College not because I am dissatisfied in Washington but because I believe that the establishment of a practical program of religious training in our colleges for women is something that God wants done. When the need of Stephens College was presented to me, I accepted it as a direct challenge to my ideals of Christian service."

SOME two or three weeks after Miss Burrall took charge of the Bible work at Stephens College, a chaperone in one of the sorority houses came to Pres. Wood with the following story: "When I went out to the Sigma Iota Chi chapter house this afternoon, I found all the girls who live on the first floor seated on the floor in one of the rooms with their Bible in their hands. I went upstairs and found the girls there seated on the beds with their Bibles. Both groups of girls were reading, discussing and arguing among themselves. They remarked that they had never known before Miss Burrall came how much pleasure they could get from the study of the Bible. It had never before seemed to them to deal with such real problems."

SPECIALIZING IN THE IMPOSSIBLE

The slogan of Miss Burrall's class is: "We specialize in the wholly impossible," which is the practical way of saying: "With God all things are possible." That is why Miss Burrall is bound to succeed in the work she is undertaking.

To appreciate fully the importance and magnitude of her task in Stephens College, it is necessary to realize the narrowness of the intellectual ideals that have dominated the education of the past. Pres. James M. Wood says: "Our colleges have been instructional rather than educational. But traditional training will no longer suffice. Education for women must rest upon the emotions of sympathy and service which lie back of the greatest contributions to humanity and to civilization. It is only as education passes over from the dominance of the intellect into the realm of the fundamental emotions that it can become truly democratic. Few men think; all men feel. A purely intellectual training will produce an intellectual hierarchy; but a training that functions in the formation of wholesome attitudes of heart and mind in all matters pertaining to domestic, social, and public life establishes the foundations of a nation's greatness and insures the perpetuity of its ideals."

WOMEN FIX THE HIGH SCORE

No nation, it has been said, rises higher than the ideals of its womanhood. Therefore, the fostering of those ideals in the lives of college women, whose influence in their home communities will be enhanced by reason of their broader experience, is at once a contribution to the progress of civilization and a guaranty of the welfare of the nation.

When the trustees of Stephens College determined upon a reorganization of the curriculum, they had in mind the development of a college for women in which the content of every course should serve the dominant interests of woman, as revealed by scientific and empirical research, and should recognize the supremacy of the fundamental emotions of life rather than the traditional tenets that have so long governed the organization of curricula in colleges for men.

Deep-rooted in the lives of women is the instinct of service. It cannot be ignored in educational practice.

Education will either inhibit or encourage, suppress or direct. Woman's instinct of service! What cannot be accomplished through its utilization! Through a recognition of this and other characteristic traits of womanhood, Stephens College hopes to give intellectual direction and emotional stability to the efforts of women in their attempt to realize certain objectives of service. What a solid corner-stone does this natural service-response become for a practical religious training!

The task of building a department of religious education is a monumental one. But Miss Burrall is undertaking it with characteristic energy and enthusiasm. If it had been an easy task, it would not have demanded a Jessie Burrall to accomplish it. What does it mean? It means the organization of practical courses in Bible; the giving of definite training for special religious work such as Sunday-school teaching; the establishment of missionary training courses; the devising of means to co-ordinate religious training with every department of the college; the introduction of a religious morale that will function in the voluntary maintenance of high standards of conduct; the establishment of a strong bond of connection between the college and the churches in the home communities of the students; and the carrying on of extension work in churches where such work is desired.

It is a big and important job, and for that reason it is bound to be done.

A PROGRAM OF FIVE AIMS

The tentative program which has been outlined for Miss Burrall follows:

First: To teach the Bible, and to teach it in such a way as not to stir up doubts and questionings in the minds of her students, but to answer those questions which naturally arise during the adolescent period and to leave the student with convictions deepened rather than with convictions shattered.

Second: Through the various student organizations of the college and through the various religious activities of the institution, she will strive to develop within the college walls a religious atmosphere so deep and so positive that the student's religious instincts will seem just as normal as any other element in her life.

Third: She will co-ordinate the work of the other departments of the college in such a way as to give definite training to every student entering the institution in whatever phase of church work that student may be most vitally interested. It is the hope of the board of trustees that every community sending a student to Stephens College will receive back a woman trained to make some definite contribution to the religious life of the community.

Fourth: She will organize pre-missionary training courses for the benefit of those students who wish to dedicate their lives wholly to some phase of church work, either in the home or in foreign fields.

Fifth: As soon as practicable, she will organize an extension department, as well as other courses at the college and in the chief centers of population for the benefit of every church organization, every Sunday school, every young people's organization, and every woman's organization in the state. It is hoped that through this department the remotest church within our association shall be touched with a constructive program.

Miss Burrall has left an important position, in which she has gained national recognition, to take up what she considers a more important one. She has proved her efficiency as an organizer and has demonstrated a remarkable power as a leader of young women. The secret of that power is her partnership with God. "God wants me in Missouri," she told her great class in Washington, "so I am going." The possibilities challenged her Christian enthusiasm and devotion—and they should challenge the attention and interest of every Baptist in America. The problem to be solved is that of the relationship between education and religion. The Stephens College idea is that there is a vital reciprocal relationship between the two. Religious life becomes richer and deeper under an educational stimulus, and educational development is accentuated by the recognition and application of the religious values of life.

What the New World Program Means to These

A Chinese boy from Fukien sought English and found God. His people died of the plague, and their need made him a physician. He carried bricks and mortar to build a church and afterwards became its pastor

BY CHAS. L. BROMLEY

PROBABLY a few illustrations will give you the idea better than much talking. I think of a Chinese boy who came to us at the Shanghai Baptist College from a little village up in the northwest corner of Fukien province. Lai came to us because he could get English, and English meant at least twice as much salary as he could get without a knowledge of English. After a year or two with us he was converted and became a true Christian. He was too poor to go home in the summer time so he worked at the College, but the summer before he graduated he wanted to go home to see his folks, so he started off by boat and afoot across the province.

DYING, AND PARADING IDOLS

As he went west he found that the pneumonic plague was sweeping through the country and practically nothing was being done to stay its devastation. As he went through village after village he found that the dread disease had preceded him, taking its toll till there were not enough living and with strength to bury the dead. When he reached his own village he found that the plague had stricken it too. Indeed, Lai's own mother was dying.

The people in the village thought the disease was an indwelling evil spirit, and they had burned incense, and candles, and paraded the idols up and down the streets, but all to no purpose. Lai knew that there was but one thing to do—get a foreign doctor if possible. The nearest doctor was thirty hours away; but Lai started off, made the trip and asked for help. The doctor, however, had his own hospital,—crowded—and the plague was raging in his district of more than a quarter of a million people, so that he could not go with Lai. But he told Lai that he would inoculate him, show him how to do it and then give him all the anti-plague serum he could spare; and Lai should go back and inoculate the people in his village.

When Lai returned to us one of the professors asked him how he had spent the summer and Lai told this story. Then Lai said: "I have seen the need of my people for medical help, and I want to be a doctor to help them physically and spiritually." He had caught the Christian vision of service and dedicated his life to the Master in the service of his people. Today Lai is in Chicago, in the second year of a medical course fitting himself for that service.

CARRYING A HOD FOR GOD

I think again of Lieu Pong Ts. Lieu went to Soochow, a station in which the Southern Baptists are working, to look for work. At that time a Baptist church was being built under the direction of Mr. McDaniels. When Lieu applied for work Mr. McDaniels told him that he had only coolie work—carrying bricks and mortar. Lieu took the job and was a faithful workman till the church was finished. Again he applied to Mr. McDaniels for a job, and because of his faithfulness in carrying bricks and mortar, Mr. McDaniels was glad to offer him a place as janitor of the boys' middle school. In this position again Lieu proved himself dependable. He spent his spare time learning to read and the school boys were glad to help him. He attended church, became an inquirer, and later joined the church.

After he had been a Christian a couple of years, he went to Mr. McDaniels one day and said, "Mr. McDaniels, do you think I could be a preacher?" Mr. McDaniels said he had never thought of it; but Lieu had proved himself worthy, and he promised to bring it before the church. In due time Lieu was sent to the seminary for the three-year course—the church believing that he would be useful as an itinerant evangelist. When his three years were up, the members of the seminary faculty were so impressed with the man that they urged the Soochow station to keep Lieu in the seminary for two years more of training. Lieu stayed. After five years schooling he went back to the Soochow field to work in the country districts as an itinerant evangelist.

PASTOR WHERE HE CARRIED BRICKS

About three years later the city church in Soochow—the church to which the boys and girls from our middle schools go—needed a pastor and unanimously decided to call Lieu Pong Ts. This was the very church which Lieu had helped to build as a coolie carrying brick and mortar. Some of the leading members of the church had been students in the school there when Lieu had been janitor. They had graduated, gone to Shanghai Baptist College, graduated from it, and were back as teachers in their old middle school. They were most enthusiastic in calling Lieu. When I left China Lieu was doing a splendid work in that great, needy city, touching lives for Jesus Christ and seeing them transformed, even as his own life had been transformed.

The story goes that on one occasion Ole Bull was travelling across the Atlantic incognito. On board the boat there was a famous orchestra and it consented to give a couple of concerts for the entertainment of the passengers. In the course of the first concert the leader played a very beautiful and very difficult violin solo. At the close, among others Ole Bull went up to congratulate the leader upon his rendering of the piece, and in parting suggested that he could improve his performance by certain changes. The leader of the orchestra, thinking that he was far superior musically to any one else on board, gave curt reply to the suggestions of the great violinist. The next day Ole Bull went down into the steerage and found a little Italian boy with an old, well worn, and rather battered fiddle. A friendship was struck up and before long Ole Bull and the boy were chums, finding a common joy in the old violin. That night the great violinist persuaded his young friend to let him take the instrument to his room over night. When the time for the second concert arrived, Ole Bull entered the hall with the borrowed treasure under his arm. He was granted permission to play. He lifted up the old, well worn, rather battered fiddle and began to play the solo piece of the previous evening. As he played he touched the deep chords of the human heart his audience was moved and inspired and awed—they were conscious that there was a master at the bow. An old, well worn, rather battered fiddle it was, but there was a master at the bow. Oh, the possibilities of a life with the Master at the bow! I think of the possibilities of China's 400,000,000 souls with Jesus Christ in control—the hidden possibilities that he alone can release.

Again and again I have stood in the streets of a Chinese city,—narrow streets, dirty streets, vile smelling streets, and seen the children of China growing up there, with no playgrounds but those streets and dump heaps, shared by dogs, pigs, chickens, ducks and children; with no sanitation, no protection from disease; with smallpox, leprosy, typhoid, diphtheria abroad, spreading themselves without let or hindrance; with no opportunities for education—ninety million children in China, and all the schools put together, government, private and mission, can only care for four million! I have seen them poverty stricken, cursed to grow up in heathenism and ignorant superstition.

Why was I born in America, the land of blessing and opportunity, the land of schools and parks and the open door to a chance, the land of Christian civilization, while these 400,000,000 people were cursed to such conditions of life? There is but one answer—the privilege was mine, not that I might enjoy the good things for myself alone, not that I might take into my life and try to keep all the wealth of blessing that came to me through the Christian civilization of America; but that receiving it, I might share it; that having been blessed I might bless.

The Great Master alone can release the possibilities of China's millions; and he does it through human sacrifice—through human service.

The West is Still to be Won

This story raises the ridiculous question whether we shall scrap our home missions and then gives a serious reason why we should not do so

BY GEORGE E. BURLINGAME

THE late Theodore Roosevelt paid a high tribute, in his "Winning of the West," to the pioneer missionaries of the American Baptist Home Mission Society and others in similar service, for their influence on the new communities of the West in the early days of our national expansion beyond the Mississippi.

The 1920 census reveals so large an increase in the population of the western states, and educational statistics indicate such an enormous student body in their schools and colleges, that the inference naturally follows that the West has been won, and that the missionary no longer has a field.

WHY NOT SCRAP IT?

Why should the Baptists longer maintain the machinery when the task has been achieved? Why continue the Home Mission Society when the homeland has been won for Christ? Why not scrap this costly machinery and divert these needed resources to the foreign field entirely?

"There's a reason"! Leaving to others the task of picturing the vast and growing needs in immigrant centers, in rapidly expanding industrial communities, and among the negroes of the South, this writer undertakes to defend the thesis that the West is not yet won, and that the Home Mission Society is as much needed for pioneer work in the western states as ever.

In 1907 the Milwaukee Line, which had built across South Dakota as far as the Missouri River, began its extension to the coast, and in order to find a site for its bridge across the river, shifted its right-of-way northward to the location selected by their engineers for the crossing. Here a new townsite was laid out, and Mobridge (the name explains itself) was born. There are now 3500 people in the town, which is a wideawake and modern community, retaining some of the earmarks of the old frontier life and with a reputation throughout the state not entirely to its credit. A division point, 100 miles west of Aberdeen, its population is predominantly railroad people, many of them substantial and splendid folks.

The Congregational church entered Mobridge at the beginning, and save for the recent organization of a small Episcopal church, has had a practical monopoly of the field for thirteen years. Its present membership is 113. There are two Lutheran churches, both foreign-speaking, and a Roman Catholic church, all with good properties and resident ministers. The aggregate total membership of all the churches does not exceed 700 of the 3500 population. Sunday schools are correspondingly weak, and young people's work is practically nil.

Mobridge has been selected by a state commission as the site for a great hydro-electric power plant to harness the Missouri River to the railroads and factories of South Dakota, and the town will ultimately be a strategic center for the northwestern part of the state. The Baptist state convention decided to occupy the field and sent the state evangelist to Mobridge to begin work Dec. 15, with instructions to stay and see the enterprise through.

STARTED OFF WITH NINE

Three lines of work were undertaken in order. First, a complete social and religious survey of the town was made, involving a visit to practically every home in the community. Seven hundred calls were made during the two months of the campaign. The religious affiliation of each household was noted, and the results tabulated and card-indexed. Special lists were made of all people of Baptist and Disciple affiliations for intensive cultivation.

Sunday services were begun at the start, a lodge room being secured for the first month, and the skating rink later. The first service was attended by nine people. Three weeks later the attendance had grown to ninety. This second phase of the campaign culminated in a three

How they actually pray and what actually comes of their praying will help many another who limps Godward.

WOMEN OF ACHIEVEMENT ALONE WITH GOD

A Woman Writer Likes to Talk Things Over With God

As I look back, prayer always seems to have meant "talking things over" with Someone who was more than human parents, more loving, more understanding. Because he was God he mysteriously read my inner thoughts: it was no use pretending to him. I can recall a refreshing sense of healing after confessing the sins that seemed so numerous.

I passed through the period of self-assertion, when I prayed from fear rather than from love or a sense of need: it seemed safer to pray before going to bed. But a great sorrow brought me again to talking things over with God; and when new duties and responsibilities had to be undertaken, because it was God's work I had to do, it was the most natural thing in the world to lay the new plans before him and ask help.

So prayer has always been communion, pure and simple, in the sense that he and I have things in common; work that we share, persons we both love who need help; things that baffle me are all so clear to him, and in some mysterious way he can clarify my vision and guide my hands. Yet he does not always do this: prayer is not a dumping ground! He gave me a brain and thinking power and powers of activity patterned after his own, and I have discovered again and again that it does no good to shift my responsibility to him. His plan does not include doing my work for me. Prayer is really more of a battle-ground; I must fight to win; but in fighting, he helps. All my unanswered prayers come under the category of either "lazy expedient for work" or "self centered gain."

But over and over the seemingly impossible has been accomplished, and I firmly believe he has blessed the processes of hard work done for him. For instance, there was once a wretched period of suspense when an unusual piece of work was required for which I felt utterly inadequate, never having attempted anything similar before. Yet I longed to shine: I formed pleasant little visions of myself become famous, able to be pointed at! I prayed and absolutely nothing came; with a sense of shock I faced failure, when a new emphasis crept into the work. Here was a peculiar opportunity for arousing thousands of unknown people to an interest in the rest of God's family, and that bumptious young egotist seeking glory quite forgot self in the absorption of pricking awake dormant imaginations and furnishing alluring incentives. There were nights after a ten-hour day at my desk when every possible idea had been more than exhausted: I, utterly destitute; he certainly supplied the inspiration while I dug arduously for facts the next day!

So now, when he seems to fail me by not answering my prayers, I try to be reasonable enough to find out where I have undoubtedly failed him first,—in asking foolishly, or seeking unworthily, or putting last things first. He himself puts the kingdom of God first, and in our partnerships surely he has a perfect right to expect a similar motive in me.

A Woman President Takes a Lesson from Telephony

The greatest help that I have had in making my prayer life a reality has come through the realization of prayer as a force. This was so clearly taught in the New Testament that it is a mystery to me how so many of us fail to realize it. The scientific discoveries and applications of discoveries in the world of physical forces gave me my first insight. If the human voice can travel by wireless telephony across a continent and under the ocean, why may we not believe that prayer, an even more mysterious force, is transmitted by finer than ether waves, from soul to soul around the world.

Our prayers give channels through which the love of God runs sweetly to all the desert places of the world. The belief that something happens when I pray has helped me to pray with greater faith and persistency. I used to feel that if God was all-wise and loving and powerful, there was little reason why we should tease him for things which he knew we needed. I now realize that such an attitude was unreasonable and when I pray I enter into a working co-partnership with him.

Another Woman President Finds That Help Always Comes

Ever since my childhood, prayer has been a real factor in my life. My father was a rare man and I loved him devotedly, so that when he was taken from me in my early youth I turned to God as I had so many times turned to him with my little trials and perplexities. This is still my attitude toward God. I love him and talk to him and he seems as real as any personality to me. When the very great trials come and the foundations seem slipping away from under me, I

My earthly work, whatever it may be.

Call me not hence, with mission unfulfilled

Let me not leave my space of ground untilled.

Impress this truth upon me, that no one

Can do my portion that I leave undone;

For each one in the vineyard hath a spot

To labor in for life and weary not.

Then give me strength all faithfully to toil,

Converting barren earth to fruitful soil.

I long to be an instrument of Thine

To gather worshippers into Thy shrine know if I ask for help it always comes. I have learned not to say what I think but to ask what it best for me. So I live as in the house of a friend from day to day, always feeling the nearness of his presence and the sustaining strength of his mighty Power. He has never failed me yet.

A Woman of Affairs Learned to Pray at her Mother's Knee

I learned to pray at my mother's knee and through the constant practice of daily family prayers in my childhood home. Through the teachings and attitude of my father and mother God has always been very real and very near to me.

My experience of prayer is a simple but definite sense of the presence of an enveloping spirit,—my heavenly Father.

It happens that I am in a position where there are often problems to be solved of such a nature that I cannot be assured of the wisdom of my own judgment. Often while I am still on my knees the way clears before me and I see plainly the path that should be taken. I am sure this is some other power, not my own, working upon my mind, for it comes so suddenly, with such completeness and certainty. I am ashamed to say that I do not always realize at the moment that the vision is from God, but afterwards I see clearly that it is God, who in answer to my prayers, has given me the courage and patience to go on with an ever increasing sense of the reality and nearness of my loving, helping, heavenly Father.

MINISTERS IN THE SERVICE TELL HOW THEY PRAY

"Lord, Hold on Hard," He Cried as His Strength Gave Way

I do not pray much, I pray all the time. I never have asked for anything for myself. I say "Lord, you know what I would like, but that does not count. Make my will yours and then I will have all that a divine human life can know."

When my little girl's life was in the balance a few weeks ago and we did not know the kick of the scale, I went up to my room and prayed. This is what I said in the agony of my desire: "Lord, you know what that child means to me. Do thy great, great will, but if you take her you will have to hold on hard to me." That was all.

I cannot pray in long stretches. I find it hard to read books on prayer. So I do not pray much but

The Pruned Branch

Every branch that beareth fruit, he cleanseth it, that it may bear more fruit.—John 15:2.

IT IS the branch that bears the fruit

That feels the knife,
To prune it for a larger growth
And fuller life.

Though every budding twig be lopped,
And every grace
Of swaying tendril, springing leaf,
Be lost in space.

Oh, thou whose life of joy seems reft,
Of beauty shorn,
Whose aspirations lie in dust,
All bruised and torn,— Rejoice, though each desire, each dream,

Each hope of thine
Shall fall and fade; it is the hand
Of Love divine.

That holds the knife, that cuts and breaks
With tenderest touch,
That thou, whose life hast borne some fruit,
May now bear much.

ANNIE JOHNSON FLINT.

I pray all the time. That is why I have a faint gleam of the exegesis of the text, "Hid with Christ in God."

Power, and not granting of specific requests, is the divine answer to prayer. God gives himself and this includes all his gifts.

"Agonized" and Failed, and Well-nigh Shipwrecked His Faith

I can recall in my early manhood to have had the conception of prayer which made petition the chief if not the only emphasis. I read a sermon on the topic "The eternal God in the hands of men," which pictured Moses arguing with God till according to the preacher God changed his plan. Following this lead I can recall to have "agonized" all night in prayer for a certain objective which I desired, as I had read of others doing. The fact that the answer did not appear to come at that time well-nigh shipwrecked my faith in prayer.

The more I have used this wonderful privilege of the Christian prayer, the more I have come to emphasize the elements of it that have the effect of bringing me into harmony with God's will and purpose rather than bringing him into harmony with mine.

His Faith Came to Have a Creative Function

This is my testimony: Prayer never took its required place in my personal experience until my faith came to have a creative function. I had to learn that faith gives substance to the things hoped for, and when I acquired a faith like that, I could pray with additional satisfaction and profit.

I find spiritual worship and a cheerful sense of Christian duty the most blessed reactions of my prayer life.

We may not know how to pray as we ought, but the Holy Spirit, who knows the mind of God will continue to help us in our infirmity. I have found it so.

Driven to His Knees by the Stress of Pastoral Experience

My own real praying arises out of four situations:

First. Extreme and immediate need. I am often driven to this necessity when I need money and know not where to turn to find it. In the presence of such real need, God has never denied me when I have dared to ask and trust him for its supply. Often there is need for wisdom in making choice in perplexing situations, or to find the right answer to perplexing questions. Sometimes there has been imperative need of healing from sickness which hindered my service to him. Also when he sends me into the pulpit to speak without notes, and I must have my store of sustaining grace with the quickening of mind and the encouragement of heart to enable me to obey that mandate.

Second. Real praying arises with me from a meditative mood which usually results for a relaxed, seasoned, extended reading of his word.

Third. I am led to pray from a conscious need of heart-searching and correction of conduct before him. This consciousness of need not infrequently arises from those refreshings which come from the presence of the Lord as a result of the faithful preaching of his word by one of his ministers, or fellowship with other believers in seasons of prayer and worship.

Fourth. But I am inclined to think that I most perfectly fit my prayer life into the mind of the Master when I am led to spend time in meeting the sober, reasoned necessity to set all my affairs in order before him. Then I close the door, shut out all others, sometimes fast over the meal time and then, visualizing the real presence of the divine Master talk my affairs over with him as I would with any friend, whose bodily presence and proved sympathetic and understanding wisdom would invite my confidence.

God Accepted Tears for Words at the Side of the Grave

My mother's knee was my first altar; prayer, a habit formed in early childhood, persistently followed has brought God near and has yielded untold blessings, and made thanksgiving both a force to conquer with and the means of conserving all that is best in life. My temperament is not placid. I am subject to moods, whose fluctuations at times are disconcerting; but God knows me and has been infinitely tender and sympathetic, and my return to the altar for a fresh start has always been met with a gracious Father's blessing.

I try to start each day on familiar terms with him, to fit the commonplace items of each hour into his plan and be ready for the final "Thank you" when the night calls to rest.

Sometimes words fail. The day after we laid away our only son, and our hopes for his future had been wrecked, I kneeled and began, "Dear Father," and that was as far as I could go. God accepted tears for words then, and his comfort for eighteen years has been sufficient assurance of that fact.

Many of my prayers are brief expressions devoted entirely to thanksgiving. Long ago time, talent, money, ambition, family and life were placed in God's hands. It is an integral part of his plan to safeguard these interests, and I do not ask him daily to take care of them. Prayer for me is rather thanking God, without ceasing, for everything that comes into our life, from shadows to glories, from beautiful sunsets to songs that cheer and inspire.

I Saw My Mother's Face Radiant With the Light of Prayer

My first understanding of the real meaning of prayer came when I first discovered the reason for the unearthly radiance on the face, and moisture in the eyes of my mother, when she came out of her room from a few moments of quiet in the midst of a busy day. I had noted again and again that she slipped away for a little while, often after some misdeed of her boys. One day, when just a little chap, I asked her, "Mother, do you go into your room to cry?" and then I learned what prayer meant to a Christ-like soul.

I have never forgotten that lesson. Verified through a quarter of a century, prayer has for me a priceless privilege.

weeks' evangelistic effort, with services every evening in the rink. A small group of interested Baptists was zealous and tireless in its labors for a revival, and gradually the interest lured and snared others, while a spirit of inquiry among the unsaved appeared and fruited in a number of clear and joyous conversions and candidates for baptism.

The attitude of the Congregational church was frankly hostile to the Baptist invasion of a field which in thirteen years it had failed to occupy, but of which it claimed a monopoly. Formal protest was made to our Home Mission Society of the alleged violation of comity. A simple exhibit of the actual conditions existing on the field deduced from the survey, amply justified the Baptist intrusion into a very destitute community.

The third phase of the campaign came to its climax when on Sunday, February 6, fifteen baptized believers one by one signed their names to a covenant wherein they united to form a New Testament church in harmony with Baptist doctrine and practice. The charter list grew to a total of twenty-four within three days. The first act of the newly-constituted church was to receive candidates for baptism, among them a man of nearly sixty who had been converted three days before. He said, "I have lived more the last three days than I lived before in fifty years." There are ten or eleven who have applied for membership by baptism, which must be deferred until the river breaks up in the spring.

A woman's missionary circle has been organized with twelve members present at its first meeting. A Sunday school and young people's society are in process of organization. The state convention has proffered a generous measure of co-operation in the support of a pastor, for whom eager and prayerful search is being made. A peculiar opportunity faces the Baptists in this field, where people are hungering for the truth as it is in Jesus, and where nearly 700 children of school age are offered little save the movies and the pool-hall and the dance as means of recreation. An energetic and evangelistic pastor; a well-equipped building for worship, educational and recreational service; and loving oversight by the various denominational agencies which foster our Baptist ideals; these factors will make of the Mobridge church in time one of the strong forces for the effective evangelization of western South Dakota, and of the world as well. Denominational leaders are asked to note the names of those with whom they may correspond concerning various lines of educational and missionary work: Mr. S. D. Lamb, moderator and treasurer; Miss Rosalie Krauser, clerk, and chairman young people's work; Mrs. S. D. Lamb, president woman's society; Mrs. Ethel Brown, chairman Sunday-school work.

This story has been told at such length, not because of its importance per se, but as a typical piece of Home Mission Society work. Without the financial cooperation of the Society, the State Conventions in the West would be unable to undertake operations of this character, involving as they do a large initial expense in fields which offer no immediate financial return. The tactics is that of a siege, and a siege calls for a base of supplies back of the lines. The American Baptist Home Mission Society is the supply base for a multitude of siege attacks on spiritual destitution in our western states; and the nation had as much reason for scrapping the American Steel Corporation in the summer of 1918, as we Baptists have for scrapping the Home Mission Society while an endless line of godlessness and unbelief makes its stand here in the West against the gospel of our Redeemer.

WHEN men tell us of the beauty of ceremonial worship, the splendour of liturgy, mass, and priestly mediation, they remind us of the answer of one of Napoleon's war-beaten marshals, when the Emperor asked him if the Mass, re-introduced in Notre-Dame, was not "fine." "It lacks one thing, sire," was the answer, "it needs the million men who died to put it away." But there is a deeper truth. When you tell me of your appreciation of all this, I tell you that what it needs is the Christ who died on a Cross to destroy it all, and to substitute for it the religion of the spirit. If Priest and Altar, Ceremonial law and Rite, were sufficient for the soul of man, we stand before the supreme mystery of the Incarnation and the eternal reality of the Atonement and demand, Why this waste? God is Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth. —J. T. Comey.

What is in Mind for Mar. 20-May 1?

The Prohibition Foundation, through its President, Virgil G. Hinshaw, a Friend, is urging the churches and Christian people of the nation to call a Prohibition conference for obedience to and enforcement of the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act, in every community, some time between March 20 and May 1. The call states that the thing most needed in this country at this time is an open, manifest, and outspoken sentiment on the part of the good people of the different communities in favor of obedience to law. Any person wishing information or help on program for such a conference may send to The Prohibition Foundation, 729 Manhattan Bldg., Chicago, Ill., enclosing stamp for reply.

What is Wrong with the Y. W. C. A.?

Nearly ten years ago the "Social Creed" was adopted by the Federal Council of Churches and since that time it has been taken as the basis of a platform of social principles by a number of denominations. The creed is a declaration for equal rights for all men, a living wage, limited hours of work, the abolition of child labor and other fundamental principles of social justice.

In May, 1919, four additional resolutions were passed by the Federal Council, declaring for collective bargaining, democratic management of industry, a guaranteed minimum wage, and unemployment insurance. Less than a year later, the Y. W. C. A. in national convention adopted the "Social Creed" with the four new resolutions. The Y. M. C. A. likewise adopted the "creed" but the definite resolutions were not included. Hence it comes about that while the Y. M. C. A. is unmolested, the Y. W. C. A. is now the object of bitter attack.

Serves His Race

A. H. Herndon, a well known negro of Atlanta, Ga., has given $10,000 to house and aid the settlement work carried on in the city by educating colored women among the neglected children of their race. Their work has the approval and co-operation of leading whites, but its chief friend, financially, is this colored business man, who shares his prosperity with the unfortunate of his race.—So. Pub. Com.

Short on Mind Power

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, chancellor of Mercer University, speaking of Baptists, laments: "We have lost our intellectual leadership. The people who number nearly one-half of the white population of the South and whose schools provide only five per cent of those who attain national recognition may boast of numbers but it cannot boast of trained cultivated leadership. We have more churches demanding cultured pastors than we have men to fill them. We have schools which we cannot adequately man for lack of Baptist men of scholarship. We have a distracted world needing us who are able to interpret the meaning of a spiritual democracy to those who are trying to provide for themselves the political machinery of self-government, and we do not have men who are intellectually equipped for this service."

Culture 2800 Years Old

Education has always had a large part in the life of the Chinese people. The historian tells us that China's first great Emperor, who reigned from 2852 B. C. to about 2800, changed the knot notation of his day to the character we now use. From his day to this the rulers of China have tried to excel in fostering learning. Education, though based on Oriental ideals, has never failed to determine greatly the standing of the rulers of thought and government and all forms of life.

Doubled in Four Years

The offerings from all departments of Baptist churches in Porto Rico for the first six months of 1920 reached a total of $8728, or more than twice the offerings for the entire year 1916. Mr. Maxfield reports that the mission in the city of Bacolod in the Philippines spent but $300 of home money on dormitories, private academy, dispensary and kindergarten, as against Filipino contributions of $5500.

Tell the Pope

Japanese residents of New York have just contributed $42,000 to the Y. W. C. A. in Japan for the construction of a model dormitory for working girls in Osaka.

Mercer Teaches a, b, c's

A class of adult illiterates is now meeting each evening in one of the class rooms of Mercer University. The Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia is making the organizing of classes for illiterates a part of the personal service program. Bibles are being distributed among those who are taught in these schools for illiterates. Recently one hundred Testaments with large print, given by the Sunday-school board, were sent by me to Towns County which produced George W. Truett, F. C. McConnell and S. Y. Jameson, to be distributed among the old men and women in that county who have just learned to read and write.—Baptist Education Bulletin.

Inside Information

The French Egyptologist Lecau describes the subterranean necropolis in the temple of Thoth, with its tens of thousands of mummified ibises, as "the national wastepaper basket of Egypt." The packing of these sacred ibises is, nothing other than crumpled papyrus—hundreds of thousands of them—which, when deciphered and published, promise to throw incalculable light upon the life and civilization and history and religion of Egypt.

Look for the Raid Just the Same

Two and one-quarter billion pounds of beet sugar were produced in the United States last year, a record production, while our cane sugar output was 385,974,000 pounds, making a total sugar crop of 2,605,174,000 pounds. This is 15 per cent above our record sugar year in 1916. No good excuse for a canning time raid on the consumer this year.

Like the First Christians

Faustino Escobar of Pucon, Chile, is a convert to evangelical Christianity. He lives sixty miles from the railroad, in a town of twelve thousand people. For three years he has been preaching the gospel, supporting himself by the sale of a small home loom which he invented, and which he sells for fifteen pesos (three dollars) each. He also carries on a small farm. Large as the town of Pucon is, there is no public school in the place, and Escobar, although he has had schooling for but a month and three days and is otherwise practically self-taught, has started a school himself, in which he teaches some sixty children the three R's and the Bible.

Of Whom the World was not Worthy

One of the largest, if not the largest, religious migrations of modern times, is that of the Mennonite movement from Canada to Mississippi. They are taking this step because the Canadian government has passed laws compelling them to send their children to public schools, and because of other educational and religious restrictions imposed during and since the war. These restrictions are largely due to the fact that these Mennonites use the German language. They number something like 150,000 in Canada, and their agents have purchased more than 100,000 acres of land in the southeastern part of Mississippi, near the Alabama border, and have taken options on a hundred thousand more. This church is an anti-war organization which originated in Holland, from which it spread to Germany, and was driven from there because of its objection to war. It went to Russia in the latter part of the Eighteenth Century; and during the Nineteenth Century came to America, the larger part of them settling in Canada. Arrangements are being made for a large number to move to Mexico also.

Going After the People

A forward movement has been started at Ealing, England by a few Baptist laymen with the object of reaching the multitude who never attend any of the usual places of worship on Sunday. The Broadway Palladium, a cinema capable of seating 1,500 people, has been hired for three months, and should the experiment prove a success the services will be continued indefinitely. Popular preachers and speakers of different denominations have been engaged, an orchestra has been organized, and a choir of about a hundred voices will lead the singing. All the musical arrangements are in the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Moore. Every week over 30,000 people will have their attention drawn to the services by means of a film thrown on the Palladium screen at each of the daily performances. The first of the series of services was held on a recent Sunday night, when Dr. Clifford addressed an audience of at least seven hundred people for forty minutes on the subject of "The Mind of Christ." The only sound that broke the silence of those forty minutes was an occasional cough. It was an inspiring address.

How Do They Manage It?

The evangelical churches of Porto Rico have shown the riches of their liberality by raising $3500 for a hospital unit in the new insular tuberculosis hospital. A part of this has gone to stock the hospital dairy. The average daily wages of the Porto Rico Christian is but 75 cents.

Why Begrudge an Honest Penny?

Two years ago, some corn started from South American to the United States. The market price of corn in Chicago at that time was approximately $1.50 a bushel. The report of corn being imported was circulated broadcast by the grain market gamblers and manipulators and farmers were advised on every hand to sell. The price of corn in the United States declined to about $1 a bushel. Then before the next crop of corn was produced, that same corn went approximately to $2 a bushel. Without another bushel of corn being produced in the entire world, here was a change in the price of that product $1.50 down to $1 then up to $2 a bushel.—Capper's Weekly.

Montana Plan Works

Montanas' success in its tryout of the "Every-community Service" plan, due to the cooperation of the Home Missions Council of Montana which includes ten denominations, is proving an example in pioneer work which is likely to be undertaken elsewhere. With 107 definite areas allocated to the cooperating denominations, with concessions and agreements accompanying, the movement has been carried to a point where each body is taking hold with a new vigor.

Poland Joins the Free Nations

The new Polish republic has adopted a liberal constitution. All titles of nobility and all class distinction are abolished and made illegal under the constitution. Absolute religious equality is provided for, as is also equality in citizenship. Both men and women are to have equal rights in every particular in the government. Trial by jury is safeguarded, freedom of speech, of assemblage, of worship, of press are all provided for and provisions protecting the rights of labor and for equitable treatment of capital and protection of property rights are embodied in the new document. Under the constitution an educational system in which there will be no sectarianism is provided for from the primary, through the grammar, high schools, colleges and universities. No religious denomination will have control of the schools but they will be free and public to all and for all. The provisions regarding the ownership of land, abolishing the holding of vast estates and dividing the land among the people under an arrangement of just compensation to the owners, are among the important sections of the constitution.

China Moves Christward

Just as Chinese immigrants in America respond to the message of Christianity, so Chinese immigrants in Burma are showing a remarkable movement toward Christ. Along with the central school in Bassein, there is an affiliated school for Chinese, for which the Chinese Christians have given well for their building. Here mission work elsewhere linked with that in Burma, for the headmaster is from our Baptist mission in Swatow, China.

English Women Plead for Ireland

Thousands of women attended a demonstration in London, March 18, at which peeresses and labor women united in demanding that the government make a settlement of the Irish question "based not on force, but justice and good will."

Beats Evangelistic Campaigns

A great spiritual blessing has come to the churches of East Washington and North Idaho as a result of the New World Movement. Mr. A. H. Bailey says that no evangelistic campaign could have brought greater quickening to the Baptists of this territory.

Seventy to One for Goodies

Making all due allowances for defective returns, the total amount spent for public education in 1918, including current expenditures for private and endowed colleges and universities, and all expenditures for capital investment in buildings and equipment, was less than a billion of dollars. According to government returns for 1920, the people of the United States spent for luxuries in that year $22,700,000,000; more than twenty-two times as much as they spent for education only two years before, and $6,000,000,000, or 30 per cent, more than we have spent for education in all our history.

Nearly $100 a Head

It is possible. This is proven by the fact that the average individual pledge to the New World Movement is $94.24. (This is based on the examination of the returns from 1,800 of our churches) and there are more than a million and a quarter Baptists in the constituency of The Northern Baptist Convention. Figure it out for yourself.

Henry Gets Another Rap

An order prohibiting street sales of the "Dearborn Independent," Henry Ford's paper, has been issued in St. Louis. Chief of Police Martin O'Brien announced. The sale by criers on the streets constitutes a law violation, punishable under defamation and criminal libel statutes and the disturbance of the peace ordinance.

Small Cup Overflows

A small church in Ohio exceeded its allotment: results,—has gained nineteen members, increased Sunday-school attendance 50 per cent, and in addition has contributed $268 for famine sufferers.

Must Build or Burst

"The quota was pledged. It was a great victory for our church. A greater blessing never came to the Sullivan (Indiana) Church. We had hardly finished this drive before our work began to take on life, and that life has not ceased to this day. Church organizations became effective, a second Young People's Society was organized. The Sunday-school has grown one hundred and twenty-five per cent. It can be no larger until the building is enlarged."

(Extract from a letter of Pastor A. A. Cohn.)

What Railroad Men Want

Points of the most vital character in the platform of demands insisted upon by the railway employees include—

Eight hours as the recognized measure of the standard workday with an adequate hourly wage.

The beginning and ending of working shifts to be so arranged as to permit of reasonable living arrangements by employees and their families.

The right of the majority in each craft to determine what organization shall represent them; this organization to have the right to make an agreement which shall apply to all workers in the craft.

The right of the majority of each craft on each railroad to select a committee or representatives who shall handle all grievances which may arise affecting all employees of the craft in accordance with the provisions of the agreement.

The right to organize and the protection of employees against discrimination because of membership in labor organizations or for any other reason.

Dr. Seaman's Proposed Remedy

As a means of overcoming part of the general unemployment menace, a drive to give Chicago's 20,000 idle ex-service men work on street and road construction and reforestation projects was launched last Sunday night by Dr. Raymond L. Seaman, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, in a sermon to his congregation.

"There are 20,000 unemployed ex-service men here who haven't a chance," Dr. Seaman declared. "The army of unemployed is not now composed of careless, shiftless fellows—thousands of our best citizens are now begging for work."

"They are honest men who have been deprived of their livelihood by the trend of circumstances beyond their control. They are the same willing fellows who did such heroic work in making this country a fit place in which to live peaceably."

Baca Baptists Busy

Baca County, Colorado, has twelve Baptist churches and only one of these has a house of worship. The total membership of these churches in one hundred sixty nine, and they are scattered far and wide. But they have more than met their allotment of $5000.

Prayer at the Old Gray Rock

(Mrs. Annie A. Preston of Maple Corner, Willington, Conn., is a lineal descendant in the ninth generation of Peregrine White, the first white child born in New England.)

By MRS. ANNIE A. PRESTON

LISTEN! We could do that, we three!" A little black-eyed girl in one of the rear pews of a small country church had leaned forward to whisper between two sunny heads just showing over the back of the pew in front. Intelligent, sympathetic glances shot from two pairs of bright eyes—one pair blue, the other pair gray—was the only response, just then, but as soon as the benediction was pronounced the gray-eyed girl whispered:—

"Oh Lizzie, when can we?"

The answer came promptly: "I thought it out while they were singing the last hymn. Tomorrow, at school, we will take our lunch baskets out by the pool in the pine grove and have our prayer meeting on the big gray rock."

"Of course, how wonderful you are about starting things," and that settled it.

For three noons the three girls were missing from the time school was excused at twelve o'clock, until the bell rang at one. At noon on the fourth day the teacher said to Lizzie, "if you will stay with me I will help you with the problems in fractions that puzzled you this morning."

"Although I am interested in my arithmetic, there is something that interests me more and I wish you would take your lunch and come with me."

As she was usually a shy little thing, the teacher could but wonder where she had found so many words and what she had in mind; so taking her little pupil's hand she allowed herself to be led away to the pine grove, and to the two little girls already seated on the flat rock, who exclaimed as she drew near:

"How nice in you to come to our meeting!"

"What meeting, my dears?"

"Our prayer meeting. We thought Lizzie had told you."

For a moment or two the teacher felt like running away but the children won her by their explanation—all talking at once:

"You know the minister said Sunday that he had been here one whole year without a baptism, and he wished all who love the Lord Jesus would pray for a revival. We love Him, so of course we are praying; and of course you love Him."

"Yes, I think I do, but I am sure no one ever has asked me. I heard what the pastor said, but that I could pray or could do anything to help—for the poor man seemed discouraged, never came into my mind, and I have not given it a thought since. I am ashamed and sorry, and will do what I can, with you to teach and help me, to prove that I am willing to be helpful."

As the favorite young teacher knelt with the three dear little girls, her heart was completely won and melted by their simple, touching direct petitions of faith; and when her turn came she could only sob forth her contrition for indifference and plead for forgiveness. As much a child and as much in earnest as either of the group, joy and peace inevitably followed and her zeal and faith were equal to theirs.

The next week when a rainy day came, she led the meeting in the school room and led also in singing familiar hymns. This had been neglected at their gatherings in the grove for fear of calling the attention of the boys and fear that they might disturb the meeting. But curiously, as it seemed to them, the boys were interested. They had also been interested in the favorite pastor's touching little appeal.

Day after day this noon day meeting was held and without in any way interfering with the regular work of the school. The children were all interested. The parents came in. Prayer meetings were started in other parts of the town. There was a general outpouring of the Spirit and many conversions followed.

In the mid-summer vacation Sunday afternoon out-of-door meetings were held in the pine grove that attracted many of the non-church-going, and many baptisms followed in the pool by the large gray rock, the teacher and the three little girls, who had been first to catch at the idea that to pray was something that they were able to do in the way of helpfulness, being the leaders in this beautiful rite of acceptance and of obedience.

I heard this story from the lips of a fine Christian business man who said:

"Dozens who received a blessing at those meetings proved faithful and were most helpful in promoting the cause of missions—some of those pupils being preachers, teachers and in less conspicuous ways active in Christian work. My special privilege has been for years the maintaining of a noon-day prayer meeting in my large factory—where my people gathered for a few verses of scripture, a verse of a hymn and a few earnest prayers. My experience has taught me that there is no spiritual let-up more productive of good than a ten-minute interval of noon-tide prayer. And all of this came from the courage of a bright little country girl to act upon a helpful suggestion."

O, God, If You Are There—

MANY a man is confused about God, not because of sin or conceit, but because of intellectual problems, which he cannot dodge. To such a man we commend the remarkable recent book by Dr. Richard Swain, entitled "What and Where Is God?" It is the most helpful and convincing book for a plain man I have seen in many a long day. The first chapter, "Losing God," tells the story of his own experience as a misguided, earnest seeker after God. It is a thrilling chapter. The climax comes when a student at Yale:

"Standing on the New Haven green and looking up into the pelting sleet I said: 'Now I have met the "wise men," and still I do not know whether there is an inspired Bible, or a heaven or a God.' But I exclaimed, 'O God, if you are, and if I should ever meet you anywhere in eternity, I would run to you as a little child runs to a father. I would tell you how weak and sinful and ignorant I am, and I know you would love me.' That night on the old Green, while in the dark and pelted with sleet, I went out onto the last crag where any human soul can go, and cried into the infinite depths, 'O God, if you are there, some day I shall know and love you.' In that act I passed beyond all men and all institutions, and took my stand with the final reality, whatever it might be, and at least I was free and not afraid. Though thoroughly agnostic still, yet I could quietly and wait."

—Association Men.

TO be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play, and to look up at the stars;

To be satisfied with your possessions, but not content until you have made the best of them;

To despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice;

To be governed by your admiration rather than by your disgusts;

To covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners;

To think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends and every day of Christ;

And to spend as much time as you can with body and with spirit in God's out-of-doors—

These are little guide-posts on the footpath of peace.

For Their Sakes

LIFE would be empty indeed if we could not people our world with memories. You sit in your pew at church, and although no one else has eyes to see her, she is there beside you, her snowy hair like a halo, her care-worn face glowing as if an angel's wing had passed over it. Many a Sunday you visualize her with a new pang of loneliness; again you see her gentle hands calmly folded in her lap, her sweet grave eyes upon the minister. And he preaches about the New World Movement again.

Ah! how she would have loved to give toward the hundred million dollar campaign last year had she been living! If she had such joy in giving to the Lord's work in her earthly life, when she saw through a glass darkly, what would now be her passion when she has seen the Lord face to face, and has talked with many of that great multitude which no man can number, who have come out of great tribulation from the east and the west and the north and the south? Picture her radiant belief in the vast victories of Christianity, and plan to give for her, as if she were here.

As if—? But surely she is here—one of that great cloud of witnesses, watching, wondering, hoping, longing—while Baptists make their pledges. You did not give last year, or perhaps not in proportion as God had prospered you—she watches hopefully this year.

In your life there may have been One-Who-Did-Not-Care: how many times you have thought of him with an anxious pang. On earth he never cared for the church, he never cared for God, he never cared for the people who walk in darkness. Sometimes you can almost hear him yet as he argued that he had not one red cent for such "useless enterprises." At the time it almost broke your heart; and now, with the echo of it piercing your memory you keep wondering, if he had his life to live over again whether he would not be a warm, open-handed Christian—now that he has heard that tragic "Inasmuch," and has realized the full enormity of not seeing Christ in the hungry stranger. You wonder with pain how much he would give to the New World Movement if he could only have another chance. If—? But his money has become yours. It was untitled for many a weary year, surely it is now your divine opportunity to give as though his fuller, sadder vision were dictating the amount, so that out of the past hard selfishness a stream of joyful service may bless those who hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Perhaps there are little toys put away on some shelf which you cannot bear to handle, or there are sounds of children playing in a neighbor's garden, that make your heart contract beyond endurance. A hundred things a day remind you of a certain little face, a certain little voice—in every other child you see your own, with an ache no word can ever describe and no act can ever fully blot out. You may have tried giving away the little garments and the little toys, but what can be done with the money which was to have been used for his upbringing, if—? That money is dust and ashes to your touch. Yet had you eyes to see them, millions upon millions of mothers are thinking of such as you with untold yearning as they gaze down into the weakened faces of the little children of the Orient and the slums, who are ill-fed, deformed, undoctored, untaught—the men and women of tomorrow. What balm in Gilead more comforting than transmitting your sorrow into cribs, nurses, hospitals, kindergartens, Christian centers, so that hundreds of children the whole world over may lead a new life because of that little child you miss?

When Shall It Be?

From north and south and east and west,
When shall the peoples, long unblest,
All find their everlasting rest,
O, Christ, in Thee?

When shall the climes of ageless snow
Be with the gospel light aglow,
And all men their Redeemer know,
O, Christ, in Thee?

When on each southern balmy coast
Shall ransomed men, in countless host,
Rise, heart and voice, to make sweet boast,
O, Christ, in Thee?

O, when, in all the Orient lands,
From cities white and flaming sands,
Shall men lift dedicated hands,
O, Christ, to Thee?

O, when shall heathen darkness roll
Away in light, from pole to pole,
And endless day by every soul
Be found in Thee?

Bring, Lord, the long-predicted hour,
The ages' diadem and flower,
When all shall find their Refuge, Tower,
And Home in Thee!

G. T. COSTER.

A man wrote this of a neighbor: "We never knew her well, but the year after her son died in France the Session was astonished to have her give $500 as an Easter offering to be used in paying for five scholarships in our — Academy in China. The second year she repeated the gift. Since she was far from well-to-do, and everything was soaring in price, we sent our minister not only to thank her but to remonstrate against too great a sacrifice. 'But it's only what I intended to give him to help pay for his college expenses', she said deprecatingly, 'not enough, of course, but he knew he would have to earn the rest. And now that he is not here to spend it, I happened to discover this practical way of sending five boys to school in his place. It's my only comfort, just as if Christ were saying to me: 'Thy Son Liveth! Thy Son Liveth!' I never saw the Sessions so moved as at that story. Two of us had also lost sons in France, which preamble leads me up to this request for information about the new industrial schools planned for India . . . . ."

As we enter upon this anniversary of last year's $100,000,000 drive, with only half of that amount pledged, the memory of some one very dear to us will come to mind; how else can we complete their utmost longing so fully as by helping in this crisis of the world history? If we see that a few brief years are sure to fix the course of centuries, how much more keenly do they grasp the situation, now that the mortal veil is rent asunder! In the presence of God they foster no calculating spirit, no selfish giving of as little as possible—

Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about by so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus.

A Receipt in Full

DO you remember the story of Martin Luther when Satan came to him, as he thought, with a long black roll of his sins, which truly might make a swaddling band for the round world? To the arch-enemy Luther said, "Yes, I must own to them all. Have you any more?" The accuser of the brethren, being expert in the business, soon supplied him with a further length of charges, till there seemed to be no end to it. Martin waited till no more were forthcoming, and then he cried, "Have you any more?" "Were not these enough?" Aye, that they were. "But," said Martin Luther, "write at the bottom of the whole account: 'The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin.'"

Winning The N. W. M.

By "PEGGY."

IT HAS just occurred to me that maybe you don't know anything about the N. W. M. yourself; so, because Bill and I simply love being a part of it, we're planning to tell you what it is and exactly how we're helping. Then I'm sure you'll want to help, too. And if there's room this week I'll tell you about what Peter (he's Bill's chum) and Polly (she's mine!) did.

Since we're all Baptist children I think it ought to make us feel ever so important to know that whole chunks of the world are OURS, absolutely ours! Just imagine! Not a single Presbyterian (or a Methodist or an Episcopalian, or any other "-ist" or "-arian"! ) will ever start working in our particular parts of India or our own slice of Africa or our three corners in China or down in Central American to tell "our" heathen about Jesus. It's a job left absolutely to us, and if we don't do it nobody else will; for the Presbyterians have their own parts of each country to take care of, the Methodists have theirs, etc. etc. In fact every denomination has its own places to love; so if you and I aren't looking after our own work then millions of brown boys and yellow girls and black babies (and red ones, too!) will grow up until by-and-by they will die without ever humming a single Christmas carol, or singing a single Easter hymn or saying a single prayer to our heavenly Father.

It was last year that Baptists settled down to this job in real earnest and started their N. W. M., which means "New World Movement." Bill and I knew about it from the very first on account of father's being so interested; but I admit that we were both a bit startled when we discovered that Baptists had to raise $100,000,000! For that is such a tremendous sum of money, and neither Bill nor I are a bit rich, as you may have guessed. But mother very wisely said: "You two dears don't have to raise it all! Just decide on your own share."

But this was easier said than done, for first of all we sent for a nice little gray book called "The Survey," which Bill ordered straight from New York. You really ought to have seen him doing this, so solemn and business-like that I peeped over his shoulder and read:

"General Board of Promotion,
276 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Gentlemen: Kindly send to the above address one copy of 'Survey of the Fields and Work of the Northern Baptist Convention,' and oblige

Yours very truly,
William Hathaway."

By the way, why don't you order a copy for your family, since they're free, and every Baptist household is supposed to have one on hand to browse over? Then, too, I do think things coming in the mail are such fun to watch for, don't you? We waited a week for ours, then one Saturday morning along marched the postman with a special twinkle in his eye which meant something for the "youngsters."

Sunday afternoon we had such fun hunting out from the maps in the Survey where our own special parts of the world were located. Then during recess the next

On the Wings of the Dandelion

This is the first of our special "TRUTH" stories. Read about the contest in last week's BAPTIST, and plan to compete!

ONCE upon a time Mary told a wretched, unnecessary little lie about her own father to two of her neighbors, and her mother, hearing of it, was terribly shocked.

"Oh, but it won't go a bit further, mother dear," Mary said.

But her mother gave a sad little sigh: "I see I shall have to teach you a lesson," and Mary's heart sank,—for this sounded uncomfortably like a bad punishment! But her mother pointed to a fuzzy white-headed dandelion gone to seed in the front lawn:

"I want you to pick it, Mary, then, carrying it upright, I want you to run all the way down the street and back to me."

Mary's heart sang a little tune, for this seemed a jolly nonsensical punishment! So she picked the dandelion and went dancing down the street with a merry hop-skip-and-a-jump, while away blew the fuzzy white seeds. When she came back to the porch her cheeks were pink and her eyes twinkling; but her mother's face was solemn.

"Now go back down the street, dear, and pick up every one of the seeds. Hurry!"

But Mary couldn't hurry—slowly she meandered across lawns and sidewalks, looking and looking and looking, but somehow those little seeds had all mysteriously disappeared. The wind must have thought it a clever game to scatter them throughout the neighborhood, for try as she might she found only two of the countless bits of dandelion fluff.

Big salty tears rolled down her cheeks as she laid them quietly in her mother's lap.

"You see, Mary dear, that your story has spread all over the neighborhood as quickly and mysteriously as the dandelion wings have done, and however hard you may try you can never bring them back home again. For a word once day at school I opened my geography and said to Polly Prim, my chum: "Polly, see this patch of land around the Congo River in Africa? Well, it belongs to Bill and me!"

"O-oh, Peggy Hathaway, what an absurd thing to say!" she cried, and a whole crowd of girls swarmed around us. So then I just couldn't resist pointing to the three corners of China where Baptists are working as I said in my most superior manner: "Well, this territory in China belongs to Bill and me, too. "By the time I had pointed out "our" spots in India, Mexico, Cuba, Alaska, etc., you ought to have seen their faces! "You're the champion booster of the school," they cried.

So I just said: "Are any of you Baptists?"

"I am," said Polly Prim; "and I" said Thelma Thorpe.

"Why, then you're both in the N. W. M. yourselves, and own these chunks of the world just the way Bill and I do." So we three retired to the cloakroom to talk it over. Polly thought it was a tremendously important feeling to discover all of a sudden that totally unknown places were hers. So naturally she told her brother Peter (next week I'll tell you how they told their father, and the wonderful thing that came of it).

And that's the way we four began deciding on something definite to do. For by this time we had sent for two other books brimful of marvelous pictures: "The Quicken Book" and "The World at The Cross-Roads." Somehow as we looked straight into the faces of the quaint faraway people who were actually living on our very own parts of the earth we felt more important than ever.

So the most eventful day in all our lives was the Sunday in April 1920 when we wrote out our N. W. M. pledges toward the big hundred million dollar fund. Mother had told us we could put down whatever we were positive we could pay!

Finally Bill said solemnly: "I'm going to pledge $100 for the four years, Peggy, that will be $25 a year."

"Bill!" I gasped, "that's more money than you've ever seen all at one time!"

"I know," he said, then took pencil and paper and dividing $25 by 365 days discovered that it meant about seven cents a day, day in and day out! "Well," he said, "I'm sure I can earn part of it and save part of it out of my allowance. Here goes!" And he wrote his pledge.

"If you can, I can, too," I cried, so with my heart beating like a trip-hammer I signed the beautiful white card, feeling terribly important. That was a year ago, and ever since we've had the greatest fun in the world earning that money! There are more ways than you ever dreamed of, unless you've had to try it yourself, and Bill and I wouldn't lose a minute of our work, as I'll tell you next week.

But meanwhile, why don't you send for the three free books for your own family? You'll be surprised how interesting they are! Or maybe you have them in the house already—look and see first.

THE GROWTH OF THE BIBLE

Psalm 119:97-112.

"Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Suggested Literature

"How We Got Our Bible," Smith; "The Bible, Its Origin and Nature," Dods; "How The Bible Grew," Lewis.

1. The Revealed Word. Christians of all faiths recognize the Bible as the revealed word of God. Because of this generally accepted fact, these notes will deal with another phase of the subject.

2. Early Collection of Books. "A visitor to one of the early churches, say Jerusalem, would find: (1) Some manuscripts of the Hebrew Old Testament books; (2) a good many more of the O. T. books translated into Greek for general use in the churches, Greek being the language most widely known at the time; (3) a few rolls of the apocryphal books, written by the holy men in the church, and valued for the practical teaching they contained; (4) copies of the Gospels and the Acts, the Epistles of Paul, Peter and John, and the book of Revelation."

3. Written Manuscripts. It must be remembered that "as we look into the record chest of one of the early churches of nearly 1890 years ago, we have before us all the sources from which we got our Bible. Further, that these writings were all manuscript, i. e. written by hand, and that copies when needed had each to be written out, letter by letter, at a great expense of time and trouble, and of course, very often too, at some expense of the original correctness." Some of the older manuscripts are, the Vatican, Sinaitic and Alexandrian. (For information on these manuscripts, consult a Standard Bible Dictionary.)

4. Translations. By 275 B. C. the Old Testament was translated into Greek. This translation was called Septuagint, from the Latin word septuaginta, meaning "seventy." Josephus says that Ptolemy Philadelphus invited seventy scholars from Palestine to Egypt for the purpose of making the translation.

5. To the first century of the Christian era. The Bible at that time consisted of three elements: "first, the Hebrew Old Testament, used chiefly by the Palestinian Jews; second, the Greek Old Testament, considerably larger in extent, used by Greek-speaking Jews and Christians; and, third, The New Testament, just arising from the early Christian movement, and beginning to be used by Jesus' followers." The translation of the Hebrew O. T. into Greek and the carrying of the entire Bible over into Latin have had most to do with the growth of the Bible in the Western world." (The Vulgate, a Latin translation, was made by Jerome in the fourth century).

6. Other versions. Taking them in chronological order, we have the Syriac, the Egyptian, the Gothic, the Armenian, the Ethiopic, the Arabic, the Slavonic versions, and the Anglo-Saxon in the ninth century.

7. Modern Versions. Wickliffe's in the fourteenth century; the versions of Luther, Tyndale, and the so-called Coverdale Bible; the Great Bible and the Geneva Bible in the 16th century; The King James Version in 1611; The American Revised Version in 1901.

Young People and the Missionary Enterprise

The following paragraph from Miss Mildred Nelson, vice-president of the B. Y. P. U. of First Baptist Church, San Jose, Cal. speaks for itself:

"We had the finest B. Y. P. U. last night. Most of the young people have the idea that a missionary meeting is always a dry story about some desert people that are always wanting money or something else. Last night Marion Nicholson led the meeting and she gave it in the form of a play. First, she came into her little school, which was supposedly to have been in Burma, and was wishing some of her friends would come to see her or send another missionary to help her out. Then she was to have been teaching other children and so her class came in. She asked them several things about the Bible, also if they had remembered the song she taught them, so Ethel and Leonard sang 'Jesus Loves Me This I Know.' After they had finished their lessons for the day, two American girls came in, Verda and Maxine. She told them all about Burma, taking the lesson just as it was given, of course, adding some things she had found in other books.

"After the two American girls had gone, she received a letter from the church at home saying they could not send anyone to help her and that they did not have any more funds with which to give her any help. She started to sob when I came to the door and knocked. I was just a graduate missionary from the medical college and came to her aid. She was so happy to see me and we talked over old times wondering what had happened to some of our old friends. The American girls came again in the evening and they asked us to sing one of the songs we used to sing in America, so Marion and I sang 'We've a Story to Tell to the Nations.' At the close she gave the invitation for anyone who wanted to go to the mission field or to do some special work for the missionaries. Ruth Robinson and Odessa Smith came forward."

Young People and "Missions"

A contest among the Oregon B. Y. P. U.'s for subscriptions to "Missions" magazine, recently closed, with the La Grande society carrying off the pennant. The circular letters announcing the contest, were sent out Friday, December 31, and on Monday, January 3, an "over-the-top" telegram flew over the wires from La Grande to the state B. Y. P. U. commissioner of missions at Corvallis, with the electrifying report, "Goal missions reached yesterday evening six-thirty."

The Cove and Veneta societies practically tied for second honors, Cove completing its work first, while Veneta secured one more subscription than did Cove.

Medford stands in third place, with a goodly number of new subscribers.

A delightful letter from G. B. Hogan, president of the La Grande society, to the missions commissioner states:

"Our society here is new, and all members are active. We have only about twenty, now, but are still growing. I trust that we were the first society to reach the goal, and assure you we are always 100%."

This strikes a ringing note of optimism which cannot fail to be contagious.

Other missionary activities are being planned for Oregon B. Y. P. U.'s the first of which will be a reading contest, in conjunction with which there will be an essay contest for individuals.

International Uniform Lesson for April 24

POVERTY AND WEALTH

Isa. 5:8-10.; Amos 8:4-7.; Luke 16:19-25.
Golden Text: Luke 12:24.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The Bible gives forth no uncertain sound about the social evils of poverty and wealth. Jesus, coming eight hundred years after Amos and Isaiah, reiterates their prophetic condemnation of selfish wealth. Land has always been the basis of all genuine wealth, because it is mother-earth which sustains the human race. Farms with their products, mines with their minerals, and wells with their water, gas and oil are the unfailing springs which feed all the streams of commerce and industry. The wealth against which the text protests was wealth in land held by a few thus reducing the many small farmers to the level of dependent peasants and economic serfs.

The Lesson Taught

Poverty and wealth are so inter-woven that to treat one is to treat both; therefore the lesson may be taught by considering the avarice, the abuses, and the antipathies of wealth.

The Avarice of Wealth

Amos has well described it. Avaricious men, impatient with the restraints of religion, interlard their words with profanity as they say, "When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell grain. And the Sabbath that we may set forth wheat?" Avarice regards nothing as holy that stands in the way of making a dollar. It is avarice that keeps the shows open on Sunday, prevents the passage of legislation against commercialized sports on Sunday, ridicules all attempts to stop the exploitation of human beings who are too defenceless to protect themselves.

Avarice crucified Jesus, martyred the disciples of Jesus, disrupted the church of Jesus, paralyzed the program of Jesus, and is the greatest foe of the religion of Jesus. Avarice is the mother of the three greatest enemies of the human race,—war, famine and pestilence. Avarice creates and sustains the sweat-shop and the over-crowded, unsanitary and death-breeding tenement. Avarice makes the conscienceless profiteer, the blue-sky promoter, and the high-rent landlord. Avarice spawns crime, fills penitentiaries, and keeps the hangman busy. Avarice destroys plain living and high thinking. Avarice creates the inevitable Dives with his purple robes and sumptuous fare and metallic heart; and the same avarice makes possible such abject poverty as is represented by Lazarus. "The love of money is the root of all kinds of evil."

The Abuses of Wealth

The avarice to get wealth is equalled only by the abuses of wealth after it is amassed. Wealth is power, and in the hands of selfish men, it is a terrific power for evil.

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay."

One of the deplorable abuses of wealth is its accumulation in the hands of a few. The wise distribution of wealth is an economic problem of vast and far-reaching proportions. That country is happiest and most contented where wealth is well distributed among all the people, and on the contrary, the most unhappy lands in the world are found where the extremes of wealth and poverty are most pronounced. This is the contention of Isaiah in the lesson. House had been added to house, and farm to farm until the masses of the people owned no property and were forever prevented from owning property because all real estate was concentrated in the hands of a few who were offensively rich.

Another abuse of wealth is its power to create fictitious values. As far back as the days of Amos, wealth knew how to make "the ephah small and the shekel great." It is now called "watering stock." "High finance" has often wrought miracles in the economic world. Railroads have been so manipulated by pouring water into the stock that large salaries to the promoters and small dividends to the investors and millions of fictitious values to the corporations have resulted. Gambling with dice is small business when compared with gambling in wheat, in railroads, and in empires.

The Antipathies of Wealth

The tendency of wealth is to create antipathies instead of sympathies. There was no sympathy for Lazarus on the part of Dives. On the contrary, there was antipathy. Poverty is always an offence to wealth. And wealth is often an offence to poverty. These antipathies often reach the point of revolution and civil strife. Russia today is suffering from a blundering attempt to atone for the antipathies which great wealth and extreme poverty through many generations fostered. The French Revolution was caused by the growing antipathies of wealth and poverty. The antipathies of capital toward labor, and the antipathies of labor toward capital are the old antipathies come down from the hoary past.

Wise equalization is the only hope of brotherhood and goodwill among men. Religion, according to Roger Babson, the great statistician, is the only thing that will make men contented in a world where inequality is chronic, because the religious man can sing,

"A tent or a cottage, why should I care,
They are building a palace for me over there."

But that is not the religion of the prophets of the Bible or of Jesus. The religion of the Bible is the religion of the square deal, the religion of justice, the religion of progress, the religion of the "under dog," the religion of "Thy kingdom come, they will be done on earth as in heaven." The poor man who wants wealth is just as bad as the rich man who has wealth and uses it selfishly. But the poor man who fights for a living wage, a bit of ground and a home he can call his own, and protection against the tendency of either organized capital or unionized labor to steal from him his freedom and initiative is the pioneer of progress and the champion of justice.

A Course for High-school Pupils

CONVERSATION THREE

By F. F. PETERSON

Question: How can one Deepen and Broaden his acquaintance with God?

Scripture: Deut. 4:29; Ps. 46:10; Heb. 8:10-12; Jno. 14:8-21.

WHO is God? How does He manifest Himself? What is the supremest revelation of God? What do we mean by God the Father? God the Son? God the Holy Spirit? What does the name Messiah mean? Lord? Saviour? Christ?

God rules over the kingdom of Heaven. What is the Kingdom of Heaven? The laws of it? The extent of it? The members of it? How do you know you are a member of the kingdom? If you are, then God is the ruler of your life. You are to trust, love, hold in reverence, obey and enjoy God. He is to become your Great Friend.

Tabulate on the board what the class knows of the characteristics of God. How does one deepen friendship with any one? Our task is not only to become disciples but also to remain disciples (knowingly), growing always closer to God.

Draw from the class the facts that friendships demand—

1. Frequent association with the friend.
2. Time to make the acquaintance broad and secure.
3. Knowledge of and insight into the life of the friend.
4. A desire to please, in little things as well as the great.
5. A sharing of his burdens, sacrifices, and desires.

Our Own Folks

Detroit and Its Negro Problem

By ALBERT H. FINN

Probably no northern city received a larger percentage of increase in the recent southern Negro migration than Detroit. This city in the "good old days" included about 5000 Negroes the aftermath of the civil war period. But slowly this number grew until five years ago when the tide turned strong they came by families and hundreds and thousands until Detroit had from 75,000 to 100,000 when the depression set in last July.

As these people came largely from southern states where Baptists predominate their rapid influx has been peculiarly a Baptist social and religious problem. From two Baptist Negro churches there has come to be nearly 35 congregations, at least two having over 3000 members each. Many individuals have returned to the Southland. temporarily we believe, greatly relieving the congestion that had become dangerously serious. The Second Church, Rev. R. L. Bradby pastor, alone had adequate housing and while this splendid old church had a comparatively new house of worship it is crowded to the doors for three services on each Lord's day.

The Detroit Baptist Union in co-operation with Dr. Moore of the American Baptist Home Mission Society has faithfully endeavored to meet the tremendous problem in the largest and best possible manner. An advisory council made up of Negro and white Baptists was organized and Dr. Bradby engaged to superintend the work among the Negro Baptists in connection with his important pastorate. There have been difficulties without number and urgent needs beyond any ability to serve, especially in housing.

This pressing problem has been met in quite a remarkable way wherein the efficacy of prayer has had a large part, as has also been the wonderful leadership of Dr. H. C. Gleiss, general superintendent of the Detroit Baptist Union, and the remarkable company of consecrated and able laymen associated with him. Eight congregations have been assisted during the past year, and while not all have permanent buildings these are now nicely cared for and several of the number are in new and permanent structures. I would estimate that properties already occupied, or will be shortly, by Negro Baptist Churches in Detroit are valued at $400,000.

The business depression has hit our Negro population most seriously and it has been a real problem to care for the needy. The Negro Baptist Churches have done heroic service along these lines.

The spirit of evangelism has been strongly stressed by all the pastors. Here are a few reports: Second, Rev. R. L. Bradby pastor, 325 received since Jan. 1; Macedonia, Rev. Wm. Ferrill, Sr., pastor, 310; Mt. Olive, Rev. J. B. Glover pastor, 100; Shloh, Rev. R. B. James pastor, 200; Calvary, Rev. J. H. Maston pastor, 110; Friendship, Rev. J. H. Johnson pastor, seventy-five; Antioch, Rev. Wm. Underwood pastor, fifteen; Corinthian, Rev.

J. B. Ford pastor, sixty-two; Institutional, Rev. C. A. Hill pastor, seventy-five; Peace, thirty-five; First Church, Delray, twenty-five; Beulah, Rev. D. Jones pastor, seven; Morning Star, Rev. Glover pastor, twenty-five; Salem, twenty-five; Triumphant, River Rouge, six; Second, River Rouge, fifty-five; First Church, Macomb Gardens, nine; Zion Hill, Rev. James Smallwood pastor (total membership), 150; Russell Street, Rev. J. O. Derrick pastor, twenty-five. A report from 21 churches shows a membership of 14,598.

It is planned to have an adequate Negro Christian center in the congested downtown district at an early day. This will cost from $50,000 to $100,000. Miss Reid, a trained worker, is already doing a splendid constructive work preparatory to the larger and greatly needed work that must follow soon. It is no small task to secure earnest co-operation among these brethren who have come from so many states and from so different an environment. Real progress has been made both in establishing a spirit of solidarity and in proving that the Detroit Baptist Union is a sincere friend to our Negro pastors and churches. Much needed educational work has been done and Miss Reid is enlisting the pastors and women in practical Christianity as it is needed in our great industrial centers.

World Christianity Institute

A very unusual Institute having for its subject "World Christianity" will be held under the auspices of the Divinity School at the University of Chicago on six successive Monday evenings beginning April fourth.

The following distinguished missionaries, teachers and workers will participate: Archibald G. Baker (Director), Assistant Professor of Missions, The University of Chicago, Late of Bolivia, South America; James H. Breasted, Professor of Egyptology and Oriental History, The University of Chicago; Ernest D. Burton, Professor of New Testament and Early Christian Literature, The University of Chicago; J. S. Crawford, Professor of Bible and Ethics, American College, Beirut, Syria; Ellsworth Faris, Professor of Sociology, The University of Chicago; Katsuji Kato, Editor, the Japan Review, Chicago; Miss Elena Landazuri, Mexico City, Mexico; Robert E. Park, Professorial Lecturer on Sociology, The University of Chicago; Edmund D. Soper, Professor of History of Religions, Northwestern University; Arthur P. Scott, Assistant Professor of History, The University of Chicago; Rev. A. J. Saunders, Madura College, South India; Rev. W. R. Taylor, West China; Rev. L. F. Wood, The Congo, Africa.

The countries to be considered are as follows: April 4, India; April 11, Japan; April 18, China; April 25, Africa; May 2, the Near East; May 9, Latin America.

Each evening the program will open at 7:30 with a lecture with stereopticon views. At 8:30 there will follow a discussion on "International Relationships and Christian Missions" as illustrated in the country under consideration. At the same time another group will be discussing "The Social Aspects of Missions" in relation to the same country. This latter group will be under continuous leadership.

At the first period on Monday evening the lecture will be given by Rev. A. J. Saunders of Madura College, South India; the discussion will be conducted by Professor Arthur E. Scott of the department of History, and the class on "Social Aspects of Missions" by Professor Ellsworth Faris of the department of Sociology.

Anyone interested in the subject of Missions even in the most general way will be welcome. There is a registration fee for the full Institute of $1.50, payable on the opening night.

Americanization Notes From the Columbia River District of the W. A. B. H. M. S.

The church in Boise, Idaho, is doing a fine work among the Japanese people in town. This work was begun in September. In November a Sunday school was organized for them, with an enrollment of sixteen or eighteen. There are not many foreign speaking people in Boise, so that the number will never be large, but the Japanese greatly appreciate the work and the interest which is being shown in them. Some Japanese students from a Nazarene college in a neighboring town, are assisting in the class work, as few of them speak enough English to get much from the lesson if given in our language.

A number of Japanese Bibles and hymn-books have been purchased, also a number of Americanization books.

Mrs. Chipp, who has charge of the school has done some work among them for a number of years. But the organized work has just been started.

At the Christmas entertainment given by the church, the Japanese people sang in English, "What a Friend we have in Jesus." They also repeated a number of Scripture verses in English, sang a Christmas song and also their national song in Japanese.

At the New Year's meeting of the church, the Japanese gave a demonstration of English classes, neighborly calling, and Christianization work. They closed the demonstration by singing in English the last stanza of "America."

Some of them are attending the church services.

Such participation in some of our services may go a long way in convincing foreign speaking people of our interest in them.

Another interesting work among Japanese is in Everett, Wash. Class work has been done for both men and women for nearly a year, with the exception of a few weeks intermission in the women's class during the winter. At Christmas a program in both English and Japanese was given for them by securing Miss Rumsey from Seattle, who is at the head of the home there for Japanese women, and who was formerly a missionary in Japan, and also a member of the Japanese church in Seattle who came with her, both of whom spoke in their own language to them.

Miss Rumsey took the names of all the Japanese in the settlement and the paper published by the church in Seattle will be sent to them. Much is hoped for by this, along the line of stimulating interest in Bible study.

There is a fine work among the Chinese possible in Astoria, Ore. A kindergarten class of about a dozen is held four days each week. These same little people attend Sunday school, as also some larger children. A few of their elders sometimes attend the church services, but as their English is quite limited, they do not get much out of it. Once in a month, Pastor Cham of the Portland Chinese Church, goes down for an evening service. These are well attended. There are a few Christians among them and a few others who have had some teaching, but many of them know little of Christ. Mr. Cham feels much encouraged by the interest shown.

A few of the women are studying English and it is hoped to organize a Bible class for men, either in connection with the Sunday school, or on Sunday evening, where they can discuss the thought and get a fuller understanding of its meaning than they can get from a preaching service.

We are "workers together" not only with God, but with one another. Most of these people have had some little connection with missions in other towns and eagerly welcome for their children all such opportunities as they come.

Cincinnati and Vicinity

By JOHN F. HERGET

The Billy Sunday Campaign

Mr. Sunday has been preaching in Cincinnati for two weeks now and the success of the meetings up to the present time has far surpassed the expectations of those who were responsible for bringing him to the city. One hundred and sixty-five churches including those on the Kentucky side of the river are co-operating. Every night the tabernacle is filled to overflowing and hundreds have been turned away nightly. Consequently the committee decided to enlarge the tabernacle, extending it 18 feet on three sides. The addition was completed for the service of March 22 and many who had failed to gain entrance to the meetings were accommodated. At a meeting for men only on that day every seat was taken and men were standing around three sides of the building. Mr. Sunday is reaching all classes and conditions of people, Jew and Catholic as well as Protestant, rich and poor, ignorant and educated, church goers and those who do not darken the doors of a church. He has been preaching with great power, twice each week-day and three times on Sunday, besides addressing smaller meetings at other places from time to time, such as the Chamber of Commerce, industrial and other organizations.

Many who were indifferent to his coming and others who were opposed are now cordially supporting him. The city authorities not only assisted us in getting a suitable location for the building and the permit to erect it but are to be found at the meetings. For the first time in my knowledge of the city and that covers a period of more than seventeen years in the pastorate here, the whole city is talking about Mr. Sunday and about religion and even the newspapers are full of these things. One of our daily papers has increased its circulation 8000 as a result of its complete, splendid and sympathetic reports of the meetings. Never has it been so easy to do personal work for Christ in this city, for it is safe to approach any man at any time with an invitation to hear Mr. Sunday and thus open up the way for conversation on spiritual things.

Mr. Sunday when all is said pro and con, is a remarkable preacher of righteousness and nothing is more needed in the great cities of our land today. Then too, the other members of Mr. Sunday's party are doing fine service in reaching business men and women and the students of our city. More will be said of these meetings in a later letter.

Pastoral Changes

Rev. William G. Everson has closed his pastorate at Norwood and has entered upon his work as pastor of the First Church, Muncie, Ind. Mr. Everson was a line officer in the world war and served with our forces in Italy. He attained the rank of colonel. He has the confidence and the esteem of all his brethren in the ministry here and we were sorry to lose him to Indiana.

Rev. A. W. Denlinger began his pastorate with the Oakley Church March 1, coming from De Graff, Ohio. Mr. Denlinger is no stranger to Cincinnati Baptists, having formerly been assistant pastor at Ninth Street and later pastor of Immanuel at Northside. In coming back home he is sure of the sympathy, love and confidence of his brethren and his present field is one of great possibilities.

Rev. Charles E. Stanton who has labored in Ohio for over 20 years and who for some years past has been the district secretary of the Home and Foreign Mission Societies, has gone to Pittsburgh as associate to Dr. Bonsall. He leaves behind him a host of friends. No man among us has been more genuinely esteemed and deservedly so, for his devotion to the cause of Christ and his sweet Christlike spirit in all his relationship with his brethren.

The B. Y. P. U. Convention

Baptists of Cincinnati and vicinity will entertain the international convention of the B. Y. P. U. of A., June 30 to July 3. Plans are rapidly maturing to make the coming of the Baptist young people a most remarkable anniversary of the organization and the local cabinet is putting forth every endeavor to provide for the comfort of the delegates. Headquarters have been established in the Ninth Street Baptist Building and the literature giving information concerning hotels, restaurants, rates, etc., will be ready for distribution in a few days.

Other Items of Interest

Madisonville Church has just completed an addition to its building costing about $16,000. The addition provides class rooms for the Sunday school and other facilities for work. Mr. Lunsford, the pastor is full of hope and courage and is happy in the progress which the church is making.

Dr. J. W. Cambren, the evangelist whose home is in Fort Thomas, Ky., just across the river from Cincinnati, has held meetings this winter at Petersburg, Jeanette and Huntington, Va., and also at Waynesburg, Pa. In these meetings there were more than 250 who made a profession of faith in Christ. At the present time he is engaged in a meeting with the First Church, Franklin, Pa., and from there he expects to go to the First Church, Washington, Pa. His home address is 166 Mt. Pleasant Ave., Fort Thomas, Ky.

Philadelphia Letter

By ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

Many things, political, social, spiritual are on the horizon of the churches hereabouts. Just now we have many political alarms and cock-a-doodle-ooms. We are afflicted by the biennial session of our legislature and witnessing again the work of those who are past masters in how not to do it. The worst part of it is that now when civic sentiment and righteous ideals ought to be coming to such a burning focus that even the toughest political hide would feel them, we are failing to make our churches a power. That is the straight truth. Now, as too often, the churches are failing to support the democracy they have developed.

In Harrisburg a body of men has considered bills that closely affect the welfare of men, women and children of this city. Bills to relieve the city of a political and stagnant school board, to investigate the anthracite coal industry, to put state authority behind national prohibition, to get rid of an archaic system of assessment,—all these have come up and yet for all we care the legislature might be in Kamchatka talking about the moon. None of these matters will pass. The politicians see no benefit for themselves and the people don't care. It is all a serious indictment of our churches and our religion.

We are also having our fill of ecclesiastical flub-dubbery. (The Roman Catholic archbishop here has been made a cardinal. We are greatly honored, according to the newspapers. What a commotion they have raised—big headlines, minute autobiographical details, full cable despatches. Pretty soon the "prince of the church" will return. There will be a special train, a welcome by high city officials, a gift of half a million dollars, a great procession, and columns of newspaper description. When it comes to advertisement, Rome has us "skun a mile." Compared to what she can do, the little efforts of our sensationalists for a public hearing are as a pop-gun to a 42 cm. howitzer.

Nevertheless our work goes on. Dr. Carter Helm Jones is addressing great congregations and having all the outside engagements his strength will permit. Rev. George W. Swope by aggressive methods is crowding his church on Sunday evenings. At Chestnut Street where your correspondent is pastor we have been having evening congregations double the record of a year ago. Dr. Wm. H. Main at Memorial is aggressively developing his field. Dr. Conwell speaks to capacity houses. Thus the story goes. A daily newspaper has made a survey and reports that spiritual interests in all the churches seem to be unusually high. With one exception, that of Mel Trotter in a Presbyterian church, the work has been done by pastors themselves. So far as I can find, there seems to be no desire to repeat the experience of the Sunday meetings. Once was enough.

First Church is rejoicing in the return of its beloved pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones. First it was his own illness that kept him away. Then the serious illness of a daughter in Seattle called him to the Pacific coast. Congregations were well maintained during his absence by the assistant pastor, Dr. Nichols.

Second Church, Germantown, is welcoming back its pastor, Dr. Charles H. Dodd. He is back from the Bermudas where he has been recuperating after a long illness. Dr. Dodd is not ready to preach as yet but he will be here. His pulpit will be supplied in April by Dr. Herbert White of Hartford.

The Temple, Rev. Herbert Agate pastor, reports twelve baptisms. Rev. W. J. Sly lately gave them a lecture, "The People Beautiful," that other churches will enjoy.

Chestnut Street Church saw fifteen baptized on Easter morning, and $836 received as an offering.

Rochester alumni of Philadelphia and vicinity will meet on April 4 at the Temple. President Barbour is expected to be the speaker.

The Atlantic District Jubilee

By HARRIET NEWELL JONES

Yes, Atlantic women, we are to have a Jubilee all our own—one of the ten before the grand, final, national Jubilee at Des Moines in June.

And ours will be a great event, you may be sure. In the first place, it will be held in the nation's capital. No other District can have such a place—especially now that we have so many "big Baptists" or Baptists in big positions, whichever you please to say—reigning there. You'll all want to come of course.

Then our program! Pageants! Pilgrims! Pioneers! Patriots! Products from the far-off seed-sowing of fifty wonderful years of our Woman's Foreign Mission Society! Procession of Jubilee Months, Weeks, Days, and Hours! Illustrated lecture! W. W. G. banquet! Remarkable exhibit! Eight or ten foreign representatives from the field!

Then we have the great honor of having in our territory the oldest woman's missionary society in this country, not even excepting some of the old organizations of the Presbyterians. And that reminds me: Will the president or secretary of any woman's missionary society in the Atlantic District which has been in existence for fifty years or more send me a post card giving the year of the organization, name of the church and association and of any living women who have kept their membership from the beginning. We want to honor all such pioneers in some way.

Well, dear women all, begin now to get ready for the time of your life.

Note the date—May 11-13; not May 10-12, as somewhere announced.

Note the hotel headquarters: Franklin Square.

Note the chairman of the entertainment committee: Mrs. Frank A. Swarthout, 12 Iowa Circle, Washington, D. C.

The first session will be the W. W. G. banquet on Wednesday evening in Immanuel Baptist, and all other sessions in Calvary Church.

Belinda thinks this little ditty may help you to remember that while the Boston Jubilee will be "first," the New York "rich," the Chicago "great," and the Des Moines Jubilee the "Culminator." Our Jubilee place is Washington—

And Atlantic still our proud name.

We'll leave not a single thing undone

To add to our Jubilee fame.

So come to Washington—

Yes, you and every one.

"Big Baptists" will be there to greet you.

And we'll all do our best,

With good will and zest,

Not only to "sleep you" but "eat you."

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

REV. A. B. BLINZINGER of the chapel car Emmanuel found fifty Baptist families at Ft. Sefton, organized a church of 32 members and a Sunday school of forty-three members, and thinks the outlook highly promising.

FOURTEEN BY BAPTISM and five by letter were received into Durand Church by Rev. A. M. Bailey, following services conducted by Evangelist Erskine.

A NEW CHURCH was recently organized in Grant Co., northeast of New Ulysses. Rev. C. W. Hampton has charge of the work in that section.

PASTOR H. W. COLE has a new pipe organ installed, new pews have been placed in the auditorium, an enlarged primary department has been fitted up with new furniture; a new parsonage and a new mission building are among the advances in the work in the past months.

PASTOR G. B. MERRITT and his people of Independence are rejoicing in the good results of the union evangelistic campaign conducted by Evangelist Rayburn recently. Our church has received seventy-nine new members and others are coming. The city received a great religious uplift.

REV. WM. TAYLOR, student in the Kansas City Seminary, has been called to the church at Wolcott, and takes up the work with splendid outlook.

DURING JANUARY AND FEBRUARY Evangelist H. D. Hughes conducted special meetings in a school house near Grainfield in the western part of the state, with good results. We have several Baptist families there who should be ministered to.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL and young people's convention in Fall River Association met with Fredonia church Mar. 10 and 11. The attendance was good. Rev. Fred Cochran of Parsons ran over and gave a special message. The new officers elected are, pres., Emery Small, Neodesha; sec-treas., Mrs. Mabel Petty, New Albany. The meeting will be held at Neodesha next year.

FORWARD LOOKING PLANS are being laid for realizing the ideals of the New World Movement in the state, and it is anticipated that there will be a worthy response on the part of the leaders and churches in the state.

WYOMING

THE NEGRO CHURCHES of the state are taking on life in a marvelous way. Recently Mr. Thompson, pastor of the First Church in Casper preached for the negro people of Casper, in their church. They are taking a great interest in the work. The pastor Bro. Eilonth has been looking for a man to go as shepherd of the flock in Thermopolis. He could find no man so he asked the Lord if He didn't have some one close at home. The Lord heard him and now his leading deacon has gone to take up the work in this important field.

THE CHURCH IN LOVELL has just experienced a season of refreshing. Pastor Hemmenly was assisted by Pastor-at-large O'Farrell and A. H. Walker. There were twenty-seven additions to the church. This is a Mormon center yet work grows steadily under the present pastor.

LUSK has discovered itself. Baptist forces in that town recently raised $3200 for the building fund of the church. The membership is small, only about thirty, yet it is a determined group. Our church is the only evangelical church in the town. Brothers Hanna, Fisher and Dockum conducted this successful piece of work.

ALL EYES IN THIS STATE are turning toward Hyattville. The summer assembly will meet for the second time in this place. The dates are July 28 to Aug. 7. No better place could be found for an assembly. The grounds are being equipped with electricity and other conveniences. A special feature this year will be the camping trip to the mountains immediately after the closing session.

THE STATE LEADERS are hard at work on the plans which will put Wyoming over the top on the New World Movement. At a conference held recently there was the greatest hopefulness. Already several leading laymen have consented to help in the work. In fact one of the district directors is a layman, a lawyer who was mayor of his city before coming west. He has consented to leave his office for this kingdom work. It is a sign of large import when our leading men take the burdens of the kingdom upon them.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

REDLANDS has just completed a union evangelistic campaign extending from March 13 through March 20. Eight churches co-operated and local preachers did the preaching. The names were not announced but the themes were advertised extensively in the daily press and also the special features. A boy's and girl's object sermon, given by one of the ministers, preceded each sermon. The city officials, high school and grammar school authorities co-operated in securing a large audience. The campaign was managed by a committee of one hundred men. Offerings were taken each night for the sufferers in China and 20,350 will be fed for one day with the total offering given. At the closing service 2000 people attended and the pastor of the First church, S. Fraser Langford, preached the sermon. In the last eighteen months 247 members have joined the church, and more are waiting for membership.

ON FEBRUARY 16, at Los Angeles, there passed from earth Stephen A. Burrowes, Deacon Emeritus of the First Baptist Church. He had been a member of Temple Baptist, Central Baptist and the First Baptist churches during his years in Los Angeles.

MAINE

REV. T. M. GRIFFITHS baptized twenty-six on Easter Sunday, possibly the largest number ever taken into the church by baptism at any one time. This is a part of the fruit gathered by the Chestnut St. Church of Camden as a result of the union revival services of three weeks by Harry Taylor and his daughter Ruth, which closed a few weeks ago. It may be too that the rebuilding of the church some two years ago at a cost of some $19,000 was the beginning of a spiritual awakening to last down through ages to come. At the morning and evening services the church was filled to capacity, especially at the baptism where there was standing room only.

THE ANNUAL CHURCH HOME NIGHT was observed by the Belfast Church, March 22. The women's society furnished one of the elaborate banquets for which it is famous. Reports were made by Dea. Rhoades and Prin. Foster of the local high school who paid special tribute to the work done by the Pastor Sauer for the boys. His example has inspired other workers and frequently over forty boys are in the Sunday school. Some were baptized at Easter. Mrs. Sauer has similar work and success with the girls. This church occupies a large place in the religious life of the city and is doing constructive work of great importance. At the banquet Dr. Whittemore was the guest of the evening.

BRIDGEWATER. Continuous revival services for over eleven weeks have been conducted by Pastor H. A. Clark. The results have been many conversions and the great spiritual quickening of the church.

AT THE COLBY COLLEGE centennial last June announcement was made that Mr. Chas. F. T. Seaverns, '01, of Hartford, Conn., had endowed a professorship of physical training. The trustees have recently appointed to this chair Mr. C. H. Edwards, of the senior class at the Y. M. C. A. Training College, Springfield, Mass. Mr. Edwards will not only have entire charge of all the athletic activities of the college but will also serve as instructor in physiology. At the annual reunion of the Boston Alumni Association on March 18, Pres. Roberts announced that the college was to enter upon a campaign to raise $100,000 to meet the pledge of $50,000 made by the General Education Board towards additional endowment for the college.

Waterville First Baptist

This church pending the securing of a pastor has been very fortunate in having Prof. Neilson C. Hannay of Colby College as its stated supply. His sermons have been remarkably strong presentations of the vital truths of religion. He has been active in securing real work in the Sunday school which under Supt. Herbert L. Emery is growing in efficiency as well as numbers. On the evening of March 20 seven students of Colby College were among those who were baptized by Dr. E. C. Whittemore a former pastor. The Easter baptisms number over twenty. Every department of work is vigorously sustained. This church, having gone over the top in pledging its allotment of $52,000, has given over $500 for China relief and a larger sum for European relief. Its Easter thank offering will be substantial. The church has found great prosperity in giving.

Parsonsfield

About ninety years ago the Free Baptists of Western Maine, feeling the need of education for their ministers established in the town of Parsonsfield, Parsonsfield Seminary. Somewhat later a boy at work on a farm on the hill opposite the Seminary looked across with longing eyes to the buildings where he hoped he might in some way secure preparation for college. It was Joseph Ricker afterward the great leader in church and school in Maine. The seminary has had the usual experiences of such schools but has rendered a splendid service to the state and nation. A few years ago Mr. Bartlett Doe, of California, repaired the seminary building, built a dormitory and gave $100,000 to the school as an endowment fund. The location of the school among the foothills of the mountains is admirable for purposes of study. There are none of the distractions of city or town. Teachers and students form a big happy and enthusiastic family. Prin. H. H. Trufant, came to the school last fall where his father had been the honored principal some thirty years ago. All the interest of the school will be well cared for under the present management. The school is worthy the attention of parents who desire that their children shall have thorough training and special care under the direction of sympathetic and helpful teachers. It is probable that the school will come into closer relations with the denomination. The preacher at the church March 13 was Dr. E. C. Whittemore, who was complimented by the attendance of every student at the seminary. A pastor is needed who will not only be able to minister to the church but to give biblical instruction in the seminary.

MASSACHUSETTS

ON EASTER SUNDAY at the First Church, Brookline, an interesting feature of the day was the unveiling and dedication of two beautiful memorial windows. One is a representation of St. Matthew, in memory of Deacon Gardner Corey Brooks; the other of St. Agnes in memory of Mrs. Agnes Brooks Vining. The latter was the gift of her husband, Dr. Edward Payson Vining, who himself passed away before the window was completed, so it becomes his own memorial also. These, with other windows already in the sacred edifice, memorialize three successive generations in the diaconate from the same family. At the unveiling service Dr. C. H. Spalding gave the address and offered the dedicatory prayer.

HERE ARE THE IMPRESSIONS of a competent observer during Sunday's visit at the First Church, Fall River, Dr. Everett C. A. Herrick, pastor: large congregations, with quiet, impressive sermons of high Biblical, spiritual, and ethical quality; a men's class taught by the pastor with 252 in attendance; a women's class taught by Mrs. Herrick with 149 present; 713 in the Sunday school; ten men from the pastor's class baptized, with as many more in prospect; $150,000 pledged on the "New World Movement," and, up to date, the instalments on the large amount overpaid. What more need be said about First Fall River, except that the pastor is finding in teaching his class that John's gospel furnishes the moving appeal to men?

THE EASTER INGATHERING is notably large in the entire Boston and suburban district. The four departing pastors from Fitchburg, West Medford, Beth Eden, Waltham, and First Everett, all on Easter welcomed large additions. Those churches are in admirable working conditions for the new pastors fortunate enough to be called to them.

THE CHURCH AT MONTELO which suffered from the erratic activity of its former pastor, has under the leadership of Pastor Fred W. French come back into substantial prosperity again, with all bills paid, and a balance to the good, baptisms and all other encouraging conditions. One of the best symptoms is a firm financial grip on a corner lot adjoining the meeting-house. State Promotion Director Reid has heartened and lifted in backing the pastor and people.

AT CAMPELLO, though still afflicted by pastor H. H. Stetson's continued illness, the church continues in loyal strength. Though unable to preach, the pastor's quiet and continuous devotion is everywhere felt. The church beautifully responds to a devoted minister.

DUDLEY STREET CHURCH, BOSTON is drawing close to its centennial anniversary. It will give a whole week to a celebration in early May. Pastor Arthur T. Brooks will be in his element infusing life, love and music into that notable feast.

DR. HERBERT S. JOHNSON continues at Brookline until June 1. He more than holds the large congregations with his strong and gripping sermons. He is always evangelistic, and the church largely shares the Easter ingatherings.

AT MEDFORD, PASTOR D. J. NEELY is having many additions and growing strongly in the confidence and affection of that fine suburban church. It is a field where an unusually efficient Sunday-school, and a widely scattered parish require wise and efficient pastoring to keep everything up to scale. Pastor Neely is doing it.

CONNECTICUT

A RATHER UNIQUE SERVICE was held in the First Church, Hartford, on Good Friday. Rev. H. J. White, D. D. arranged a series of seventeen minute talks on "The Seven Words of the Cross." The speakers were Rev. M. W. Schuh, Rev. H. B. Sloat, Rev. H. E. Olcott, Rev. J. F. Johnstone, Rev. John Barstow, Rev. H. J. White, Rev. F. B. Haggard. An appropriate hymn was sung after each address. A large number of people attended this Passion Service. Dr. White baptized fourteen converts.

REV. J. N. LACKEY, D. D., South Church, Hartford, baptized ten converts on Easter Sunday.

REV. J. W. HOUCK of the First Church, Danielson, baptized nine persons on March 20th. The annual supper and roll call was held on March 24. The year's work closes with all bills paid and a balance in treasury. Appropriate remarks were made by Deacons Preston, Wilbur and

Allen, also by C. H. Starkweather, treasurer Danielson Bank, and Horace Turner, supervisor of schools. Rev. H. B. Sloat, Hartford, spoke on "Mobilizing the Church for World Conquest."

DEEP RIVER CHURCH, Rev. J. Havergal Sheppard, pastor, is experiencing a most wonderful "refreshing from the presence of the Lord." Dr. J. Q. A. Henry is the evangelist. More than fifty have made a decision to follow Christ.

FIRST CHURCH, PUTNAM, has called Rev. John C. Stoddard of Rockport, Mass., to become pastor. Mr. Stoddard will assume his new duties in the near future.

IT IS INTERESTING to watch how the ministerial hegira from Massachusetts to Connecticut is coming out. Chester H. Howe went from Framingham to First New London; Manford W. Schuh from Westboro to Memorial, Hartford, and Frank B. Haggard from First Boston associate pastorate to the Asylum Avenue Church, Hartford. All three are proving to be pacers. The old Bay State did good work on them, and Connecticut Baptist Yankees keenly appreciate high values.

AT NEW LONDON, Chester Howe's efficient leadership is bringing growth everywhere. The Sunday school is beating all records for attendance. Things are ripe there for an evangelistic advance, and the pastor, yoked up with York A. King for a couple of weeks, is taking advantage of favoring currents.

AT MEMORIAL, HARTFORD, pastor Manford W. Schuh already has a firm grip upon the plough handles. He is not great on pyrotechnics or commotions, but he arrives steadily, and has a way of establishing desirable and enduring conditions, and thoroughly cultivating his acre, with accompanying results. He is arriving.

ASYLUM AVENUE CHURCH is fully appreciating Frank B. Haggard. He measures up to the high level of its pulpit, and is giving the people an all-round pastoral guidance that keeps them happily co-operating and proud of their leader.

NEW JERSEY

THE FIRST CHURCH of Bayonne, C. H. Rannels pastor, enjoyed a rare treat in the form of an interesting and inspiring address by the Rev. George Caleb Moore, D. D., pastor of the Madison Ave. Baptist Church of New York City, on the occasion of its annual reception to new members, forty-two of whom were received last year.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

AT THE CLOSE of the Easter morning service, with a congregation which crowded every inch of space, Calvary Church, Washington, extended a unanimous and very hearty call to Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of the First Church, Kansas City, to succeed Dr. Greene in his wonderful pastorate of more than forty years. It is understood that Dr. Abernethy accepts this call and will begin work in Washington May 1. That he will be able to expand the work at Calvary into a yet greater structure is the confident expectation of those who have been familiar with the remarkable work done in Kansas City during the last eight years. Despite Dr. Greene's illness and death, 1920 has been in many ways the greatest in the history of Calvary church, steady progress having been maintained under the admirable leadership of Dr. A. F. Anderson, assistant pastor, and the splendid organization which had been built up during forty years. There have been baptisms almost every Sunday evening throughout the winter and on Easter Sunday thirty-two of the boys and girls from the Sunday school were baptized. The membership of the church is now over 2800 and the enrollment in the Sunday school well beyond the 5000 mark. The immediate future must necessarily see an expansion of the plant and equipment.

In Kansas City the large church auditorium, Sunday-school room and galleries have been crowded every Sunday for years to hear Dr. Abernethy. Since he came to this city nine years ago the First church has grown in membership from about 1,200 to 2,600, the Sunday School has grown from 450 to 1,200, the financial budget has increased from $15,000 to $80,000. All of Kansas City is sorry to lose him.

WEST VIRGINIA

THE CHURCH at WEIRTON has recently enjoyed a gracious revival in which the pastor, Rev. Harry S. Mable, was assisted by Dr. T. C. Johnson of Charleston. The church is receiving about thirty members, more than two-thirds of whom come by baptism. Weirton is one of the fields upon which the home mission societies have established a Christian center. Side by side with the social work of cooking, sewing, English classes, and the like, goes the evangelistic work and the building up of a strong church. The membership is now 105. Before the special meetings started, the church building was redecorated, new electric lights and a furnace installed, and a piano purchased. It was from the Sunday school, which has not fallen below 100 for a long time, that the harvest was gathered. Morning prayer meetings were maintained throughout the meetings.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

PENNSYLVANIA is grateful for the series of missionary conferences recently held in her borders. These conferences were held at Washington, Uniontown, Altoona, Erie, Williamsport, Wilkes Barre, Scranton and Wayne. The attendance while not large was representative, all the associations of the state except five being represented through more than one hundred churches. The personnel of the team was excellent. Among others Dr. Hugh A. Heath, William B. Lippard, George Baker, Joseph Robbins, Sumner R. Vinton, Mrs. Westfall, Charles L. White, Prof. P. M. Crawford of Rangoon, Burma, Zoe Brown of Bengal-Orissa, Dr. W. F. Stait of South India, Dr. F. P. Lynch of the Congo, and Dr. Bruce Kinney, participated in the conferences. The dominant note was the missionary achievement and need. The spiritual emphasis was pronounced in every address and conference. Most of the conferences adopted strong resolutions commending the New World Movement and pledging hearty co-operation in bringing its purposes to achievement. The many requests that came to the missionaries for visits to the various churches evidences the real missionary aspiration and desire of the pastors. All those who participated in these conferences were enthusiastic in their expressions of appreciation, and conviction that as a result the tide of missionary interest and spiritual life had been heightened in the state. It is hoped that a similar series may be arranged to reach churches unable to be represented in these conferences.

REV. WALTER CHRZANOWSKI closed his work with the Polish Mission in Chester the last week in March, having accepted a call to service in Buffalo.

THE EAST SMITHFIELD CHURCH, Bradford County, is looking for a pastor. This is a village church of 125 members, with a Sunday school enrollment larger than the church membership.

THE MUNCY CHURCH has extended a unanimous call to Rev. W. E. Staub. Dr. Staub has accepted and will begin his work May 1, after a pastorate of several years at Warren.

THE LAQUIN CHURCH, under the leadership of Rev. E. O. Sebolt, is holding the only preaching services in a lumber town of a thousand inhabitants. While the membership is not large the congregations fill the building. The auditorium was recently repaired and renovated at a cost of $1000, all of which has been raised and paid. Pastor Sebolt has two other churches, but thinks it well worth while to drive ten miles over the mountains every Sunday night to conduct service at Laquin.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

DR. JAMES E. NORCROSS recently spent ten days with the Wilkesburg Church in revival meetings. There were thirty conversions. The church is responding splendidly to the leadership of Pastor Floyd L. Carr. He is a tactful, resourceful, energetic, spiritual-minded leader, of great vision and faith and of a kindly spirit.

AN UNUSUALLY FINE set of slides has been prepared based upon Mrs. Montgomery's book, The Bible and Missions. The set will be available in this Association during the entire month of May. If you would like to use this set, make application to Rev. C. A. Decker, 73 S. Fremont Street, Bellevue, Pa.

AT MIDWAY, Rev. J. R. Routledge, pastor, a unique plan has been followed to reduce the mortgage on the parsonage. Weeks ago the Ladies' Aid circulated among the members and friends of the church little pocketed aprons. In the pocket was a stanza requesting the recipient to take his or her waist measure, and to place in the pocket a penny for every inch. This novel appeal proved an effective purse opener. The aprons were turned in at a social on March 17. Refreshments were served cafeteria style. The Porto Rico pictures were shown, and music was another attraction. The aprons brought in $445.65 and the cafeteria cleared $18.25. But $200 remains of a mortgage that was $1200 when the present pastor took charge.

AT NEW BRIGHTON, Rev. J. E. Darby, pastor, the parsonage has been equipped with modern electric fixtures at a cost of $200.

THE MEETINGS AT IRWIN, Rev. Noah Fehl, pastor, closed with ninety-six conversions. Of the converts, fifteen indicated their preference for the Baptist church, while others have since come forward at the regular services. The Bible school attendance has reached 218.

FIVE HEADS OF FAMILIES offered themselves to Christ and the church at Corapolis Sunday morning, March 13.

KNOXVILLE CHURCH, Rev. F. W. Stanton, pastor, has contributed $145 to the China famine fund.

A UNIQUE PRAYER SERVICE was recently held at Duquesne, Rev. W. V. Bacon, pastor, with a record attendance. Twelve speakers represented the personnel of President Harding's cabinet. Patriotic songs were sung, 1 Tim. 2:1-7 was read, and definite prayer was offered for the nation's leaders.

A MOST CORDIAL WELCOME was given by the Sandusky Street Church to its new associate pastor, Rev. Charles E. Stanton, at a reception Friday evening, March 11th. After the welcome by the honored and well-beloved pastor, Dr. A. J. Bonsall, father-in-law of Mr. Stanton, representatives of the various boards and organizations extended greetings in a felicitous manner, pledging Mr. Stanton their friendship and support. The ministers' union and association were happily represented by Rev. E. W. Rumsey, Rev. J. A. T. Marsteller and Secretary W. C. Chappell.

THE PITTSBURGH CHURCH, under the leadership of Pastor E. F. Hallock, is having a series of cottage prayer meetings, and a remarkable interest has developed.

THE SPECIAL MEETINGS at Salina were of great spiritual power. More than seventy persons took some definite stand. Quite a number have already been received into the church.

THE MOST REMARKABLE REPORT of the season, thus far, comes from Mid-way. After weeks of prayer, special services were held for two weeks, with Pastor J. R. Routledge and Rev. J. S. Jewell, of Carnegie, in charge. The power of the spirit was manifest in the meetings. Fully 90 per cent of the membership came forward for re consecration besides many from other churches. Thirty-two professed to find Christ as their personal Saviour. There were fourteen adults, one a Roman Catholic with her husband, and eighteen young people from the Bible school.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the First Church, McKeesport, Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor, contributed $102 to the China famine fund.

AT ALLISON AVENUE, Washington, Rev. L. L. Bradley, pastor, the first week of special meetings conducted by Dr. H. J. Whalen has intensified the spiritual life of the church, and seven have professed conversion.

FOR THE PAST TWO MONTHS Pastor W. W. West of Sheraden has been conducting an Easter class of eight young people. During Passion Week special services will be held every night except Saturday, with baptism at the evening service on Easter.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL at Canonsburg, Rev. W. J. John, pastor, is taking over the Buffalo Hill district for mission work.

AT CARNEGIE, Rev. J. S. Jewell, pastor, frequent baptisms are following the evangelistic meetings conducted by Rev. H. E. Shade.

NEW YORK

THE PRESENT MEMBERSHIP of the Lake Avenue Church, Rochester, is 2038. Receipts for current expense during the last year amount to $26,700; those for benevolence total $35,300 and for the building fund, $20,000; the total for the year is $82,000. Bible school attendance has increased from 650 last year to approximately 1000. Winter congregations have at times so taxed the capacity of the building that many people have been turned away. In connection with the meetings of the Religious Education Association, the church prepared a set of thirty charts showing the entire organization of the church work and the way the organizations are coordinated.

A Jubilee Call for New York Workers

The program for the Jubilee celebration is a wonderful one, embracing two beautiful pageants one written by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, the other by Miss Margaret Applegarth. Ten foreign representatives come from the other side of the world, with messages of inspiration from the fields which we have learned to know and love. There will be special Jubilee hymns, with a choir to lead them. Greetings will be brought from our missionaries, candidates and our national officers, and an illustrated lecture will be given by Miss Nellie Prescott, foreign secretary. These are only a few of the joyous things prepared for the meetings at Rochester, May 3-5, and we want just as many of our enthusiastic Jubilee workers there as possible—"Months," "Weeks," "Days" and "Hours."

Urge all who can to come to Rochester, and on receipt of the announcements concerning full information, which will be out very soon, secure your credentials, and write for accommodations to Mrs. J. C. Davis, 19 Cumberland street, Rochester, New York, chairman of hospitality.

The Powers Hotel will be Jubilee headquarters, and the meetings will be held at the beautiful and always hospitable Lake avenue church.

While we are celebrating here, let us remember in prayer, and in thought the host of missionaries who must needs remain at their posts, but who we know will be with us in spirit, during our days of rejoicing—LUCIE C. PRATT, Jubilee District President.

EASTER SUNDAY was a great day in the history of the South Side Church, Elmira, Rev. Delos E. Abrams, pastor. An evangelistic campaign, planned in September, and culminating in cottage prayer meetings early in March and in special services in charge of Rev. Harry M. Shepson which began on March 7 and continued for two weeks, resulted in the baptism of forty persons on March 27. Others have professed their faith and will be baptized soon.

Buffalo Notes

Lafayette Avenue Church reports the purchase of a house adjoining the church lot, which will greatly facilitate the plans for the new church building. The fund for this building is growing rapidly, in fact all departments of the work are making rapid progress. About $35,000.00 has been paid in toward the new church building fund. The church is in the midst of a series of evangelistic meetings, Mr. Ebersole being assisted by Rev. R. B. Deer of the Maple Street Church.

At Prospect Avenue, Wednesday, March 16, was the occasion of a birthday supper spread in the church in honor of the eighty-sixth birthday of Deacon Earl W. Bailey, one of the constituent members of the church, and one of its most devoted and unselfish workers. At the supper there were present six other constituent members. Thirty-one who have been members more than thirty-five years; eighty who have been members more than twenty-five years. This demonstration indicated the intense loyalty of the membership. It accounts very largely for the success of the church in serving in its difficult, but promising field of opportunity. Work at Prospect-Hudson Neighborhood House, the new Christian center, midway between Prospect Avenue and Hudson Street churches, is administered by a joint committee representing these two churches, supplemented by many volunteer workers, and has already multiplied the points of contact and opportunity of ministry for both churches.

Mississippi Valley

NEBRASKA

DEACON C. G. JOHNSON, whose death was reported in the issue of March 12, died at Oakland, Neb., and not, as erroneously stated, at Oakland, Cal.

WISCONSIN

REV. ROBERT W. SHAW has been pastor of the South Church, Milwaukee, a year and a half. During the past six months this old church has made remarkable progress. September 12 there were 107 in Sunday school. On Easter Sunday there were 353. Each Sunday there are new scholars, by far the larger per cent of them being found within the territory of the church, and unattached to the church except by interest. On Easter Sunday twenty-two were baptized and four received otherwise.

LA CROSSE.—Easter was a day of great victory. Pastor W. S. Stewart baptized thirty-five, and received over twenty more in other ways. Several are yet awaiting baptism. It is the result of two weeks of cottage prayer meetings, one week of services, all conducted by himself.

INDIANA

EVANGELIST H. E. SHADE conducted special meetings with the First Church, Topoka, March 6-20. By the second Sunday night the seating capacity of the church was taxed to the limit. On the closing night 460 people gathered in the community hall to hear the powerful gospel message. A deep spiritual awakening is manifest in the community. There were thirty-seven confessions of faith, and of these people twenty-nine chose the Baptist Church.

REV. G. H. O'DONNELL of the First Church, Columbia City, on Easter Sunday gave the hand of fellowship to fourteen and one was baptized. Attendance at all services is large and a deep spiritual interest is manifest.

GIPSY SMITH is leading a great evangelistic campaign for the united churches of Indianapolis. Old church leaders declare that it is the greatest religious movement in the history of the city. Life decisions of various kinds number many thousands.

TUXEDO PARK CHURCH, Indianapolis, with 400 members has a Sunday-school enrollment of about 650. More room has become a necessity and building will begin this spring.

BICKNELL is putting on a big men's campaign. At a big banquet Thursday night, March 31, the tables bore a big pig roasted and several other big pigs stuffed but not roasted.

OHIO

THE CHURCH AT KINGSVILLE, Rev. C. F. Corman, pastor, has sustained a great loss by the death of Mrs. Lura K. Brown who lived to be almost ninety-one years of age. She was a descendant of James King who came from England in 1662 and settled in Suffield, Conn. Her father settled in Ohio in 1832 where Kingsville now stands. She united with the Kingsville church in 1852 and was married to Edward F. Brown in 1853. During sixty-nine years she has been a faithful supporter of the church in its various undertakings for good, being interested both in the home work and also in all phases of missions.

A GO-TO-CHURCH CAMPAIGN, conducted by the Protestant churches of Urbana, ended on Easter Sunday. Attendance was counted and the First Church led in averages all the way. As a result of a series of special meetings, conducted by the pastor, seventeen were baptized on the evening of Easter. The Sunday school gave to European relief $240 and the mission circle has undertaken to sell 3000 life saving stamps.

THE FIRST CHURCH, HAMILTON, has just closed special meetings in which for two weeks Pastor B. F. Caudill did the preaching. There were morning prayer meetings for both men and women besides the evening services. The church has been greatly quickened. Forty-nine were added to the church membership and others are in prospect. The regular prayer meetings have an attendance of from 150 to 200. Under the leadership of Paul S. Harmon the Sunday school is growing rapidly. On Easter Sunday there was an attendance of 1043 and an offering of $187. At the evening service two united with the church by letter and twelve were baptized.

FOR MANY WEEKS there has been a quiet revival going on in Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland. Dr. Bustard took advantage of this condition and invited Dr. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Fort Worth, Tex., to conduct a ten-day special easter evangelistic mission. These meetings helped to bring many more out into the Christian life so that on Easter Sunday Dr. Bustard baptized 101 candidates at a single service, and, on that day gave the right hand of fellowship to 200 new members. This is a record for this church.

MINNESOTA

CENTRAL CHURCH, Duluth, H. Robinson McKee, pastor, has just been experiencing a gracious revival. Early in February the church engaged Miss Minnie Nelson, a graduate of the Northwestern Bible School and also of the Duluth Normal, as church visitor. She is a young woman of fine tact in dealing with people and knows how to lead folks to Jesus Christ. Cottage prayer meetings were held on Tuesday night in different homes for four weeks, the regular Thursday mid-week service was devoted to the training of all in personal work and prayer. Two weeks preceding Easter, meetings were held in the church from Tuesday until Friday each week with the regular services on Sunday. The members of the church gave splendid support to the work, the pastor did the most of preaching giving simple gospel messages, much was made of singing by the large chorus choir of young people and testimonies from the christians. Twenty-two have already been baptized. Ten or more will be baptized soon. Three were received by experience and the work of grace is still going on.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, Minneapolis, the Northwestern Bible Conference has been in session for three weeks. Speakers were Drs. A. B. Winchester, A. N. Hall, Loren

A. Clevenger, George Guill, W. B. Riley, Gustav Johnson. On the evening of March 21 Dr. Riley's sixtieth birthday anniversary was celebrated in the church with a great banquet at which 350 people sat down. Dr. S. Marx White was toastmaster for the evening. Addresses were made by Dea. F. E. Tallant, for the official board, Mrs. Frank Ashcroft, representing the women's societies, S. E. Robb, the treasurer of the church, Roy Gallup, the young people, and Dr. A. N. Hall, speaking for the outside church friends. To all of which Dr. Riley responded. He was presented with an elegant travelling-bag, into which had been crowded five hundred one dollar bills. The students of the Northwestern Bible Training School presented him with an elegant steamer trunk. On Easter Sunday eighty-four converts were baptized in the morning and evening services.

PROF. EMANUEL SCHMIDT, a member of the faculty of Bethel Theological Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., passed away at the Midway Hospital, March 18, at an age of 52 years. Dr. Schmidt was a graduate of Colgate University and B. D. and Ph. D. of Chicago University, majoring in Egyptology and Hebrew. Since his graduation, 1902, he has spent two years as the editor of an illustrated monthly magazine, Hemmets Van. 1905-1918 he was president of the Adelphia College, Seattle, Wash. For two years he taught French and Latin in the Stromsburg, Nebraska, High School, and since September, 1919, was professor of Hebrew and Old Testament in Bethel Theological Seminary.

MINNESOTA BAPTISTS have lost several strong leaders by death recently. Chester B. Simmons of Trinity Church, Minneapolis, and a prominent business man, died in Florida. He has been deeply interested in denominational work and a most liberal contributor. A host of friends deeply mourn his death.

DR. EMANUEL SCHMIDT, who has been teaching at Bethel Swedish Seminary, St. Paul, for two years past, died in the hospital March 18. Dr. Schmidt was a scholarly man and for thirteen years was president of Adelphia College, Seattle. He was a genial Christian gentleman, most highly esteemed by all his numerous friends and acquaintances.

REV. MAGNUS LARSON, recently engaged in business, formerly pastor of Swedish churches in Duluth, St. Paul, Cambridge, Minn., died at Mounds Park Sanitarium early in March. Mr. Larson did good service for Christ in the years of his ministry.

THE REGIONAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCES were most successful and helpful. The attendance was large and many churches were represented. Beginning in the Twin Cities, the team went to Rochester, Duluth, Worthington and Mankato. Much interest was aroused, inquiries were answered, and the best of spirit everywhere prevailed. Taken altogether they reached a very high mark of missionary information and inspiration. The devotional spirit was very clear and strong, while the social life as expressed in the evening suppers at each place was full of enthusiasm. The team consisted of Dr. H. A. Heath, Miss Harriet Cooper of Detroit, Dr. Wm. Axling of Japan, who spoke in the Twin Cities and Rochester, Rev. J. T. Latta of Burma, who met the party at Rochester and was at all the other places, Mrs. H. E. Goodman of Chicago, who left at Duluth and whose place was taken by Miss Naomi Fletcher of New York. Dr. Frank Peterson, Dr. E. R. Pope, and Rev. E. H. Rasmussen also participated in the conferences as well as the pastors of the local churches. It was real team work and each one contributed much to success of the meetings. The missionary addresses of Dr. Axling, Mr. Latta, Miss Cooper and Miss Fletcher, were full of information and deeply interested everyone.

ILLINOIS

FREEPORT. Pastor Frank G. Sayers gave the last of a series of Easter time sermons by Freeport preachers at the Strand theater on Friday, March 25. Easter day audiences filled our auditorium. On Wednesday, March 30, Evangelist Harry Von Bruch, assisted by Percy James, chorus leader, singer and violinist, and by Mr. Schiebe, pianist, opened a series of special meetings. The attendance at the Bible school on Easter Sunday was 271.

DECATUR, First has recently decided to remain a down-town church instead of selling its present valuable property and moving to a residential district. Plans drawn contemplate the rebuilding of the present edifice at a cost of $75,000. This will make a most commodious and efficient modern plant, and to all intents and purposes a new building. Fifty thousand dollars have already been pledged and it is hoped that a beginning may soon be made. The church recently enjoyed an eight days' Bible Conference held by Dr. A. J. Ramsey of Pasadena. At the closing meeting more than a dozen of the young people publicly volunteered their lives for special service for the Master. Dr. Marsh is in the sixth year of pastoral service.

OLNEY. The downpour of rain made the attendance small. But the men's class raised $107. Several members of the class were absent, and when they are seen our offering as a class will reach $125. The other parts of the school are doing their share. Everything is doing well and the church is being built up both financially and spiritually.

Report of the Board Meeting of the Woman's Baptist Mission Society of Illinois

The Board met in regular session on Friday, March 25, at 10 o'clock in the First National Bank Building, Chicago, with twenty-two members present. Mrs. W. P. Topping, president, presiding.

Mrs. A. K. Sargent, Chicago, led the devotional service. Interesting reports from various associations in the state, showing progress along many lines, were heard with delight. Mrs. Topping explained how the state work is being organized on the new union basis—Home and Foreign under one head. Mrs. L. D. Vinnedge will be new secretary director for Illinois, taking the combined offices of foreign secretary and home director. Another office is created—that of state secretary of literature to which Mrs. J. D. Liederback has been elected. The associations will be officered after the plan of this new union.

The W. W. G. state rally and banquet, May 21-22, at Immanuel church following the central district and jubilee meetings, was announced. Miss Alma Noble and other splendid speakers will be at this rally. A poster announcing the central district and jubilee meetings was shown and all urged to see that these posters are placed in prominent places in all churches to which they are sent. It was voted that "Illinois Headquarters" for the board be established at the district meeting in Immanuel church, where all, not only from Illinois, but those from Missouri and Michigan might be welcomed and enjoy the warmth of fellowship.

The regional conferences in Illinois were reported to have been largely attended and of great help and inspiration. They are to be held annually.

The death of Mrs. R. H. Flannigan, East St. Louis, was spoken of with deep sorrow. She was very active in missionary work in that part of the state for years and led a very helpful and beautiful life.

Mrs. W. H. Harrison, Galesburg, and Mrs. W. E. Poole, Carrollton, were elected the two official delegates from the board to the central district meeting. These delegates must report verbally.

Mrs. Geo. McGinnis, chairman for program committee for state meeting at Rockford, in October, reported that the program was coming in a splendid way. The key thought is to be "Individual Responsibility." Two thousand dodgers are to be printed and sent out at once announcing this meeting and giving advance information.

Miss Louise Mammen, Peoria, was made college counsellor for Bradley Polytechnic, Peoria.

Mrs. W. H. Jones, state White Cross chairman, is compiling a leaflet setting forth the needs of missionaries, both home and foreign, telling where and how to send packages, etc., which will be printed for distribution later and which will be a great help in the White Cross work. The Winona luncheon on Monday, April 11, at Field's was announced and Mrs. G. W. Taft, 3646 Washington Blvd., placed in charge of the tickets or cards for this luncheon.

The special drive to secure seven hundred new subscribers to Missions before the central district meeting was urged. Special mention was made of the splendid work which was done the past year in the missionary union of the Chicago association as given in the annual report at the last union meeting. This union of which Mrs. R. P. Fales, Chicago, is the efficient president, is made up of sixty-five societies from the churches in the Chicago association.

The community service department under the state chairman, Mrs. R. S. Knapp, is already doing splendid work and excellent reports are coming in. The interdenominational summer school at Lebanon was discussed and it was voted to send $20 from the board to Mrs. McGill, our representative, to assist the interdenominational committee to that extent.

Many other vital and interesting matters came up and were discussed at this meeting. The session closed with earnest prayers for guidance in this great work—His work.

Mrs. N. C. Rutherford, Secy.

REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY and his family are leaving at once to rest six months in Europe. During his absence, Dr. Lathan A. Crandall will have pastoral charge of Hyde Park Church.

PASTOR L. D. ELLISON of Villa Grove labors under a burden of sorrow. His wife, who was tireless in energy, wise in counsel and able in leadership, was taken by death some months ago, leaving an infant son.

FIRST, LINCOLN, closed a two-weeks evangelistic meeting Easter Sunday. Seventy-five professed conversion or consecration. The pastor did his own preaching and was helped by Jos. W. News of Hammond, Ind., with the music. Twenty-seven were baptized Easter Sunday and another class will be through the instruction course for baptism April 10.

VILLA GROVE.—It is just a year since this church installed L. D. Ellison as pastor, and during that time 75 members have been added to the church, nearly all by baptism, mostly adults. Congregations have more than doubled; Sunday school has just doubled in enrollment and in interest; a brotherhood Bible class which started with four men, now has an average attendance of about thirty men. All of the auxiliary societies are growing rapidly.

MICHIGAN

REV. C. H. HEATON of Lansing assisted in special services at West Bay City church, of which Rev. J. B. Jarman is pastor. Thirty definite conversions are reported.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT ANN ARBOR has increased 75 per cent in the past two months, and the church is remodelling its parlors and prayer meeting room in order to accommodate its growing membership. Rev. J. M. Wells has had the joy of welcoming sixty new members into the church during the past year. It has been necessary to hold two Sunday evening services at the Community Chapel in order to accommodate the people.

REV. JOSEPH R. STEVENS, who has recently entered upon the Pentwater and Hart field, has received nine by baptism as the result of special services, and the churches are experiencing a spiritual awakening.

FIRST CHURCH, PORT HURON, has found it necessary to employ a church worker for half time, and shows its appreciation of Pastor C. Frank Vreeland by lifting up his salary by $200. Assistant pastor, H. H. Bowser is doing fine work at Gardendale; the people are putting $1000 into improving the church property and making room for the rapidly growing work.

REV. W. T. ROBERTS, state director of city evangelism, is driving good stakes at the new mission at Battle Creek. A building is well under way and over 100 families are manifesting a real working interest in the organization.

At HOPE, Rev. J. W. Tolley rejoices in the fact that five young men are planning to enter the Christian ministry. Rev. R. J. Fields recently assisted in special services when twenty-five took a definite stand for the Master.

STATE DIRECTOR CURREY of the department of evangelism has been pressed to the limit all season. At the meetings with the Broadway Church, Bay City, Pastor H. F. Holbrook reports that there were thirty-six genuine conversions; seventeen were baptized before the meetings had closed.

A FAREWELL RECEPTION was tendered Rev. H. A. Huey who is leaving Davison this month. During the evening he was presented with a purse of money. His going is regretted not only by his church but by the community generally.

TWO NEW PASTORS have just entered fields: Rev. A. K. Scott of Perry, Ohio, began work at Nashville the first of April. Luther Grice, a student at Hillsdale, will supply the circuit of Marcellus, Jones and Poes until college closes, when he will give full time to the field.

KANSAS

REV. J. R. TAYLOR of Colby has been called to the pastorate of the Clyde church and enters upon the work there immediately.

FIELD SECRETARY W. H. LEYBURN has been spending several days at Clifton, holding some services and visiting among the people, with a view to re-opening our work there.

EVANGELIST ROBT. L. LAYFIELD of Kansas City conducted a union meeting in the Plano community the latter part of February with some sixty-five conversions and restorations. Rev. C. E. Riblett is the pastor of the Plano church and he reports twelve additions to the church following the meetings, ten of them by baptism.

PASTOR R. L. MEIGS of Ashland had the assistance of Field Secretary J. J. Griffin of Garden City in special meetings the early part of March.

THERE WAS HELD AT LEOTI on Mar. 19 and 20 the Sunday-school and young people's convention in the West Central Association. Mr. Fred Robb was elected president for the ensuing year and Miss Georgia Mathews of Garden City was re-elected secretary. The place of meeting for next year will be Scott City.

REV. CHAS. GROVE of LEOTI has resigned his work at Horace and is giving full time at Leoti. He preaches in the afternoons at Modoc.

PASTOR F. W. DAISLEY of Altamont is having remarkable success in his work. A church house costing about $20,000 is to be dedicated June 10. Evangelist Rose and wife conducted a union evangelistic campaign recently in the community and the Baptist church received 182 members, about ninety of whom were by baptism.

EVANGELIST ARMSTRONG and wife of Leon, Iowa, closed the middle of March an unusual campaign in the Blue Ridge and Grand Center communities near Waldo in the Upper Solomon Association. There were nearly 200 conversions. The Blue Ridge church received fifty-one by baptism and Grand Center thirty-six. Many joined other churches. The Grand Center church has had a new roof put on the building. These are open country fields and are joining together in calling Rev. McGowhan of Nebraska.

ON EASTER SUNDAY the London Heights church dedicated its new basement which is costing about $7,000. This church was begun in a store building in 1906 and now has a good membership supporting the pastor, Rev. J. K. Harris, full time.

THE EMMANUEL CHURCH dedicated its Sunday-school unit and basements rooms Easter Sunday. It is costing about $20,000. This work was started in a tent in 1905. The pastor, Rev. Jos. W. Mac Daniels is leading the church on to victory.

PASTOR J. D. KELLEY of Downs closed the early part of March a splendid meeting with his church. Mr. and Mrs. Imri assisted in the meetings.

EVANGELIST ROSE and wife are in union evangelistic meetings in Clifton. The services are being held in the Baptist Church. The interest is developing, and a number of professions have been made.

REV. R. S. SARGENT of Winfield, who is pastor of the Floral and Hackney churches, had the assistance of Rev. F. W. Daisley of Altamont in special meetings recently. The results were fine, twenty-eight joining the church. The members of four whole families were among the converts.

REV. C. V. LAWRENCE of Ottawa, who is pastor at Osawatimie, held a successful meeting with his church during January, doing the preaching himself. He had the assistance of Miss Mabel Sloan of Stilwell as soloist and personal worker. Forty-five persons took a definite stand, thirty-one connecting themselves with the church, twenty-five of whom came by baptism. A large number of the conversions were from the Sunday school.

REV. H. T. CLARK, student at the Kansas City Seminary, has been called for half time to the church at Williamstown and will move his family on the field early in March. This is one of the new churches in the state, and since there is no other church in the community, a fine opportunity is afforded for an aggressive work.

6. "A careful consideration of his known will in preference to my own."

Then make these applications to the acquaintance we have with God.

Discuss what "frequent association" means. How it can be secured. The best time to get acquainted with God. Follow through all these points. It is possible to have the young people definitely watch the growth of their acquaintance with the Master. One can easily make this group too introspective but an occasional experience meeting along this line will draw out spontaneously the results.

Conference on Christian Fundamentals

The third annual conference of the Christian fundamentals movement will occur in Denver, Colo., June 12-19. The place of meetings will be the Central Presbyterian Church week-days, overflow in the First Baptist Church, and on Sundays the Denver Auditorium.

From the first, the movement has had one great definite intent—the defense of "the faith once delivered." Its originators and patrons are a unit in their convictions concerning the authority of the Bible, the diety of Christ, the effectiveness of the cross and the other great fundamentals of Biblical teaching.

The work is conducted as an antidote of "modernism," and as means of spiritual up-building. It purposes to reach and effect as rapidly as possible the Sunday-school training of the country with sound teaching; the secondary school, college and university education with the same; the theological training in the interest of orthodoxy; the reading of men, laymen and ministers alike, with a safe literature; the provision of text books that are at once scientific and scriptural; the inspiration of evangelists with an evangelical spirit and message; the output of missionaries for both home and foreign fields with the fundamental Protestant principle that the Bible is the rule of faith and practice in the Christian religion.

In order to accomplish these objectives, bible conferences have been multiplied by the hundred, books are being written and published in large numbers; educational methods are being carefully investigated with a view to change and improvement; orthodox scientists are being consulted concerning the production and selection of safe text books. Courses of reading will be recommended.

The personnel of the approaching conference will differ slightly from that of either of its predecessors. In the first conference at Philadelphia two years since, the personnel of the conference was chosen largely with a view to inspirational addresses. The object then was to arouse the nations to the menace of "modernism." The personnel at Chicago was chosen with a view to bringing together allies of revealed truth, hence the large number of speakers.

At Denver the objectives to be accomplished will necessitate the choice of men upon a three-fold basis. First: Lay speakers, who will bring to the conference the attitude of laymen toward orthodoxy as expressed in this movement. Second: Specialists, who will bring to the conference written reports on the great subjects above mentioned, which reports will be printed and made ready for distribution in the interest of our educational program. Third: Inspirational speakers, whose addresses will show how to utilize the sound orthodoxy of the church laity and inspire the carrying out of the varied suggestions made by the chairman of the specific committees. The number of speakers this year will be much smaller than a year ago. The work this year is of a constructive character and absolutely requires this reduction.

The Denver committee, Mr. H. W. Moore, chairman, and Rev. P. V. Jenness, secretary, will arrange all details of the conference and communications should be addressed to Rev. P. V. Jenness, Temple Court Bldg., Denver, Colo.

meeting in their regular budget. The number of those which send the pastor, with all expenses paid, is increasing. People interested should take this matter up in the churches at once. Information concerning assignments, whether in hotels or private houses, can be had from Mr. F. E. Goodell, 3620 Adams St., Des Moines, Iowa.

In the report of the receipts issued in a recent number of THE BAPTIST the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society was credited with the sum of $489,439.19. This amount includes the receipts from the Jubilee Fund which do not count on the operating budget of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, though they do count upon the $100,000,000. The amount received up to Feb. 20 for the operating budget for the Woman's Foreign Mission Society is $338,784.50, leaving a balance of $330,984.50 yet due for the fiscal year.

THE QUESTION-BOX

ATTENTION—H. T. Bramer, Attica, N. Y.—

In addition to the volumes suggested in my letter to you, add for the use of male quartette, the collection published by The Fillmore Music House, 528 Elm Street, Cincinnati, O., entitled Heyser's Anthems and Choruses for Men.

ATTENTION the dozen or more committees who have written in asking for help in the selection of new organs:—

The editor of this page is taking the hint and is working on a series of articles dealing with such a subject:—pertinent, practical suggestions as to just what to look for, require, and insist upon (and, what is equally important, what not to get)—when choosing the new instrument. This does not mean that these and other enquiries will not be attended to by personal letter: they will be so treated. But the writer of these lines is always glad to get hints and suggestions from his readers—a need expressed shows an opportunity for service.

QUESTION:

"Will you suggest a couple of interesting magazines dealing with the work of choir-directing and organ playing; not just papers dealing with the news-element."—Mr. J. S., Nebraska.

I would suggest that you subscribe to "The New Music Review" issued monthly by the H. W. Gray Co., 2 West 45th Street, N. Y., (rate, one dollar per annum); and "The Diapason," Kimball building, Chicago, Ill., published monthly, also one dollar per year.

QUESTION:

"How can I get in touch with the new church music for chorus-choir; the music stores here do not carry it in stock, and I have difficulty in finding it?"—A. L., Keokuk, Iowa.

If you will send in your name and address to such firms as Clayton F. Summy Co., 64 E. Van Buren Street, Chicago; Oliver Ditson Co., 189 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.; The A. P. Schmidt Co., Boston, Mass.; Carl Fischer, 380 Boylston Street, Boston; H. W. Gray Co., 2 W. 45th Street, New York, N. Y., I am certain that they will be glad to place you on their list for complimentary sample copies of their new issues. We will review all material for church use sent to this office—that is, all material that we consider worthy; write to the advertisers on the music page of this paper.

AMERICAN CHORUSES

WE reprint below a significant article by Marion G. Spangler from the columns of a recent issue of "The Musical Observer." While it is not confined to church music for the subject matter, most of the points made are directly applicable to that field. The article follows:—

With the wave of Community Singing passing over the land, through the camps, into the shops and industrial plants, among the colleges and the high schools, into large cities, as well as inland towns, the serious thinker will question what the effect will be upon the American Chorus.

Italy had its madrigal period and years of church music culminating in Palestrina. Germany had the Chorale which Bach immortalized. England adopted Handel and Mendelssohn and sang oratorio for centuries. Recently we have begun to realize what a wealth of unaccompanied choral music the Russian Church has been fostering from one generation to the next. Chorus singing has always flourished in any country which gave it a chance. What has been its opportunity in America?

In early Puritan days psalm singing was the innocent indulgence of the musically inclined folk. Then the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston set the example of cultivating the oratorio style and later many cities organized their own oratorio societies. Church choirs have invariably appropriated the music of the Anglican or the Roman Church, or any anthems which they could perform. There is an attempt now not only to use old time carols for Christmas and Easter but to dignify the American choir by incorporating Russian Church music into the service. We shall probably always have some kind of sacred choral music, but as yet have we done more than appropriate or imitate what other countries have bequeathed us in this respect?

The history of secular chorus singing in America offers even less logical development. Sporadic opera companies, of course, have maintained choruses as necessary accessories. Men's singing clubs thrived before women's clubs were attempted, but today the immense growth of women's choruses all over the country is giving such an impetus to women's chorus singing that no city or town of any musical standard is without its women's chorus. College Glee Clubs and High School Choruses also initiate the youth of the land into the delights of ensemble singing. And finally the Community Chorus has opened the door to any and everybody to sing, sing, sing.

NEW MUSIC

FROM the American Music Publishers, Delaware Bldg., Chicago, Ill. by Irving Gingrich:

"Hear my Prayer,"

"Now the Day is Over,"

"Oh, for a Closer Walk with God."

The above named set of sacred songs for medium voice are well-made, musically; simple, but adequate in structure; and written with care for vocal ease that would be well repaid in performance values. Settings of familiar hymn texts, they show the composer's sympathetic feeling for the devotional message therein, as well as his musical sincerity. For a singer who has command of a lyric legato, and some conception of the potential possibilities of the texts, these songs should prove very valuable. They are not for the sinner who carries the concert viewpoint into church-service.

From the Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago, Ill.:

"Thou Wilt Keep Him," Wilson;

"I Will Lay Me Down in Peace," Lester;

"O Silent Land," Lester.

One of the best-known names among native composers specializing in singable, effective anthems built for the average chorus, is that of Ira Wilson. The titles listed above prove no exception to this classification. It is colorful, easy to sing, and will be easy to listen to. At the hands of a resourceful choirmaster many interesting choral effects are possible. The first anthem by the conductor of this column is a quiet melodious offertory number comprising a fluent contralto solo, followed by a characteristic choral interlude, closing with a repetition of the solo with a richer accompaniment. It is easy well adapted to the needs of a chorus choir. The final title is well suited for use on Memorial Day, or for funerals. It is in simple four-part writing (can be done without accompaniment), and is entirely choral—no solos are called for.

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

Christ at the Centre

"Christian Centre" is a young term in our religious vocabulary. The Christian Centre is a new form of the Church's ministry. It is the agency through which Christian forces seek to help communities where poverty, bad housing, social, economic and other conditions make life so hard and perilous—especially for the children.

In practical helpfulness the Christian Centre has demonstrated its value beyond a question. Its service is one which all can understand, from whatever country he comes and whatever language he speaks.

Day nursery, Girls' Clubs, industrial school, prayer meetings, social meetings, mothers' meetings, cooking classes, children's hour, baths, laundry, boy scouts, Sunday School, week day religious instruction—these are but a few out of nearly fifty different forms of service in a single centre totaling over 37,000 attendance in one year.

These useful ministries awaken in the hearts of the people a question as to the motive and power of this service, and open the heart's door for the Gospel message.

A dying mother cried "Take my baby to de Katerine House"—an appeal that reveals as a lightning flash the heart of this ministry and the response of the human heart to it.

Over $800,000 for such centres in the program of the New World Movement. Some of them are waiting until the Hundred Million Dollar Fund guarantees their erection. Shall we let them wait indefinitely—which, being interpreted, means forever?

Or shall we build these as an earnest of an even larger ministry in the future?

Two things to do in April—

- (1) Pay up all pledges to date.
- (2) "Carry on" for completion of the Hundred Million.

Christianity in a New World

PROF. E. D. BURTON, D. D.

A VOLUME of papers from representative Baptists on themes of living interest. The character and value of the work are evident at once when it is noted that among the authors are such men as Presidents W. H. P. Faunce, and M. G. Evans, Professors E. D. Burton and H. E. Fosdick, and George W. Coleman, President of the Open Forum National Council, and that among the topics discussed are these: How shall we treat tradition? Can a nation be moral? Can business be Christian? Can Baptists cooperate? What is the modern Christian gospel? Is religion always in the making under the guidance of the Spirit?

The Religion of Jesus

Boards, 75 cents

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose.

Story-Telling Lessons

Cloth, 75 cents net

By HENRY EDWARD TRALLE, M.A., Th.D.

We have in this volume a scientific approach to a popular subject couched in simple, vigorous English. "The author handcuffs the reader's attention in the first chapter, and holds it captive to the end." Suitable not only for rapid reading, but a real text-book for use in training classes in the local churches and in community schools. The book is a product of twelve years' experience in telling stories and teaching story telling.

It is one in the series of volumes on religious education known as the Judson Training Manuals for the School of the Church.

You and Your Church

Boards, $1.25

By JAMES S. KIRTLEY, D.D.

What is involved in being a Christian, a church-member? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a text-book for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity, and work of Baptist churches.

Hymns for the King's Children

Boards, 40 cents; $35.00 a hundred

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School.

Edited by EDWARD M. FULLER.

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving, and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Manual for "Pathfinder Girls"

Paper, 25 cents each; $2.50 a dozen

Compiled by PLINETTE ALLEN.

In the "Pathfinder Girls" is contained a suggestion for independent organization of teen-age Sunday School classes, for the grouping of such classes for midweek club activities, or for a community of interchurch affiliation of younger and older teen-age girls for all manner of approved club objects. This new and enlarged edition of the manual contains the necessary information as to equipment, program, achievement, and ceremonies.

Baptist Talent and THE BAPTIST

"It is a joy to see the decided improvement in THE BAPTIST! As our denominational organ it should be representative of our best talent, and is rapidly approaching that goal. We value particularly the personal touch it affords with the folks we are interested in. Across the miles and in our busy lives we keep up our delightful acquaintance with our old friends far and near, between the columns of THE BAPTIST living room."—Dr. Arthur S. Phelps, preaching pastor of the First Church, San Francisco.

Stockholders' Meeting—Dividends Declared

BIG business! Fellow Baptist, you are a partner in the biggest business enterprise on earth. You may be interested in oil, or steel or transportation. You may even be a landlord, but rest assured that these are only side lines in comparison with the gigantic, world-wide enterprise in which you as a member of a Baptist church are now engaged. Your schools, churches, hospitals girdle the earth. Your representatives as teachers preachers, evangelists and missionaries are everywhere. For their work we have already pledged more than $50,000,000. This does not take into account our local church budgets nor the normal income of our institutions. We are in business for Christ and humanity. It is big business. You cannot know the details of these great enterprises but you can keep in sympathetic touch with their progress if you have your trade journal—THE BAPTIST at hand. Better sign up now.

What Does all This Mean?

Segunda, Primero, Valdez, Pictu, Sopris, Delagua, Morely, Berwind, Ideal, Farr, Tollersburg, Hastings, Cokedale, Walsen Mine. What is the meaning of this foreign language? These are the mining towns which through THE BAPTIST the young people of the First Church, Trinidad Col., visit every week. Let your imagination work a little. What may be the meaning of this service?

Know-Nothings and Do-Nothings

In an associational meeting the writer was attempting to name and describe the different kinds of Baptists he had known. He had just completed the fifty-seventh variety—the Know-Nothing Baptist—when an old gentleman in the audience said, "Elder, you have left out our principal Baptist product in these parts. We specialize on Do-Nothing Baptists." Be not deceived. Do-Nothing Baptists belong to the Know-Nothing family. It is not at all difficult to raise a bumper crop. To do nothing about subscriptions for the denominational journals will contribute to the yield. Let us begin a real campaign for a denominationally-intelligent church membership. Will you help? Our goal is 100,000 circulation before the end of the New World Movement period.

Look at This Gain of 67 Per Cent.

To the combined circulation of The Standard, Journal and Messenger, Pacific Baptist and Zion's Advocate at the time these were merged into THE BAPTIST we have added enough subscriptions to make a net gain of more than 67 per cent. Pretty good, looked at in relation to the old lists! Pretty bad viewed in the light of denominational needs!

The High Cost of Delay

The most expensive thing in the New World Movement is delay. See something of what it is costing us because we have not completed the Hundred Million Fund.

The missionary responsibility for these people is ours alone. No other denomination is at work there. We have been able to put in only ten per cent. of our proposed investment thus far. Increase in land values and in building material may cost us many additional thousands before we get through. Delay will cost us money. It is already costing us opportunity. Delay means turning boys away from school—a sorry business. ## The High Cost of Delay

THE one hundred million dollars will all be secured by April 30, 1924. There should be no doubt about that. The Baptists of the Northern states will not permit their great enterprise, the greatest in all their history, to fail. That is inconceivable. Having put their hands to the plow they will not turn back until the New World Movement is completed.

Already a great success has been achieved. Only a small part of the churches have as yet participated in any adequate way, but in the present incomplete state the average giving of the Baptists of the North has risen to $10.38 per capita. More money is flowing into our missionary treasuries than ever before.

But the project is not completed. We have assets for the New World Movement of fifty-five million dollars instead of one hundred million. There is a tendency among some of us to be satisfied with this half success. There are some who are advising that we should now rest on our oars. They are pointing out that our country has entered upon a period of industrial depression and it would be wise to abandon our large plans. There are still others who claim that because economic conditions have changed since the pledges were written these should not be considered as binding until a better day has come.

Are these friends right? We may not be able, in view of the present economic situation, to secure at once the balance of the pledges to complete our fund, but before we decide to assume a policy of "watchful waiting" we ought to sit down and count the cost. We shall soon discover how high is the cost of delay.

Take the situation on the foreign field. Our program provides for the erection of 188 homes for our missionaries. If the fund is not completed many of these will not be built, yet many of our missionaries are living in dilapidated, worn-out, unsanitary houses; some of them in mud huts. If the new residences are not now erected, it is not difficult to see what will happen to our missionary staff. It is not strange that many of them are invalidated home. We have recently sent out at high cost 162 new missionaries, our own boys and girls. It will be a pretty expensive advance if we do not provide money enough to secure safe, sanitary, comfortable homes for them. We can easily count that cost.

There has recently come an insistent demand for medical missionaries. The door is wide open in all the Orient for the Christian doctor. At considerable expense we have been training and sending out some well-equipped doctors and nurses. When many of them arrive they will find no hospital or dispensary. What will they do without their tools? When they went out they were assured that the hospitals would be promptly built. But until the fund is completed they cannot be built. What kind of economy is it to send these highly trained men and women and not furnish them with equipment?

The high cost of delay is apparent enough here.

It is not less evident in the home land. Our budget provided for a number of Christian community houses to be erected in the heart of our great immigrant centers where peoples from over seas are congregating by the thousands. Great masses of people are flowing unrestricted to our shores. Congress and the late executive could not agree upon a policy of restriction, so here they come in great armies and little provision is made for making Christian citizens of them. What we do for these new people must be done in the early days of their residence here. But because the one hundred million is not yet raised the Christian centers are not being erected. What that means to America's future only the trained student can tell. But the cost is high.

There are few things more alarming in American life than the growth of a generation of future citizens uninfluenced by a knowledge of the Bible and its great fundamental principles of the moral and spiritual life. It is estimated that not more than 25 per cent of American children are having any adequate instruction in these great principles. It does not require a prophet to indicate what that means for America. Our budget provided for a generous development of our work of religious education. That development is awaiting the completion of the fund. The cost of that delay is certainly high enough. These young people are passing out of the realm of our influence every week. We may not take the time to count the cost now. We shall have it to reckon with by and by.

Some one has recently suggested that our schools and colleges can wait; there is no hurry about them. Of course that suggestion was not made by one who knows the facts in the case. For any one who has any knowledge of the situations knows that our schools are crowded to the doors and are turning children away. Many of them have no adequate facilities for housing their students who are compelled to find lodgings for themselves which cannot be supervised. Some of them have equipment which is entirely inadequate for a modern education. Many of them are compelled to pay salaries that are entirely too small to retain competent teachers except such as are willing to remain as a missionary service at a missionary's salary. Of course this does not count to the man who has no children to educate or who would as soon have them educated in an institution where there are no Christian influences. But to the man who has a boy or girl ready for college whom he wants trained in a Christian atmosphere the cost of this delay is heart rending.

Our budget makes generous provision for sending out colporters, missionaries and evangelists into the remote regions of America, into the towns and villages, into the crowded cities. These were to preach the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. They were to present the unsearchable riches of Christ to a poverty stricken, sin-sick world. If ever the world needed these messengers of the good news it surely is now. But these messengers of light are held in check, straining at their leash. They are anxious to be freed for their great mission, but they cannot be set free until the funds are in hand to provide for their care. No one who prizes the freedom and the peace which the gospel has brought to his own life, can fail to count the cost to multitudes of hungry hearts, to whom these messages are denied. That cost will be counted not only in this world but in the world to come.

We cannot count up this high cost of delay until we have remembered those representatives of ours on the firing line, who have held on for many weary months and years, hoping, begging, praying for helpers, for homes and schools and chapels in which to do their work. When Northern Baptists announced their decision to come to their help, to raise a great fund to supply their needs, a cheer went up along the whole line. They saw the dawn of a new day. What if we disappoint them now? What if we stop where we are? What if we fail to pay our pledges? Who can count the cost to these disappointed, disheartened brothers of ours who have gone out in our name and in our stead? Who wants to try to count that cost?

The delay in the payment of our pledges, the delay in the completion of our fund are costing us dearly in all parts of the earth. Every dollar which we withhold represents so much Christian power restrained which ought to be set loose. We have come now to the close of the second year of the New World Movement. Practically $4,000,000 are due on the pledges during the next two weeks. A tremendous effort ought to be put forth in every church to have every dollar paid and remitted by April 30. No one can estimate the cost of delay in the payment of these funds. The cost will be felt from Boston to Bombay. It will be felt around the world. It will be felt in eternity.

Does Our Lord Expect It?

"I AM just an ordinary man, working hard day by day, trying to do my duty by my family and the community. No man can expect more." Perhaps not. But does my Lord expect more? Does he ask an "extra" goodness? What did he mean, "Ye shall be perfect as your father in heaven is perfect"?

"Why cannot people take their religion sensibly? It is not necessary to be fanatical. Moderation in all things is my motto." Is moderation also the motto of our Lord? What is the significance of that utterance, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," and of that other, "If any man cometh unto me, and hateth not his own father and mother, he cannot be my disciple"?

"Religion begins at home. How can I spend money on the heathen abroad while America is full of pagans?" See that you do not neglect both. Then ask what Jesus meant when he said, "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." Is he to bear the burdens of mankind and to die for the sins of the world, and can I be narrow, provincial and selfish?"

After all, this is the Christian's query, "What does my Lord expect?" Is there a life he would have me live, words he would have me speak, tasks he would have me do? He no longer speaks with the voice of a man, but if I listen, I can hear him. And hearing him I can afford to forget all that men shall say. He will know if I obey him.

It is great to dedicate life to the service of country and the liberation of mankind. So we said in 1917. It is magnificent to give life to the service of Christ and to spend it in opening to men the freedom of the gospel. So we say in 1921 and every year.

The general treasurer in New York looks to the treasurers of state boards of promotion and they in turn to the treasurers of all local churches for a successful closing of the books on May 5. That explains the S. O. S. call from your church treasurer this week. If you help him, he can help the state and the state can tell New York that all is well.

Of so much importance is the anniversary of the New World Movement that the greater part of this issue of THE BAPTIST is given to it. Necessity has compelled a reduction in the volume of our regular material. Thus the devotional page, the third editorial page with its prize editorial and the second page of the Bulletin Board do not appear. The amount of space given to news has been greatly reduced. We regret the need for such action but think that our readers will, as they ponder carefully the contents of this number, give their approval. The next issue will show again these omitted features and will besides contain several articles of outstanding worth. In these important days nobody can afford to lose a single issue of THE BAPTIST.

Is the war that was to end war to be followed by a mad race among the nations for armaments? Is the scorn expressed by some officials at every suggestion of the limitation of armaments representative of American opinion? The world groans under its burden. Surely there was never a finer opportunity than this for Christian men to bring to bear all their power in order that the world may return to something like sanity. When some of our leading military and naval men assert that the world faces ruin unless a stop is made of plans for military and naval expansion, there is nothing unpatriotic on the part of churches in urging practical action looking towards the limitation of armaments among the leading nations of the world.

These Churches Did Not Delay

They believed, they dared to undertake a great task, and God blessed them in corresponding measure and beyond expectation. Revivals followed

These churches are merely samples of hundreds. When they received notice of their allotments they were overwhelmed with the greatness of the task. But they faced it frankly, took it up together in prayer, organized thoroughly, and joyously did what at first seemed impossible. It is interesting to trace the results of their campaign. In almost every instance a revival movement sprang up in the local church. Audiences increased. Sunday schools grew. Prayer meetings doubled. More money was received for local purposes, converts were multiplied and a deeper spirit of unity pervades the membership.

Sowing for a Bountiful Harvest

Baptists ought to increase their denominational acreage this spring. Leave no untilled lots nor fence corners. Cut the briars. Dig up the grubs. Fertilize. Set the plow deep. Prepare a bumper crop for God.

By J. Y. AITCHISON, GENERAL DIRECTOR

THERE is a time to plant and a time to reap. But he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly." Christ recognized nature's law of equal reaction. This law is universal. The farmer is judged by his sowing. So is the working man, the merchant, the manufacturer, the millionaire, as well as the minister. Roger W. Babson says in "Religion and Business," "The 'production-for-profit' system has failed, and for it must be substituted the 'production-for-service' system founded by Jesus and of which the church is trustee."

Under the "production-for-service" system only can the church produce a bountiful spiritual harvest. When all churches operate under this system the results will be far beyond the present fruitage.

How did it ever happen that Northern Baptists were content to sow on all mission fields on the basis of an average yearly per capita gift of only $2.81? This was the case in 1917 before the Million Dollar Campaign. It is true that money cannot save souls. But neither can missionaries be supported, chapels, schools and hospitals be erected and maintained with out money. The laborers on our mission fields are worthy of their hire. They are dependent upon the love and support of those who sent them forth. Never were the needs of mission fields so great or the prospects so promising.

IF ALL HAD DONE AS HALF DID

During the Victory Campaign our per capita gifts were increased to $3.76. In the New World Movement the subscribers in over 1800 churches have pledged upon a per capita average of $23.56 per year. This is more bountiful sowing. Yet even this figure represents gifts from only about 52% of the members of these churches. Had the other 48% responded in accordance with their ability what a splendid showing it would make! And how inspiring it will be when all our churches begin to sow on this bountiful basis!

Our people should know the financial situation which our Missionary Societies and Boards and Schools and Colleges face as we near the end of the fiscal year. The operating budget approved for all organizations participating in the New World Movement for the current year is $12,500,000. This is distributed as follows:

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society .....	$1,927,953
Woman's American Baptist For. Miss. Society .....	609,769
American Baptist Home Mission Society .....	968,887
Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society ....	483,404
American Baptist Publication Society .....	339,017
Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board .....	291,100
Board of Education .....	200,000
Schools and Colleges .....	2,715,582
34 State Conventions .....	1,350,800
9 City Mission Societies ..	515,321
Baptist Young People's Union .....	15,000
Northern Baptist Convention	15,000
Interchurch World Movement .....	1,000,000
Foreign Speaking Bodies ..	45,625
Co-operative Work .....	60,000
Board of Promotion (covering two years' expenses) ..	1,900,000
Balance in Readjustment Fund .....	2,542
	<hr/> $12,500,000

We have received to April 1 from churches, Sunday schools, young peoples societies and individuals $7,847,493.57. The income to date from matured annuities, legacies and invested funds is $607,461.13. Adding this sum makes a total to date of $8,454,954.70. We must have, therefore, between now and the closing of our books on May 5, in addition to all receipts to date, $4,045,045.30.

We earnestly request all our churches to join now in a determined effort to secure this needed balance. The work is being done. Eleven-twelfths of the money has been spent. The bills must be paid. In our great Baptist family every member will surely want to do his part.

Watch May 5

OBERVE that the books at the state offices will close May 5. All payments for missionary, educational and benevolent purposes, in order to count on the current year must be in their proper state offices before that date.

Our missionary societies and boards and schools and colleges are worthy of the prayerful and financial support of every loyal Baptist. Their affairs are administered by faithful men and women. These societies and boards are the channels through which Northern Baptists seek to do their full part in promoting the kingdom of Christ in all lands. Nothing would mean more just now to the future of our missionary work than for the denomination to provide the $12,500,000 needed this year. It would give new heart to our missionaries at home and abroad. It would also encourage all our churches which have responded so splendidly and create new confidence in our ability as a denomination to carry forward our whole advance program.

OUR LIFE DEPENDS ON IT

We are all members of the same great denomination. Should the harvest be hindered longer by scanty sowing? There is a direct relationship between the money we give and the spiritual life of our churches. Read the wonderful story told by Rev. S. W. Stackhouse, pastor of the First Church at Hempstead, L. I., on another page of this issue. Similar experiences have come to multitudes of churches. "There is that withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty."

Conservatives and progressives can work together in politics and in business. It is the supreme test of the value of religion as to whether conservatives and progressives can work together in the kingdom of Christ. They are both honest in their own sight. They both think they are in the right. In view of the historic position of Baptists in relation to Christian democracy our people, now passing through the most perplexing period of modern history, are called upon to demonstrate to the world that we are not only democratic in principle but also Christian in spirit. Can we stand the acid test of these days? Cannot all our forces unite in our great missionary program and bend our energies to the successful completion of the task we have set before ourselves?

The time is short. Only a few days remain now until the close of one of the most significant years in the history of our work. The outlook is full of promise. Victory is in sight provided we all pull together.

We trust that those churches which have not yet taken their pledges on the four-year basis will now strain every nerve to raise in cash by May 1 one-quarter of the amount asked of them. Why not?

Many of your sister churches have pledged themselves for the full four-year period and are paying their pledges promptly. Surely those churches which fail to have their just share in the work, will not want to be responsible for neutralizing the income of those who have given on the larger scale and block the whole advance program. This is a plain statement. It is meant to be. But it has at its heart a deep concern for Northern Baptists to go forward and do their duty to God and the world. This cannot be done unless every church feels the pressure of these urgent needs and responds as God has prospered it. The giving of each church will be a matter of historical record after May 1. It will bring joy and blessing to all to know that each one has done its full part as unto Him who loved us and gave Himself for us. Our collective answer to His cross is to be given in the New World Movement.

Hundreds of Young Baptists Enlist

BY R. M. WEST

THE future of a denomination depends upon the ideas of life and service which its young people possess when they enter into responsibility.

The lack of ministers and missionaries is not so much due to defects in college training as to deficiency of training and inspiration in the church and home. It is to the church and home period of youthful development that the activities of the life work department are earnestly directed.

The purpose of the department, however, embraces far more than the supply of ministers and missionaries. It seeks to open the minds and hearts of all young people to God's call to a life work and to inspire them to strive earnestly and prayerfully to make a life which can serve the purposes of God and the needs of humanity skillfully and lovingly. Care is exercised to present the work of the minister and missionary as fundamental and of supreme importance. At the same time effort is made to help the crowds of young people, who never will be conscious of any call to those lines of service, to discern that they may enter upon a life work in law, medicine, farming, business, statesmanship or industry, in the same spirit of unselfishness and love as ministers and missionaries are expected to manifest.

The activities of the department consist in emphasizing and disseminating Christian ideals and truths which tend to inspire young people to make a life. The finest of response has been gotten from hundreds of young people and scores of pastors where the work of the department has been presented.

A series of small pamphlets is being prepared which will place the ideals and stimulus of the department within the reach of all. The subjects of the pamphlets are as follows:

1. The Ministry of the Church to Life.
2. Objectives of a Life Work Education.
3. A Living or a Life?
4. How to Make a Life.
5. Courage in the Highest.
6. Personal Wealth and Its Investments.
7. Life Work Opportunities.
8. Text Book on "Preparing for a Life Work."

Numbers one and two are now in circulation and number three and four will soon follow.

The true character of any work cannot be shown by statistics, nevertheless there is some significance in the statistical feature.

From the young people ministered to in the past eight months specific interests in life work have been expressed in writing as follows:

Ministry, twenty-seven; home missions, eight; foreign missions, forty-one; missionary work without indication of the field, seventy-five; unselfish service in various lines, law, medicine, farming, etc., 199.

These purposes for life work over which in each instance there is a personal promise to pray for divine guidance and blessing, have come from young people who are quite generally under twenty-one years of age.

These young people have all been made known to their pastors and, where the missionary purpose is specific, to the candidate secretaries.

Young lives have been interested and inspired; the ultimate result will be greatly influenced by the care bestowed in the next four or five years.

OVER THE TOP IN ARIZONA

Rev. H. Q. Morton, superintendent of the Arizona Baptist State Convention, congratulates the members of the Hopi Indian Baptist Church, Second Mesa, Arizona. This group of Christian Indians gave proportionately three times as much as any other Baptist church in the state—and Arizona exceeded its allotment. These Indians own no oil wells.

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, NELLORE, S. INDIA

KO-THA-BYU HALL, BASSEIN, BURMA

What Will Baptists Do About It?

A bungalow for Nowgong, a remodeled girls' school at Nellore, a new girls' school in a Chinese city of 150,000, a home for a lone missionary at Tono, help to complete Ko-Tha-Byu Hall and a bungalow at Bassein.—Come on!

BY NELLIE G. PRESCOTT

A cable has recently been received by the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society from Nowgong, Assam, to the effect that the residence where three of our young women are living has been condemned and that it is necessary to begin work at once on a new bungalow. It has been known for several years that the house was old and should be replaced, but the situation has recently become critical through the serious illness of one of our missionaries which was contracted by living in the house. The Woman's Society is very anxious to cable immediately authorizing the erection of this bungalow, but it lacks the $8000 which will erect a bungalow that will be comfortable and adequate, provide a home for four of our young women and supply simple furnishings. At present these missionaries of ours are homeless.

What Will Baptists Do About It?

In Nellore, South India is our Baptist elementary and normal school for girls which numbers over 150. With this is connected a practice school and a kindergarten department which has recently been added. For several years the need for enlargement has been urgent, but with the growth of the school it becomes a critical need for $3500, asked for remodeling and adding new rooms to the present building. Now classes are meeting on a veranda, which is delightful for a few months. The excessive rain and heat, however, make this impossible at certain seasons of the year, so that the classes must meet wherever a corner can be found for them. In this school, Indian girls are being trained to be Christian teachers and home-makers for our whole Telugu field. How important a work in India's present critical situation! Only $3500 are needed here.

What Will Baptists Do About It?

Chaochowfu is a large, conservative city of South China where our girls' school has been struggling along with almost no buildings and less equipment. A year ago it was possible to secure a portion of a block in the heart of the city, including several buildings, which could be used for the school. On this $2000 was paid leaving a balance of $500 still due. Since then, adjoining property in the same block has come into the market and should be immediately secured, inasmuch as the school has already outgrown its present quarters, and has no opportunity to raise the grade because of lack of room. For the purchase of this new property, with the $500 required to complete the earlier transaction, $2000 will be necessary to make possible this entering wedge to Christianity into the homes and lives of the 150,000 women and girls of this conservative old Chinese city.

What Will Baptists Do About It?

An urgent call comes from our Japan mission for a suitable home and working centre for one of our older women missionaries who has gone to live in Tono, a town of 8,000 people, up in the mountains of North Japan. This portion of our Baptist work has been understaffed for years—one man in Sendai being the only missionary now in charge of two fields which contain a million Japanese for whom Baptists are alone responsible.

Tono is one of the towns where the church has been struggling along with but little outside help for years. Now this woman missionary has volunteered to live there. She is alone, has rented a small Japanese house, plans to open a kindergarten, and begin work among the women and girls. It is imperative that a proper home be provided immediately. A two-story addition to the church will provide this, the circle room for the kindergarten, and rooms for the Japanese assistants. The Women's Society is asked to cable $11,500 to buy a small piece of land adjoining the church and to erect this building. A missionary who has already given twenty-five years of service in Japan, living alone, in a little town in North Japan waits for an answer.

What Will Baptists Do About It?

This is a call for help from the Sgaw Karens of the Bassein field! Through self-denial and heroic giving they are erecting the new Ko-Tha-Byu Hall, named for the first Karen Christian. This building is to cost $100,000. With $50,000 given by the Government a new school building for the girls is to be erected. The Karens, who are straining every nerve, whose pledges for one week in December amounted to $7000, and who in the month of November pledged $17,000, are asking, through the Woman's Society, that the Baptists of America aid them to the extent of providing a covered walk and the equipment needed for the two new halls—seats, desks, tables, blackboards, and $10,000 will provide all that is needed. This gift would be just one more link between the Karens and the Baptist people in America towards whom they feel grateful for sending them missionaries and for other tokens of brotherliness.

What Will Baptists Do About It?

From Burma comes another urgent call to the Woman's Society which cannot be met without additional funds. Reference has already been made to the work at Bassein. The bungalow in which two of our missionaries are living and which has served as a dormitory for the girls, has become so dilapidated that it has been necessary to replace it. The situation is so urgent that our Burma mission has asked us to cable the money. A part of the money the society has been able to provide, but $4000 is still needed to make it possible to begin the erection of the house. The Sgaw Karen school in Bassein has an enrollment of 300 boys and 218 girls. It has been able to maintain itself with no previous contributions from American Baptists aside from the salaries of our missionaries and the houses in which they live! Here $4000 will meet the present situation and assure the Karens and our missionaries in Bassein of our cordial approval of all their efforts and their success along the lines of self-support.

My Missionary Has Come

BY A. F. UFFORD

IN 1819 there graduated from Brown University, a young man whose great desire was to become a foreign missionary. Unfortunately Jesse Hartwell, although strong in faith was weak in body. When he made application to the American Baptist Missionary Union to be sent to Burma to join Judson he was rejected, the board's medical examiner telling him that he could not live very long, but that he might live a couple of years if he went south.

Although bitterly disappointed at the board's decision he took the physician's advice and went south, where for many years he filled important positions as preacher and college professor.

When he found the door to the foreign field definitely closed against him he at once began to pray for a son to go in his stead. In due time a little girl came to the Hartwell home. As the appointment of women missionaries was an unheard of thing in those days he again prayed for a son. When the second child came it was a little girl, but Jesse Hartwell continued to pray for a son believing that he would come. When the third child came it was a little girl but the Hartwells prayed on. When the fourth, the fifth and the sixth child came, each was a little girl and still the Hartwells prayed on. Nothing daunted they continued to pray and when the seventh child came it was a boy.

ing out to greet him Jesse Hartwell cried out, "Brother Rice, my missionary has come, my missionary has come."

Thus Jesse Boardman Hartwell, for fifty-four years missionary to the Chinese, forty years in China and fourteen years on the Pacific Coast got his name and dedication. Pioneer in Shantung province he baptized the first convert and organized the first protestant church north of Shanghai. Mighty in prayer, fearless preacher of the truth, indefatigable in evangelistic efforts, faithful in his care for the Chinese work on the Pacific Coast, and in his later years teacher of young men in the Bush Theological Seminary at Hwanghsien, Shantung, Dr. Hartwell left a priceless legacy to the Chinese church.

Nor is the end yet. Since Dr. Hartwell's landing in China in 1858 to the present day one or more of the Hartwell family has been engaged in work for the Chinese. Twenty years Nellie Hartwell Beattie worked for the Cantonese. Over thirty years Anna B. Hartwell has given herself to the women and children of China chiefly in Shantung. Thirteen years Lottie Hartwell Ufford has been guide, counselor and friend for Chinese school girls and the women and children of Shaohsing. Twelve years Charles Norris Hartwell has been a teacher of Chinese young men in the Hwanghsien middle school. Since Jesse Hartwell prayed for a son to go to China in his stead an aggregate of 159 years of service has been given to the Chinese by his descendants.

GOING TO SCHOOL IN BURMA

Maintaining Our Morale

Student volunteers are coming in a greater host than ever. Our denomination has not failed and will not fail. We have a great cause that inspires a great faith. Many voices call us on. The hour sounds an advance

BY J. H. FRANKLIN

THE events of the last twelve months furnish a background for serious reflection on the part of those engaged in missionary effort. We face a situation which need not be camouflaged. We might as well be frank and confess that in certain respects we have been disappointed. Our available material resources are not quite what we had hoped for. The anticipations of a year ago have not been fully realized. In our temporary disappointment we are in danger of losing the true perspective and of making baneful spiritual observations. If we were to allow a disappointment as to material resources to affect seriously our morale we should dishonor God and we should prove ourselves unworthy of places of leadership, either at the front or at the home base. The hour calls for a faith that will convert a temporal disappointment into a spiritual victory.

THE HOUR CALLS FOR CHRIST

The hour calls for faith in our great cause. Never were the voices of thoughtful men, statesmen, philosophers and warriors alike, so insistent in their declarations that spiritual renewal is essential to the well-being of humanity; that the spiritual forces are the determinative forces in the world. Men who know the religions and the philosophies of mankind proclaim that the only real hope is the teaching of Christ sanctified by his cross on Calvary. The foreign mission program represents the boldest plan yet conceived for making Christ and his cross real in the hearts of individual men and in all human relationships. The cause which rests so truly in the heart of the Eternal cannot fail. Our mistakes may have hindered its progress, and we may so fail to represent it truly that other agents and other agencies must be employed, but the cause itself must triumph. Adequate help is found in no other direction.

The hour calls for an humble faith in ourselves as disciples of Christ—a faith that God can use us in spite of our weakness and our many mistakes. Christ's plan is to reproduce himself in the lives of his disciples. First, "I am the Light of the World." Next, "Ye are the Light of the World." "And the Life was the Light of men." We have been in danger of conditioning our success in his service on an abundance of material equipment. Let us not forget that in general the men who have been epoch-makers in the kingdom of God have had nothing but their bare lives to offer. Nothing but life can propagate itself. Life, bare life, dominated by the spirit of Christ, is the greatest asset for the advancement of the kingdom of God.

THE HOUR CALLS FOR US

The hour calls for faith in our denomination, which means faith in our forces and faith in one another. The denomination has not failed. In the financial test last May, our great denomination, in per capita subscriptions, made the best record of any of the larger denominations in similar campaigns. This was accomplished in the face of grave difficulties, and many misunderstandings that led some to an unwillingness to participate. Last year nearly one hundred young people were sent to the foreign field by our two societies. Missionaries at home on furlough are finding a deeper missionary interest in the churches than ever before. Board secretaries declare that the spirit of the state conventions last autumn and the missionary conferences now being held, is the best they have ever known. Student secretaries report more volunteers for foreign mission service than in any previous year. We have not yet reached our financial goal, but a great advance has been made by the denomination. Our denomination will not fail. We have a great people, and Northern Baptists will meet the hour in a great way.

Now, therefore, perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.

They will never return to the old standards of giving. Not all of the volunteers required have yet been secured, but God is moving on the hearts of our young people.

The hour calls for a fresh faith in God. If we have been in danger of misplacing our faith and of trusting in any movement instead of in God, let us be grateful that developments now force us back to a dependence on the Unseen. Once the twelve were about to make an outward phenomenon the basis of their confidence, whereupon the Master charged them to place their faith in the Invisible. God reigns! The cause we love is his cause. He will see it through. It is possible that there may be storms ahead, but the Master of storms is in the boat with his disciples. "Why are ye so fearful?" There were dark hours during the war, but in the worst hours an unseen hand came out of the blackness and gave the victory. Whatever may be the events of the days or years that lie immediately ahead, ultimate victory for Christ and his kingdom is sure.

Evangelism at Brown University

WHEN Dr. Albert Parker Fitch of Amherst College was invited to conduct a religious campaign at Brown University, many students were openly skeptical whether the college would pause to give it serious thought. A group of undergraduates, however, who felt the need of such meetings got together and decided to promote an expectant atmosphere on the campus and thoroughly prepare for Dr. Fitch's coming. The practical result was the university ceased its regular activities each day, and allowed time for the students to attend the meetings.

Athletic teams ceased practising; classes were omitted; libraries, fraternities, and dormitories were emptied. It was quite an unusual sight for Brown University to see the auditorium of the Union filled for a religious meeting.

Dr. Fitch took for his subjects for the afternoon addresses:

"Science and Religion;" "Morality and Religion;" "Was Jesus a Moral or a Religious Leader,"; and "The Qualifications of a Religious Man."

In the evening Dr. Fitch held an open question period when he permitted men to ask questions either on the afternoon addresses or on other phases of their Christian experience. So interesting was the discussion that the men stayed for two or three hours and many felt that they received most benefit from this phase of the campaign.

Then, too, many Brown men met Dr. Fitch in private interviews during the day for more personal questions. During the campaign forty undergraduates made themselves responsible for certain groups on the campus, to see that they knew just what was going on, that they received invitations both to the meetings and to a personal conference with Dr. Fitch.

The four days were all too short and the students deeply regretted that Dr. Fitch did not have additional days to spend at Brown.—

God Met Them More Than Half Way

Churches give to missions and have more for themselves. The outgo is followed by a generous come-back. These churches capitalize Bible promises

OCCASIONALLY one finds a timid soul who has conceived the idea that if a church makes a particularly large contribution to the missionary cause the gifts for its own support will suffer thereby. This strange idea has been once for all disproved in the experience of many churches in connection with the New World Movement. Many a church burdened with debt or unable to raise sufficient funds to care for its current expenses discovered that as a result of its largely-increased giving for the missionary cause it had solved its own financial perplexities. Several instances taken at random will be sufficient to illustrate the large number of cases in which this experience has proved to be true.

The First Church of Lawrence, Kan., a college town, completed its quota of $35,000 for the New World Movement and then raised $8,000 for a new church organ.

The Himrod Avenue Church, Youngstown, Ohio, a congregation of 357 working people, pledged $150,000 to the New World Movement and then paid off a debt of $10,000 on the church property.

The First Church of Cedar Rapids,

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT STANDARD FOR GIVING.

- A. What we said we would do
- B. What some of us have done
- C. What all of us can do.

Note:

In 1800 churches 170,000 contributors gave on an average $95.24 each. If our entire membership gave on this basis, we would have over $130,000,000. This would be much less than an amount equal to one half the tithe of the average income of Northern Baptists.

Iowa, subscribed $31,200, its full quota, and then pledged $5,000 in addition for reducing the debt on its fine church property.

The First Church of Selma, Cal. pledged its full quota of $33,000 to the New World Movement, designating a part of it for the support of a mission in India. It then pledged $80,000 for a new church building.

The New World Movement led the Baptist churches of Maine to increase the salaries of ninety of their pastors.

The First Church of Buffalo, N. Y., after exceeding its quota of $76,280, subscribed $50,000 to wipe out a long-standing debt.

The First Church of Casper, Wyo., was a mission church, depending upon the Home Mission Society for its support. As a result of its cooperation in the New World Movement this church met its full allotment, became an independent church, providing for its own support, and increased the salary of its pastor.

The Baptists of Metuchen, N. J., have reason to be proud of their record in the New World Movement, for they passed their full quota by $1,500, increased the membership of their church 40 per cent, wiped out a church mortgage and added $300 to the pastor's salary.

After completing its canvass the church at Flora, Ill., raised the salary of its pastor $800, paid $3,500 toward a parsonage and secured a woman assistant for the pastor.

With a resident membership of only 200 the Highland Park Church of Los Angeles, Cal., passed its quota by $2,000, subscribed the full budget for its local expenses which was $1,000 larger than ever before, wiped out an old debt and bought a new plot of land adjoining the present church building.

The First Church of Lansing, Mich., pledged $100,000 to the New World Movement and then subscribed another $125,000 to provide for a church house and to improve the plants for the two branch churches.

The promises of the Scriptures have been abundantly fulfilled in many churches. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." A similar blessing awaits a multitude of other churches when they have assumed their full share of responsibility in proclaiming the gospel to the ends of the earth.

What the Propagation of Baptist Principles Would Mean to Europe

Religious liberty is more imperilled in Europe than for many years. Baptists are generally misunderstood. Even Lutherans and Reformed Churches are bitter against them. A challenging situation to believers in the separation of church and state

BY C. A. BROOKS

BAPTISTS are comparatively a new "sect" upon the continent of Europe. It is difficult to comprehend that it is less than seventy-five years since the first converts in modern times were there immersed upon confession of faith. The limit of this article necessitates concentration on one fundamental Baptist principle, viz., religion liberty assured by the separation of church and state.

It will come with something of a shock to us in America to learn that there is great danger that our hopes which rose to a high point with the termination of the war are in grave danger of being disappointed, that religious liberty is more imperilled with the reaction of the past few months than in many years.

The same thing is true all over the world. Mr. Oldham, editor of the "International Review of Missions" confirmed this conviction in a recent address in New York.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY ENDANGERED

With very few exceptions the union of church and state is the characteristic of organized religious life all over Europe. Even Switzerland, which probably has the most perfect democracy in Europe, or in fact in the world, has a state-supported church for which non-church members are taxed. Germany and Portugal have disestablished the church. Czecho-Slovakia has promised to do the same but has not yet done it. The Bolshevik government practically abolished all forms of religion. According to the constitution of the old Austria and Hungary, the ruler must be a Roman Catholic and the same thing is being advocated in Poland's new constitution.

There is religious tolerance in most countries, but that is not absolute religious liberty and divorce-ment of church and state. Even in those countries that have a degree of tolerance, disabilities handicap the work of evangelical free churches. It will create considerable amazement in the mind of American Baptists to learn that our 60,000 Swedish Baptists are an integral part of the state churches of Sweden and only under the protection of that formal adherence have they been able to prosecute their faith.

I have had occasion to discuss this vital question of separation of church and state with some very fine Christian men of other communions in the newly-organized nationalities and have found them wholly wanting in any appreciation of the importance of safeguarding religious liberty by making provision in the constitution for the separation of church and state.

The Roman Catholic, Lutheran, Reformed, and Eastern Orthodox churches are the state churches of Europe. While the Roman Catholic and Eastern orthodox churches are the deadliest foes of evangelical Christianity, they are not more bitter in their abhorrence of Baptists than the Lutherans and Reformed churches in certain countries. The Eastern Orthodox hierarchy can outdo even the modernized Roman Catholic in persecution.

President Wilson strove manfully to get this principle of religious liberty written into the agreements at Paris, but without avail. Roumania, after great pressure was brought to bear upon her, signed articles guaranteeing religious liberty to the minorities of her enlarged kingdom. We are in possession of documentary evidence which reveals how utterly she has failed to live up to her agreement. The people which have come under her domination through the surrender of territory and the creation of new boundaries by Hungary are infinitely worse off than when they were under the rule of Hungary which has in recent years given great freedom to Baptists.

If any of us foolishly assume that evangelical Christianity can flourish under an active and aggressive state church with its inhibitions and disabilities, we have only to read the record of our Baptist work in Europe. Religious liberty is the acid test of civil liberty and progress.

Our best allies politically in all European countries are Socialists and other liberals. The Socialist Imperial Republic of Germany disestablished the church, and with the removal of the old disabilities thousands of people who were in the state church for politic reasons left it and our churches and other evangelical free churches immediately felt the effect of this new liberty.

NO OTHER MODERN HOUR SO FATEFUL

Baptists are generally misunderstood in Europe. They have often lacked educated leadership and organization. Mr. Igrisan, one of my colleagues in Europe last year, was arrested and detained in Roumania for a short period and during his detention was asked if there were any Baptists in America. Our brethren are generally regarded as sectarian and schismatics. Sometimes they have been, in my judgment, somewhat Pharisaical, but mostly they are what the postoffice official in Budapest characterized our Hungarian Baptists, "beautiful people."

There has not been an hour in modern history when we in America were confronted with so challenging a situation as now. When this vital principle is so generally at stake, our resources and influence, our leadership and intercession must be brought to bear upon Europe if we are to make our largest contribution for the complete establishment of the kingdom of God on this war-torn continent.

Reenforcements Are Joining the Ranks

DRYDEN PHELPS

THE Survey presented at Denver pointed out the necessity for the appointment of 228 new missionary families and 176 single women missionaries before April 30, 1924. This would almost double the number of our missionaries on the foreign field. New missionaries to the number of 162 have been commissioned since the Denver convention, forty of these since the Buffalo convention.

We present here six representatives of this new Baptist missionary army.

THE NEW WORLD MOVEMENT PLAN DOES WORK

IT EVIDENTLY WORKS IN NEW ENGLAND

The average more than trebles

The per capita contributions of Massachusetts Baptists were in 1919-20 under the old system

$4.44

In 1920-21 under the New World Movement

$13.73

The average per capita of the churches which have subscribed their full quota

$23.52

The total payments also more than treble

The Baptists of Massachusetts paid in 13 months in 1919-20

$184,941

In first 10 months in 1920-21 they paid

$701,827

IT WORKS IN OTHER STATES ALSO

In one association in Wisconsin the churches which did not cooperate in the New World Movement have paid an average per capita contribution of

54 cents

The cooperating churches in the same association have paid an average per capita contribution of

$4.10

The non-cooperating churches have paid to February 1,

$85.00

The cooperating churches have paid to February 1,

$3,305.37

WHY NOT TRY IT?

IT WORKS WHEN YOU WORK IT

The record of 50 churches in Illinois which made the highest per capita subscriptions in the New World Movement

10 churches with 3,941 members subscribed $671,239.68.
The average per capita $170.32.

10 churches with 3,224 members subscribed $260,262.52.
The average per capita $80.72.

10 churches with 4,159 members subscribed $240,574.37. The average per capita $57.84.

10 churches with 2,095 members subscribed $110,401.74.
The average per capita $52.90.

The whole 50 churches with 17,158 members subscribed $1,551,601.05.
The average per capita $90.43.

Of the 50 churches 35 also increased their pastors' salaries.

WHAT SUCCEEDS IN ILLINOIS WILL SUCCEED IN OTHER STATES

WHAT IF WE ALL PULLED TOGETHER?

Massachusetts had the third largest quota in the One Hundred Million Dollar campaign.

$7,877,000

When the churches which have not subscribed their full quota reach the per capita average of those which have, the total subscription of Massachusetts Baptists will be

$8,467,200

The Bulletin Board

Books Will Close May 5

The books of the state boards of promotion will close promptly on Thursday, May 5. Church treasurers should take notice. All monies which are to count on this year's receipts must be in the state offices not later than the fifth. It is highly important that every dollar due up to that date should be collected and forwarded. Only as our national societies receive the full amount of their expectancy will they be able to finance their missionary work for the current year. The cost of all missionary work went up with the rising tide and there is no sign of return as yet. Let every dollar that is due find its way to the treasury.

Salvador Needs a Saviour

Salvador has ten large towns and more than fifty villages. There are about four hundred thousand people in the field. Few of them know of the Christian way of living. Christian schools are badly needed. Less than twenty-five per cent of the population know how to read. Christian congregations are needed to radiate a wholesome life and elevate standards of family, social and civic living. Christian missionaries are needed to live and preach Christ and organize moral forces for better things. Sunday schools are needed to save children from selfish, careless, licentious and vicious living.

Woman's Society Jubilee, 1871-1921

The Jubilee year of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society has come. Fifty years ago the work for women and children of other lands was undertaken by the Baptist women of America. A start was made in 1871 with 9 workers in 4 fields scattered among 12 stations. In 1921 the Woman's Society has 252 missionaries located in 11 fields among 112 stations. What marvelous things God hath wrought!

"All Right; I Go."

Told by an African house boy, and reported by Miss Minnie E. Grage of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, stationed at Vanga sur Kuilu, in the Congo Belge, comes the following remarkable story of a thirteen-year-old native Christian who preached Christ, in spite of opposition, of illness, of danger, and almost in spite of death:

"His name was Mufungu, which means a reed used in the making of mats. He was a not-yet-grown-up. He wanted to tell the words of God. He was sick in the ribs, but got well before he went away to teach. His relations said to him, 'Do not go to teach.' He answered, 'If I am sick, I go to teach the things of God.' 'Don't return,' they said. 'The Mission sent me to do the work of God,' he said. 'If I die, God knows. I go.' He went. The time much had not passed, his sickness increased. He fell down in the road, and blood came. He got up and went on the road, and saw elephants, many, many. He said, 'Whether they will kill me, or the sickness will kill me, I do not know. But God knows. All right. I go.' He came to his town, and taught the children in the school, and the grown-ups of God, though his sickness was great. One day he died on the path."

Her Father Sold Her for Opium

Direct from Hangchow, China, comes another proof of the excellent value received for Northern Baptist money spent in the Orient, in the person of Miss Grace Kan, a 21-year-old Chinese kindergartener in the Union High School of Hangchow, who, but for a Baptist missionary and five yen, would be a slave today. When she was four years old her father, an opium fiend, took her out on the streets to sell her, to get money to procure the drug. Mr. Sweet, of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, saw her there, bought her for five yen, and took her home to his wife. They adopted her, and placed her in mission boarding schools. Later she went through the Union High School of Hangchow, afterwards studying kindergartening under Miss Helen Rawlings, of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. This year she has been the acting head of the Union High School Kindergarten. After she has attended the jubilee celebrations in America of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, she expects to return to her own country to teach the children, and their elders, of Christ.

The Lord Gets His Share

"Our Christians have learned to give to a great extent," writes Miss Aganetha Neufeld of Nalgonda, India. "Our pastors and preachers insist on it that all Christians who have land and do cultivation should give a part of the income to the Lord and the Christians do it. Immediately after they have sown their field they take their pastor to the field and set apart a part of that field and whatever the result of that part is, goes to the Lord. Although the crops may be very poor, the Lord gets his share of it. And it is joy to see how the Christians come with their bundles or baskets of grain to the harvest festival. And the reaction of true giving is shown by the fact that during the year we were able to baptize 650 people, the largest number ever baptized on this field!"

Boy Preacher Appears in Alaska

A boy preacher of rare eloquence who may later be heard from Baptist pulpits has appeared among the children in the Kodiak Baptist Orphanage, Wood Island, Alaska. Already he is taking over many of the junior meetings. The orphanage is more crowded than ever before, partly as the result of a recent scourge of influenza, and partly because Russian workers have had to abandon the aid they formerly gave, since they have been cut off from funds by the Bolsheviks.

Well, Break Down the Bars

Practical friendship is a short cut to Americanization according to workers of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, who are trying out the plan all over the country. In Philadelphia, young people from two American churches have made real friends with the young people from the Italian mission. In Buffalo, several American Baptist churches are exchanging church and personal visits with the Italian Baptist churches. In an up-state New York city, one of the wealthiest churches has taken the responsibility for the Polish mission, and has found that first-hand friendship is the answer.

Check Your Babies Here

Something on the order of a year-long baby-check system has been introduced for student mothers in the American Baptist Telugu Mission in Ongole, India, writes Miss Ursilla Dresser, of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Mothers are permitted to bring babies under two years old with them, when they come for the courses in elementary training. A pandal has been erected in one corner of the girls' compound, and here the babies are cared for while their mothers are in school, in charge of a competent woman, who is assisted by some of the boarding school girls, who thus get practical instruction in the care of babies. The Telugu word for small child is pilla, and the missionaries call the place the pillory.

Should She Tie His Hands?

IN THE inevitable course of cleaning the attic she arrived at the corner where old unhung pictures were stored. Quaint dilapidated things they were, too faded or too chipped for polite society. And because she had spent a rather disagreeable morning in the harder tasks—accompanied by equally disagreeable thoughts arising from a certain telephone call—in a lingering mood of loving recollections she sat down comfortably before the pile of pictures to wash them off.

Grandfather Hamlin now—My! My! what a handsome old gentleman he was, the kind still referred to with pride as a pillar of the old First Church. With a little shrug she said to herself that the poor dear man would have undoubtedly turned over in his grave if he could have heard her remarks over the telephone that very morning. Only, of course, they did not have a New World Movement in his day. Absurd! Forever thinking up new ways of wheedling money out of self-respecting church members. Well, they wouldn't get any of hers—they'd see! And she wiped the picture with an extra flourish.

Next came Grandma Hamlin, with the quaintest little lace cap on her snowy hair and the softest of fichus around her neck, fastened by a brooch—Ah, that brooch! Every Hamlin, big and little, had heard its famous story; how once on a time when Grandma Hamlin was bedridden, Grandfather Hamlin, missing the pin, searched high and searched low with no success. It was unwritten law not to trouble her about anything just then, especially anything as disturbing as a theft; so the matter was quietly put in the hands of the police, who eventually unearthed the handsome bit of jewelry in a pawnbroker's shop! And when Grandfather Hamlin heard the full and vivid description of the particular quiet little lady who had carried it there, he tiptoed to the bedside of said lady and cried brokenly: "Oh Hannah! Hannah! whatever made you pawn your one and only brooch, dear woman?"

"Well, wasn't there the thank-offering coming?" said she in her feeble whisper; and she, likely to be housed for months, was a monstrous expense, yet her heart brimmed over with interest in the "poor heathen"—so she just up and did it, sir! "But I'm too sick to be scolded," she ended, a frail, delicious smile twitching her lips. And from that day to this the Thank-offering Brooch was a precious heirloom in the eyes of her Hamlin descendants.

"Generosity hasn't percolated to the third generation, I guess," the house-cleaning grandchild smiled to herself; then turned over the next picture. Ah, dear me, Munkacsy's "Christ Before Pilate!"

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Spellbound, she gazed at it, recalling that impressionable moment in her life when she had first seen this Easter gift to her father from the men's Bible class he taught. An awkward little girl of ten years old, she had stood before it, wide-eyed—"But how dared they? How dared they?" she had cried indignantly, pointing at the helpless hands of the White Christ, hands tied with rope—"oh father, how dared they tie his hands?"

Across the long years she could still hear his deep, rich voice explaining: "They did not believe in Christ's hands, darling; they could not understand hands that moved only to heal the sick and open the eyes of the blind and unstop the ears of the deaf and comfort those that mourn. So here are the stern, dark soldiers jostling him with spears, binding him for fear he might do them an injury. It was partly ignorance, but mostly indifference that tied those hands; and complacently, dear; and selfishness; and hardness of heart. Yet there he stands, quiet, dignified, listening to Pilate. I would not have had him act otherwise, would you?"

"But I just can't bear to see it," the little girl of long ago had cried, a storm of fierce protestation in her voice.

"Then take care you never bind him yourself, dear child" her father answered.

SAVIOUR! Thy dying love
Thou gavest me,
Nor should I ought withhold,
Dear Lord, from Thee;
In love my soul would bow,
My heart fulfil its vow,
Some offering bring Thee now,
Something for Thee.

Give me a faithful heart—
Likeness to Thee—
That each departing day
Henceforth may see
Some work of love begun,
Some deed of kindness done,
Some wanderer sought and won,
Something for Thee.

All that I am and have,
Thy gifts so free,
In joy, in grief, through life,
Dear Lord, for Thee!
And when Thy face I see,
My ransomed soul shall be,
Through all eternity,
Something for Thee.

As long as the picture had hung on the walls of their house she never failed to remember his words and her smothered reply: "Oh, I couldn't do that! I just couldn't!"

Well, after all these years—indifference? complacency? selfishness? hardness of heart? And the same White Christ stood there, with patient, bound hands, toil-worn from the carpenter's bench, fresh from resting in tenderest blessing on the heads of little children—yet tied! Hands that had raised the daughter of Jairus and the son of the widow of Nain—tied! Hands that had broken bread for the hungry and cured the sick at sunset time—tied!

"Greater works than these shall ye do because I go to my Father," chanted itself into her ears as she stared at the picture still spellbound.

Greater Works? Ah, this New World Movement, perhaps—what was it, after all? It was hospitals for curing sick souls and sick bodies; orphanages and settlements for blessing little children; schools for training the ignorant; churches for telling the old, old story, ministers to break bread in the homes of the humble.

Yet here was an indifferent Baptist binding those hands, a complacent Baptist, a selfish one, one afflicted with hardness of heart.

*"They lived for themselves,
They thought for themselves,
For themselves, and none beside;
As if Jesus Christ had never lived,
And as if he had never died."*

Whereupon the doorbell jingled. She felt unequal to the task of drying her eyes and taking off the dusting-cap and the gingham apron. Probably it was only an agent, anyhow. Curious it was how one was always interrupted in sublime moments by mundane affairs! It jingled again. "Let it!" she sighed; and wiped the picture frame meditatively. But at the third jingle curiosity did its perfect work: she got up, raised the sash of the attic window and saw two very familiar men retreating slowly along her front walk.

"Oh, don't go!" she called down to them, "wait! wait! You're the very persons I want to see. I'll let you right in."

Lifting their hats politely, they acknowledged her welcome; but as they stood waiting for her to reach the front door Canvasser Number One said doubtfully: "Do you suppose she's had a change of heart since morning?"

"I profoundly hope so!" sighed Canvasser Number Two, (for it was he, poor man, who had heard those spicily direct remarks over the telephone from this very lady); then, with the optimism born of a deep belief in their enterprise, he added: "You know, Jim, any woman who's a Christian at all is simply bound to believe in this practical commonsense plan for continuing the work the Lord himself began. It's a pretty poor sort of Baptist who's contented to let the whole Christianization process stop just because he or she happens to be comfortably safe!"

"That's true!" Jim agreed; and the door opened. They stepped inside.

The Young Reserves

The Boy Who Shouted "Fire! Fire!"

This is the second of our "Truth" Stories. Read about the contest in THE BAPTIST for April 2, and start competing.

IF THERE was any one thing which everybody dreaded in that lonely wooded district it was forest fires, for the season had been unusually dry, and all the lumber region was in danger.

Buster Bob had often heard the lumberjacks discussing this peril, and early one evening—having nothing else to do—a wretched imp hopped into his brain and led him to come tearing into the camp just as the men had finished supper and were beginning to loll at their ease. With piercing suddenness Buster yelled: "Fire! fire!"

He hardly expected such complete commotion, for every man jumped to his feet and shouted: "Where? where's the fire?"

Buster made a hasty decision—"Down by the old saw-mill," he cried.

A groan went the rounds, for this deserted saw mill was two miles away and the fire would have gained great headway before they could reach it. But off they dashed, while Buster stayed behind, chuckling. Needless to say, they gave him exactly what he deserved, several hours later when the tired men came back from their long, useless trip!

Weeks went by after that, and one noon as the lumberjacks were eating lunch out of their boxes way off in the heart of the forest, Buster came rushing into their midst once more: "Fire! Fire!" he shouted breathlessly, "forest fire all around the camp!"

The men looked at him with twinkling amusement. "Keep it up, sonny! Yell a little louder!" they taunted him, "but you can't catch us twice with that same old yarn."

Like a person in a nightmare poor Buster frantically gesticulated as he cried: "But it's true—true—great tongues of fire everywhere—crackling—licking up the timber—billows of smoke—oh, come! hurry!"

"Now ain't he the clever little actor?" taunted the wag of the lumberjacks.

So with one last gasp of rage at their calm unbelief, Buster shouted: "It's true, I swear it's true, fellows; fire for miles—horrible—" and then, from sheer exhaustion after his frantic run through the forest he fell into a faint at their feet.

A stir of amazement went around the group. Then a lumberjack gingerly bent over to see if this was more play-acting, but instantly he cried hoarsely: "Men,

I bet this kid was telling the truth for once in his life—smell his clothes, will you? They're full of wood smoke!"

Instantly several men leaned over and sniffed the heavy odor, and one of them cried: "Yep, this coat of his ain't tellin' no lies, boys—it's smoke sure enough. Hustle up, fellows, we've wasted too much time already guying this poor little liar!"

But when they reached their camp it was one mass of hideous roaring flames,—creeping, sucking, crackling. Enormous clouds of smoke billowed up from the huge piles of timber, laboriously stacked for hauling to great cities far away. Indeed, the work of months and years was gone forever in the twinkling of an eye, while three dozen men stood homeless, out of work. And all because one poor smart-aleck had lips which nobody trusted.

Winning the N. W. M.

By PEGGY

CONTINUING from last week, let me tell you how Bill earned his $25 a year to pay his New World Movement pledge. When we told father how much we had pledged he gave a long low whistle: "You'll be busy children!" he said.

"We'll be happy children!" we smiled.

And we have been. It's the most satisfying thing we ever tried! To begin with, Uncle Tim always gives us $5 apiece at Christmas, which came in very handy. Then we had our "allowances," but we're not at all a rich family, so the allowances were awfully small. Yet we know we were frittering them on things that only lasted a minute or two; such as ice-cream cones and candy. Also we decided to start earlier to Sunday-school so we could walk, and save our carfare. In simple ways like these anybody can save quite a bit of money. But the rest of Bill's plan was what business men would call "enterprising," if you know what I mean—it looks so well in print, doesn't it? But Bill declares it looks even better in his N. W. M. bank!

This is what he did: He asked mother if he could have all our old newspapers, old rubbers, old rags, old bottles etc., to sell to the junk-man. Of course she promised. Old papers sold for 75 cents a hundred pounds in our town, and you should have seen Bill collecting them. He went to several of our friendliest neighbors and told them the whole story: how he was a Baptist boy, that certain parts of the world had been parcelled off especially for Baptists to care for, and he had to earn about 7 cents a day to do his share—so would they mind letting him call for their old papers every once in a while, please? One jewel of a neighbor added: "Take our old magazines, too.

I never know what to do with them." Bill says he nearly kissed her, for magazines weigh a lot, and every ounce helps the pennies grow!

Then the old torn rubbers that boy collected! Mother said he positively must know families of centipedes, he had such successful hauls. But the truth of the matter is our neighbors grew quite as interested in our success as we were ourselves.

Mr. Seagrave would call out: "Hello Bill, old top! how's your New World Movement moving?"

"First rate!" Bill would sing back, "just got some old shoes from Mrs. Grant. They'll fetch a quarter, sure thing!"

"Guess I've got some old shoes myself," Mr. S. would smile, "Bill, if all the Baptists had your enterprise your parts of the world would be shining by next year."

"Just you wait," said Bill, "they'll shine all right, sir!"

Well it was an exciting Saturday when Mr. Isaac Jaboski drew his cart up in front of our yard and began weighing papers and counting rubbers. I am sorry to say he would have cheated us sadly if the postman had not intervened with valiant bravery (he's interested in our success, too, of course). As Bill said at luncheon: "Junk-men may not see the sense in helping on the New World Movement now, but wait till we Baptists plant a Christian center next door to them,—his children will grow up into honest rag-dealers, I promise."

But Bill really had little to complain about; he earned nearly $7 from these cast-off things! Father hasn't had time to cut nor water the grass, nor weed the garden nor sweep the walks lately, so he paid Bill 20 cents a week for doing this. Bill also had a vegetable garden of his own where he raised things to sell to mother—oh, so cheaply! (This "Home Gardener" affair is a story all by itself, maybe you'll hear of it sometime. Suffice it to say that Bill earned many a 7 cents a day by radishes and carrots!) When winter came he shovelled snow and helped take care of the furnace at 25 cents a week. So his bank grew fuller and fuller.

Next week I'll tell you what I did myself to earn money. My way was more fun, I think, although Bill says his was. Yet you can see for yourself he didn't do a single thing that you couldn't do, tomorrow,—and all the other Young Reserves, too. Just wait till you hear what a circus I had, also what Peter and Polly did; then I'm sure you'll want to begin being a really-truly Baptist, and core for your share of our world!

Let There be Light

The greatest intellectual command ever uttered is "Let there be light." And the greatest emotional command is "Love one another." From the talks we have had with employers who have had labor difficulties and with employers who have had scarcely any troubles at all, we are absolutely sure that trouble results simply because the twin commands are not obeyed.—Thelma Dreier.

THEY KINGDOM COME. V.—IN MY COUNTRY
Matt. 6:7-15

Suggested Literature

"The Church's Message to The Nation" by Fosdick, 20 cts. Same may be secured from the American Baptist Publication Society. The following notes are taken from this pamphlet.

"In a sense that never has been true before, what happens in America happens to all the world. This fact brings no special credit to us. It is the result of our situation, our heritage, our unexhausted resources, and our recent emergence from our traditional isolation. This new importance of America should issue, not in pride, but in humility. But whether it be faced with modest serviceableness or with boasting, the fact remains, as an Englishman recently has said: 'The United States of America is the greatest potential force, material, moral, and spiritual, in the world.'"

Our Measure of Responsibility

"The responsibility which this state of affairs throws upon the churches of America is obvious. To sensitive and conscientious spirits it is very burdensome. Are the churches prepared to lead the march? Our divisions, our overlapping activities, our belated emphases, our contradictory messages, our lack of vision, our unharnessed zeal—the indictment is a long and just one.

"No good churchman should seek to soften it. One of the worst disservices that the commonwealth of God can suffer in these days comes from those who ply the church with soothing syrups to numb her against the sting of criticism. Lincoln's attitude is far nobler and more useful. Stanton had called him an old fool and Lincoln heard of it. 'Stanton is a level-headed man,' said Lincoln. 'There must be something in his charge. I will speak to him about it.'"

The Churches a Tremendous Power

"But when all the indictments against the Church are given their due weight, the fact remains that even in our present estate we are a tremendous power in America. Consider prohibition! It is a gigantic achievement that has left the country gasping in amazement. And this incredible enterprise, in many ways so alien from the genius of our race, has been pushed by the churches to a successful issue against one of the mightiest vested interests in America. Against organized power backed by enormous wealth, against the personal habits of millions more, the churches have fought a triumphant battle. Without them no great reform in America can possibly succeed. With them there is no picturable limit to what can be done.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

"To summon the churches, therefore, to hold the nations true to its best during these critical years is no mere rhetoric. They can do it if they will."

Dr. Fosdick suggests the following which the churches can do:

They can proclaim clearly the right of Jesus Christ to master all life's relationships.

They can proclaim clearly the gospel of Christian democracy against class rule.

They can proclaim clearly the Christian ideal of internationalism against militarized nationalism.

The churches can keep the heart of the nation right in humility before God.

WESTERN WASHINGTON—ITS ORGANIZATION

The Baptist work in Washington and Northern Idaho is divided into two convention fields, i. e., Eastern Washington and Northern Idaho, and that section of Washington west of the Cascade Mountains. In both of the convention fields the work is fairly well organized.

In Western Washington the organization is as follows:

First, the entire constituency of our young people is organized under the name of, Baptist Young Peoples' Union of Western Washington, which is affiliated with, and a part of, the convention work in Western Washington.

The activities of this organization are confined largely to the holding of the annual summer assembly at Burton. It will be of interest to know that the grounds that have been used by our young people for the annual assembly were purchased a year ago, so that now, the Baptists in Western Washington own and control one of the finest assembly grounds in this country. The actual enrollment of last year's assembly was 530.

REDUCED RAILROAD RATES

A fare of one and one-half has been authorized for the Cincinnati Convention, June 30-July 3. Identification Certificates necessary for purchase of round trip tickets are being prepared and will be ready for distribution by May 15. All state transportation leaders will have a supply, or write to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Every year an annual rally is held on New Year's day alternating between the cities of Everett, Seattle and Tacoma. This year's rally was the finest and the largest attended in the history of the organization, 500 young people attending the afternoon session, while 438 sat down to the annual banquet.

Auxiliary Organizations

This convention field is further organized with the following district organizations:

Whatcom, which district is composed of all the churches and unions in the Bellingham Bay district; also Skagit County, Everett District, Seattle District, and Tacoma District.

All of these districts hold a quarterly rally, while both the Seattle and Tacoma districts are doing missionary and educational work among the foreign speaking peoples in their cities.

It is planned to organize the unions in the southern part of the state at the earliest possible moment.

EASTERN WASHINGTON AND NORTHERN IDAHO

The young people of this convention field are organized under the name of the Inland Empire B. Y. P. U. and Sunday-school Association, and their activities are similar to those of the Western Washington field, i. e., the conducting of annual summer Assemblies, which for the past three years have been held at Couer d'Alene, Ida. Plans are under way, and at present we are looking forward to the purchase of grounds, for assembly purposes.

In cooperation with the Spokane federation of baptist young people's unions, this organization holds an annual banquet, which was held this year, Feb. 11, in the Grace Church, Spokane.

Owing to the long distances between some of our churches, it has been impossible to organize many auxiliary organizations in this field. However, the Spokane federation of Baptist young people's unions has been for some years past, and is at present, very active.

One of the reasons for the success of the work among the young people in both convention fields, is the splendid type of leadership we have among the young people at the head of these organizations.

Mr. Carl B. Forland, Mt. Vernon, Wash., is the president of the Western Washington B. Y. P. U. and Mr. C. D. Hudson, city editor of the Spokane Chronicle is president of the Inland Empire B. Y. P. U. Both of these brethren are giving much of their time to the work of these organizations, and indications are that the year 1921 will be the best in the history of the young people of Washington and Northern Idaho.

International Uniform Lesson For May 1

BIBLE TEACHINGS ABOUT EDUCATION

Deut. 6:4-9, Prov. 3:13-18, Luke 2:40-52
Golden Text: Prov. 4:7

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The lesson text is taken from three portions of the Bible, viz., the Law, the Wisdom Literature, and the New Testament. The first imposes upon the people the duty of teaching and learning the law; the second is a poetic picture of the value of education or wisdom; the third is a brief description of the development of the body, mind and spirit of the boy, Jesus. The first emphasizes memory; the second stresses what we now call common sense; the third suggests the normal unfolding of all the powers of personality in a boy who not only studied but thought, and who not only asked questions but answered questions.

The Lesson Taught

The Bible and the spirit of education, the Bible and the method of education, and the Bible and the object of education, may profitably suggest some lines of teaching this lesson.

The Spirit of Education

In the New Testament it is called the Spirit of Truth. But whether in the New Testament or the Old Testament, the Bible is charged with the spirit of knowledge and wisdom. Light and not darkness, truth and not falsehood, knowledge and not ignorance, wisdom and not foolishness are glorified in the Bible. The book of Proverbs is representative of the entire Bible in its encouragement of education and in its sustained condemnation of idleness, laziness and foolishness. But the spirit of education is most perfectly incarnated in Jesus. His greatest title was 'Teacher,' his greatest work was teaching, his greatest command was to make disciples of all nations and teach them. There is not a completed sermon recorded in the New Testament; but it is full of the teachings of Jesus and his apostles. Jesus was constantly pleading with the people to think, and Paul said: "Prove all things." There is no disposition on the part of the Bible to monopolize learning in the hands of the few. It is the champion of the wide distribution of knowledge as it is the champion of the wide distribution of wealth. Nor does the Bible anywhere put a premium on ignorance and the bigotry which it fosters. "And this is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light." "God is Light and in him is no darkness at all." The Spirit of God is the spirit of light, and "where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty." The school has always followed the Bible, or, better, it has gone with the Bible, because the Bible is the inspirer of education. Wherever popular Bible reading and study are suppressed popular education languishes. This is proved by conditions in Catholic countries. Wherever the Bible is not known education is not known. The Bible is the embodiment of the spirit of education.

The Method of Education

It is said on very good authority that the mastery of the English Bible is equal to a college education. The best method of education known in the educational world today is to deal with things primarily and not with words. Myson has said, "Men ought not to investigate things from words, but words from things; for things were not made for the sake of words, but words for things." The difference, for example, between the Bible and the Book of Mormon is this: that the Book of Mormon never came through human experiences but was said to have been written by angels and hidden until Joseph Smith found it; the Bible on the contrary is the record of human experiences true to life. The oldest story in the Bible is true to life today. In the Eden story of innocence tempted yielding to false promises, and the remorse following, we have a picturesque description of what we may read in our morning newspaper any morning before breakfast. Bible stories have perspective and background. They find us. The Bible is the record of the laboratory experiments of human life; it is the story of God revealing himself in human experiences. The laboratory method is the approved method of education today. That is the method of the Bible. John says, "Try the spirits whether they are of God." And Jesus says, "If any man willeth to do the will of God he shall know." There is no promise of light to the man who speculates and juggles with words, there is no way out of the maze for the man who has only opinions. The only way out is the way of experimental knowledge. Let us get done with words and investigate things. This is the only method of education worth while.

The Object of Education

The object of all education worthy the name is the preparation of men and women to live the richest possible life. The highest self-realization, the fullest development of personality and the crowning work of building character constitute the chief end of education. The third portion of scripture selected for this lesson places the emphasis here, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man." His body, mind and spirit developed together beautifully, and this trinity of personality found the fullest expression in establishing and maintaining right relations with God and man. Education is incomplete and seriously lacking in balance when it leaves either God or man out of consideration. Man is both a religious and social being. His education therefore must enable him to arrive at right conceptions of God and to come into right relations with God. At the same time the educational processes through which he passes should develop his social conscience and determine his social ideals and service. Education for life is the first consideration. If this is neglected or sacrificed in the interest of utilitarian ends, then education is prostituted from its legitimate uses. Vocational education is worthy only as it brings men and women face to face with the sacredness of personality and helps them to grow a soul. In fact any form of education finds its acid test in the kind of men and women it makes. The professional, technical, vocational ends of education are secondary. The larger Christian life is the primary and vital object of education.

A Course in Christian Living for High School Pupils

By F. F. PETERSON

CONVERSATION FIVE

Question: Can a Christian have a good time?

Scriptures: Phil. 4:8-13, 1 Cor. 10:31, Matt. 9:38-43. (Have the class read in unison Phil. 4:8-13.)

NO one can be with a group of young people very long before the question of amusements crowds to the fore. There is a strong feeling that whatever is pleasurable is bad and whatever is dull is good. We can easily throw back on the individuals conscience, decisions regarding right and wrong amusements.

Any discussion of the amusement question, however, can easily become futile if permitted to descend into the realm of two or three particular forms. It is more profitable to help the young people to see the underlying principles, the spiritual and fundamental idea which should guide.

Perhaps a better method than using questions as before, will be to present a decalogue of ideas and lead the class to discuss each as it is written on the blackboard. There is no profession of originality in all these maxims for the original authorship is not now known.

Principles to Guide a Christian in His Pleasures:

1. I may enjoy whatever does not separate me from Christ and a performance of his will.
2. I may enjoy whatever leads me to honor the trust God has given me.
3. I may enjoy whatever does not blunt my sensitiveness to sin, and whatever

What Remains When the Dollars Are Forgotten

By JONES EARL CORWIN

IN THE March issue of "Missions" the following appeared: "After completing its canvass for the New World Movement, the Flora, Ill. church raised the salary of its pastor $800, paid $3,500 toward a parsonage, secured a woman assistant for the pastor, and still has money in the treasury." I cannot tell where these facts were secured. I say facts because such they are. So in writing I have no idea of refuting the few lines quoted from "Missions."

It is the Inflection That Hurts

It has been charged in some quarters by men and women who perhaps have been 100 per cent honest in their accusations that the New World Movement is a drive for money. These words would not mean so much to some of us whose hearts are burdened because of world need were it not for the inflection and the implied finality. When the Denver convention and the ultimate collection of One Hundred Million of Dollars are made the term it either signifies ignorance or intelligent opposition under a disguise which originates in some other personality than the One who bade us go into all the world and preach, teach and baptize. It is therefore to give the local facts that shall abide when the $ signs and the amounts that follow them in the lines quoted from "Missions" shall be sunk in utter oblivion.

In my recent reading I found this incident: A theological student said to a gray haired veteran of the Cross, "I am going to preach to a dead church, what kind of a sermon shall I preach?" The old man out of his ripe experience said without hesitation, "A missionary sermon."

When this church, which was not dead but sleeping, got one eye open and saw its apportionment and raised it and nearly $600 over, the fact of doing something for someone else became so sweet that it longed for more. It is this word that I wish to stress just a moment.

In our advisory board meetings, Sunday-school administrative board meetings and other conferences "More" was the key-word—More for others; more in Sabbath school; more at prayer meeting; more in attendance at regular services; more religious education; more members in our church; more of the Spirit of Him who lead us to give dollars. Every member was saying "More." We all realized that to give dollars only was mockery.

What Hath God Wrought?

Less than six months ago this began to crystallize and yet today as I tabulate I find He is able to do exceedingly abundant above that we ask or think. Here are the figures:—

58 per cent increase in membership; 200 per cent increase in attendance at regular services; 200 per cent increase in Sunday-school attendance; 500 per cent increase in attendance at prayer meeting; week-day religious education under the direction of a Bible school graduate.

Through these classes we reach all who will come from the first grade to the high school students. For weeks we counted accurately those who come to our services both morning and evening and we know our increase.

Another very interesting feature of the gain in church membership is the per cent of adults and then again of men. The figures are these: 29.23 per cent men; 38.46 per cent women; 10.77 per cent boys; 21.54 per cent girls.

When the writer was in Alton, Ill., attending the regional conference he arranged with the Rev. W. L. Ferguson, missionary in India now on furlough, to support D. Devanasen and his wife native workers in addition to what the church is already doing. If this is kept up until the end of the five years which undoubtedly will be the case this church will have raised its apportionment without taking into account any pledges new members may make.

They Had Learned to Pray

During the days of preparation for revival services which closed Easter we held cottage prayer meetings for weeks. At least a score of our members both prayed and testified to the saving and keeping power of the Lord and Savior Jesus who had never done so publicly before.

The whole membership is at a high tide of spirituality and a spirit of harmony and unity prevails that has hitherto been unknown.

How did it all come about? The New World Movement did it.

As pastor of a Church that took the medicine I heartily recommend it to any church that is asleep, dying or even dead. Shake the bottle well and take full dose as prescribed by the doctor.

They Fail Who Never Have Tried

REPORTS from Northern California show that the Church that gives, is the church that tries to give.

The churches that have accepted the New World ideal and attempted to raise their quota have already increased their offerings 43 per cent, while the churches which have been unmoved by the larger program of our denomination have reduced their offerings by 41 per cent.

Here it is in graphic form.

Participating Churches

$43,888.59—Amount given for benevolence by 102 participating churches last year.
$105,668.96—Amount given for benevolence by the same churches eight months of this year.

Non-Participating Churches

$6,142.59—Amount given for benevolence by thirty-nine non-participating churches.
$3,590.93—Amount given by the same churches for eight months of last year. Approaching the vanishing point.
$15,585.00—Amount which these thirty-nine churches might have expected to raise figured on the basis of the amount subscribed in participating churches. This money will send no missionaries to the heathen, support no school, nor make the givers laborers together with God.

The Woman's Foreign Jubilee

TEN Baptists Districts
Standing in a line
First New England celebrates
Then, there are but nine."

Ten districts have their Jubilee organizations in fine working order. The Jubilee idea is "going" from the start. New England is the one district to celebrate in April.

We suffered with a bad "spell" with the names of two overseas visitors. Some one always takes the joy out of life by insisting upon corrections. We find that Khanto Bala Rai is correct for our Bengali guest. We must add to the name of our Czecho-Slovakian visitor. Her calling cards are engraved "Madame Frances Kolatorova." She is the daughter of the oldest Baptist missionary in Bohemia. Her education was obtained in Bohemia and Scotland. She is a talented and versatile woman. She has refused to become editor of a woman's magazine, but is a worker in the Y. W. C. A. and in the First Baptist Church of Prague. She speaks fluent English.

Miss Martha Wesnke, of Lodz, Poland, is a graduate of the Chicago Training School, and is now at the head of a girls' school in Lodz. She is a member of the Baptist Church there and acted as interpreter for Dr. C. A. Brooks when he was in that country.

Kan en Vong, Hanchow, China, is in America, had her picture taken in Chicago and was interviewed by press representatives in New York. She is attractive personally, and brilliant in mind. She does not consider herself exceptional; she hopes to show what opportunity will do for the young womanhood of China.

It is quite evident that all feel the same. Christian influence and teaching plus other educational advantages are the hope of their future. The English writer, H. G. Wells, says that "civilization is ever more a race between education and catastrophe."

Our leaders discovered the truth of that thought some years ago and the fifty years we celebrate have left their impression in many lands. No successful reconstruction can be reared upon an illiterate womanhood. Some one has said, "Get into the habit of fitting the news of the day into the long view of the goal ahead." Our Jubilee celebrations abundantly attest Baptist women's appreciation of that sentiment, hence it is possible to disclose to the Baptist constituency these blossoms of the fine flower of Asiatic young womanhood, whose very presence proclaims Mrs. Montgomery's statement that "the difference in nations is not biological and racial, but social and circumstantial." So Baptist women, look up your time tables and write to the hospitality chairman.

Des Moines, June 22-29, 1921

The next session of the Northern Baptist Convention will meet where the tall corn grows. Will it be hot there? Perhaps not in June. Like most convention cities it is reported to have ideal climate.

The local committee is planning to have the Coliseum so arranged that the delegates can hear a pin fall. We are usually more troubled with foot falls. Every delegate will be provided with felt slippers and a muzzie.

The entertainment committee has been picked because of kinship to Job. We would suggest however that delegates use discretion. We may tell the committee what we want without swearing at them.

Travel is delightful if we have the right kind of company. Would it not be a good thing for delegates from various centers to see the passenger agents and make arrangement to go to Des Moines in congenial groups?

Churches are beginning to find that a few dollars invested in wide-awake delegates pay big dividends. Send the pastor, his wife and at least one young man beside the good old stand-bys.

On to Des Moines!

Receipts of the General Board of Promotion

May 1, 1920, to March 20, 1921

THE receipts from the churches for our denominational work for the eleven months of this year are the largest in the history of our denomination, $7,781,694.42, which is more than double last year's receipts. We should emphasize, however, that this is only a little over 76 per cent of the amount due on the pledges. The budgets of the societies were made on the basis of the pledges made and on the expectation that the churches would redeem 100 per cent of their pledges. Any failure will cause great embarrassment and hardship. The last month of the year has always been the time of largest receipts. Every one who loves the kingdom should be concerned for the receipts. Every Baptist should pay his own subscription, seek to see that his church quota is fully paid and be much in prayer that our people may not be disobedient to the heavenly vision.

Are We Growing a New Denomination?

By A. W. RIDER

THERE are some striking evidences that we are growing a new denomination out of the old one. In many places there is coming with a truer realization of our task, a sacrificial spirit and heroic purpose, hitherto unknown. This is transforming the whole life of these churches and gives glad promise of a new denominational life.

The regional conference held Mar. 28-29 in Pueblo, Colo. gave fresh evidence of this. Reports from the floor were given by delegates from churches which were at first staggered by the size of their quotas but which later rallied to gain the victory. Some of these were so significant and produced such an effect on the conference that I desire to pass them on to a larger audience.

The First Church, Pueblo, last spring raised $17,000 on the New World Movement and stopped there, feeling it was all it was able to do because of a heavy church debt. But the pastor in December last got a group of people to pray concerning the duty of the church to this cause and reopened the campaign, securing another $17,000 in pledges. Having thus gotten under headway they could not stop—but went on. Closing the year with all local obligations met, they celebrated by raising one half of the old church debt which had hung like a pall over them so long.

The East Side Church, Pueblo, reported that when word was received giving amount of its quota, a meeting of pastor and officers was held—at which they were absolutely unanimous on one point—it never could be raised. They did not close every door however, for they agreed to pray about it and return for a later meeting. At this adjourned meeting they voted to raise what they could and went to work in earnest. Though only five families in the church owned their own homes, the members pledged the quota in full. As a result of this sacrificial giving, the promise has been fulfilled and a blessing poured out which in part is evidenced by a 100 per cent increase in church membership in the eleven months past.

The Canon City church at the time of the campaign last spring had about decided that $10,000 was all it could raise instead of the $25,000 allotted to it. With this lower figure in mind the returns were disappointingly small, only $4,000. In December last the members were led by Pastor Arnold to face anew the challenge of the larger goal and in one week's time raised the full $25,000 allotment. The victory has extended all along the line; seventy-five new members have been added in the last four months, the Sunday-school has 412 in actual attendance and congregations tax the seating capacity so that the demand for larger quarters is already felt.

Conferences in other places could no doubt duplicate such instances, where in response to the most challenging task which this generation has ever set before our people, they have arisen and, where hesitation and fear had too long blighted their lives, have released new power; through prayer, discovered new resources; through sacrificial giving, out of weakness been made strong and won new converts to a conquering Christ.

MAINE

THE TWO BAPTIST CHURCHES in South Berwick co-operated with the Methodist and the Congregational in special services during Lent. Rev. A. T. June of Somersworth N. H., was the speaker at all the services. His messages were heart searching and gripping. The town is better for his coming to us. Much good has come to the people from the united effort. The Baptist Church under the leadership of Rev. E. A. Elwell is making a remarkable gain. In the presence of over 600 people, four persons were baptized Easter evening.

REV. WALLACE S. BOARDMAN of Williamstown, Mass. has been called to the pastorate of the Second Church of Calais Me. Mr. Boardman accepts and will begin his ministry in Calais May 1. This is an excellent church and the character of Mr. Boardman's success in previous pastorates assures the continuance of such constructive work as was done by Dr. A. J. Padelford and Dr. T. J. Ramsdell.

Easter Baptisms

The spirit of prayer and "the mind to work" have both been present in the main churches during the winter. Some of the fruitage appears in the baptisms reported as occurring on Easter Day. Many more baptisms have taken place on recent Sundays and a much larger number will follow the opening of the lake and river baptisteries. The following have reported for Easter:

Lewiston, thirty-five; Livermore Falls, six; Auburn Baptist, thirty-one; Washburn, seven; Danforth, three; Oakfield, seven; Houlton Free B., eleven; Houlton First, six; Brunswick, six; Bath People's, one; Bath Corliss St., one; Bath First, eight; Freeport, fourteen; Portland-Central Square, eleven; Portland First, fifteen; Portland First Free, twenty-eight; Portland Free St., five; Portland Stroudwater, six; Westbrook, sixteen; So. Gorham, one; West Falmouth, three; Farmington, seven; Fairfield, ten; Waterville Free, ten; Waterville First, sixteen; Gardiner Free, eleven; Gardiner West, two; Gardiner First, fourteen; Augusta, United, ten; No. Vassalboro, twelve; Camden, twenty-six; Rockland First, six; So. Paris, seven; Rumford, seven; Paris Hill, nine; Mexico, five; Calais First, three; Lubec, eleven; Eastport, three; Sanford, five; So. Berwick, four; Biddeford, two; Saco, Cutts Ave., ten; Damariscotta, fourteen.

The total number of baptisms reported from these forty-four churches is 345.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

REV. J. B. GILMAN of the First Church, Nashua, preached his farewell sermon the last Sunday in March. Mr. Gilman's pastorate has covered a period of twelve years and his work has been one of marked success. The Sunday School has grown to be the largest of any denomination in the state and the church reports the largest membership of any Baptist church in the state. Twenty-six were added to the church by baptism on Easter Sunday. During the pastorate 319 have been added by baptism. Monday evening, March 28, a farewell reception was given Mr. and Mrs. Gilman before their departure for New Brunswick, N. J.

IT IS NEARLY TEN YEARS since Rev. M. R. Fo-hay came to the First Church at Manchester. He has been popular with all classes, especially with men and the young people. The church has prospered greatly under his ministry. Twenty-six were baptized Easter Sunday and thirty-six were given the hand of fellowship March 3. More baptisms are expected soon. He closes his work May 1, and goes to the First Church, New Haven, Conn.

REV. BENJ. R. HARRIS, pastor of the Merrimack Street Church, Manchester, baptized eleven Easter and gave the hand of fellowship to twenty-three the following Sunday.

FAVORABLE REPORTS of church work culminating in special Easter services and baptisms are coming in from all over the state. It seems as though the tide had turned for better things in our churches.

MASSACHUSETTS

THE NEW ENGLAND DISTRICT of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society will hold its first annual meeting at the Clarendon Street Church, Boston, Apr. 25-26. In addition to Mrs. George W. Coleman, president, the following persons will appear on the program: Mrs. W. H. Freda, Mrs. Ruth D. French, Rev. W. H. Freda, Miss Perigo and Rev. Albert Dahlby, Boston; Mrs. C. W. Aiken, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Miss Viola Olson, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. C. N. Arbuckle, Newton Centre, Mass., and Miss May Huston, New York City.

FIRST CHURCH, BEVERLY. Rev. Carey W. Chamberlain pastor, is steadily going ahead. The fifteenth anniversary of the present pastorate was recently observed and a fine spirit of unity and co-operation prevails throughout the church. Notwithstanding a large amount of unemployment in the principal industries of the city payments on the pledges to The New World Movement are being well maintained. There has been a generous response also to the special appeals for European and Chinese famine relief. Twenty-five persons, ranging in age from ten to seventy-five years were baptized on Easter Sunday and about fifty new members have been received thus far this winter.

ON SUNDAY, APRIL 3, Rev. William D. Goble preached for the last time as pastor of the First Church of Fitchburg, where he has been settled for nine years. On Sunday, April 10 he assumed the pastorate of the First Church of Cambridge, succeeding Rev. Elmer W. Powell who resigned last November to go to the First Church of Kalamazoo, Mich. The First Church, Cambridge, is one of our important churches and has led in every good work during its existence of more than a century, having had in its membership many who have been leaders in church and state affairs.

NEW YORK

IN THE SEVEN WEEKS that have passed since Rev. Franklin D. Elmer began his pastorate at Hamilton, fifty persons have united with the church, thirty by baptism and twenty by letter and experience. The services held in the week preceding Easter and on Easter were especially impressive, and on Easter morning eighteen young people were baptized.

ON EASTER SUNDAY nineteen were baptized at The First Church, Le Roy. Rev. I. C. Taylor, pastor. The annual supper and business meeting of the church was held April 1. Reports showed all departments in a flourishing condition. The Sunday school, with the efficient superintendent, Mr. F. W. Decker, has been largely increased in attendance and has paid over $600 for expenses and benevolence of which $350 was given for European and China relief. The church treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of nearly $400. Of the $5,700 given for all purposes, almost exactly half, or $2,845 was paid to The Board of Promotion. A present of $100.00 was given to the pastor.

REV. FRANK H. DIVINE presented his resignation as edifice secretary of The American Baptist Home Mission Society, at the March meeting of its Board to take effect March 31. The resignation was accepted and a committee appointed to prepare a statement that shall express the appreciation of the board for the excellent service he has rendered. During the past three years he has led congregations in campaigns for securing pledges amounting to $5,125,000 for new church edifices and the payment of debts. Dr. Divine has formed an agency and solicits correspondence with a view to raising building and debt funds.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE PHILADELPHIA Chamber of Commerce recently gave a notable dinner to the foreign students attending institutions of higher learning in that city. The purpose was to promote friendly international relations.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE TENTH YEAR of the pastorate of Rev. A. M. Gregg at Monongahela City finds the church in a sound and prosperous condition. Since the first of the year twenty-five have been added by Sunday evening evangelism. The Bible School flourishes with new departmental equipment and a rare superintendent, B. Y. P. U. big and busy. For ten years the Wednesday evening prayer and conference meeting has had the place of first importance.

IN A PASTORATE of less than a year Rev. Frank W. Stanton has received forty-five into the membership of the Knoxville church. Fifteen were baptized Easter Sunday.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL of the Wilksburg Church has more than doubled in number enrolled and average attendance since Rev. Floyd L. Carr entered upon his pastorate. Last Sunday the number present was 457. The attendance at prayer meeting has shown a like increase, now having the hundred mark.

NEW JERSEY

RIDGEWOOD, EMMANUEL. Dr. Thomas H. Sprague, pastor, had large audiences and baptisms on Easter day. Before the communion service April 3 the hand of fellowship was extended to twenty-five new members, making over seventy received since the coming of Dr. Sprague in October. As over against $12,528, which was pledged to the New World Movement to be paid by April 30, there has already been credited as paid by the church $13,241. A men's fellowship club has been organized, over a hundred men attending the first formal meeting.

WEST VIRGINIA

CHARLESTON BAPTIST TEMPLE has now a total budget of $90,000 a year. During the first year of the pastorate of Rev. E. L. Dakin, 291 new members were received, the second year 240, and in the eight months of his third year, 187. The church has given him an assistant and a woman helper. He begins this year with an addition of $1,400 to his salary and twenty pounds to his avoirdupois.

Mississippi Valley

OHIO

FIRST CHURCH, GALLIPOLIS, is rejoicing over the eradication of the last of the church's indebtedness of $1500. On Easter Sunday, $1700 was reported pledged. The same day the pastor, Rev. Robert W. Peirce, baptized six young people. A new hymnal, "The Hymnal for American Youth," has been installed. The young people have just raised the money, and have purchased a new piano for their room. The Sunday school is now thoroughly graded, and the average attendance has been increased by fifty during the year. The amount due the New World Movement for the year is being paid.

INDIANA

AURORA, C. H. DICKEY, pastor, had in Sunday school on Easter morning 480. This number is just eighty more than had been set for a goal.

IOWA

REV. H. O. MEYER closed a series of special meetings at Calvary, Des Moines on Easter Sunday with fourteen candidates for baptism. Since his taking up the pastorate seven months ago there has been a general quickening of the church and a growth of 85 per cent in the Sunday school.

NORTH DAKOTA

REV. J. G. YORK of Grand Forks is running a six-weeks school of missions, meeting once a week, on Wednesday evenings. He has a class for men, one for women and a mixed class for young people. He will have a class for boys and girls on Friday afternoons after school. He baptized seventeen on Easter.

ILLINOIS

AT MOUNT CARROLL Rev. Geo. C. Fetter gave the hand of Fellowship to nineteen new members received in the local church on Sunday, March 26. Mr. Fetter closed his pastorate of six years to become pastor of the First Church of Ottawa. His last service was a union meeting filling the house to its capacity. Mr. Fetter's departure is a source of sincere regret to many outside the church as well as in it. The pulpit was filled by Dr. Gerald Birney Smith, April 3, and Dr. Shailer Mathews April 10.

BARRINGTON received twenty-one new members Apr. 2, more than have been previously received in the past five years together. Most of these were baptized. Pastor A. Sterling Barner largely deserves the credit for this result. The church is also prospering financially and is making extensive improvements on its building.

Watch May 5

OBSERVE that the books at the state offices will close May 5. All payments for missionary, educational and benevolent purposes, in order to count on the current year must be in their proper state offices before that date.

GALESBURG closed a series of meetings continuing two weeks with more than thirty baptisms. Pastor Charles Davidson conducted the meetings. Crowds attended them. Children were very carefully instructed before baptism.

REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY, at Hyde Park, Chicago, just before leaving for a tour of six months in Europe, gave the hand of fellowship, April 2 to fifty-three new members, most of whom came by baptism.

NEBRASKA

FIRST, OMAHA, during the year closing March 31, received 110 new members, forty-six of whom came in by baptism. On Easter Sunday, March 2, sixteen were baptized, and twenty received the hand of fellowship. Attendance at the communion service was probably the largest in the history of the church.

The fiscal years closed with all bills paid, and a balance in the treasury. The amount paid on church expenses was $9,660. The amount contributed to the New World Movement from all departments of the church was $7,331.

The present number of members on the list after revising the list, is 730. Pastor DeLarme will finish a five year term of service next month, and will be hereafter reinforced by a pastor's assistant and director of religious education.

MICHIGAN

AT BETHANY, Pontiac, Thomas B. March, pastor, on February 21, the Christian young people of the church formed the "Pastor's Andrews Band", the aim of the band being to honor the Savior by bringing at least twenty-five souls to Jesus and into the church by Easter. A "win my chum" campaign, put on March 13-20, was conducted by the young people. On Easter morning at a sunrise baptismal service, thirty young people followed their Lord in baptism. At the regular Sunday morning church service a class of fifty-one united with the church.

PLAINWELL Easter services were largely attended and greatly enjoyed. During the day nine young people were baptized. On Sunday, April 3, the hand of fellowship was extended to thirteen recent additions. Pastor J. E. Littell is closing his fifth year in the present pastorate, and on Sunday, April 17, will conclude his work with the church. During this pastorate 117 persons have been received to membership. Eighty-eight of this number by baptism. The total financial budget for the five years equals approximately $17,800. Of this amount $9,700 has been for current expense and $7,100 for benevolence. The church oversubscribed its quota in the New World Movement.

THE EVANGELISTIC SPIRIT seems prevalent in a very marked degree in the majority of the churches throughout the state.

REV. E. A. FORD, has a class of twenty-four under instruction in Fordney Avenue Church, Saginaw, and baptized quite a number an Easter Sunday.

PASTOR A. M. CONKLIN has, during his eight years' pastorate at Rockford, seen the church grow from fifteen members worshipping in a dilapidated building with no home for the pastor, into a church of nearly 100. Besides raising its local budget each year, $6000 has been raised on the field for building a parsonage and improving the church property, and best of all the church over-subscribed its quota to the New World Movement.

KANSAS

AT CANONSBURG, Rev. W. J. John, pastor, the woman's mission circle held an interesting service presenting the needs of the different Baptist fields. An offering of thirty dollars was received which will be applied to the maintenance of an orphan in China.

THE WORK OF RENOVATING the Saltsburg Church, Rev. W. P. Wheeler, pastor, will begin April 1. The $400 needed for the purpose is already in hand.

CALVARY CHURCH, Irwin, Rev. Noah Fehl, pastor, is one of a group of six churches which are in the midst of a union evangelistic effort. Dr. Daniel March of Pittsburgh is the preacher. Several are awaiting baptism.

R. L. Riggs, senior deacon and for over fifty years a member of the First Church, McKeesport, has been called to his reward.

AT CORAOPOLIS, Rev. D. M. Lenox, pastor, a World Wide Guild circle has just been organized with eight members.

THE WORK AT MORGAN Community House has developed fast and at present is the biggest work of the kind for negroes in the denomination, with a great opportunity for service before it.

EVANGELIST DAVID F. NYGREN and WIFE concluded a three-week evangelistic campaign in the First Church, Blossburg, Rev. Benj. R. Croft, pastor, Sunday March 13. The Methodist church co-operated. There were over sixty conversions.

EMANUEL CHURCH, New Castle, Rev. Emrys Thomas, pastor, is now free from debt. The Sunday school under the care of Mr. Arthur J. Rees is making encouraging progress.

ter results. There have been forty-two additions, thirty-two of these by baptism, nearly as many more conversions, and a large number of these will come into the church. The entire life of the church has been on the upgrade. The Sunday services have had a larger attendance and the midweek service has more than doubled. The young people have added to their strength; several who were not interested have taken on new life. A men's club has been organized and with a present assured membership of sixty.

UNIVERSITY CHURCH, SEATTLE, gave a reception March 28, to Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Lavers, who, with their three sons, sailed April 1 for Shanghai, China. They go out as missionaries of the foreign society. Mr. Lavers is a builder and his first work will be to oversee the construction of a new building for Shanghai Baptist College.

UNDER THE AUSPICES of the World Wide Guild a banquet was tendered to Miss Helen Crissman, national field secretary, at the First Church, Seattle, March 28. Mrs. F. B. Matthews, state president, presided and about 135 girls representing the guilds of Seattle were present.

A RECENT ALL-UNIVERSITY assembly at the University of Washington, Seattle, was addressed by Dr. C. A. Brooks of the Home Mission Society, who spoke of the present crisis in Europe. He was so well received by the students that since his visit a committee has been appointed to arrange for a series of religious mass meetings at the university.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

CHICO: When Pastor Berry stepped into his pulpit on Easter morning he found approximately five hundred worshippers in the pews to greet him, Chico Commandery, Knights Templar in full uniform being among the number. In the assembly of the Bible school, more than a dozen had witnessed a good confession and applied for baptism. The ordinance of baptism was administered to three who were ready at the evening service. At the morning service a special thank-offering for needy children on the foreign fields was taken which amounted to $102.75.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

REV. W. EARL SMITH at Ontario opens auspiciously. The audiences are large and increasing. On Easter Sunday sixty-five young people came forward and gave the pastor the hand, pledging their lives to Jesus Christ without reservation. Twenty-three of the number for the first time made confession of Jesus Christ. In the evening the pageant—"The Ever-living Christ" was given to a crowded house with the pastor's wife in charge. The annual roll call was held on March 30, when 300 ate together and Dr. Deere of Pomona gave an address on evangelism.

EASTER SUNDAY was a red letter day for the First Church of Santa Ana, it being the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of this remarkable church. Dr. A. M. Petty of Portland, Ore., general representative of the General Board of Promotion, who began his work in California at this church in 1884, together with Rev. Fred G. Davies, who was pastor of the church until his acceptance of the office of promotion director of Southern California, were specially invited guests for the day, Dr. Petty preaching in the morning and Dr. Davies in the evening. When this church was organized, there were only five other Baptist churches in Southern California. There is but one charter member living, Mrs. Leona English of Chino, Cal. During the month of April fifty-nine members have been received into this church, and at the close of the evening service nineteen of these members followed the Lord Jesus in baptism. Dr. Otto S. Russell is serving his second term as pastor.

A Generous Sowing and An Abundant Harvest

The experience of a church which followed the Scriptural injunction.

WITH the permission of the writer the following extracts from an interesting letter regarding the participation of a church in New York State in the New World Movement are given to our readers.

195 Washington St.,
Hempstead, L. I. N. Y.
March 20, 1921

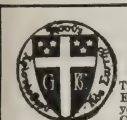

My Dear Dr. Aitchison:—

In reply to your letter I will give you a full account of the developments of the New World Movement campaign in our church. I do not wish to appear in the category of men who boost themselves and their own work. I write this because you request it.

I got my first awakening at the dinner at which Mr. Singiser presented the New World Movement. I endeavored immediately to pass on some of the real enthusiasm to the members of my congregation. We placed a copy of the Survey in the hands of every member and regular adherent of the church. The members of the B. Y. P. U. studied portions of it for several weeks instead of their regular lessons. We united the Ladies' Class and the Brotherhood on Sundays and used the Survey as a textbook. We had the Boys' Club and the Senior Mission Band study it each week. Somewhere in every sermon I dragged in at least one point found in the Survey. I delivered a series of stereopticon lectures on Sundays and used all the publicity material we could get hold of.

Four weeks before the campaign I secured Mr. H. W. Skinner, one of our best business men, as campaign director. He was the key-man. I had to work and pray hard to get him. From the time he consented I felt sure we would make a good showing. However, when I was informed that our church with only eighty-two members was asked for $7,800 it almost took my breath. When I figured out the amount per member and got it down to weeks, a reaction set in and I felt that we could do it.

I bought a mimeograph and sent out letters to forty-five selected people informing them that they had been chosen for team members and notifying them of a supper conference at the church. The campaign was fully explained, all questions answered and doubts met in an informal conference. To our great delight twenty-one men and women promised to become team leaders, many of them undertaking for the first time some active work. Each team leader was asked to get a team mate and report the same to the director. When these names were secured a letter was sent to each one informing him that he had been chosen on a certain team and notifying him of the conference. The teams were named after some section of work, people to be helped, etc., as for example, New Americans, India, China, and listed alphabetically according to the name of the leader. At this conference literature was placed in the hands of each member and the campaign was fully explained.

The Sunday prior to the campaign I had the Boys' Club and Girls' Mission Band delivered a copy of the "Quicken Book" and other literature to every home. We placed our limited supply of "The Crossroads" where we thought they would do the most good. On Wednesday previous to the canvass we mailed a letter to every person who was to be canvassed, urging a careful consideration of the amount he was to contribute and requesting all friends to remain at home on Sunday when the canvassers would call. We endeavored in this letter to make the challenge strong and place the responsibility on each individual.

Another letter was sent to every member of the teams calling them to a supper conference on Friday evening. After a good supper and some enthusiastic speeches a copy of the pledge card was placed in the hands of each one. All were asked to fill out a card for "John Smith" for $1.00 per week. The director explained how it should be done. Then the cards were collected and each one was criticized. Only about three were filled in correctly. We did it again and again until they knew how to fill out the cards. Then we asked each member of the team for his own pledge. First, for a dollar a week or more. The psychology of writing John Smith's pledge for $1 had its good effect. When we counted the total amount pledged by these forty-two canvassers it amounted to about $4,000, or half the amount to be raised. They caught the spirit. Enthusiasm ran high. Almost everyone present felt that we could raise the required amount. We talked nothing less than $1 per week per member and urged that we go over the top the first day.

On Sunday lunch was served in the vestry after the morning service. The canvassers went out with high hopes and great determination. The director and I put in a very restless afternoon in my study. We were at high tension. As reports reached us, however we saw that we would reach the required amount. Two of our boys made a bulletin board. This was placed on the platform. At the close of the evening service the financial secretary wrote down the record of the day as each leader responded to his name and told of his experiences. The total for the day was $10,207.80. During the week $945.60 was added, making a total of $11,153.40. Do you wonder that later we had our pictures taken with the individuals who participated in the canvass arranged in order to form the word "VICTORY?"

Pledges for local expenses have been materially increased. We have tested our resources and find that we can readily do something big. The members felt this and also believed that the pastor's salary was inadequate. The first of November they raised it $700, making it $1,000 more than they have ever paid a pastor before. The church has no floating debt for the first time in many years. We have lately made some needed repairs and painted the church. This work has all been paid for. We have just installed two new furnaces both of which have been paid for in full. For many years we have carried a mortgage of $1,500 on the parsonage. The Ladies' Auxillary has raised $300 and are planning to raise $500 on the mortgage when the interest comes due in a few months.

Under the stimulus of the New World Movement many pledged to local expenses who have never pledged before. Families who were out of the church work have come in and are now our best workers. Last year we paid $96 for missionary objects. To date this year we have paid $1185. We are going to stand behind our pledges and the church will pay every dollar that has been pledged. We have never before been a missionary church. We have caught the vision. Interest is increasing.

We followed the full plan of the Board of Promotion and added a little to meet local needs. I am requesting our campaign director and board of deacons to add their signatures to this letter.—S. W. Stackhouse, pastor; Henry W. Skinner, campaign director; John D. Dorian, August Erickson, Fred Hatch, deacons.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

Federal Farm Loan Bonds

IN February 28, the Supreme Court of the United States rendered a decision in favor of the constitutionality of the Federal Farm Loan Act. This disposes of a suit brought over a year ago. A principal objection by those who attacked the law was the provision which exempts Federal Farm Loan Bonds from all taxation, both state and national. The bonds are declared in the law to be "instrumentalities of the government" and as such non-taxable. In this decision the court follows a principle laid down by John Marshall in a famous case in the early days of the republic in which he said, in substance, that to permit a state to tax an instrument of the federal government would be to place in the hands of the several states the power to hamper and obstruct the federal government in the discharge of its functions.

The immediate effect of this decision is that the Federal Land Banks, which had entirely ceased receiving applications for new loans since May 1, 1920, will now resume operations. It was announced directly after the decision that the board would offer a new issue of bonds as soon as preliminaries could be arranged, and the latest information is that they will be offered about the middle of April.

These bonds are issued by Federal Land Banks or Joint Stock Land Banks under the supervision of the Federal Farm Loan Board, and are secured by the collateral of first mortgages made on farms in their respective districts, under the rather strict requirements of the law. The farmer gets his money at not over 1 per cent above the rate at which the bonds are sold. The forthcoming issue will be 5 per cent, and will run for the customary twenty years, being callable at the option of the Farm Loan Banks in ten years. In contrast with the prevailing 7 or 8 percent basis for corporation bonds, this appears a low rate, but it must be borne in mind that the exemption from tax assures the large investor 5 percent net.

To a considerable extent, the resumption of operations by the Federal Farm Loan Banks will relieve the credit situation in the farming districts. During the cessation of operations by these banks, the farmer has been compelled to arrange his mortgage loans through individuals and banks, and has been obliged to meet the high rates prevailing in the money market, as private loaners cannot offer the investor the tax-free advantage possessed by the federal banks. In consequence, the investor who prefers individual farm mortgages can now obtain from many of these private farm loan concerns choice loans at from 6½ to 7 percent or better.

The farmer's ability now to arrange long term loans through the federal banks will also enable him to liquidate much temporary indebtedness held by local bankers who have been carrying a heavy burden during the past year's period of declining prices for farm products, with the farmer's inability to sell at satisfactory prices.

Pres. W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University gave an address on Feb. 22 on George Washington before the senate and house of representatives of the state of Rhode Island. This address was printed in the journal of the house for Feb. 25.

Pastor G. E. Murphy at Eagle Grove, Iowa, baptized six persons on Easter Sunday and gave the hand of fellowship to eight on April 3.

Bethel Memorial Church, Denver, Col., has recently added forty-six new members, the results of special meetings held by Pastor Krumreig just before Easter.

Six of the Hillsdale, Mich., churches united in a recent campaign conducted by the Stephens evangelistic party. Hundreds have since united with the churches.

Pastor Chas. H. Rust gave the right hand of fellowship to sixty-four new members on April 3 at the Immanuel Church, Scranton, Pa. Thirty-six of these came by baptism, the fruit of quiet, personal work, religious education and departmental decision day services led by the pastor.

The First Church, Corvallis, Oregon, Rev. Wm. A. Waldo, pastor, received thirty-five new members on April 3. This makes ninety who have been received during the last six months. The Corvallis church is located just across from the campus of the Oregon Agricultural College, the second largest institution of the kind in the United States, having a student body of 3,500.

Dr. G. W. Cassidy of the First Church, Sioux City, has been elected director of promotion for the state of Iowa. It is understood that he will accept and will shortly take up his work.

Rev. Clive McGuire has taken up pastoral work at Saint Paris, Ohio, and now lives on the field.

Rev. J. J. Patterson has resigned at the First Church, Winfield, Kan. During the last twenty months more than 120 new members have been received. Previous to his Winfield pastorate, Mr. Patterson was for nearly ten years pastor of the Emmanuel Church, Buffalo, N. Y., and for more than six years superintendent of city mission work there.

Rev. Hinson V. Howlett has been preaching to great congregations at the First Church, Atlantic City, N. J., since his return to the pulpit after a prolonged illness.

On Easter Sunday, the First Church, Granville, Ohio, received fifteen young people into its membership, thirteen by baptism. Of these seven are students at Denison. Recently two young men at Denison were licensed by this church to the gospel ministry and two others have requested the church to license them.

On Easter Sunday, Immanuel Church, Salt Lake City, Utah, had the largest Sunday school and the largest congregations, both morning and evening, in the history of the church. Eight young people were baptized by Pastor Wallace, making eighteen since Christmas.

The First Church, Moscow, Idaho, Dean Hamilton, pastor, recently closed a campaign for a new building with $31,000 pledged. It is expected that a $50,000 building will be erected. Dr. F. H. Divine rendered valuable assistance. This church met its quota of $16,000 for the New World Movement, and owing to the presence of the students at the University of Idaho, has one of the largest B. Y. P. U.'s in the convention.

Communications relating to the Fundamentals Conference at Denver should be addressed to H. W. Moore, 1707 Wazee Street, Denver, instead of to Rev. P. V. Jenness as announced last week.

In connection with the notice from Brookline, Mass., concerning the unveiling on Easter Sunday of memorial windows, it should have been said that the window to Dea. Gardner Corey Brooks was the gift of his widow and that Dea. George Brooks was a brother of Pres. Kendall Brooks for nearly twenty years the head of Kalamazoo College, and of Prof. Samuel Brooks who was a member of its faculty for thirty-seven years.

The chapel car "Grace" has recently been at Chowchilla, Cal., and as a result more than seventy will come into the church.

When Dr. O. P. Miles went to the Benson Church, Omaha, Neb., it was in debt and somewhat discouraged. This last year, all the indebtedness has been paid, the pastor's salary increased, about $20,000 spent on church improvements, almost the full quota raised for the New World Movement and the pastor's expenses to the Northern Baptist Convention paid.

Rev. Franklin D. Elmer, pastor of the Hamilton, N. Y. Church, officiated at the funeral of John Burroughs, the naturalist, on April 2.

Rev. Howard C. Whitcomb at the Calvary Church, Omaha, Neb., on April 3 gave the hand of fellowship to sixty-one persons, most of whom had been baptized recently.

Foster C. Jones of Winona Lake, Ind., who has been associated with Rev. E. S. Stucker in evangelistic work for the past two years will spend the summer in Boy Scout work at Grove City, Pa.

Evangelist E. S. Stucker of Ottawa, Kan., is to conduct special services at Iowa City, Iowa, April 24—May 1, and at Kiron, Iowa, May 31—June 19.

The first scholarship in the International Baptist Seminary, East Orange, N. J., has been established by Pres. Frank L. Anderson. It is to be known as the Linda Williams Anderson Memorial Scholarship.

The Commissaire General of Congo Belge recently visited the Baptist school and station at Sona Bata, accompanied by his wife, writes S. P. Frederickson. He complimented the missionaries on the excellent results being obtained in the village schools, which are under the mission.

Oklahoma Indians have paid over to the Home Mission Society as trustee for the building fund of Bacone College $173,000. All but one of the givers are members of our Indian churches, the product of many years of missionary evangelism. "It is not out of fabulous wealth, this new Indian day is flooding the horizon," Dr. L. C. Barnes reports, "but out of the overflowing spirit of Jesus Christ."

The Mexican Baptists of Denver are anxiously waiting for a native pastor to come on the field. The night classes in the mission have proved so helpful and popular that people have been turned away on account of lack of room.

Plans are under way for the erection of a Christian center for the Japanese of Seattle. The architectural plan provides for a church auditorium, dormitory and complete equipment for community work.

Rev. D. A. Wilson, general missionary at Managua, Nicaragua, reports that the church at Managua has been revived, believers have been added, the Sunday school has grown and is enthusiastically at work. There has been a blessing also at Leon and at Diriamba. Mr. Wilson declares that the supreme need is for more workers, predicting that if this call is answered a mighty advance is due in Central America.

Dr. C. L. White, executive secretary of the Home Mission Society, returning from a brief visit to points on the Pacific Coast, speaks enthusiastically of the fine initiative displayed by the workers directly responsible for the carrying forward of the enlarged denominational program.

The First Church of Rock Springs, Wyo., with thirty-four resident members, is 100 per cent efficient in the New World Movement. It secured pledges for the full amount asked and has made full payments up to date.

President Routledge entertained at El Cristo College, Cuba, the deputation from England and the states, consisting of T. S. Penny of Taunton, England, Mr. and Mrs. Mornay Williams, Dr. George R. Hovey and Rev. C. S. Detweiler of New York City. The visitors found the school in splendid condition in every way. Mr. Routledge predicts Colegios Internacionales easily could have 1,000 pupils provided it had the adequate equipment to care for that enrollment.

Mortgaged Home to Go to School

Miss Melvina Sollman of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, stationed in Kullang, China, is to be thanked for this glimpse of a native Christian woman there, and her eagerness to fit herself to tell others of the Christ whom she had found at the mission school:

"She is a widow with one little boy, and no one to help her; so she is going into debt for her education. When she appeared at the opening of the school this year with $40, we asked where she got it. She did not even have a roof over her head, we knew, for her one room had been shaken down by the earthquake the year before. We learned that she had mortgaged the ground her house had stood on, and the one tiny field she owned, in order to come back to school. Now she had absolutely nothing but her desire to finish her studies, and her hope of being a Bible woman in the future."

Does Dr. Edward Judson Know It?

One hundred per cent gain over two years ago, is the record of the industrial school at Judson Neighborhood House in New York City. Among the older girls, several have been enlisted to aid in the primary department, they have been taken to other meetings to hear experts in the work, and are taking home to their own brothers and sisters some of the lessons they have learned. A girl's club which only a few months ago was receiving help, has been led to the point of giving its aid to other clubs in the Neighborhood House.

Black Hooverizers

Work among the colored people of the South is bringing results, for in Birmingham, Ala., with twenty-four Bible classes and 700 young folk, these young people have done much to aid suffering people during the last few weeks. In Jeruel Institute, Athens, Ga., despite the economic crisis due to the low price of cotton and high price of stock food, the students have "Hooverized" to get along. The domestic science class, thirty members, has raised money by preparing luncheons to equip a school orchestra and band. In this school the primary department has outgrown its quarters.

Mother Threatens to Kill Her

"Nine of our girls were baptized in December, and that Sunday morning another girl was almost heart-broken because she couldn't be baptized," writes Miss Lillian Eastman, from Burma. "Her heathen mother had said that she would kill her if she was, but she begged and begged us to be baptized, anyway. Since then she has placed herself with the Christian girls on all occasions."

Race Lines Dissolve

Three races are mingling in the Bible classes and Christian Endeavor societies at the Mariners' Temple, New York, and the results are ample proof of the fact that better acquaintance only is needed for a better understanding among the various peoples in our country.

Teacher of Music Wanted

A Baptist college wants a Baptist teacher of music—man or woman. Someone is wanted who will be in sympathy with the work of a denominational college, who can organize the students for enthusiastic participation in good music, and who can take place along with the best musicians of the city. There is an unusual opportunity here to build a good school of music.

WHO'S WHO IN MUSIC. No. 1

ROSSITER GLEASON COLE, one of this country's most distinguished composers, is the subject of this, the first of a projected series of informal biographies of contemporary musical personalities. Well known as an organist, even better known as a pedagogue, he ranks high in the list of distinguished composers of today. His brilliant organ numbers have been classed, by one of the most conservative critics, as the best produced today. His choral works and part-songs have been used from one end of this country to another; and his delightful songs have won a standard place in that repertoire.

Mr. Cole was born Feb. 5, 1866, at Clyde, Mich., and was educated in the public schools of Ann Arbor. In 1888 he graduated, with the degree of Ph. B., from the University of Michigan, which in June, 1913, conferred upon him the honorary degree of A. M. His musical education was obtained largely from courses in theoretical music elected during his college course, and from two years of study in Berlin (1890-92), where he won, through competitive examination, a free scholarship in the Royal Master-School for Composition under Max Bruch. Here Gustav Kogel and Heinrich van Eycken also were his teachers. Mr. Cole has spent several years in the field of college work as professor of music and director of the School of Music—in Ripon College (two years), Grinnell College (seven years), and the University of Wisconsin (two years). Since 1902, with the exception of two years spent in Wisconsin, he has resided in Chicago. Since 1908 he has held the position of professor (in charge) of music in the Columbia summer session in New York City. He has served three terms (in 1902, 1909 and 1910) as president of the Music Teachers' National Association.

The published compositions of Mr. Cole number about eighty-five, including some thirty-five songs, fifteen piano pieces, eight organ pieces, and numerous numbers for chorus, violin, violoncello, and orchestra. Among his larger works are a lyrical cantata, "The Passing of Summer," for soli, chorus and orchestra (written while an undergraduate, and performed in University Hall, Ann Arbor, June 27, 1888; and later, in revised form, published as Opus 14); a cantata for women's voices, soli and orchestra, "The Broken Troth," Op. 32 (first performed by the Chicago Teacher's Chorus, E. O. Robinson, conductor, April 17, 1917, in Orchestra Hall, Chicago); three recitations with musical settings—"Hiawatha's Wooing," Op. 20, "Pierrot Wounded," Op. 33, and "King Robert of Sicily," Op. 22, first performed with orchestral accompaniment at a Cincinnati symphony orchestra concert, Joseph O'Meara, reader, Feb. 12, 1911, and later by David Bispham, to whom the work is dedicated; ballad for violoncello and orchestra, Op. 25, first performed with orchestra at a Minneapolis symphony orchestra concert, Carlo Fischer, soloist, March 21, 1909, and a sonata for violin and piano, Op. 8. Of the piano compositions, probably the best known are the Novellette in G flat major, "From A Lover's Note-Book" (a set of five poetic pieces), and "Legen" (a concert piece), Op. 31. Songs that are used extensively are (secular) "A Kiss and a Tear," "When Love is in her Eyes," "My True Love hath my Heart," "Absence," "Unnumbered"; (sacred) "Saviour, like a Shepherd Lead us," and "In my Father's House are Many Mansions." For the organist we find an Allegro quasi Marcia, Op. 9, Andante Religioso, Op. 19, Fantasia Symphonique, Op. 28, Meditation, Op. 29, Rhapsody, Op. 30, and two numbers, listed as Opus 34, "A Song of Consolation" and "A Song of Gratitude." Two later numbers of large frame are the forceful "Pioneer" concert overture for orchestra, written in commemoration of the Illinois state centennial, and which is dedicated to the memory of Abraham Lincoln; and an ambitious cantata for soli and chorus of mixed voices—"The Rock of Liberty," a Pilgrim Ode, set to a poem by Abbie Farwell Brown, and noted as Op. 36.

NINGPO'S NEEDS

A School That Has "Made Good"

Let's Help it "Make Better"

Seventy-eight out of every 100 students in the Shanghai Baptist Theological Seminary are from Ningpo Academy.

Forty-eight out of every 100 students in the Shanghai Baptist College are from Ningpo Academy.

Nearly half the native evangelists in the six stations of this district come from Ningpo Academy. These men are the coming leaders in the evangelization of China.

Ningpo needs new and larger buildings. It ought to be equipped to train all the students who are ready to enter. The cost is included in the New World Movement.

Dormitory space is shamefully inadequate, beds in the form of bunks, one built on top of another, having been necessarily provided in order to economize floor space. Overcrowded conditions, which make even the habitually crowded Chinese complain, shock the foreign visitor. Yet the students prefer these conditions to remaining away. It is quite impossible to resist the pleadings of fathers who bring their sons long distances because their best friend has told them their boys will be well taught and well cared for if brought to this school.

Remember—

Ningpo isn't the only school that needs larger equipment. It's only a sample. The success of the 100 Million Dollar Fund means the enlargement of this strategically important work all through the Foreign Field.

You And Your Church

By JAMES S. KIRTLEY, D.D.

What is involved in being a Christian, a church member, a Baptist? Out of an experience of many years as a pastor, Doctor Kirtley has set forth replies to these questions in such way as to construct a work of great practical value to young people. The volume is especially adapted to serve as a text-book for classes in study of the essentials of the principles, polity and work of Baptist churches. Boards, $1.25 net.

A Study of the Holy Spirit

By T. P. STAFFORD, A.M., Th.D.

A well-ordered exposition of the Scripture teaching as to the Holy Spirit, Biblical in method, simple in statement, practical in purpose, this work should find a place not only on the student's shelf, but on the desk of the pastor who aims at Scriptural presentation of so important a doctrine, and in the hands of the church worker who seeks intelligent contact with the source of spiritual power for himself and for others. Boards, $1.00 net.

The Ideal Man

By J. P. GREENE, D.D.

In these chapters is the heart of a course in Practical Ethics given by the author in William Jewell College. They pulsate with the virile personality of Doctor Greene. The outcome of wide experience and of intelligent study of books and men, they have the simplicity of light and the vitalizing warmth of eminently Christian humanity of a man who "sees in to people and still believes in them." Cloth, $1.00 net.

The Stature of a Perfect Man

By P. H. J. LERRIGO, M.D.

A physician's contribution to the statement of natural laws in the spiritual world. Through science "undreamed-of natural secrets have become the commonplaces of popular information." Doctor Lerrigo has drawn upon one department of this widely disseminated, classified knowledge in an attempt to indicate the wealth of possibilities of teaching by means of parable the truth concerning the life processes of the soul. "A classification of those laws of spiritual health which parallel the normal physiological processes of the body, and which may perhaps fitly be termed the physiology of the inner life, should be helpful in leading us to a correct understanding of soul health."

Hymns for the King's Children

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Octavo, 165 pages. Price, boards, 40 cents a copy, $35.00 a hundred; delivery charges extra.

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose. Boards, 75 cents net.

The Angel's Lily

By RUSSELL H. CONWELL, D.D., LL.D.

An accurate record of one of Dr. Conwell's most interesting and instructive addresses, in the form of an Oriental parable. Accompanying the lecture are eight chapters giving a history of Temple University. Cloth, $1.25 net.

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

Truth embodied in a tale enters in at open doors. Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of story-telling, who has so co-ordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Applegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information. A worthwhile book for the juniors, and the seniors will not think it beneath them. Cloth, $1.50 net.

Fresh from the Field

After an absence of nine months on account of sickness, Rev. F. B. McAllister of New Castle, Pa., has been compelled to lay down his work because improvement has not been such as he expected. During his absence, Rev. J. Alton Lewis has been acting pastor.

The Pleasant View Church, Pautucket, R. I., has extended a call to Rev. Maurice Dunbar of So. Thomaston, Me., and he has accepted.

Rev. C. E. Bragdon, pastor at Norridgewock, Me., has accepted a call to the church at Apponaug, R. I., and will begin his work there this month.

Rev. L. R. Bobbitt is closing his work at Broken Bow, Neb., to accept the unanimous call to the church at Glenwood, Iowa. During the last two years the church at Broken Bow has received ninety members, of whom sixty-two were by baptism.

In our issue of April 9, it was said that Rev. David P. Ward went to Bakersfield, Cal., last September. This mistake was so obvious that our readers probably corrected it for themselves. It was, of course, in September, 1900, that he went there and started anew the work which has grown to such fine proportions under the present pastor.

Dr. John M. Moore, pastor of the Marcy Avenue Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., was on April 8 elected chairman of the administrative committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ for the current year. Dr. Moore was for several years secretary of the department of missionary education of Northern Baptists and was also the originator of the five-year program. He has had long experience in co-operative movements.

The First Church, Lindsay, Cal., has recently been in a campaign of personal evangelism. On Easter, Pastor Rufus Keyser baptized thirteen young men and women.

Plans have been adopted by the First Church, Omaha, Neb., and $70,000 subscribed for a new modern parish house and Sunday-school building.

The First Church, Glenside, Pa., Rev. Walter Whitley, pastor, has just closed the most prosperous year in its history. Thirty-five new members were added during the year and the church property greatly improved.

At the close of a two week's meeting the Belleville, Ill., Church, Rev. J. H. Martin, pastor, recently added thirty to its membership, sixteen by baptism. Of these ten were heads of families.

Rev. Chas. J. Baldwin died at Granville, Ohio, on April 13. He was born in Aug. 10, 1841, graduated from Madison University and Rochester Seminary, was a staff officer in the 157th N. Y. Volunteers from 1862-65, held pastorates with the First Church, Chelsea, Mass., from 1868 to 1874, with the First Church, Rochester, N. Y., from 1874 to 1886, and with the Church at Granville from 1886, to 1913. He leaves three children: James F., professor of history in Vassar College, Arthur C., pastor of the Chestnut Street Church, Philadelphia, and Helen A., professor of Latin in the Normal College, Carbondale, Ill.

Pet Peeves

WHEN in the issue of April 9 we asked for "Pet Peeves" we never dreamed the world was so full of trouble. Here are some of its outstanding woes.

We Needed Money

"You are trying to get me to pay twice for my paper. It is worth it all right, but I'm hard up. You are lucky to get your pay once."—An Illinois pastor. We have sent him a special receipt.

No More Fundamental Job

"You don't seem to think that we have anything else to do but boost THE BAPTIST. You ought to see what is expected of us fellows."—A state secretary. And he is getting results all along the line. THE BAPTIST boost his business.

We Played Safe

"I did not pay for my paper when it was due. You were good enough to keep it coming. When I finally paid up, you promptly stopped the paper." Moral: Pay promptly, brethren, so that we do not become suspicious of you.

Unacquainted With Her Family

"I am going away for some months. Please send my copy of THE BAPTIST to my niece."—A Minnesota subscriber. This good woman will have grounds for a "peeve" for we have not carried out her order. Wonder why!

Robbed Him of Valuable Time

"I often take THE BAPTIST and start at the front page and read it through to the last page."—A Michigan subscriber. We marvel at his staying qualities!

Can You Have A Newspaper Without Imagination?

"You are getting to be a real newspaper man. You take a little truth and write up a big story."—A Chicago subscriber.

Peeve Cure

An unknown subscriber from Burnside (?) sends the Peeve Editor the following sure cure for the prevalent malady:

Many pet peeves I surely had Until I attempted with pencil and pad
To make them look honest and "sure nuff" peeves,
Then I found they were nothing but joy-robbing thieves.

So when we are tempted to think only of woe,
No better cure for peeves do I know,
Than with this prayer each new day to greet,
O now, dear Lord, please keep me sweet.

A Whole Loaf is Better Than a Half

—for the Ministers and Missionaries

Let not "our good be the enemy of our best."

The half loaf—50% of the Hundred Million—has already enabled the Ministers' and Missionaries' Benefit Board to more nearly meet the needs of the aged and the incapacitated; it has established the pension system for those who are now in the midst of their life work. It is a splendid beginning—but it is not completed. What we have done should be our inspiration to finish the task so that all the needs may be met.

One beyond the retiring age writes: "We are freer from worry than we have ever been. I am still preaching nearly every Sunday at the Sunshine Mission."

A widow writes: "I wish to thank you most sincerely for this kind gift. You have no idea what it will mean to me. I praise and thank my heavenly Father this morning for this provision whereby it will be possible for me to have a little place I can call home, and with the home a spirit of independence."

Another brother says: "Your kind letter of notification is received. I am more thankful than I can tell you for the timely help this money will be to us. And it did me so much good to have you say that the action of the Board was by "a cordial vote." Such a response on your part lifts one out of the realm of beggary into an atmosphere of brotherhood and self respect. God bless you for this. The amount was just what I had asked of Our Father, only He had it begin a month earlier than I expected."

The Board is making a thousand similar grants. It needs help to increase both the number and the amount of grants. Northern Baptists may scatter sunshine in the hearts of thousands of ministers and missionaries by increasing the funds of the Board.

Two things to do in April—

- (1) Pay up all pledges to date.
- (2) "Carry on" for completion of the Hundred Million.

Will There Be a New Revelation Next Week?

THE week of April 25-May 2, 1920, was a revelation to great numbers of churches in the Northern Baptist Convention. At that time there came to them a knowledge of unsuspected resources in money and talent and the beginning of an intense spiritual interest. The days of the campaign of that week may have been marked by feverish activity but they are also notable because of reborn churches.

Shall spiritual blessing accompany the anniversary of that event? So it has seemed to many who have considered the matter and out of their conviction have grown the plans for Anniversary Week which is to be observed from April 24 to May 1.

A suggested program is in the hands of all the churches. Any pastor and church is at liberty to follow a better program if one can be devised. But the opportunity to consider what has been accomplished, to thank God for the vision shared with all our missionaries at home and abroad and to dedicate ourselves to the unfinished task should not be lost.

For the first time in their history Baptists have undertaken a task which is commensurate with their resources. They have committed themselves under God to "an advance program which is in keeping with the great missionary heritage which our fathers bequeathed to this generation." They will not turn back until the goal has been reached.

That goal is expressed at times in terms of money. But it is more properly set forth in terms of redeemed men and women, of lives dedicated to Christian service, of churches stimulated to give their best efforts for their Lord, of greatly increased numbers of missionaries and of an enlarged missionary work, of the opening of Christian education to more young Baptists. In other words the money is only a means to a great spiritual end, although it is often the giving of money that liberates the spiritual forces of a man's life.

Testimony is almost universal that the churches which heartily went into this movement have experienced a great quickening. Not only are they giving as never in the past but every activity of the church has been stirred. On the other hand figures show that many of the churches which are not participating are giving on a smaller scale than in past years. "There is that which withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty." A church may face atrophy because of unwillingness to rise to its opportunity. The New World Movement has brought a test which is illuminating.

As a result of all that has been done we are a little more than half way to the New World Movement goal. We call on all our churches to give recognition to Anniversary Week. We call on them to pray for the evangelization of the world. We call on them to enter fully into their own opportunity to make Christ known. We call on them to hasten to completion the great work they have begun that Baptists may make a really worthy offering towards the bringing in of Christ's kingdom in all the world.

A Key to Those Eloquent Figures

THE table on page 368 showing a financial report to March 20, 1921 will be of interest to all those having part in raising the $100,000,000 fund. It shows the amount of the operating budget of each national, state and city organization and the allotments to the fifty-two schools and colleges, the amount received to March 20, and the balance due to the end of the fiscal year which closes April 20, 1921.

Particular attention is called to the fact that of the $12,500,000 required to care for the work for all these organizations this year $8,454,954.70 had been paid by March 20, leaving $4,045,045.30 yet to be secured by April 30 in order to close the year without a deficit. The table also indicates how much of this amount is needed by each organization.

It is encouraging that the total receipts to date this year, including the specific gifts shown in column five (which are over and above the regular operating budgets and which will be used for the definite work designated by the donors, but which count upon the $1,000,000,000 fund), amount to $9,139,702.04. This is $4,500,841.14 more than the entire receipts during the thirteen months of the last fiscal year.

However we must not allow ourselves to be over optimistic. Every dollar of the $12,500,000 is actually needed. To close this fiscal year with a deficit would be disheartening.

We can secure the balance if we all work together. Full payment of all pledges due this year and liberal gifts from churches and individuals which have not previously made pledges to the New World Movement will enable us to reach the goal. Thousands of our churches are giving on the basis of making full provision for the enlargement of our work. We appeal to every loyal friend to help meet these immediate needs.

Did the Liberty Bell Ring?

WHO is this that cometh, clad in royal color, under the shadow of Independence Hall? A prince bearing an Irish name. Who is this for whom welcoming committees are appointed, in whose honor a colossal reception is prepared, for whom the thousands parade and to whom is given a purse of half a million dollars? The professed follower of a teacher who told a certain rich young man to sell what he had, to bestow the money on the poor and then to follow on. Who is this before whom multitudes kneel that they may receive his blessing? A man who has by a foreign potentate been proclaimed a prince, with power over heaven and hell and worthy the homage of all the faithful.

When Jesus walked the earth, he said, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." But that was centuries ago and much water has flowed under the bridge since then.

Not so many months ago, multitudes of men went forth to Europe while other millions, both men and women, toiled and gave at home, to make the world safe for democracy. Now in Philadelphia a host acclaim those who have been making the church safe for autocracy.

Can autocracy and democracy live in peace side by side? Can the principle abjured in politics be allowed in the church? Can a man be half a slave and half free? Are not autocracy and the kingdom of God at war with each other?

We do not speak this word in a spirit of intolerance or bigotry. We are just contemplating the ideals of the Philadelphia of Franklin's time as compared with those of the Philadelphia which acclaims a "prince" and welcomes him to a residence in the historic city. We proclaim this truth to be self-evident—that all men are created free and equal. Such a word was spoken in the day of men's simplicity. Is it true today in the city of William Penn? Shall it be true for any of us if we slumber and smile and sleep again?

From St. Mihiel to the Poor-House

ONE thing is wholly unthinkable: it is that the nation intends to permit any service man disabled in the service to lack for any help the nation can give him.

And yet, take a single paragraph from the testimony of Dr. T. W. Salmon, an expert on mental diseases, before a congressional committee:

"I have studied the care of the insane in many states, but I do not know today any group of 5,000 men suffering from insanity who are so poorly cared for as the ex-soldiers of the United States army. Unless something is done within the present year to improve the conditions under which insane ex-service men are receiving treatment, hundreds who now stand a chance of being cured will be doomed to permanent insanity."

Contemplate an American boy, who at the call of his country went to France and through the horrors there, now out of a job, or weak from the effects of his sufferings, or on the point of losing his mind from nervous wreck, and with no relief in sight. There are now, and have been ever since the war closed, thousands of such boys. What is going to be done about them? They have a preferred claim, not in charity but in simple justice, on every agency of society, religious, educational, political and industrial, for the best provision this nation can make for them.

No, we do not intend that they shall be neglected. A great deal has been done already for their rehabilitation; but soldiers in county poor-houses are not an attractive subject for meditation.

Just there, and in other places not more desirable, a good many of them can be found.

A valuable and interesting compendium of information on the subject has been compiled by Rev. Myron E. Adams, a Baptist minister, now executive manager of Fort Sheridan Association. A postal card addressed to him at 21 North La Salle Street, Chicago, will doubtless bring you a copy.

White Faces, But Red Hands

QUITE interesting is the new candidate for public favor, the Ku Klux Klan. From the reports of the organizers it would seem that all of the eligible population is rushing to join the order. To those who remember the reconstruction days following the civil war the name is sufficiently suggestive to be startling.

The new Ku Klux Klan professes to be the old one revamped to suit present conditions. It is composed of native Americans whose fathers were also native Americans. It proposes to stand for the enforcement of law, the protection of womanhood, the separation of church and state and the supremacy of the white race.

Just what it means by the first three items is uncertain. But the last, the supremacy of the white race, has a historical interpretation written in bloody crime. If this item is to be understood in its historical significance then in this year 1921 we have the spectacle of a rapidly-growing secret order bound under oath to deprive the Negro forever of the rights guaranteed to him by the constitution of the United States, and by whatever measures of fraud or force to keep him in subjection as a servile race.

So we understand. If this understanding is not correct, we shall be glad to receive corrected information. But if it is correct, then in the name of liberty, humanity, justice, Christianity and the principles of Americanism, we must denounce this order as criminal and dangerous. No communist conspiracy could be more so.

Write, and Write Now

THE attorney general of the United States, taking advantage of an ambiguity in the Volstead law has given an opinion that physicians may prescribe beer in unlimited quantities. What this decision means in the degradation of the medical profession through the reckless greed of unscrupulous practitioners and in flooding the country with beer, ought to be clear to those who have had any experience with the liquor business.

The remedy is with the Congress. Bills are under consideration designed to perfect the law and to prevent the evil effects of the attorney general's opinion. Whether the Congress will act or not depends on what the members hear from their constituents at home.

Write or telegraph to your congressman at once. No matter about the number of any particular bill. What is needed is such legislation as will make effective the eighteenth amendment to the constitution prohibiting the liquor business. If your congressmen know that you mean business they will know how to attend to the technicalities.

The missionaries hailed with joy the launching of the New World Movement. They know what its success means on the foreign field. The grim significance of failure is also constantly before them. Therefore their appeal, as printed on page 366 of this issue, should have the careful and prayerful thought of all our readers. The financial year is almost at a close: now is the time to highly resolve that it shall end right.

How to Get and Hold our Young People

"The little girl of today goes directly from the cradle to the movies, and at fifteen is discussing sex problems."—Parents are excoriated.—How one church holds and helps its young people. Evangelism by basket-ball

BY PERRY J. STACKHOUSE

OUR modern and complex civilization is profoundly affecting our young people. The decline of parental authority due largely to the economic independence of boys and girls who are still in their early teens the fact that youth is always turbulent and vulnerable at every point; the failure of the church to keep pace with the complex and highly organized life of the city, render the problem serious and even baffling. I happened upon a little item in Judge which though written in jest is indicative of the changed psychology of the younger generation. "The little girl of today is not interested in dolls. She goes directly from the cradle to the movies and at fifteen is discussing sex problems."

FOOL PARENTS MAKE EXCUSES

We must begin with the parents. We often permit a false delicacy to prevent us from certain plain speech as to the moral perils that are continually besetting our young people. Fool parents who complacently inform us that their little girl or boy has lost interest in the Bible school or church, who permit their children to spend three or four nights a week in the motion picture shows, who seem to be more interested in their manners than in their morals, are more responsible for the troubles of young people than the young people themselves. The revival that is most urgent in America today is a revival in the home of parental responsibility and authority.

We must cultivate a wide and sympathetic understanding of the ideas, the ambitions, the emotions, the traditions of our boys and girls as they pass through the difficult adolescent period of life. Youth is restless, volatile, idealistic, and at times cynical. It is the season of high adventure. It sees the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. It is ardent, generous, prone to hero worship.

For the most part the leaders of our churches are men and women who have arrived at middle life. It is only by exercising our historical imagination that middle life is able to sympathize with youth. After forty we no longer live in fairyland.

New Temptations Assail Them

Never before in civilization have such numbers of young girls been suddenly released from the protection of the home and permitted to walk unattended upon city streets and to work under alien roofs. Never before have such numbers of young boys earned money independently of the family life and felt themselves free to spend it as they choose in the midst of vice deliberately disguised as pleasure.—Jane Addams.

We lose our young people, not infrequently because the middle-aged leaders of the church are so much in bondage to old traditions, old ideas, old methods, that we lack the courage or the inclination to break out a new trail. We prefer the old paths, the safe roads and the conventional ways. We try to confine the bubbling, sparkling, new wine of youth in bottles that were old even when we who are now middle-aged were young. We try to impose our autumn programmes upon boys and girls who are living in the showery springtime of life, and then wonder why they are not enthusiastically received.

PROBLEM OF A DOWNTOWN CHURCH

The editor has requested me to tell the readers of THE BAPTIST what we are doing at Tabernacle for our young people. We have by no means solved the problem, but it can be fairly said that we are making an honest effort to solve it. Our church is rapidly becoming a down-town church with rooming houses, business and a foreign population driving our members into more desirable residence sections of our city. Great changes have taken place during the seven years of my pastorate here. Within a period of less than two years, what was formerly the largest and most influential church of the city has sold its magnificent building to a theatrical syndicate and occupies a temporary home in a more congenial neighborhood. Three Methodist churches unable to win out in the midst of an adverse environment have united in a single organization. We are fortunate in the fact that we have a modern chapel with commodious departmental rooms, and rooms for the senior classes. Our Bible school assembly room which will seat 700 is equipped with a basket ball court. About a year ago we spent $10,000 in providing social center rooms in the basement of our chapel, with fine bowling alleys and shuffle boards. The attendance at our Bible school in the past twelve months has been the largest in our history. Since last December there have been only two Sundays that the attendance has fallen under 500, and it has gone as high as 675.

CATCH THE BABIES YOUNG

In getting and holding our young people we try in various ways to bring to the parents a sense of responsibility. At our children's service we have what we call a dedicatory service for little children. The parents bring their babies to the church and covenant to teach them reverence to God, obedience to Jesus Christ and solemnly promise to bring or send them to the Bible school when they are old enough to come. The service is really a dedication of the parents. A little book containing the name of the child and the covenant made, is presented to the parents. We think that one of the best ways of getting our young people is to get the parents of our young people. In many cases the parents are not church members but it happens not infrequently that the babies lead the parents into the kingdom of God.

In connection with our church we have all kinds of organizations for our young people, in which we try to work out the ideals of fellowship, service, friendship and christian education. Our chapel is open seven days of the week, and is always at the disposal of our young people. It is true that our electric light bills are sometimes staggering, and some of the games played by our young people are rather hard upon the floors and carpets, but what shall it profit a church if it saves its carpets and its electricity and loses its boys and girls?

Four years ago we organized what we call a young people's night. This organization offers a four-fold expression of youthful activity,—spiritual, social, physical and educational. The evening is divided into four periods. A supper is served cafeteria style for twenty cents. Two of the Bible school orchestras take turns in playing during the supper hour. From seventy-five to one hundred are served. Our age limit is from thirteen to twenty-five. Following supper we go to an upper room where a devotional service for twenty minutes is held. These meetings are often of unusual spiritual power. The fact that no seats are provided, helps to break up any possible stiffness and formality.

At the close of this period comes the educational work when the group divides into four classes according to the choice of the individ-idual. There are classes in mission study, social service, Bible study, Christian citizenship, vocational talks and debates. The social hour comes last, when all unite for a good time. Here one finds the pastor, the superintendent of the Bible school, the assistant pastor, mixing with the young people in relay races, games, bowling, contests of different kinds. In connection with our young people's night we have a vesper service on Sunday evening and it is a point of honor for those who attend the week-night meeting to support the vesper service. In the past twelve months fifty-three of our young people united with the church on a confession of faith in baptism.

In all our work for our young people we put the emphasis upon the spiritual. A basket ball court and a bowling alley in connection with a church are neither moral nor immoral institutions. In themselves they have no power to strengthen character or to promote righteousness. But if the social rooms afford an opportunity for men and women who have in their hearts a flaming passion for Christ and his kingdom to come into intimate relationships with men and women, boys and girls, then these rooms may become evangelistic and redemptive agencies. On the other hand a church that devotes its time to social, educational and financial enterprises and fails to put the emphasis upon evangelizing the unsaved and developing the spiritual life of its membership, is no better than a country club or a chamber of commerce.

I think that at Tabernacle we have won the respect and love of our young people. One of the best evidences of that, is the fact that our young people stick to us. Even when they marry outside of our membership, sooner or later they come back, bringing their sheaves with them.

The Home Influence of Christian Chinese Girls

Girls made Christian in mission schools change the manners and morals of non-Christian homes. Get the girls and you get the homes and the nation

BY LOUISE CAMPBELL

"WHY did I choose to teach Bible, hygiene, music and calisthenics one afternoon a week in a large non-Christian girls' school of 200 students, rather than to teach music in our Christian boys' school of 460 students?" My answer is that the resultant influence over Chinese homes of teaching Christian ideals to these non-Christian girls far outweighed the other opportunity.

The increasing number of non-Christian families which want to put their girls in Christian schools must be due in some measure to the wholesome influence of Christian girls in their homes. In the non-Christian community of Kaying, fifty-nine out of seventy-two pupils in the Baptist mission school are from heathen homes. A few years ago two girls were reluctantly given permission by a conservative household to attend our school; these two have become Christians and today we have seventeen girls from that house in school! The native households here average from ten to forty families each.

Most of the girls from these homes who enter our schools are able to overcome their parents' prejudice to their becoming Christians. In several instances where the girls went against the wishes of their parents in the matter, the parents were eventually won over by the earnestness and sincerity of their daughters. Such a one was Chong Liong Yin who was called home to attend the funeral of an older brother. During the heathen ceremonies her father required her to kneel and worship the spirit of the departed. The girl answered respectfully that it was impossible for her to obey him in this matter for she had learned to love and worship God and could worship no one else. The father was very angry and made many threats but still she stood firm and finally he told her that she would not be allowed to continue with her class in school unless she obeyed. She stood the test bravely though she was heart-broken. He has never allowed her to return to school but has permitted her younger sister to come to the same Christian school. Many have borne witness to the genuineness of her faith and there is a greater respect for Christianity in that household.

Almost without exception the girls from non-Christian as well as from the Christian homes pledged themselves to a definite program for the summer vacation in their homes:

1. To teach their home folks by word and life of Christ.
2. To observe the "Quiet Hour" daily.
3. To help at home in every way possible remembering that no honorable toil is beneath them.

SISTERS ENTERING SCHOOL AT NINGPO

4. To institute a house-cleaning campaign, stirring up a household pride in regard to hygienic condition of the rooms, courts and gardens.
5. To interest the household in beautifying the home, repairing and whitewashing or papering where necessary, and planting trees and flowers where all might enjoy them.
6. To take pride in their own personal appearance at home, counting it disrespectful to the family to appear in the disheveled condition so commonly seen in their homes.

Following a meeting of a Christian Home Club, where there had been reviewed a printed address of Dr. Ida Kahn's in which she deplored the custom in well-to-do families of keeping slave girls, a girl-student went home and told her people that they need not provide a slave girl for her at the time of her marriage. She had determined to wait upon herself and hire only the heavy work done. Another proud girl said, "Before I knew of Christ's teachings I never looked upon the slave girls at our house as human beings but now I talk with them and they seem so pleased that it makes me ashamed of the way I used to do."

Recently a number of Christian girls joined the local temperance organization and to the astonishment of their home people would not even eat dishes cooked in wine nor smoke the old water-pipe. But there seems to be no ill-feeling, for they simply explain to others that the girls have found that these things are not according to hygiene.

Where objections had been made to the day-pupils attending services on Sunday on the ground that they were needed at home, one mother said, "The girls work so hard and accomplish so much on Saturdays that I cannot say anything against their going on Sundays." So the possibility of keeping one day in the week holy is taught by the example of these girls.

It was encouraging to learn of a non-Christian mother who said, "Since my girl has been going to that Christian school she does not care to play 'Sparrow' any more and I have lost my interest in it, not even caring to look on any more." This innocent-sounding gambling game is responsible for an immense amount of idleness and dissipation

Christian influence for fear of opposition or persecution yet who never return to their former level and do much towards loosening the grip of superstition and creating a friendly feeling towards Christianity.

As the status of women is raised the influence of the girl in the home increases, and as this influence is Christianized it becomes a powerful factor in the evangelizing of a nation. The status of women in China is being raised very rapidly and our Christian girls' schools are doing all in their power to increase this influence. Our work for the individual girl is with the hope that the home among the women of all but Christian homes.

The greatest disappointment that can come to us is to have a girl from a Christian school go back to a non-Christian home and exert no Christian influence, falling back into the old ways. There are many who may not seem to exert any aggressively in which she now is and the one to which she will go may be uplifted and Christianized through her influence. Our hope of making China a nation of Christian homes is largely dependent on the influence wielded by the girls from our Christian girls' schools.

Kaying, China.

The Pilgrims Still Lead On!

*They are not dead, those men of sturdy hope!
They never died who dared to live their faith!
Today not only do we tell their deeds,
But trace their echoes through three hundred years,
And still look forward to achieve their plans!
They landed on a wild and wintry strand.
Death harvested a half e'er Spring's return.
And yet the remnant stayed, and faltered not!*

*We dwell, three millions, on "this cultured shore,"
Fed, clothed and served from sea and farm and mine,
Taming the lightning, conquering the air,*

*Defying storms and conquering disease.
Shame, shame on us, if we despair or doubt!
If we shrink from our tasks—like theirs severe—
To blend two-score of races into one,
To Christianize our work and wealth and play,
To harmonize the claims of brain and brawn,
To knit together in "a solemn bond,"
And earn the name they gave, THE COMMONWEALTH!*

*What was their secret? This, that they endured
As seeing Him who is invisible.
Invisible, they still lead on their sons!*

Camp Oswegatchie—A Training Camp for Baptist Boys

O boy! Two months in the Adirondacks, where pines cover all the hills, and lakes and brooks lie wild and shy in the shadows!—Boating, fishing, swimming and rambing through the wilderness, with choice comrades and an experienced camp director!

BY J. FOSTER WILCOX, SUPERINTENDENT

IN THE spring a young lad's fancy strongly turns to thoughts of camping. And happy is the boy who can anticipate living in the heart of the Adirondacks in Camp Oswegatchie, the camp for selected boys to be established this summer by the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society. During the past few years camps have been opened for boys in all parts of the country and thousands of lads now spend their summers in God's great out-of-doors. Many of these have as their objective the making of money and in these "a coat of tan, a full stomach and a little fun" spell success. Phillips Brooks once said, "He who helps a boy become a strong and good man makes a contribution of the first order to the welfare of society," and to render such help to our Baptist boys is the purpose of our summer ministry.

It is our purpose to supplement the work of the home, church and Bible school in leading out into the larger life of Christian service our boys and young men. Applying the "Plattsburg idea" to our summer ministry, we shall call together from the Baptist churches selected lads who have the necessary elements of leadership, and who are vouched for as to character, and present to them of the objectives of the kingdom of God and reveal the denomination's interest in their development. While we shall aim to give to the boy all the pleasures of camp life, we shall also endeavor to inspire interest in, and consecration to, the higher things of life.

We know that one of the distressing problems before the church of Christ to-day is that of securing efficient leaders for the development and extension of our work. Churches, like factories and families, depend upon the infusion of new blood for their perpetuation. Out of the ranks of the young must come the leaders of tomorrow.

The average boy receives his religious instruction in the Sunday Bible school. If he is present every Sunday, he is under the direction and inspiration of the leaders but fifty-two hours a year. A little more than two days a year devoted to his specific religious education! True, there are other influences which must be considered as contributing to his religious conceptions, but we must also consider the effect of the non-religious environment in which he spends much of his time. Young men dedicate their lives to the service of Christ because of convictions, and convictions are usually the result of intensive teaching and contact with inspirational personality.

We realize the importance of directing the adolescent boy and inspiring high ideals in the most critical period of human life. It has been truly said that "early adolescence is the wonder period of life." Perfect development depends upon a fourfold growth. The boy Jesus "grew in stature, in wisdom, and in favor with God and man"—physically, intellectually, morally, spiritually and socially. Every boy should have a like growth.

Our camp will provide for the fullest possible ministry to the whole life of the boy. Many distinguished men will meet the boys and interpret to them life values and suggest vocational outlooks. These men have achieved success in their respective fields of service, and thus speak out of a rich experience.

In founding

the new denominational camp I have drawn upon the experience of years to provide all necessary equipment for the safe and proper entertainment of our selected boys, and the program for the development of the physical, mental and spiritual life of all is in no way experimental. We shall spare no pains to make the camp second to none in the country.

The Adirondack wilderness is quite the size of the whole state of Vermont, and is three-fourths as large as the kingdom of Holland. Over it is spread a primeval forest covering the land as the grass covers a garden lawn, sweeping over hill and hollow in endless undulation, burying mountains in verdure, and mantling brooks and rivers from the light of day.

A Hopi Recipe You Haven't Tried

Take a shuck of pekami; strip it like a banana; bite off a large mouthful; if you do not like it, the treat is ours

BY HARRIET CHAPEL

"HOT TAMALES! Chili con carne!" Many Americans are familiar with this street cry, and some are fond of these dishes of Mexican origin. America is especially rich in native foods, from turkey down, but few are more detectable than a corn dish similar to tamale, the recipe of which may be of interest to every housewife who has sweet-corn in her garden, or buys it in market to find it tough.

The Hopi Indians of the far southwest go every year on an excursion to their corn fields to harvest the corn. They roast it green on sagebrush coals and it is delicious. They boil it, and they harvest it ripe for grinding. In between there is a use for the corn which is just a little too tough to boil, Miss Ethel Ryan tells us.

First these half-ripe ears are husked, great care being taken to get off the green outside husks whole and even. Then with sharp knives the kernels are scraped off the cob into pans which are carried to women grinding the corn on stones. A large flat stone is set aslant in the ground and another one is used to grind the corn on it. It is ground twice, until it looks like mush, and then placed in a husk, rolled up and baked in a little stone oven underground.

When it is done, one takes a roll and unwraps it carefully to find the contents nicely browned. It can be eaten like a banana. Hot or cold, it makes a fine food and is called by the Hopi, pekami. It is just a little different from the steamed tamales and from any "white man's food."

Miss Ryan and a friend, from the Sunlight Mission, Toreva, Ariz., which is a station of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, visited one of these Christian Indian families camping at a corn field and enjoyed the novel experience of helping to harvest the corn and of sleeping out under the stars. On coming home they tried to make pekami for themselves in a regular kitchen. They put the corn through a meat grinder, adding milk, shortening and salt and baked it in the oven. The verdict was, "It is delicious." It is especially good eaten with butter.

The two women shown grinding corn in the illustration are Dolly Moran (smiling) who is a nurse in training in a government school at Phoenix, Ariz., and Jessie Cooches-nema who has been in government employ ten years as a cook at Toreva. Both are earnest Christians.

Making Our Leaders

' Wild as a broncho on the western prairies, they caught him. When they caught him they did not know what to do with him. Now, in the strength of his youth, he is moving men and institutions.

BY LEONARD W. RILEY

SOMETIMES we find ourselves so concerned with the process that we fail to take due notice of the product. The latter is what we are after and so long as we secure it we need not worry particularly if the process proves somewhat crude. Bible schools, churches, missionary organizations, colleges, universities, seminaries,—all collaborating with Christian homes,—are only so many processes that represent heavy investments of time, money and personality. Our tendency is to center our attention upon these processes, to "tinker" with all this machinery, to complain about the lack of this equipment or because of the presence of that personality. We are inexcusable provided we do not relieve these processes of all possible difficulties and impediments; but a more careful examination of the products of our present processes might lead to a keener appreciation of both the products and the processes. It is barely possible that some of the processes might merit "scrapping" but only a study of the products can justly determine that question. The following true story reveals somewhat of the processes and shows the value of the product.

On a University Campus

On the campus of one of our great eastern universities today is a young man whose name is already known in certain circles from one end of our country to the other. His ultimate goal is college work on a foreign mission field. While studying for his doctor's degree he has served as graduate secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of a well-known "school of science." He is now the general secretary of the association of that university.

Somewhere this young man had conceived the idea that colleges and universities are designed for the promotion of culture and refinement. He could not see how the serving of intoxicating liquors at various university functions ministered to that end. He believed that this custom ought to be abolished and while recognizing the difficulty of changing an established university custom dared to believe that it could be done. He took plenty of time for his task. He went to our large eastern cities and secured the cooperation of some of the most prominent citizens of our day. A "committee of seventy-one" was created of which he was the executive secretary and Ex-president William H. Taft was the chairman. The movement extended to all the educational institutions of this country and as a result no intoxicating drinks were served at the 1917 commencement of his own university and none at many other institutions. The intercollegiate prohibition organ featured this movement, presented a picture of this young man and gave to him the credit for its success.

In the Great War

Then came the great war. At home and abroad hundreds of thousands of our young men were subjected to the most dangerous and insidious temptations which ever face human beings. The Y. M. C. A. did all in its power to make and keep these young men "meet for the Master's use." Among other things it published a booklet containing seventy "Daily Readings" called "The Soldier's Spirit." These deal with all phases of the soldier's life. Each consists of a brief message coupled with an appropriate passage of Scripture. It is an excellent piece of work as its publication by the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. attests. It undoubtedly strengthened the Christian backbone of tens of thousands of our soldier boys. It was written by this young man who succeeded in changing an established university custom before he was twenty-four years of age. The same committee published another book entitled "The Practice of Friendship" whose authors were this same lad and one of the most popular professors of the university he is serving so acceptably. At Camp Ayre he proved a most successful worker among the soldiers as Y. M. C. A. secretary. Then he enlisted as a private because he believed in that way he could best prepare himself to serve his fellowmen. When the war closed he had been promoted to lieutenant. A few months ago he was offered a most important position by our Baptist board of education, but felt compelled to decline it because of a conviction that he had not yet done for the religious life of that great university all he hopes to accomplish before he sets out for his work on foreign fields. Those who won him to Christ and trained him for such service as he is rendering may be pardoned for a certain pride in him and his accomplishments.

On a Northwest Ranch

During the school year of 1909-1910 a lad of sixteen was caring for his father's ranch in a Northwest state. The father had removed to another state and had left this boy alone to care for the fruit trees, the cattle and the horses as well as himself. For some reason, conclusive for the principal, he had been denied the privileges of the high school, yet in addition to the labor on the ranch he completed half of the work of the eleventh and all of the twelfth grades and passed the examinations with credit. He was a bright young fellow, but unfortunately he had learned to drink, to smoke and to swear. Inasmuch as he did everything with his whole heart he was by means of these habits rapidly ruining his young life; being very popular he was taking many companions with him on the downward road.

The Two Pictures

Let these two pictures stand out clearly in your mind: a young man in the twenties successfully directing the religious work for the post-graduate students of one of our greatest scientific schools; successfully leading a campaign to banish intoxicating liquors from college and university functions; creating literary productions for our soldier boys which are approved and published by the international committee of the Y. M. C. A.; and a boy in his teens, alone on a Northwest ranch, manifesting unusual ability but befogging his brain with intoxicants, steeping his system in deadly nicotine and befouling God's pure atmosphere with profanity and blasphemy.

The day of miracles has not passed; that young man of the university campus and that boy on the Northwest ranch are one and the same. Here is a remarkably fine product; what processes have wrought such an amazing transformation in so short a space of time?

A Mission Church and Pastor

Situated in this Northwest community is a little Baptist church supported in part by home mission and state convention funds, a church no smaller and no larger than many another in this broad land of ours. Serving this church was a "missionary" pastor, a man no weaker and no stronger than many another in similar position, a man who might have considered his opportunities on that little field as very circumscribed! He was, however, a faithful minister of Jesus Christ who by no means minimizes the importance of winning to him the boys and girls of that community. Assisted by a brother pastor and the state missionary he conducted an old-fashioned revival meeting in which they preached Jesus Christ as the only way of escape from sin and its ruinous consequences. "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Among the fifteen or twenty who professed conversion was this lad who was caring for his father's ranch. In this way a mission church and its pastor contributed to the entrance of this youth upon his career of Christian usefulness. "Acres of Diamonds" are still at our doors!

A Christian College

The evangelist after that meeting might have departed congratulating himself upon the success of his efforts and imagining how the report of it would look in the denominational papers and let it end there. In like manner the thoughts of the pastor concerning those new converts might not have gone beyond his own immediate work. Happily both proved worthy of their high calling, for each one sat down and wrote to the president of the nearest denominational college, urging him to get into touch with those young converts. Thus they rightly conceived the measure of their responsibility.

Some weeks later the president found himself in the parlor of that pastor's modest home telling those young people about college life and the doors of opportunity which it would open to them. Our lad was not present at the beginning of the conference; word concerning it had not reached him. When it was announced that he was coming it was easy to see that the interest of that group was centered in him. He entered the room unabashed though in his working clothes while they were in their "Sunday best." This was the first question he fired at the president, and "fired" is the right word to describe it: "Do you keep the boys and girls in the same corral down there?" A picturesque way of inquiring whether the college was a co-educational institution! His presence enlivened the discussion and contributed much to the good time all had in that little parsonage that night in June, 1910.

A Winner of Souls

September following found him on the college campus. It did not look good to him, for Baptists have not yet provided it with attractive buildings. Early on the morning after his arrival he was on board the train headed elsewhere. Fortunately for the interests of the kingdom a professor heard about it and succeeded in pulling him off even after the train had started. By registration day every professor who had observed him was hoping he would be in none of his classes. He was the liveliest proposition that ever struck that campus and his Satanic Majesty had not yet released all hold upon him. But no flower ever responded to the gracious influences of the sun's rays more quickly than did this young lad to the wholesome influences of that Christian college. He soon became the most respectful and the most popular student on the campus. He remained for four years. During that time he won the state oratorical contest through hard work and persistent effort. In his senior year he was elected president of the Y. M. C. A., president of the associated student body and president of the conquest Bible class, the first and only time all these honors and responsibilities have ever been bestowed upon the same student in a single year. The altruistic spirit possessed him to a remarkable degree. Whatever the need he was the first to respond to it. Better than all else more students were led to faith in Jesus Christ through his efforts than through all the other students and professors combined. His pastor soon learned that when this lad came in with some unconverted students that was the signal for an invitation to take a stand for the Master. The invitation given he would himself lead them to the front. He graduated in June, 1914, and has since been giving a good account of himself on the campus of a great university as already indicated. A field secretary of the Y. M. C. A. who knew of his work at the college and also at the university once remarked: "I knew George cut a wide swath here, and when I heard that he was going to the University I wondered what he would do there; but say, he is cutting an even wider swath there than he did here." He was saved to serve and he seeks the best possible training for the purpose of enabling him to render a larger and fuller service to his fellowmen in the name of his Master, even Jesus.

Is It Worth While?

If that state convention had never secured any other results the conversion of this one young man would have justified the expenditure of every dollar invested in that field by both the convention and the home mission society. If that college had never sent forth any other young man to bless the world the sending forth of this one would have warranted the investment of the hundreds of thousands of dollars which have already gone into its splendid work of developing Christian leaders. Jesus said: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" If Jesus placed the whole world in the balance over against one soul, surely we may rightly place the investments made as herein indicated over against this one promising young life. But alongside this young man may be placed scores and hundreds of young men and women who have been won in the same manner and who have in this College and in similar institutions caught the spirit of Jesus Christ and gone forth into all parts of the world to serve their fellowmen in the fear of the Lord.

Camp Oswegatchie

Here, in the midst of the great coniferous forest, on the shore of the largest Adirondack lake, we will entertain our boys.

Camp Oswegatchie will open Wednesday, July 6th, and will close Wednesday, August 24th. Ten dollars per week will be charged for entertainment, and this includes board, tent, cot, blankets, boat, swimming lessons, medical care, and instruction. In fact, all necessary expense is covered.

Parents and pastors may secure a beautiful descriptive booklet by applying to the Baptist Brotherhood Federation, 23 East 26th Street, New York.

Now for the Goal! See Who Are on the Bleachers

From Assam, Burma, Bengal-Orissa, South China, East China, Japan, and Belgian Congo they send over a great cheer, urging us to run for the goal with all our might. The last burst wins—go to it!

The Missionaries Make an Appeal

WE, the undersigned foreign missionaries, on behalf of the great interests of the work which we represent, urgently request that the churches, individuals and organizations of the Northern Baptist Convention, use all diligence in these remaining days of April to complete the full payment of this year's proportion of all moneys pledged by them, or, if unpledged, such amounts as they are able to pay, on the $100,000,000 which the denomination is seeking to raise. Of the $52,000,000 already subscribed and otherwise provided for, the allotment for the year now closing is $12,000,000. Work has been planned and carried on in expectation that this amount would be realized. Should this expectation fail, consequences of the most serious nature, and possible disaster, face our society and our work abroad. We, therefore, appeal for an utmost endeavor to complete the payment of this first $12,500,000 on a 100 per cent basis and without delay. Will you not place your prayers and your gifts along side of our lives as an investment so that together we may hasten the coming of the kingdom and the appearing of the glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ? In His name we appeal, and we subscribe ourselves,

Anniversary Week

AT the session in Buffalo last year the Northern Baptist Convention voted that the week, April 24 to May 1, 1921, should be celebrated throughout the denomination as ANNIVERSARY WEEK. The convention was deeply impressed that the denomination had taken the greatest forward step in its history. It had recently pledged more than $50,000,000 of its resources toward the extension of the kingdom of Christ. That action indicated a new attitude upon the part of thousands of members toward the Great Commission of our Lord. In the judgment of the convention this was an event worthy of annual recognition.

The anniversary week has now arrived. The attention of all the churches has been called to this action of the convention, by the state boards of promotion, and programs have been sent to all the churches. There are many churches which will need no urging to give proper recognition to this event. Those are the churches which entered heartily into the New World Movement and put forth their best efforts for a great achievement. These churches had such a deep experience and were filled with such great joy that they will spontaneously enter into the celebration of the anniversary. They have experienced such an advance in all their work during the year that they can not fail to rejoice.

There are many other churches which did not succeed last year in attaining their ideals. Anniversary week is full of promise for many of these. Other churches have shown them the way, and revealed the possibilities of what God can do with men who are fully given up to him. If these churches would use anniversary week to take their places with the churches which have done their full part, this week would bring as much joy to the kingdom of heaven as did the week one year ago. It is a good time to come up to the help of the Lord.

The Home Stretch

ONE year ago at this time we were engaged in our financial canvass for $100,000,000. We achieved a great victory. Despite the fact that only a small per cent of our churches pledged their full allotments, a large number of them achieved a standard of giving which they had never dreamed of before. While we did not secure the full $100,000,000 in pledges, we reached a point far in excess of anything to which our denomination had ever set its hand. Since that time many churches which were not then prepared to participate in the canvass have done so and the total assets of the New World Movement are now over $55,000,000.

But the important thing is not how much did we pledge, but how much will we pay. It is not the promise but the payment that counts. This is a case where "money talks" and it talks so loud that we can not hear what people say. Will Baptists prove that their word is as good as their money?

Our fiscal year closes on April 30. In accordance with ancient custom there will be five days of grace to accommodate the churches which wish to have the last week in April to finish the collections of their pledges for the first year, but the books of all the state offices will positively close at five o'clock on May 5. This gives us two weeks in which to finish our year's work.

We do not fail to recognize that the financial conditions of the country are different than they were one year ago.

We were then just beginning to pass out of our period of great prosperity. Since then shops have closed, prices have fallen, profits have dropped and many have been out of work. On the other hand, most people have had plenty of money to spend. Few of us have lacked anything that we really needed. Surely we cannot make the financial depression an excuse for failure to meet our obligation to God and the extension of his kingdom. The needs of the world are pressing in upon us as they never did before. Never has the call of the world sounded louder in the ears of the church than it does today.

On the basis of the pledges of a year ago there should be paid in by April 30, not less than $12,500,000. The payments have come in well, far better than in any year of our history, but there remain at least $4,000,000 to be received during April if our receipts are to equal our expectancy on the basis of pledges. We hope that the full amount will be paid.

We make an appeal for the fulfillment of this expectancy, not for the sake of making a great record. That is the least of reasons. Nor do we appeal for the success of the New World Movement. It is the work which lies back of that Movement which is the burden upon our hearts. We are thinking of the children of America who ought to have the chance for an education to fit themselves for lives of usefulness and leadership, and for those millions of children in our midst who are growing to citizenship without any adequate training in those great moral and spiritual principles which make life worth while and which have made the citizenship of America great.

When we ask that these pledges be paid in full, we are thinking also of our missionaries out on the battle front, our own children who have gone out in our stead, and whom we promised to support, to whom we solemnly pledged, when they cast off the lines, that we would furnish them suitable homes in which to live because their lives were precious in our sight; adequate hospitals in which to minister to the weary multitudes which throng them, if only they may touch the hem of their garments; sufficient school rooms in which to educate a generation which shall know righteousness; abundant chapels in which to proclaim the good news of the salvation of our Christ; sufficient helpers and fellow workers, so that they may be able to meet the demands made upon them and not break down before their time and be invalided home, broken in health and in heart.

It is these and many others of whom we are thinking when we appeal to our Baptist people to see that before April 30 their pledges for this year are paid in full. "We will surely perform our vows that we have voiced."

THE GENERAL BOARD OF PROMOTION.

Better Stuff Than Mahogany

In the forests of Salvador there are mahogany, logwood, cedar and other valuable woods. But the best timber in the country is the people. They have good stuff in them. Christianize and educate them and they will become important factors in the Kingdom of God.

We Have Friends at Hopo, Anyway

Increasing friendliness and confidence in the Baptist missionaries is being shown by the people of Hopo, South China. The condition of the Hopo church is indicated by the fact that it has called a native ordained pastor. And this is despite the interruption of recurring passages through the province of bodies of troops. Hopo is sending its boys to Kapin and Kakleh academies, and others, on scholarships, to France. New arrivals of workers from home not long ago were heartily greeted, and the completion of a new school for women, speaks for itself.

Boys Cannot all Squeeze in

Only a small percentage of the boys who desire to enter the night school at Yokohama can be accommodated. A larger plant would make the school self-supporting. Japan is awake to the failure of her old religions to fill her spiritual needs, and is ready for greater Christian efforts. The night classes in English furnish one of the entering wedges for Christianity's message.

Fining Christians Goes Out of Fashion

Persecution of Christians—sounds like ancient history, doesn't it?—has met with a setback along the Burmese-Chinese frontier, says Dr. W. M. Young, writing from Lashio, Upper Burma, a spot so far inland that it takes three months for his letters to reach America. Local officials had been fining and otherwise persecuting natives on the Chinese side of the border and Dr. Young went on a ten-day voyage to see the "man higher up." Four hundred baptisms were reported and 300 more were examined and received for baptism, waiting only the word from the official about persecutions! The friendly Chinese official whom Dr. Young saw assured Dr. Young that land would be granted for work at Mong Len, over the border in China. And Mong Len is a Buddhist center!

Salvation in Salvador

After three years and a half in Salvador, Rev. and Mrs. F. L. Humphrey are able to report one organized church of twenty-one members in San Miguel; six congregations with regular services at important centers of population; three other places where meetings are held occasionally; a book and Bible depository established in San Miguel; a Sunday-school that had during 1920 an average attendance of twenty-nine with three classes; a native worker located at a convenient center after sixteen years as Bible colporter; the goodwill of the masses of the people and the leading classes; the respect of government officials who guarantee protection and give liberty to carry on the work; the distribution of a thousand pages of tracts and Christian papers every week of the year; four buildings rented in which are held weekly twelve meetings and serving as centers of Christian influence.

Age No Handicap

Age is no handicap in the estimation of the members of the Baptist church at Onelda, N. Y. That congregation has just called to its pastorate Dr. J. B. Moody, who is 86 years old.

But Please Don't Send Sacks

Sackcloth, untrimmed with ashes, is the present fashionable garb in Tshumbiri, Africa. Miss Kathryn A. Metzger of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society declares.

"The clothing problem has been a vital one, owing to the high price of cotton goods, and delays in receiving goods," she writes. "So a kind friend, captain of one of the river steamers, presented us with 200 flour sacks, rather a sorry lot, but with possibilities. We sent the schoolboys to the river to wash them, then hung them in the sun. After that they were ripped apart, then washed, boiled, and semi-dried, coming out quite white and nice. The outcome was 80 loin cloths for girls, boys, and inland teachers, and 22 shirts for school boys. But do not let anyone go to the expense of sending flour sacks to Africa."

Richmond, Va., is Baptist Stronghold

More than one-third of the population of Richmond, Va., belongs to the Baptist churches, it is announced. In that city there are twenty-eight white Baptist churches and thirty-seven Negro Baptist churches. The combined membership of the sixty-five churches is 60,355, while the population of the city is 172,000.

China Famine Week

In reply to word from the big famine area in North China that the crisis in the relief situation has been reached, and that international and other funds have practically been exhausted by purchases of grain for consumption within the next three weeks, the first eight days of May will be designated by the American Committee for China Fund and the church co-operating committee as "China Famine Week." In these eight days scores of activities by organizations and individuals in every part of the country will be centered on aid for China's starving millions. The week will begin on Sunday with appeals from the pulpits of churches. In many cases there will be special exercises in which Sunday schools will take part. Personal sacrifices will be emphasized to children by superintendents, backed by similar effort by church clubs and auxiliaries.

Foreign Speaking Baptists will Confer

The Northern German Conference will meet at McClusky, June 1-5. Central Dakota German Conference will meet at Eureka, S. D., June 1-5. North Dakota Swedish Conference will meet at Rutland, June 8-12. The Dakota German Conference will meet at Parkston, South Dakota, beginning June 14. The North Dakota Russian Conference will meet at Max, June 25-27. The North Dakota Norwegian Conference will meet at Powers Lake, July 8-10. The North Dakota State Convention will meet at Minot, July 13-17. The North Dakota Young People's Assembly will also be held at Minot, July 17-19.

Keeping Faith with God and Men

My pledge is a covenant between me and my God, and an agreement between me and my brethren in a great cause. And all the causes dear to me and my master are involved in my keeping faith in the payment of my pledge.—Rev. J. B. Gambrell.

The Usual Experience

Northville, Mich., has been sharing the experience of the churches that have participated in the New World Movement. This church of eighty-four members was given a quota of $3,000 which was pledged, and now it is rejoicing in great prosperity. The amount sent forward this year is ten times the amount which has been given to benevolences in several years past. Pledges for current expenses have doubled, attendance at church and Sunday school has doubled, twenty-one have united with the church. The women have bought a new furnace and there is a nest egg of $1,000 toward a new church building.

How the Missionaries Give

Christian people must give to send the gospel when they know the need. Can anything be more significant than the gifts of the missionaries to the New World Movement?

The annual missionary conference of Bengal-Orissa was held in Belasere. For three days the time was packed with papers, discussions and motions. One important thing decided was that the missionaries should join in the effort to raise the $45,000,000 still needed for the New World Movement. A paper was started for money and pledges, the latter to be paid during the next four years. The Belasere missionaries pledged Rs. 3000. (About $870 at the present rate of exchange.) These men and women have given their lives and with their meager salaries they are giving to the whole program of the denomination.

Our New World Movement Moves

Sixty-two Baptist interests share in the co-operative beneficence of the Northern Baptists. The year 1920-1921 is the opening year of a new era for the denomination that stretches fair and far into the future. Preserve this study in budgets for reference.

Financial Report to March 20, 1921

How I Ascertain the Will of God

By GEORGE MULLER

FIRST: I seek at the beginning to get my heart into such a state that it has no will of its own in regard to a given matter.

Nine-tenths of the trouble with people is just here. Nine-tenths of the difficulties are overcome when our hearts are ready to do the Lord's will, whatever it may be. When one is truly in this state, it is usually but a little way to the knowledge of what God's will is.

Second: Having done this, I do not leave the result to feeling or simple impression. If I do so, I make myself liable to great delusions.

Third: I seek the will of the Spirit of God through or in connection with the Word of God.

The Spirit and the Word must be combined. If I look to the Spirit alone without the Word, I lay myself open to great delusions also. If the Holy Ghost guides us at all, he will do it according to the Scriptures and never contrary to them.

Fourth: I take into account providential circumstances. These often plainly indicate God's will in connection with his Word and Spirit.

Fifth: I ask God in prayer to reveal his will to me aright.

Sixth: Thus, through prayer to God, the study of the Word, and reflection, I come to a deliberate judgment according to the best of my ability and knowledge, and if my mind is thus at peace and continues so after two or three more petitions, I proceed accordingly.

In trivial matters and in transactions involving most important issues, I have found this method always effective.

All's Well that Ends Well

By JAMES FRANCIS GOODMAN

ONCE while going through a museum of art, on turning into a side gallery I noticed a woman seated at an easel with a painting before her. At once I was displeased with the picture's disproportionate and daubly appearance.

Passing on, I wondered that so unskilled an artist should be allowed to practice in so beautiful a place devoted to finished excellencies of art.

Considerable time was spent in examining other features in various parts of the many-chambered building when finally and unknowingly I re-entered from another angle the former room and again saw the same artist at her work. She was now stepping aside just after having put the delicate, finishing touches on the very picture that previously had seemed to be only a displeasing daub. My former disgust instantly changed to delight, for where at first I had thought the canvas dirtily besmirched, I now beheld among rifted clouds a band of beautiful, smiling angels winging their way earthward with a message of love.

How marvelously it is all like real life! We are God's artists, and we are painting better than others realize—better oftentimes than we ourselves know. To our Master we stand, or fall.

The first view of the picture reminds me of God's and man's apparent failure as chronicled in the book of Genesis; the second view is like its counterpart in the finished beauties mentioned in the book of Revelation. Where first there seemed only disastrous defeat, there now shines out victorious success.

Neglect not the Tap Roots

By D. W. BEVERLY

WHILE sojourning in that beautiful orange belt of California, east of the city of Los Angeles, we asked a well-informed orange grower what he considered the reason for the extremely small oranges found throughout the region this year. He replied that many theories had been advanced, but that his opinion was that the small oranges were due in part to the extra heavy crop on the trees but mainly to the fact that the very slight rains of the past winter had not sufficiently soaked the tap roots of the trees. He said fertilization, surface watering by irrigation, pruning, cover crops and diseases had all been looked after as usual, and that the trees showed no effect at present except in the smallness of fruit.

Perhaps here is a trouble in the modern church. Multiplicity of things to do, multiplicity of meetings to attend, multiplicity of machinery to keep going, seems to confuse the mind and heart and keeps the home drained of spiritual life; and the slight Bible study and family worship from season to season are not sufficient to keep the tap roots of the church thoroughly soaked with the living water of the Word. This can continue but for a few seasons without greatly damaging the fruit-bearing powers of the cause of Christ.

In the busy rush of modern times the church is rushing also, and her ministers are crowded to death with "multiplicity" and often cannot find time for the homes, and when they do call, it is generally in the interests of the church, not of the home. It would be wonderful if the minister had time for the folks and the folks had time for the minister in the common concerns of spiritual life. In these days it is hurry home to eat a bite or to catch a nap, and hurry back to church or world to another meeting.

Oh, for the time to come when the living waters of the Word and of the Holy Spirit are allowed to saturate the home and personal life and give the much-needed fruit-bearing power! Grant our prayer, Almighty God! Then will the "joy of thy salvation" be restored, and we "shall teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto thee."

Scab Christians

By C. M. THOMPSON, JR.

MY CHURCH is afflicted in part by wives without husbands. Not that women are an affliction but that husbands are not with them. This is a problem more or less throughout the country. The invariable reply that comes to me from two or three of these husbands is that they can be just as good Christians outside as inside the church. They seem to think that the church is a place to be constantly getting something and giving nothing.

The other day I was talking to one of these men who gave me the same line of talk. I asked him straightway if he belonged to the union because he always got something out of it? "Why no," was his reply. "Does it make you a better workman?" "Not at all." "Are there any hypocrites in the union?" "Yes, indeed." "As many as in the church?" "Sure." "And yet you belong to it?" "Yes." "And why?" "We have the union to help each other and to help the other fellow." "What do you call a fellow that doesn't belong to the union?" "He's a scab." "And you know that union men hate a

For a Birthday

I KEEP no reckoning of the years
As they pass by.

Life's seasons, with their smiles and tears,

Unnumbered fly;
So whether twenty be the score—
Or twenties two—or three—or four—
Still young am I!

But ah! the days are mine to hold
In loving fee,
And all their richness I am bold
To feel and see!
I hail each morn the added round.
And in their wealth today is found
This thought of thee!

Couldst thou but gain the good I pray,
My prayers might cease;
Thy birthday would become a day
Of heart's release.
Not wealth nor honors wish I thee—
But loftier wish; that thou mayst be
With self at peace!

"As For Me and My House, We—"

I. THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN STATES HIS VIEW

YOU might as well face it once for all—this New World Movement of ours makes a Baptist notice whether his pocketbook has been Christianized yet!

It's this way: Supposing I had a practical device in which I thoroughly believed. You wouldn't catch me neglecting an opportunity to carry it into the 36 states of America and the 14 foreign countries overseas, where my firm had such an "open sesame" as Northern Baptists now have—not if it were a matter of selling steel knives or harvesting machines or soap! You'd find my agents combing the globe and drumming up trade in every possible odd corner, while I sat at home gladly financing the business end which would inevitably bring in record returns.

What I gave, I have;
What I spent, I had;
What I kept, I lost.

Yet, I put it to you as man to man: What device is honestly as practical as Christianity? Cutlery, eh? Why, Christianity offers mankind the word of God, sharper than any two-edged sword to divide truth from error, and you and I each know a hundred stories of consciences aroused and of souls quickened from the dead by the silent or the spoken word. Tractors and harvesters? Well, as I see it, Christianity goes into a world with fields white for a record harvest, and although the laborers are precious few, yet everything from book-learning to vegetable-raising is sown in the minds of hungry peoples, with astonishing results. Did you ever cast an eye over the statistics of our home and foreign societies? Then you can bear me witness that you're getting a return on your investments out of all proportion to the paltry dollars you put up. As for soap! You know as well as I do that Christianity says to down-and-outers everywhere: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow," and proves it!—proves it by 72,000 caste and out-caste men of India who have faced persecution and famine and sword to join our Baptist churches; proves it by 75,000 Baptists in Burma who have been cleansed from dense heathendom, and by other thousands the world around, including our own United States.

So because, as a Baptist business man, I plainly see that Christianity is the only practical device for saving the world, I therefore believe we ought to carry through our New World Movement program to the last penny of the $100,000,000. We've only reached the half-way mark so far. It's mighty poor policy to cripple the work just when opportunities are widest open. So, as for me and my house, we're remembering that—"the King's business requires haste!"

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

II. THE LADY OF THE HOUSE RECOMMENDS IT

As I looked into the nursery the other day and saw those safe and healthy little bits of humanity playing around so blithely, I had a piercing vision of other places where childhood is neither safe nor comfortable—drab, filthy, vile places—and weak-kneed, I sat down in my own chimney corner and began mentally dismissing all the doctors from town, silencing the board of health, abandoning the sewage system, clogging the plumbing and the gas-pipes, smashing the draught-protecting windows and the fly-protecting screens, locking the doors of all hospitals, imprisoning all the nurses, destroying every pill in all the drug-stores, boarding up the schoolhouses, mutilating all the libraries, nailing up all the churches, silencing all Sunday-school teachers, burning all the Bibles in one gigantic bonfire—and behold! it was no longer a place where I dared to live, or breathe, or have my being.

So it crept into my consciousness that those other mothers in the Land-of-Minus-Quantities, steeped in generations of ignorance and superstition though they are, yet desire good gifts for their children, also. Little by little it has dawned on me that if I selfishly fail to support our New World Movement it will be as if I heard a voice saying, "Suffer the little children to come unto me—forbid them not," while I deliberately push everybody's children but my own off into outer darkness. But no, that is unthinkable. Any Christian mother is more than the mother of her own little houseful; so, as for me and my house, we will—"feed His lambs."

We give Thee but Thine own,
What'er the gift may be;
All that we have is Thine alone,
A trust, O Lord, from Thee.

III. "SEVENTEEN" WON'T BE A SLACKER

That's one word I hate. To have a man-size job put up to you, tinker at it aimlessly, then quit—and forget it.

Maybe I would never have seen it this way myself, but a fellow was up in my den last Sunday afternoon when downstairs my sister began playing hymns on the piano, and as she struck up "Onward Christian Soldiers," I started in to sing it fairly lustily, when he snapped: "Oh, dry up! You and your 'Like a Mighty Army' make me tired."

"Tired?" I repeated, "What's eating you, anyhow? I'm not ashamed of singing hymns. I like them."

"Sure, and that's why you're queer specimens of Christians, you fellows that shout 'Like A Mighty Army' so vigorously, but never give a thought to the front line trenches. Imagine a real army half full of lukewarm soldiers, who neither knew nor cared what was going on. Suppose a friendly non-combatant comes along and says: 'That was some battle your regiment won yesterday—how much ground did you gain?' 'Was there a battle?' this lukewarm doughboy yawns, vaguely, 'you see I don't do any fighting, I just doll up for dress parade on Sunday mornings!' Soft, isn't he? But I tell you, Jim, I'm not a church member myself, but I've been watching you Baptist chaps in our class to see how you'd line up for this big new church movement, and of all the lukewarm soldiers, you're the prizes. You'd get fired from a real army in about 'steen minutes. Whew! I hate slackers."

Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare.

"So do I, for that matter," I growled, "and I can't see why you're making me out to be one!"

"Easy! In an army, suppose the general points out a certain town to be taken, doesn't every blooming soldier bang his little gun at that place until it's taken? Sure he does! Well, as near as I can see, old top, that's about what God is putting up to you Baptists now. He's pointing out certain spots all over the world for you to win. I've given that 'Survey' of yours the once-over, 'The World at the Cross-roads', too,—and it's some grand little job you've got on your hands; interesting as the dickens, really. But I don't find you warming up to it much. It's no incentive to an outsider like me to join this thing that's supposed to be like a mighty army when all the soldiers I chum with are slackers."

Which was straight from the shoulder you'll admit. So I gave that "Survey" the once-over, myself. And I never knew before that we're responsible as Baptists for certain definite work all over the world. I never knew that our schools in the Orient are so jam full of students that they're packed like sardines in the dormitories, with disappointed pupils being sent back home to wait until we shall out enough coppers to make those schools sizeable. Down in Porto Rico is a grand little school, but overflowing. Over in Japan we've been so plagued slow building decent churches that we're still saying to any Japanese who get curious about this new Christian business: "Up one flight, please!" But they think, and I back 'em up, that it's sheer punk to expect to lure folks into churches that are tucked in some ramshackle old store building, around the corner from anywhere, and up one flight at that! Also it seems there's a regular Pittsburgh in India, where the largest steel mills in the Orient are located at some unpronounceable city, where every imaginable caste and race of workmen are rubbing elbows; and the only persons responsible for the religious end of this wicked mushroom city are Baptists. Now that I'm keen about some of these definite practical Baptist schemes, I've quit lukewarm soldiering, and as for me and my house, we'll see this thing through, and "fight the good fight!"

The Young Reserves

Winning the N. W. M.

By "PEGGY"

Part III

YOU'VE heard how Bill earned his $25 last year to pay his New World Movement pledge, so now I must tell you how I earned mine. Perhaps you'll remember how we figured out that $25 divided by 365 days means only seven cents a day, which makes it seem an easier sum to earn than talking about dollars. Bill and I each have a tiny allowance from father, and I managed to save several car fares every week by walking to Sunday-school and to my music lessons—it only meant starting a little earlier! Then I stopped buying so many all-day suckers and ice cream cones, which saved a lot of seven "centses," of course. But the bulk of my money I earned in ways so very easy that I'm wondering if a good many other Young Reserve girls couldn't copy.

First of all came the "load of gravel." You would never, never, never guess what this was, so I shall have to tell you that we have some neighbors called Mr. and Mrs. Stone, and there are twin babies in their house—the pinkest, gurgliest little mites you ever saw. One Sunday when they were tucked side by side in their baby-carriage, with the proud parents pushing them along, our Uncletim called out: "How do you do, Mr. and Mrs. Stone; how's that nice load of gravel today?" For of course gravel means "little Stones"! Certainly I never guessed then how familiar I was to become with that particular load of gravel. But one day Mrs. Stone was telling mother how worn out she was with her hundred and one duties—forever cooking and sweeping and cleaning and bathing the twins, with no spare time or strength to wheel them in the fresh air as she ought to do. Moreover, hard as she had tried, not a girl could she find willing to trundle the babies for an hour or two every afternoon. Whereupon mother instantly said: "Ask Peggy!"—which she did.

And so, after that I trundled that precious load of gravel all up and down our neighborhood for two hours on four afternoons every week, at five cents an hour. Oh such fun as I had! for Polly Prim often came along and we'd pretend I was Highest Chief Nursemaid to the Queen of Echoland, and Polly Prim was the Princess Pauline Patricia Ernestine Alicia de Beppo. Oh, the wicked plots from which we pretended to rescue those cunning twins! for of course royalty is so dreadfully unpopular nowadays that we had no trouble in thinking up the most desperate schemes. Meanwhile the placid twins never dreamed they were princes in disguise. They cooed and gurgled and slept, with new roses in their cheeks after every ride. And once a week when Mrs. Stone paid me, she always kissed me heartily for the splendid rest I had let her have.

My most unexpected way of earning money was gathering flowers for Mrs. Ely. She is a dear old lady, shut indoors lately, forced to lie in bed all day long. So once last May when father took us out in the woods to pick violets, mother suggested my putting some in a quaint little basket, to take to Mrs. Ely. For while she's not poor, she's very, very lonely.

"Oh!" she cried when she smelled my violets, and somehow it was just as if she had said the longest possible sentence of thank-yous. Then she sighed: "It's very queer, Peggy, but all week I've been saying 'I'd give my last nickel to smell some woody violets!' And here they are! So won't you let me give you the nickel, dear, for your mother tells me you're trying to earn a lot of money for this new Baptist movement."

"Oh, but I couldn't possibly take money for a present, I'm afraid," I sighed, "you see, I can't be paid for love, can I?"

"No, that's true," she said gently, "and I'll be happy to keep these as a gift, Peggy; but next week they'll be withered, and so what about your keeping this little basket filled with some kind of flowers all the year round for five cents a week?"

I simply stared at her, for surely it was the beautifullest, unexpected-est idea in the whole world! "Oh, I'd love to!" I cried, "maybe I can surprise you with something different every week. But do you really and truly think it will be worth a nickel?"

"Every cent of it," she smiled, "for I do miss the woody flowers and the pretty wayside weeds and the lovely garden things."

So I've had the loveliest time all year bringing her apple blossoms one week; lilacs the next; flags, later on; pansies, another time; then daisies; brown-eyed Susans; clover; woody ferns; nasturtiums and zinnias from my own garden; golden rod; wild asters; butter-and-eggs, the dear yellow weed; Queen Anne's lace, the dainty white weed—Oh, it was no trouble at all in the summer to find new things for her. Then in the autumn I scoured the woods for the orange bitter-sweet berries as well as the cheerful red winter-green berries, I found her graceful twigs with gorgeous-colored leaves and various kinds of pretty seed-pods that looked very attractive in her basket. But when winter came I feared I would have to stop earning my weekly five cents for lack of flowers, but mother showed me how to turn certain twigs into the most comical twig people with dancing legs and beckoning arms, by pasting on faces and hands cut from magazines. Other twigs were made attractive by pasting tiny tissue paper blossoms here and there. Then there were pine tree boughs with cones, holly, mistletoe, etc. So my "job" lasted all year, and will keep up this year, too.

And the nicest part of it all was that every week as Mrs. Ely gave me the nickel she would say: "Where's the money to go this week, Peggy?" (For Bill and I used to search through the "Survey" every single week to find some new object to give to! He generally chose something for boys—like the Swatow Academy in China, the Mabie Memorial in Japan, Jorhat School in Assam, Jaro School in the Philippines, and to hear Bill talk you'd think he knew every scholar by name. Somehow you do begin to love them harder when they become yours!)

"Well," I answered Mrs. Ely one week. "I'm going to give this nickel to Honduras—down in Central America, you know. For that whole state has belonged to Baptists for two years now, and we haven't done a single thing yet.—Not a school or a church, or a missionary."

"Ah me!" she would sigh, and I could see she was getting as worked up as I was. Somewhere in the Bible it says "A little child shall lead them," and although I'm not little any more, I could plainly see Mrs. Ely was planning to do things herself for all these places of ours; for once she asked me to get her a copy of the "Survey" for herself.

LIVING CLOSE TO CHRIST

I John 3:18-24; John 15:7-10.

"If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."

Suggested Literature

"Christ in Everyday Life" by Bosworth, $1.15; "The Meaning of Service" by Fosdick, $1.25.

The Christian Ideal of Life

"To face a true ideal in life and fail to be moved by it means deterioration and ultimate disaster. To recognize a duty and fail to do it means the decay of the sense of obligation, and results in personal ruin, one ought to be afraid of not doing what he ought to do."—Bosworth.

Living close to Christ involves more than a series of great emotions. There are some people in the world who are quite sure that they are not living close to the Master unless they are in a state of holy ecstasy. Such folks are quite often loudest in prayers in the mid-week meeting, but they are short on a program of real service.

Living close to Christ involves more than an initial experience at conversion. The Christian life is a progressive thing. It was so with Paul; it was so with the great heroes and heroines who have moved this old world toward God. The growing Christian will follow the injunction, "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God."

Living close to Christ involves a worthwhile program of Bible study, of prayer, of worship, of stewardship of money and life. Such a program for a well-rounded Christian life will lead the individual to pray often.

"O Lord, fix the fundamental truths of the spiritual world so firmly upon my mind that they may be suggested to me at every turn in daily life."

There are today so many distracting things. Life seems to be one great whirl. Moral standards seem to be broken. Humanity in many parts of the world is bowed down by sorrow and suffering. Surely we must do our part in rebuilding a new world and in the midst of all that annoys and distracts we must pray: "O Lord, give me the deep joy that comes from the consciousness of having such connection with Thee in the inner life as will enable me to help other men in their times of need. Make me this day Thy minister in some matter, great or small, as shall best please Thee."

Summer Hints

Summer Training Camps

These have come to be a large part of the denominational work. Young people's societies in all parts of the territory should plan to have representatives at these training camps which will be held in many states this summer.

The Summer Assembly Aftermath

Perhaps one of the most excellent evidence of summer assembly work can be seen in a splendid feature of the work which is carried on at present in the First Baptist Church, Toledo, Ohio. This church is located in a down-town district where a great many children of foreign born parents live.

For a number of years it has conducted a very successful daily vacation Bible school during the summer months.

Last summer a number of the young girls with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Von Behren, the pastor's secretary, attended the summer assembly at Granville, Ohio. The inspiration which they received was immediately revealed in plans which were made to continue some of the effective work accomplished in the vacation school. This resulted in what is known as the "Saturday Afternoon Girls' Club."

This club is composed in large part of girls of different nationalities, Greeks, Syrians, Italians, and Jews. There are children from the different faiths, Catholics, Greek and Roman, Greek Orthodox, Hebrews and Protestants.

The effort has been made to make every meeting attractive to the children from the standpoint of music, games and illustrated entertainment. At the same time work in Bible training and missionary education is carried on through dramatization.

DR. ALLYN K. FOSTER
Student Secretary of the Board of Education

The aim is to develop the girls in all particulars, physically, mentally, and spiritually. Health talks and mental drills are a part of each program.

By methods which do not appear to the children, character is developed along the lines of unselfish service, and the attainment of pure ideals.

Recognition is taken of the fact that the great majority of these children come from homes where the higher aspirations and the more beautiful things in life are absent.

Plans are being considered at the present time to enlarge this work and have a department for the boys. A motion picture machine will soon be installed and once a month a special meeting will be held whereby our purpose will be accomplished through the vision.

One of the splendid results of our Saturday class is seen in the access it gives the workers to the homes and parents of these children. This aspect of the work promises to be the solution, in a large measure, of the problem of reaching the foreign women, which problem is recognized in the great work of Americanization, as one of the most difficult.

Oregon Special

The Corvallis, Ore., B. Y. P. U. is doing a splendid work, both in its devotional and social activities. There is a vast field still untouched among the thousands of students attending the Oregon Agricultural College, hundreds of whom have registered no church preference. A forward step in the direction of reaching these, has been taken in the carrying out of a well-planned social program. It is desired that the campus folk may have a standing invitation to spend Friday evening at the Baptist church in fellowship with Christian young people.

The B. Y. P. U. is divided into five groups, which are in turn responsible for the Sunday evening devotional meetings, but for the social side of the work, each group is sub-divided, once. This distributes the work among ten social committees, instead of heaping it upon one, and each committee or group is responsible for one social in ten weeks. This brings into play all kinds of originality, variety and ever-fresh enthusiasm, and has resulted in a series of Friday night socials, each of which seems just a little finer and funnier than the last. And there is no tired, jaded, disgusted "social committee" wondering, "What in the world shall we do next?" and scouring the earth for "something new" because, forsooth, many minds and many personalities, like "many hands," make light work.

Oh, of course, we have a standing social committee—only 90 per cent of the time it is just sitting, as it were—its

International Uniform Lesson for May 8

REST AND RECREATION

Lev. 23:39-43.; Deut. 5:12-15.; Mk. 6:31-32.
Golden Text: Zech. 8:5.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The text of the lesson is taken from both Old and New Testaments. There is no direct teaching in the Bible about recreation. In fact the Bible was never intended to be a compendium of directions about work and play, buying and selling, building and planting and a thousand other things. The one theme of the Bible is God. It is a revelation of God. There is danger of making the Bible teach too much.

The Lesson Taught

The lesson may be profitably taught from several angles; but the three suggestions which follow are offered with the hope that they may be helpful to teachers.

Recreation and Relaxation

The tension of body, mind and spirit needs to be released at regular intervals. Sleep is a relaxative. But sleep is not enough. In the waking hours, relaxation which comes with the right kind and amount of recreation is absolutely necessary to health and vigor. Some business organizations are beginning to learn the economic value of recreation, and are making wise provision for it among their employees. No one now needs to argue for the necessity of recreation. Dr. Richard Cabot has made a genuine contribution to the subject of recreation in his excellent book on "What Men Live By." He shows that men live by four things which are all-inclusive, viz., work, play, love, worship. The relaxative value of recreation is real wealth because it makes for weal, and it is real health because it heals body, mind and spirit. A boy bent all the time will lose its resilience. Many American men die long before their time because they neglect recreation. Play at its best is aimless activity. A dog chasing its own tail, and a small boy in vacation time when not having to think of school or any other duties is free to roam or fish or swim, furnish the examples for grown men who too often carry into their recreations the passion to win or excel.

Recreation and Education

The lesson text from the Old Testament comes under this head. The memorial feasts of the Jews were educational. In fact, the decalogue's provision for the observance of the Sabbath is based upon its educational value. "And thou shalt remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and Jehovah thy God brought thee out thence by a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm: therefore Jehovah thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." The same thing is true of the feast of tabernacles described in Lev. 23: 39-43. It is expressly stated that it was intended to keep alive in the minds of the Jews their deliverance from Egypt, Lev. 23: 43. Our own Fourth of July is such a day, and its recreation should be so organized by community action and by national legislation that all commercialism seen in the sale of explosives would be prohibited, and the historical value of the day enhanced by wise and constructive planning. The educational value of recreation is not appreciated. If it were, the play life of the people and especially of the boys and girls would be more carefully supervised. The picture show and the dance are two forms of modern recreation which present a problem of far-reaching significance. Their large appeal is to the youth of our country who are in the formative stage. This makes the problem all the more serious. What can be done about it? Condemnation of the dance and censoring of the film are not enough. What constructive measures are possible? Is there a substitute for the modern dance which will retain all the recreative pleasure of the dance without its moral dangers? Can the "movie" be redeemed? Is it possible to make work and study so much like play that the people who crave the stimulation of the dance and the thrill of the film will be cured from the habit of such intoxicants? Have the church and the Christian ministry really tackled this problem in a constructive fashion? It is easy enough to say, "Don't," but that does not solve the problem.

Recreation and Legislation

Much has been done for recreation by the nation in keeping for the people to whom they belong lakes, rivers, mountains, national parks; states have wisely followed the lead of the nation in this direction; but the cities have caught the vision and are annually translating it into parks, playgrounds, swimming pools, gardens, cities beautiful. But the cities providing the places of recreation are still far behind in providing for the general and organized use of such places. Policemen are necessary guardians of public peace and safety; but is it not barely possible that fewer policemen would be required if more directors of recreation were employed by our cities? The young people need guides to supervise their play more than they need guardians to keep them from stealing property or taking life. What can the church do to secure the necessary legislation to provide for the direction and supervision of recreation which will really re-create?

CONVERSATION SIX

By F. F. PETERSON

Query; Why should one join the Christian church?

Scriptures: Read together Acts 2:41-47, Rom. 6:1-5, Col. 1:18, Eph. 1:22.

FOR home work ask the class to find the names and locate six churches mentioned in the Acts.

What kind of people were members? Race, occupation, etc. What is a church? Why are churches needed? Imagine your community without a Christian church? Name countries where there are few or none? How are children treated? What is a woman's position?

Have a debate, Resolved that one is a better Christian if he joins the church.

What offices are necessary for a church organization? Name the six first deacons? Acts 6, Phil. 1:1. Why were they appointed? What are they supposed to do in your church? What kind of men should they be? I Tim. 3:8. Why do we have preachers in the church? How does a preacher or a missionary know he is called of God? If you were thinking of this office what would you think to be a necessary preparation?

How was the early church supported? What do we mean by stewardship? How much should a Christian give to God's work? What is tithing? What does the Scripture say about giving? Matt. 10:8, Lu. 6:38, Acts 20:35.

State six reasons why a Christian should give? II Cor. 9:7.

Why do people go to church? What are the parts of church worship? Why do we have a choir or special music? Why do we have responsive readings? What is the reason for the "long" prayer? Whom does the preacher represent? What to your mind makes a good sermon? Why does the preacher have a text?

Who are to be baptized? Why are Christians baptized? What does baptism mean? When was the Lord's Supper instituted? What is its value? Who may partake of the Lord's Supper? Why?

What work is your church doing in your own town or city? In your state? Abroad? Where does the money go?

If you were going to give six or seven characteristics of a good Christian and a thorough-going church member what would they be? It is comparatively easy to secure a score of answers which can be placed on the black-board. The chief points can then be selected and noted. I have found it necessary to use two sessions to cover the suggested material. This topic should cause the teacher to delve deeply into the Bible.

Our Own Folks

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

"World Movement" in Massachusetts

Rev. William Reid our state director of the board of promotion is a sort of genius in using figures both to inform and to inspire. He has made an analysis of the "World Movement" as it has moved the Old Bay State up to date, and the results show that Baptist Massachusetts is not "taking the dust" of any of her sister states in her movement towards the goal. Director Reid is dramatic as he pungently marshals the figures that tell the actual truth. What is more dramatic after all than the shock that facts give us? Unless we have through indifference become shock-proof, his exhibit of the moving of the movement will be an eye-opener. Here are some of the convincing comparisons: Under the old apportionment plan in 1919-20, 202 churches contributed; under the New World Movement, 292; amount contributed under the old, $184,941; under the new, $609,798; per capita contribution under the old, $4.44; under the new, $13.73. The per capita average per member in churches that "went over the top" is $23.52. Men and brethren, do you get it?

The Machine and the Mechanicians

Mr. Albert L. Scott is our state chairman. Rev. William Reid is our chief practical promoter; and Mr. Harold L. Wilson is at the head of our "minutemen," as they are called. The minutemen go forth in teams among the churches—not to preach, solicit funds, or pose as conscience prodders, but to pour information into Zion and make a fire. They evangelize, organize, rejuvenate, disseminate, promote friendliness by awakening kingdom interest, and a sharing of responsibility. What Baptists are doing, and how each Baptist can help, are questions that are getting direct and hot answers. Harold Wilson is never a "watchful waiter"; he is a wide awake hustler, just like his old and new pastors at West Somerville, Wilton and Swaffield. Eighty-six chairmen of minutemen have been appointed in as many churches, and eleven gospel teams of four or more business men are organized and at work. Baptist endeavor in the state, well directed, is being energetically pushed, and we are getting results. Every association is surveyed and tabulated and each church in each one knows what's what.

Acadia the Beautiful

The life and spirit of Acadia College are knitted into our Baptist churches, especially in New England. There's a sort of premium upon Acadia men, they compel such a debt of gratitude for innumerable blessings brought to pulpits, churches, and schools. They make a unique contribution that our native ministers sometimes lack. It is an old-fashioned unction that we long for when we miss it. They join the Scotch strain of robust mentality to the earlier devoutness that was expected to saturate the pulpit. They have compelled their own welcome.

How Much do we Owe?

It looks as if we should have a chance to answer that interesting question in substantial fashion. The recent loss by fire of Acadia's principal building which was so rich in utility, and so enswathed in tender memories, has prompted a broader effort than a mere re-building. Live colleges grow, and growing colleges have needs; so to re-build, and stretch the whole plant to the needs, they are to raise a million dollars, and thousands of us grateful Baptists will be asked to pay at least a part of what we owe.

President Cutten's visit culminated in a delightful Banquet of Acadia graduates and friends at the twentieth Century Club. There were more than a hundred present, and an unusually pleasant social hour prepared them for the later feast. Rev. Denton J. Neely of Medford, president of the alumni was toastmaster and infused loyalty and good nature into the re-union. Rev. A. T. Kempton, the expert in Acadian lore gave a charming lecture on college and country, both by word and picture. President Cutten was of course the guest of honor, and his words were weighty and gracious about the romantic past, the expanding present, and the promising future of the college. Dr. Roselle, Dr. Webb, and others, helped to fill the feast to repletion, and it seemed as if the movement for Acadia was well launched, and had already set towards the goal.

High Lights

The Woman's Baptist Social Union had its most successful "gentlemen's night" on the fifth at Ford Hall; when 732 sat at tables covering both floor and galleries. Undoubtedly Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, the announced speaker, was the magnet. He took a serious theme, "The Sin of Pre-Occupation," and impressively fitted an earnest line of thinking into a season of rare Christian festivity. Dr. Fosdick has a firm grip upon Boston and Harvard. He was the Harvard preacher on the third, and led a highly spiritual service for ministers at St. Paul's Cathedral, on the following day. We are always sure of inspiration when he comes, and of illumination as well.

Dr. Herbert S. Johnson has had a notable experience at the First Church, Brookline. Among many converts, he has baptized many nurses from hospitals. The incident started in the conversion of his own nurse after he had preached to her Jesus, when he was there as a patient. Then other nurses were "found," and still others, until a large company of twelve had joyfully confessed the Lord. Congregations continue large, and every part of the work brings gladness.

Forums and Folks

The Ford Hall Folks, under the veteran and national forum man, Geo. W. Coleman, A. M., has been closing a successful year by a practical jubilation and banquet. The original forum of Leader Coleman has always been a wholesome and breezy institution, flexible enough for laughter, and earnest enough to get hold of every burning question pertaining to life through brotherliness, and thoroughly ventilate it. Like a banyan tree, its branches have followed the type of the mother trunk. In near and far church, school, synagogue, community, throughout the nation, it bears the Coleman stamp of good nature, social courage, and brotherly earnestness. Wide-spread is the forum movement. Centers are athrill with its enthusiasms. The master spirit is kindling leaders everywhere who are pushing it, and has his trained feelers out for all lines of possible extension. When Mr. Coleman gets well on the shady side of fifty, his "Folks" will be taking affectionate liberties with him, and be calling his "Father Forum." Anyhow that is his name.

Wallace Bardeen

To how many Colgate men scattered through the states will come a sting of sorrow as they hear of the sudden death from pneumonia of Dr. Wallace Bardeen of Hamilton, N. Y. We never associate death with a spirit so blithe and resilient as his, and so temperamentally alert and friendly. He was of the class of '90, yet seemed to belong to all the classes. His abounding youthfulness held him close to Colgate's passing boys. Ever was he a loving comrade to that fascinating procession, his versatility flashing inspiration in song, game, and festival. He slipped away in the prime of his skill. How we shall miss the sudden chivalries, the proud endeavor, the romantic temper. More for ourselves than for him do we say, "Alas my Brother!"

Albany, Troy, Schenectady, and Vicinity

By WILLIAM MORGAN HULL

Our monthly ministers' meeting was held Monday Apr. 4 in the Fifth Ave. Church of Troy. Rev. A. W. Rogers of the Emmanuel Church, Schenectady was the speaker of the day. His subject was "The Church and the Industrial Order."

Reports from those present showed that Easter Sunday had been a day for baptismal services in most of the churches. The twelve churches reporting, totalled 103 new members received the large majority of them by baptism.

Calvary Church, Albany, J. G. Lauderbaugh, pastor, received eighteen by baptism and gave the hand of fellowship to nineteen on the following Sunday. Seven or eight more are expected. The Easter offering for relief work amounted to $500.

At Memorial Church, Albany, Pastor Jamison baptized fifteen and gave the hand of fellowship to twenty-two.

At First Church, Schenectady, G. H. Baker, pastor, none were received by baptism and two by letter. The church is preparing for an evangelistic campaign which will open in a few weeks under the leadership of Dr. J. Q. A. Henry.

Emmanuel Church, Schenectady, A. W. Rogers baptized eight and gave the hand of fellowship to ten.

The quarterly report of Pastor E. C. Smith of Calvary Church, Schenectady, shows all attendance records for church, Sunday school and prayer meeting since 1918 to have been broken, and that in the case of the Sunday school the average for the quarter was the highest in its history, singularly enough being exactly equal to the total membership of the church, 151. Eleven were received into the church during the quarter, seven by baptism. On Easter Sunday the young people's chorus rendered an anthem composed by the pastor.

The Fifth Ave. Church, Troy, J. Austin Huntley, pastor, reports eleven baptized and more to follow.

At Second Church, Troy, W. M. Hull, pastor, three were baptized.

At Sixth Ave. Church, Pastor Sewell baptized five. One of these was a man who had been attending the church regularly for fifteen years. The preparations for the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of this church which comes the third week in April, are about complete. The speaker for Apr. 22 will be Rev. Bernard Clausen of Syracuse. The historical sermon will come on Sunday the twenty-fourth.

At Cohoes, where our associational missionary, Dr. A. M. Prentice has been acting pastor for the past three months, four were baptized. Rev. L. N. Sirrell of the First Church of Auburn, N. Y. has accepted a call to this church and will begin his work here some time in May.

At Waterford, Pastor T. S. Leonard baptized six and gave the hand of fellowship to nine the following Sunday.

At Hoosick Falls, J. A. Wright, pastor, two were baptized.

At Watervliet, Pastor Foote celebrated the end of his first year's work by baptizing ten. It has been a year of hard work on a difficult field. Brother Foote is to have a much needed rest, taking a short ocean trip down the coast and spending a few weeks in the south.

The pastor at Hudson, W. Dewitt Lukens, observed on a recent Sunday the tenth anniversary of his pastorate. The sermon in the morning was a review of a decade of church life. Being called to the pastorate of the church of which he had been a member for several years was a rare experience and one that involved many doubts, but this pastorate has been the longest in the history of the church. More members have been received than in previous decades, larger amounts have been contributed to missions, and the salary has been increased twice. The church edifice was destroyed and rebuilt during this pastorate and it is expected that the final payments on the indebtedness will be made during the coming year.

Spelman's Fortieth Anniversary

By ALICE B. COLEMAN

Bright sunshine, the first beauty of the spring on trees and shrubs, and the song of the mocking bird made a joyous setting for the fortieth anniversary of Spelman Seminary.

The students and alumnae, the visitors from the south and north filled the buildings and the campus with eager and interested groups rejoicing in another decade of Spelman's history and the completion of forty years of fruitful ministry. For let it be remembered that during those forty years, students have come to Spelman from thirty-four states, the District of Columbia, Canada, Columbia, Central America, South America, the Canal Zone, the West Indies, and from different parts of Africa.

The program for the three days, April 6, 7 and 8, was varied and stimulating alike to students, alumnae and visitors.

Every hour carried its full measure of information and inspiration, and the story by returned graduates of their work in the home, the school, in music, in the church, in social service and in missions was a graphic reminder of the reach of Spelman's influence. To every earnest young woman who goes out from the school, there comes some measure of all the lines of work referred to, but specialists are found among the graduates, here as elsewhere, and each aspect of service was presented by one who spoke from personal knowledge of the need and personal experience in meeting that need. The story and appeal of Miss Emma B. DeLany who has spent thirteen years in East Africa, British West Africa and Liberia and who was in the bush, fifty miles away from civilization, through the war, was heart stirring and filled with power. She is truly a mighty warrior in the army of the Lord.

The other side of the appeal was heard in the words of such men as Hon. M. L. Brittain, superintendent of education of Georgia, Dr. James H. Dillard and Mr. W. T. B. Williams of the Slater and Jeanes Funds and Mr. Jackson Davis of the general education board, who set forth strongly the increasing need of trained teachers throughout the south and the door of opportunity which stands before every Spelman student.

One evening program was given to the presentation of the history of Spelman in a pageant, "The Star," written by Mrs. Claudia W. Harreld, and Mrs. Hattie Rutherford Watson, both graduates of the college department. The path of progress followed through the light of the Star of Wisdom was effectively set forth in poem and in action and the great company which occupied even standing room in the chapel testified to the interest of the occasion.

The music rendered by the students throughout the anniversary was, as always, one of the features most eagerly welcomed and most deeply appreciated by the visitors. The Negro melodies lose none of their moving appeal to the heart by the passing of the years and choruses and songs of the present day were given with a fine quality of tone and a high degree of understanding and appreciation on the part of the students.

The reports presented by the officers of the seminary at the annual meeting of the board of trustees recorded a registration of 852 students for the present year and made it manifest that the traditions and standards of the founders of Spelman are still maintained. The rapid growth has been sound and substantial in every department. Students are giving themselves upon graduation to every form of Christian work and social service including the dedication of life and strength to darkest Africa. Seventy-one nurses have graduated from MacVicar Hospital and 21 are still in training for a ministry to those who suffer. Sixty medical and 298 surgical cases were treated during the last year. The hospital is now on the list of accredited hospitals of the state of Georgia and is conceded to have the highest standing of any hospital in the city of Atlanta.

What the story will be when Spelman completes a half century of life and service cannot be foreseen, but under the guidance and blessing of the God who has so marvelously guided and blessed thus far, there can be no fear but only a confident assurance of still larger achievements and an ever increasing ministry of love.

Keuka College Gets Over $50,000

The Ball Bros. of Muncie, Ind. manufacturers of the Ideal Glass Jars and business men of rare ability have presented Keuka College with over $50,000.

The Ball Bros. are nephews of the late Rev. George H. Ball, the founder of Keuka College and they have been and are loyal friends and supporters of the institution.

Mr. Frank Ball is one of the trustees of the college. The gift they now make is in keeping with their suggestion that when some strong organization would get back of Keuka College and endow it they would make a substantial contribution.

The Northern Baptist Convention is raising the endowment for the college and its success is assured.

The beautiful remodeled dormitory is to be called "Ball Memorial Hall." It is one of the most attractive and comfortable dormitories to be found. More than $60,000 have been expended during the past year in improving the college property.

A large entering class of exceptional, well-prepared young women has already registered for September.

Iowa Letter

By J. A. LAPHAM

Iowa Baptist Sunday schools are asked to make a study of conditions in the communities where they are located. Information is the forerunner of intelligent action. We ought to know and face the facts that call for attention in the vicinity of each of our churches. The babies not on the cradle roll, the shut-ins, the busy people who cannot or do not attend Sunday school and the people who have been neglected, or for various causes are not enrolled in the Sunday school, these are the people we want to discover for the main school and for the home department. Concerted action, after careful preparation, will awaken enthusiasm, it is hoped, in the canvass.

Experience proves that it is worth while to get ready and then make the survey all on a given day, in two or three hours. A committee from the Sunday school is asked to divide the territory into four or more districts, with not more than twenty-five families in a district. Two should go together in each district with note book or card to secure the information. Sunday, April 24, in the afternoon is the day suggested for the canvass over the state.

Report of Elementary Work in Iowa

Miss Hazel Boyd, State Elementary Director of our Baptist Sunday Schools in Iowa, makes the following statement that will be of interest to many readers:

Number of schools sending report, 218; number of cradle rolls in the state, 208; new rolls, organized, 27; gain in membership, 1,994; complete cradle roll enrollment, 5,729; number of beginner pupils, 2,126; number of primary pupils, 3,394; number of junior pupils, 3,538; total enrollment of elementary dept., 14,787; schools using graded lessons, 163; schools having separate opening, 98; schools observing annual promotion, 132; schools doing hand work, 117; schools having missionary teaching, 160; schools having trained teachers, 79; number of elementary teachers reported as having had teacher training, 314; number of pupils reported under thirteen as coming to Christ during the year, 538.

Preparations will be made for a banquet for the elementary workers in connection with the Northern Baptist Convention. A commodious room will be secured for the daily meetings of this body of Sunday-school workers and a brief daily program will be rendered to help superintendents and teachers.

The Training School

This was held at Des Moines University March 28-April 1, 1921. The object was to prepare teachers and leaders for the church school, in vacation time or to meet once a week nine months of the year. Pastor C. A. Carman of Shenandoah, Pastor and Mrs. C. S. Osborn of Churdan, Pastor J. C. Clark of Oelwein, and Miss Lou Shepherd, director of the primary department in Des Moines University in the School of Education, proved excellent leaders and instructors. Theory had proper place, but each instructor made much of the practical exercises in putting on the programs and doing the hand work. The students of the university were remembered in a special class and they responded in good numbers with much enthusiasm. The interest in the church school is steadily growing over the state, but many pastors are slow to respond because they do not see how to get competent helpers. Others find that the churches are not ready for such a program to care for the children. To preach, to preach, to preach, and to visit, these make the pastor's job in the minds of many. Twenty-five hours a week for the public school but a scant hour a week for the religious education of the children prevails largely in the majority of the churches. Are we Baptists abreast of Deuteronomy, chapter six, verse seven in our teaching of the children?

The American Baptist Publication Society, Iowa Baptist Convention, and Des Moines University, cooperated in the support of the training school.

Items of Interest

Dr. George W. Cassidy of Sioux City enters upon his work as promotion director of Iowa, May 1. He has been honored of God in much splendid achievement in the past, and now he enters upon a great task that calls for the hearty cooperation of all of the Baptist forces of Iowa.

Pastor Otis Spurgeon has a brotherhood in the church at Swea City of seventy members. Large audiences attend all of the services of the church. A movement to build a new meeting house at an expense of more than $30,000 is agitated. Recent meetings added over twenty to the church. Mr. Spurgeon preaches the old gospel with power.

Iowa will give Pastor T. S. Giblette a welcome back to Iowa. He enters upon the pastorate at Clinton May 1. He did a fine work in New Hampton for four years where he was held in high esteem by the whole town. Mr. Giblette is a rarely good preacher as well as an all-around pastor.

Pastor Wm. J. Coulston has been Baptist shepherd for Sac County for four years with headquarters at the county seat in Sac City. He was the leading Sunday-school man for all denominations in the county. While a staunch Baptist, he responded heartily in interchurch activity in behalf of the starving millions in the near East. Mr. Coulston has just entered upon his new field at New Hampton. A fine parsonage has been purchased by the church and the promise is good for the future.

Never in past years has the Baptist church in Iowa City faced such a program as it has adopted for the five years just ahead. Pastor Roy York is the leader of the church and there is much enthusiasm in the new program. To meet the full allotment, to buy or build a new parsonage, and to get ready to build a new house of worship, is a challenge worthy the mettle of a strong body. The students in the state university call for attention from our denomination as well as from other religious bodies, and we need far better facilities than have been enjoyed in the past.

Doings at Des Moines

THE program committee of the Northern Baptist Convention, consisting of Dr. John A. Earle as chairman, Mrs. Martha MacLeish as secretary, and Mr. W. W. Smith, a layman from Detroit, have been busy for months building a program which will be representative of all the interests of the convention. The program will be evangelistic and missionary throughout. The first day of the official program will be the closing day of the Woman's Foreign Mission Jubilee. There will be missionary, evangelistic and educational demonstrations each day. The seven days of the convention, June 22-28, will see more natives from other countries representing Baptist missionary work than have ever before appeared at a Baptist convention. The devotional period each session will be a chief feature of the program. There will be no oratory and only three or four set addresses. Spontaneity, prayer, testimony in the larger sense of the word, and spiritually democratic fellowship, it is hoped, will prevail. Churches which have not yet arranged to send their pastor and at least one live young layman should do so at once.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

MAINE

COLUMBIA ST., Bangor, Rev. John S. Pendleton pastor, is holding a series of special meetings under the leadership of "Al" Saunders, evangelist, and Rev. Frank M. Lamb, called "Maine's sweetest Gospel singer" which began with a large attendance Tuesday evening Apr. 5 to extend through April 17.

REV. ROY M. TRAFTON formerly of Blue Hill, Me., began his pastorate at the Essex St. Bangor, Sunday, Apr. 3, with large audiences both morning and evening.

THE FIRST Church of Bangor has recently favored its pastor Rev. F. S. Bernauer by a very substantial increase in salary.

REV. PERLEY E. MILLER, missionary of the Penobscot association has been confined to his room for the past week by a severe illness but the crisis is past and he hopes to be able to resume work soon.

THE PASTORATE of Rev. Howard A. Welch of the Brewer church has opened with much promise for this young and growing church.

MRS. VIOLET J. G. BAGLEY pastor of the West Hampden church has received a call to the Kenduskeag church. Her friends think she will accept although the West Hampden church has made effort to retain her on that field.

THE CHURCH in BRADLEY which had been greatly weakened by deaths and removals has taken on new life with the coming of Mr. Oscar Thomas from city mission work in Beverly, Mass., to assume the pastorate of this church.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

REV. E. W. CHURCHILL, pastor at Rochester is accomplishing much in these early months of his pastorate. Eight were baptized Easter and more will follow. There were probably thirty-eight conversions during meetings recently held. The pastor was assisted in these meetings by Rev. F. M. Baker pastor at Hampton and Rev. T. H. Scammon, pastor at Wolfeboro Falls.

ALTHOUGH LABORING under difficulties, pastor H. H. White at Laconia is making progress. Congregations are good and appreciative. Twelve were baptized Easter.

REV. J. K. MILLER, colporter-missionary, has been released from colporter work since January 1 and has been engaged in promotion work in interest of the New World Movement. During three months, Mr. Miller has delivered fifty-four stereopticon lectures and twenty other sermons and addresses in interest of promotion work. Wherever he has gone his work has made a deep impression. The New World Movement has gained much by his services which will be continued through April.

VERMONT

THE STATE CONVENTION and allied organizations will meet at Bethows Falls with the First Church, Rev. John L. Clark, pastor, from Monday night, May 23 through Wednesday, May 25. Speakers from outside the state already engaged are Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Ufford, Rev. Sumner N. Vinton, the stereopticon man, Rev. Milton M. McGorrell, Dr. F. O. Erb of Philadelphia, Dr. C. A. Brooks of New York, Dr. C. N. Arbuckle of Newton Center, Dr. F. E. Taylor of Indianapolis and President Ernest M. Hopkins of Dartmouth College.

FIRST CHURCH, RUTLAND, Rev. George W. Peck, Jr., pastor, has 100 more in the Sabbath school than a year ago and audiences much larger than at any time during the present pastorate. On Easter Sunday fourteen were received into the church by baptism, making twenty-one who have been received since January 1.

REV. A. J. BOWSER of Windsor received eight by baptism on Easter Sunday, and several others are awaiting the ordinance. This church is repairing and improving its church property.

MANCHESTER CENTER. Rev. Joseph S. Brown, pastor, held services during the week preceding Easter. Pastor Brown did his own preaching. Four were received by baptism and two by letter on Easter Sunday.

REV. RALPH M. JONES, of Chester had a good day on Easter, when four were received by baptism and three by letter. All departments are feeling a new impulse of life, which is manifested in large congregations and increasing interest on the part of the workers. The church and congregation presented Pastor Jones with $100 as an Easter offering.

THE CHURCHES IN NEWPORT had a good day Easter. The First Church, Rev. H. B. Rankin, pastor, received two by baptism, and the Main Street Church, Rev. J. H. Blackburn, pastor, received three by baptism and four by letter.

WEST BRATTLEBORO. Rev. E. B. Cornell, pastor, had probably the greatest day in its history Easter, when thirty-two were received into church fellowship—thirty by baptism.

MASSACHUSETTS

AT CENTRAL, MIDDLEBORO, on Easter Sunday morning, Pastor C. Raymond Chapell baptized eight young people. The congregations, both morning and evening extended into the gallery. At the close of the evening sermon five persons responded to the pastor's appeal to accept Christ as Savior. Beginning on Monday, Apr. 4 special meetings were held with Rev. James Holmes, Brockton as preacher.

Boston and Vicinity

At the ministers' meeting in Boston Apr. 4, they celebrated the annual veterans day, in which the G. A. R. and the American Legion joined. Rev. Geo. W. Nead presided, and the two speakers representing each army and each war were Rev. A. M. Crane, and Rev. Kenneth C. MacArthur. We never heard either of them speak with more fire, or shed more light, and they perfectly supplemented each other. Mr. Crane's was a masterly survey of the successive events that made the Civil war inevitable. Chaplain MacArthur took us into the army life in France. We got behind the glamour, and saw war as a real thing in its effect upon men immorally as well as heroically. We have had no better "soldier's meeting."

The Boston Social Union's April meeting was devoted to annual business and city missions. Pres. Sheppard presided for the last time, and proudly "bemedaled" according to custom, took his place among the ancient and honorable presidential "has beens." The glory of the high seat is so "exceeding," it is assumed no man could safely risk a re-election. Pres. Geo. B. Cutten of Acadia College was introduced, and compressed into ten minutes a deal of good nature, solid sense, and Acadian romance and achievement. He made an admirable impression. City Missions were set forth in a fine statement by Mr. John F. Rood of the executive committee of our Bethel city mission society, and the subject was further amplified by Rev. C. H. Sears, as a substitute for Rev. C. A. Brooks, whose presence was prevented by illness. The new President of the union is Mr. Charles W. Bailey of Wollaston, who is one of the well-known "Bailey boys" of North Scituate. He will be every inch a chief.

CONNECTICUT

REV. A. W. RIDER of Los Angeles, Calif., is spending some time in Connecticut assisting the director of promotion in pushing the New World Movement program. Already Dr. Rider has made for himself a large place in the hearts of the people. His wise, tactful and bright presentation of facts wins a most generous response.

THE SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING of the state convention board was held in the Olivet Church, Hartford, Tuesday, Apr. 5. Reports indicated the convention's business to be in good condition. Dr. Rider spoke at the luncheon hour.

THIRD, NORWICH. Rev. R. Daniel Trick, pastor, has been on the field less than two years. The Bible school has grown from seven to seventy. The work among the Poles has been unusually successful. The pastor and wife conducted last year one of the most successful vacation bible schools in the state. Seven were recently baptized and two classes are now being instructed to that end.

REV. A. D. KENDRICK, Windsor, has been the supply at Stafford. He has just finished an evangelistic campaign in which the church has been greatly revived. Seven were received into the membership, four by baptism.

MORE THAN FORTY CHURCHES have enjoyed an evangelist effort since January with most encouraging results.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS in Deep River led by Dr. J. Q. R. Henry and pastor Sheppard had large congregations. Thirteen have been received into the Deep River Church by baptism. The Congregational church of the town received several new members. The adjoining towns have felt the influence of the meetings. The Baptist Churches at Chester and Winthrop have received new members.

THE BROTHERHOOD of the Deep River Church held its first annual banquet Apr. 19, with a large number present and a program of unusual interest. Rev. Horace B. Sloat, Hartford, director of promotion, spoke briefly. The principal address was made by Rev. John M. Moore of the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church Brooklyn.

FIRST, WALLINGFORD. Rev. D. W. Lovett, pastor, has enjoyed a spiritual refreshing. On Apr. 3 baptism was administered to five candidates.

DELAWARE

TWENTY-FIVE NEW MEMBERS were publicly recognized and took communion the first Sunday in April, at Bethany, Wilmington. Dr. C. C. Earle is preaching to the largest audiences which have gathered in many years. Prayer meetings also are large. The Social meetings break all records. On Easter Sunday fourteen "young children" were consecrated to the Lord and the church, the parents being in attendance. The "Pastor's Singing Band" is an impressive feature of the worship.

RHODE ISLAND

AT ELMWOOD AVENUE. Providence, four new members were received by baptism on Easter Sunday and three by letter. Baptisms have occurred every month since Pastor Gates began his ministry. The vestries have been painted and a new electric lighted cross has been paced on the organ.

SHAWOMET CHURCH has just issued the first copy of its little paper called "The Messenger" in the interest of the church, its kindred organizations and the community. On April 13-23, revival services were held under the leadership of Lewis E. Smith. The Woodbury Union Church and the Oakland Beach Union Church co-operated.

REV. HENRY K. VYE, pastor of the Phillips Memorial Church, Auburn, is preaching a series of sermons on Sunday mornings using the "Model Prayer" as his text, and on Sunday evenings a series on "Pointed Truths in Pithy Texts."

THE SPECIAL SERVICES held by Dr. F. H. Stilwell Feb. 20-28, were a source of blessing to the people at the Central Church, Providence. Thirty young people expressed a desire to lead the Christian life, and several adults have become deeply interested. A free-will offering was taken as a token of appreciation of the work done by Dr. Stilwell, and the amount received was $261.

REV. C. L. CHARRON, French missionary, baptized eight on Easter Sunday at Woonsocket. Six of the candidates were from Manchaug, Mass.

WEST VIRGINIA

CLARKSBURG had its annual every member visitation Apr. 2. It has adopted a budget for this year amounting to $9,275. Dr. J. W. Graves, the pastor, welcomed more than fifty new members by baptism in the month of March.

NEW YORK

FORTY-FIVE NEW MEMBERS were received into the fellowship of the First Church of Buffalo Apr. 3. This makes 204 who have been added the past seventeen months. Miss Minnie M. Byrne has taken up her work at this church as pastor's assistant. The church has provided its pastor Rev. Samuel Russell, with a Franklin car, and has also bought a parsonage.

AT CAZENOVIA the pastor, Rev. Chester C. Winter, baptized ten young people on Easter Sunday evening. Without any extra meetings a quiet, wholesome revival spirit has been strongly manifested. The Brotherhood, with a team of twenty men, has conducted meetings for one or more nights in a series of evangelistic services in the New Woodstock and Delphi churches, and have assisted the pastor of the Maulina church one night. The second night that the Brotherhood conducted the service at Delphi there were eight decisions for Christ, and about forty decisions before the meetings closed.

IN THE FIRST ANNUAL DEBATE between the Rochester Theological Seminary and the Divinity School of Oberlin College, held at Oberlin, April 7, the team from Rochester won the unanimous decision of the judges. The Rochester Theological Seminary was represented by James D. Morrison of the Senior class, a graduate of McMaster University in the class of 1914, and Benjamin H. Marshall of the Middle class, a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1914. The Oberlin Divinity School was represented by Harold H. Hester and Robert W. Catton, both graduates of Oberlin College. The debate was held in the chapel at Oberlin and the judges were: Judge A. R. Webber of Elyria, Rev. P. B. Shaffner of Wellington, and Rev. H. E. Woodard of Norwalk. The debate was on the subject, "Resolved: That the Federal Government should own and operate all coal mines within its jurisdiction," and the negative was maintained by Rochester. Dean Edward I. Bosworth of Oberlin was the presiding officer. After the debate a reception was tendered to the Rochester representatives.

Annual Meetings in New York City

The Annual Meetings of the New York City Baptist Mission Society and its Woman's Auxiliary and also of the Baptist Fresh Air Home Society will be held at the Mount Morris Baptist Church, Fifth Ave., near 127th St., on Thursday, Apr. 28, beginning at 4 p. m.

A dinner will be served at six o'clock at one dollar a plate. Tickets may be secured from the City Mission office, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City. All delegates to both societies are expected to attend and it is hoped that large delegations from each church will be present.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

REV. NELSON K. CROSSMAN resigned the pastorate of Hephzibah Church some time ago to become field worker for the Chester county Sabbath school association with headquarters at West Chester. Rev. L. B. Jones, of Apollo, became pastor at Hephzibah Apr. 1.

RIDGEBURY CHURCH, Rev. S. J. Cummings, pastor, has withdrawn from the Beaver Association and united with the Chemung River Association, N. Y.

THE LAYMEN'S UNION of the Pennsylvania Baptist General Convention earnestly recommends (by resolution) to the Northern Baptist Convention the appointment of a committee composed of two laymen from each state represented by delegates to said convention for the purpose of devising and recommending to the Northern Baptist Convention, a plan, looking to the centralization of all Baptist churches in said states in order that the work of said churches in the Master's vineyard may be more efficient.

Philadelphia Women Celebrate Anniversary

In the beautiful auditorium of the historic First Baptist Church of Philadelphia there took place on April 7, 1921 the celebration of the 110th anniversary of the founding of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, the first woman's missionary society of any denomination.

Mrs. Harriet Newell Jones wrote for this occasion a pageant called "The Spirit of Womanhood." Very naturally, the motif of this work is the part played by our Baptist women in the glorious challenge of missions during a hundred years.

In addition to the pageant, several charming addresses and words of greeting came from Mrs. J. Milnor Wilbur, Mrs. I. H. O'Harra, Mrs. Henry Peabody, Dr. W. W. Keen, and the pastor of the church, Rev. Carter Helm Jones. The audience listened with united interest to the reading of a telegram and letter of congratulation from two prominent women, Mrs. Charles E. Hughes and Mrs. Warren G. Harding.

The principal address of the evening was that from Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, who gave the message of Baptist women to the mission fields of the world.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE CHURCH AT WEST NEWTON, Rev. A. C. Wright, pastor, mourns the departure of the senior deacon of the church, Nelson Weddle. He was one of the founders of the church. The present modern and perfectly equipped edifice was erected largely through his interest and liberality.

Dr. J. S. BAKER, First Church, McKeesport, baptized forty-one on Easter

Sunday, more than half of the number being men and boys. Decision day yielded 72 signatures. The Easter offering of the Sunday school amounted to $89.

AT BETHEL, CARRICK, five were added to the church by baptism on Easter Sunday, Rev. A. J. R. Schumaker, officiating.

THE BUILDING of the Emmanuel Church, North Side, Rev. J. A. T. Marsteller, pastor, has been improved at a cost of $550. A men's class of forty members has been organized. Five were baptized Easter Sunday and three were received by letter.

AT CARNEGIE, Rev. J. S. Jewell, pastor, twenty-three have recently been received by baptism, and four by letter and experience. The attendance at the last communion service was the largest in the present pastorate. The Sunday school has reached an enrollment of 146.

Rocky Mountain States

WYOMING

DEACONS E. Y. Booker and Robt. E. Kennedy are proving to be highly effective workers, who with other faithful ones support and promote the work of the pastor, T. S. Dulin. On Easter Sunday there were nearly 200 in the Sunday school. The pastor makes use of the stereopticon in the Sunday evening services. This church raised its allotment on the New World Movement, and is paid up for 1920.

UTAH

OGDEN, FIRST, has called to its pastorate Rev. Lemuel Addison Garrison. Dr. Garrison is a native of Iowa, graduated from Rochester, served several years as pastor, was called to the faculty of Central College at Pella, Iowa and later to the presidency of Grand Island College. Later he settled in Boise Valley, Idaho, whence he comes to Ogden.

WALL AVENUE, Negro church, Ogden, has called Rev. R. A. Lowe of Kansas City, Mo., and he is vigorously at work on the field.

Pacific Coast

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

AT SAN DIEGO a very successful three-weeks religious campaign, under the direction of Rev. Dr. I. E. Honeywell, assisted by Rev. and Mrs. Ray G. Swartzbaugh, was completed Apr. 3. The First Church, Rev. F. O. Belden, pastor, and the Central Christian and the First Methodist churches were united in the movement. A very happy feature of the campaign was the large number of U. S. navy men who came forward during the meetings as original seekers after divine guidance or for reconsecration. Much credit for the successful work among the service men is given to Rev. Floy T. Barkman who represents the Southern California Baptist Convention, and is located in San Diego.

REV. RICHARD ELLSWORTH DAY at Riverside First, baptized thirty-two converts in March. The membership of the church is now beyond 700. The Southern California Baptist Convention will be held in this church May 16-19.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF COLTON, under the pastoral care of John J. Roach, has experienced a steady growth during the last three years, the church membership and Bible school attendance having more than doubled during that time. Recently the church enjoyed a two-weeks' evangelistic campaign under the direction of Rev. S. Fraser Langford, pastor of the First Church of Redlands. The pastor had the privilege of baptizing fifteen of the converts, and there were several others who united by letter during the meetings.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

FIRST, ALAMEDA, held a union meeting lately with the Spanish-Mexican church of Alameda, at which songs, prayers and sermons were given in both languages, ending with the baptism of five by the Spanish pastor, Rev. F. Sanchez Hernandez; while on the next Sunday Pastor A. P. Brown baptized for both churches in union services. The First Church gave an Easter offering for its debt of $1074 in addition to a $1000 legacy left it by Mrs. Julia A. Hardwick, for years President of the Board of Trustees, and of the Ladies Aid Society, who died the 16th of March.

EASTERN WASHINGTON

PASTOR J. E. SMITH at Spokane, First, received fifty-five new members during March, more than half of them by baptism, and since Jan. 1, about eighty. No special meetings were held. The church has formed a comprehensive program of activities for the present year.

OREGON

REV. E. A. GOTTBERG, Astoria pastor, on Easter Sunday, baptized sixteen, five of these being Chinese, two husbands and their wives and one unmarried young man.

ON EASTER SUNDAY 111 received the right-hand of fellowship at the morning service, probably the greatest day in the history of the Roseburg church. Rev. J. H. Dickson is the pastor.

DURING THE LAST MONTH sixty new members, mostly by baptism, have been received into the Arieta Church, Rev. Owen T. Day, pastor.

THE CHURCH AT LACOMB has unanimously voted to request Pastor Rev. S. L. Boyce to continue. An additional room for Sunday School purposes is being planned, attendance at prayer meeting is on the increase and the special meeting recently conducted by Rev. D. Loree, produced splendid results in the community.

THE MEDFORD CHURCH, Rev. F. R. Leach, pastor, at the beginning of the year set some rather definite goals of achievement. These were to be reached by Easter Sunday: fifty new members, and eighty-three have already been received; fifty new pupils in the Sunday school, and sixty-eight have been added; fifty in attendance at prayer meeting, and seventy-seven have been in attendance.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS have been in progress at Eugene, Rev. C. E. Dunham, pastor, with Evangelist Bruce Evans leading. Twenty have recently been baptized by the pastor, gathered mostly from Sunday school and the young people's society previous to the beginning of the special meetings.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the First Church, Portland, won a silver loving cup in competition in attendance with the Sunday school of the First Church of Seattle. The contest covered a period of twelve weeks, ending on Easter Sunday morning. On Easter morning 946 were present at 10:15, the time agreed upon by both Sunday schools to take the registration of the scholars present. On other Sundays the school registered as high as 600.

Dr. W. B. HINSON came to the East Side Church, Portland, just four years ago. The membership of the church has been multiplied by four. A beautiful new stone building has been purchased, and on Easter Sunday, when something over $7,000 was raised as a thank-offering, the entire remaining indebtedness on the new building and new pipe organ was wiped out. The Sunday school has been growing so rapidly than an extension to our building is already being contemplated. There were 506 in attendance at the Sunday school on Easter Sunday, and about $200 raised for the starving children of the world. There were thirty-eight additions to the membership of the church during the month of March.

Rev. WALTER L. RILEY began his pastorate of the Highland Church, Portland, last September. Since that time seventy-one have been received into membership. Congregations have grown until extra chairs are often needed in seating the audience. The Bible school has increased about 100 in attendance. In addition to meeting its regular budget the church has raised nearly $1000 for improvements and the famine sufferers across the seas.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

Rev. EARLE D. SIMS, "church invigorator" of the Home Mission Society, has closed a one-year engagement with the Western Washington Baptist Convention, and begun in Oregon.

DRYAD had been pastorless for several years and had given up all hope of having a regular pastor, yet under evangelistic meetings held by Rev. Earle D. Sims the church took on new life as well as new members, a living salary was raised. Rev. S. L. Brown became pastor for all his time, the church is now doing excellent work and has only recently had added to it a goodly number of members.

KELSO was lost to the denomination. The building had never been completed and was in a wrecked condition, and the church pastorless and discouraged. Under the leadership of Rev. Earle D. Sims the building was completed at a cost of fifteen hundred dollars, and made one of the beautiful houses of worship of the State. Then with revival meetings in the new building, the church was strengthened, a large number of new members added to the church, hundreds of dollars given to the New World Movement, $1800 raised for pastor's salary, Rev. J. O. Bovee became pastor, and now the church stands about the best in the community, is self-supporting and is considered one of the strong churches of the convention.

LYMAN was given up in despair. The church was without a pastor, the few members discouraged, and the building a back number. Under the leadership of Rev. Earle D. Sims thirty new members were added to the church, a parsonage purchased, the church building overhauled, and an addition made to the building enlarging the seating capacity, at a cost of about $4000. Over $3000 was subscribed to the New World Movement. Rev. Earl Cochran has accepted the call to become pastor of Lyman and Concrete churches.

CONCRETE, a little town of 1000 people, where Portland cement is made, had a little church of nine members. They have never owned a building and during the past six years have worshipped in halls. Under the leadership of Rev. Earle D. Sims the best quarter of a block in the center of the town was purchased from the Seattle Brewing and Malting Co., old saloon buildings torn down, and a beautiful house of worship made out of them, at a cost of about $4000, and all dedicated out of debt. Twenty new members were added to the little church. They subscribed $1000 to the New World Movement. Rev. Earl Cochran has accepted the call to become Pastor.

FIRST, MOLINE, is experiencing a gracious revival. Since Jan. 1, Pastor Babcock has baptized forty-six, and has received thirty by letter and experience. For the last few weeks the congregations have passed the 500 mark, crowded into a building that is supposed to seat only 300. Conversions take place every Sunday night and the revival is associated with the regular services of the church. The Sunday-school has increased in attendance to such a degree as to exceed present facilities even though last fall the basement was improved at a cost of $5,000. This is one of the churches that went over the top in the New World Movement drive a year ago.

LA SALLE AVE., CHICAGO, having repaired and redecorated the house at a cost of $3,000 held a re-opening service Apr. 10, with a program occupying most of the day. Pastor Joseph B. Rogers being assisted by Drs. G. W. Taft, M. P. Boynton, Mr. R. Howard Taylor and others.

INDIANA

BICKNELL will build a gymnasium and community hall for the use of the church in a varied community program.

WISCONSIN

THE GEO. W. TAYLOR evangelistic party of Los Angeles, Calif., is in a union meeting in the Baptist Church, Stevens Point, Wis. The Methodists and Presbyterians are heartily cooperating with the Baptists in this effort, and the outlook is good for a successful revival. The Taylor party has held a number of very successful meetings in Wis, this season, receiving the hearty endorsement of the churches generally. While they have other engagements they have a few open dates, and can be addressed at Stevens Point, Wis.

MICHIGAN

EASTER MORNING Mr. Bowman baptized twenty-nine young people, all of them members of the Sunday-school. Thursday evening sixteen more were baptized. Fourteen have been received in the last few months, by letter and four more will be received within the next few weeks, making a total of sixty-three new members since the coming of the pastor, November 1. At the Easter morning baptismal service the church was crowded and at a program given by the choir and the Sunday school in the evening all the chairs were in use and many were forced to stand. The Easter thank-offering received in the morning amounted to over $25.

W. H. STALLINGS, formerly associate pastor of the First Church, Lansing, Mich., has been made the national secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Portugal. He has been for some years the student secretary in Coimbra.

IOWA

ALMA, FIRST: For a two-weeks intensive evangelistic campaign, the state convention sent us Rev. J. J. Pease. Pastor E. E. Shouffer was his efficient co-worker and with an effective follow-up program has baptized about thirty.

Rev. EDWIN J. BROWNSON died at his home in Des Moines, March 30. Receiving his education at Colgate University and Newton Theological Seminary he felt the need of the West and took up his work in '79 at Yankton, S. Dak., as a home missionary. Then followed pastorates at Brainard and Duluth, Minn., and Belleville and Centralia, Ill. Twelve years ago he became assistant superintendent of the Iowa Anti Saloon League. By his winning personality and fidelity to truth he won the confidence of the Christian forces of Iowa for the fight for prohibition. Sixteen months ago, after an operation, he came face to face with the fact that his work was nearly over, but he never faltered, at his office until six months ago, when confined to the house and often to the bed, with the aid of his stenographer and telephone he kept the work at the highest point almost to the last.

NORTH DAKOTA

BISMARCK, Dr. E. F. Jordan, Pastor, received five by baptism within the last three weeks.

MISS ISABEL CRAWFORD will do deputational work in North Dakota during the months of May, June and July.

REV. PAUL PERVERZOFF has been engaged as summer supply for work among the Russian Baptists. Brother Perverzoff is a student of the German department of Rochester Theological Seminary.

LISBON: Thomas Ewing Holland is just beginning a pastorate at Lisbon. Easter Sunday Director Wiese baptized six of the boys and girls of the Lisbon Sunday school.

GERMAN BAPTISTS have lately held two successful and largely attended Sunday-school and young people's conferences, one at Anamoose, N. D., and the other at Eureka, S. D.

OHIO

MEMORIAL, COLUMBUS, has broken every record in its history, in attendance at Sunday school, in the morning audiences and in the amounts of money raised. Since the first of January forty-nine have been received to membership. The church has placed in the hands of Pastor and Mrs. Robbins expense money for the trip to the Northern or Southern Baptist Convention as they shall elect.

KANSAS

MISS MAUD SKILES, until recently the director of children's work in Kansas, died March 5. She was compelled to retire from the work early last September owing to a severe attack of typhoid fever. The typhoid was followed by tuberculosis. She was tireless and faithful in her efforts, and will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

PASTOR FRED COCKRAN of Parsons closed a successful meeting recently, with more than 105 accessions to the church. He had the assistance of Jack Scholfield of Ft. Scott, who led in the singing.

REV. M. O. WOLFE, the new pastor at Ft. Scott went on the field Jan. 30, and there have been twenty-three taken into the church since that time, seventeen of them by baptism.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of Pastor M. O. Clemmons the Eldorado church has taken a forward step in securing Mr. Paul Hudson, one of the members of the church, and a son of Rev. L. O. Hudson, as director of religious education.

REV. C. H. OWNS of Harmony Church has been called to the pastorate of the Burlingame Church and will take up the work the first of May. He will also preach one-fourth time for the Auburn Church.

Obituary

HARRIETT HULL MCNIE

Harriet Hull McNie was born June 28, 1845 in Danbury, Conn. She died Easter Sunday, March 28, 1921, in Winona, Minn. She was the daughter of Charles and Hannah (Ambler) Hull.

She attended private school in Danbury, Conn., until she was seventeen years old when she entered Galway Seminary located at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., from which institution she was graduated two years later. The year she was graduated, together with her sister, father and the Rev. George Stone (for thirty years pastor of the Asylum Baptist Church, Hartford, Conn.) traveled in Europe for one year.

When Mrs. McNie was twelve years of age she was baptized into the First Baptist Church of Danbury, Conn., from that moment until she entered into her rest she was a consecrated, active member of the Baptist church. She loved the church next to her children.

In July 1868 she was married to Alexander McNie, a young business man of Winona and an active member of the First Baptist Church of that city. As a result of this union three children were born, all of whom are living, Mrs. E. D. Keyes of Winona; Charles Hull McNie, Chicago; and Mary Bella McNie, Minneapolis.

Mrs. McNie brought to this new country all the refinement and culture of her eastern home training, and during fifty-three years of continuous residence in Winona was identified with every good work in and out of her church. She was a member of the D. A. R., very active in the Red Cross and study club, and for twenty years she was the corresponding secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society (S. E. Association).

How will our Golden Jubilee differ from any other Financial Campaign ever conducted?

By being over-pledged?

No others have been.

By reaching one hundred and fifty thousand women?

That is still more wonderful but it has been done before.

The Answer—by reporting 100% of pledges paid when due.

This will not be true unless you pay your pledge now.

(The fiscal year closes April Thirtieth)

Already nine-tenths of the entire amount pledged is in the hands of the National Treasurer.

Do not be the person who will prevent the wonderful record of 100% pledges paid.

Send the money for the balance of your unpaid pledge to the one to whom you gave your pledge, or to your District Jubilee President or Treasurer. If more convenient the money may be sent to National Headquarters, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, if plainly marked for Jubilee Fund. Please also give the name of your church.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

The Demand for New Capital

DURING January and February, according to the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, investment securities to the amount of $714,000,000 were offered in the United States. This summary was made with great care, the aim being to include only definite and tangible flotations. Of this vast amount, about $120,000,000 was for the purpose of refunding previous issues, leaving a net demand for new investment capital of nearly $600,000,000 in the two months.

In comparison with the same period in 1919 and 1920 the figures disclose some interesting developments. The grand total is about $50,000,000 less than a year ago, but nearly $160,000,000 in excess of the same time in 1919.

The great bulk of this financing was domestic. Foreign governments borrowed in 1919 during the two months $28,000,000, England at that time refunding some of its earlier loans. In 1920 foreign loans in the two months were $50,000,000 and in 1921, $69,000,000.

Borrowing by our states and municipalities shows a steady increase, from $56,000,000 in 1919 to $113,000,000 in 1920 and to $148,000,000 this year. Without doubt the fact that interest on municipals is tax-free has created an unusual demand for them on the part of large individual investors. Prominent also among the factors increasing public indebtedness have been the provision for soldiers' bonus by a number of states and extensive highway improvements which are in progress nearly everywhere.

Corporation issues comprise the largest portion of all these figures and their details afford a vivid reflection of changing conditions. Two years ago short time notes were the fashion; present-day high rates were scarcely anticipated, and it was then deemed expedient in most cases to limit the period of such loans to a very few years. In 1920 the emission of these had decreased, while the issue of longer time bonds increased, and this tendency has been even more pronounced this year. A year ago, interest rate had increased, but corporations were generally prosperous and under those circumstances many of them found needed additional capital by selling preferred stock. This year the situation is quite reversed; since the majority of corporations show diminished earnings, stocks find but a slow sale, and the result has been that offerings of preferred stock have been less frequent.

It also costs more to borrow. Examples are cited of the Southern California Edison Company, which in 1919 sold $8,000,000 of its general and refunding bonds at slightly over 6 per cent, whereas in February this year an additional block of the same issue had to be offered at over 7 per cent to attract the investor. Likewise, railroad issues command a higher rate, such roads as the Pennsylvania and the Northwestern paying over 6½ per cent as against a cost to the Illinois Central of 5½ per cent two years ago.

Life Work in Philadelphia

BY HAROLD STANLEY STEWART

The task of presenting the life work appeal to young people is at the same time so important and so hard to do well that the excellent work of Dr. Raymond M. West, executive secretary of the department of life work of the New World Movement, and his associates, in a recent series of conferences in Philadelphia deserve special notice.

The local board of promotion called Dr. West into consultation in planning its work, and built up its program around the suggestions he made, giving him the best possible opportunity to bring his message to the young and to back it up with messages to pastors, Sunday-school workers, deacons and parents.

Three centers in the city were chosen and in each a two-day program was set up. The main conferences were those with carefully selected young people from the Sunday schools who came in a group each of the two days from 4:30 to 8:00 P. M. Supper was served by the entertaining church, and the social atmosphere of the meal had decided values in creating a sense of solidarity among the Baptist young people of the city. Dr. West was ably backed by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery and Dr. Franklin P. Lynch of the Congo in bringing the appeal for life as a service of God to his hearers. The impression of the message was greatly deepened by having the same group return a second day, and in the end many noble determinations were registered.

Before meeting the young people Dr. West went over the entire matter of his appeal with the pastors of the churches, and the pastors were urged to attend the conferences with their young people, which in large measure they did.

The occasion of these conferences was used by the local board to create a larger general interest in the New World Movement. Mass meetings of the women, and conferences of church trustees and church members were addressed by the speakers for the life work conferences and by Mr. Henry Bond who graciously came and spent the week in Philadelphia for this purpose.

In the near future the work will be followed up by further conferences with those young people who expressed a genuine interest in the message.

This entire undertaking was experimental in its nature, but on all hands it was pronounced a success. The press became interested and for over a week Bapsole duty being to see that the groups function. The chairman of this sitting standing committee is a treasure. His name is Walter Scott, and it is customary to dignify it by the prefix "Sir," a slight attention which seems to gratify him greatly. Men are vain. But Sir Walter is beloved by all, and fills his place most commendably. If any other B. Y. P. U.'s are in need of new ideas for parties and socials, he can supply them with many "tried and tested recipes," all "different." Ask him about the rain-bow party, the prune party, the newspaper party, the four-and-twenty blackbirds, and the children's party, at which pigtails, pinaflores, dilapidated dolls and "teeter-boards" were in order, and the refreshments consisted of all-day-suckers and Adam's ale. All these and more, Sir Walter can tell about, and if he should wreak vengeance on the head of this reporter, said reporter will be a willing martyr.

The B. Y. P. every new church which the N. W. M. money builds is going to have a kindergarten attached!! Can't you just see them in their quaint kimonos, bobbing around like so many floppy butterflies? Regularly, after we had chosen the place in the "Survey" where we wanted to send our latest earnings, Bill and I would then rush for our copy of "The World at the Cross Roads," to see if there were any pictures of these newest friends of ours, and generally there were, smiling at us as if they were sending a thank-you across the waves.

Now that our first year is over, it's just as if we had each adopted fifty-two brand new brothers and sisters. We love them hard, and oh, how we do hope they'll become Christians soon! Mother has taught us this prayer-poem to repeat as we put our N. W. M. offerings into our envelopes Saturday evening at bedtime, ready for Sunday:—

"Once again, dear Lord, we pray
For the children far away,
Who have never even heard
Jesus' name, our sweetest word.

"Little lips that God has made
'Neath the far-off temple's shade
Give to gods of wood and stone
Worship that should be God's own.

"Little hands, whose wondrous skill
God has made to do His will,
Offerings bring, and serve with fear,
Gods that cannot see or hear."

scab?" "Yes they do, because he lets us catch it but he is ready to take all that he gets because we fought for something."

Getting up to go I turned to him: "Well friend, you are a scab Christian. You are willing to let others fight to make the city clean and wholesome, to implant high ideals in your children through the Sunday school, to buy literature to come into your home for the youngsters and to provide a place of wholesome amusement in the church gymnasium for your boy in the dangerous period of his life; and like a scab you take it all yet stay out of the church because it isn't compulsory to come in. Be as consistent in your religion as you are in your labor organizations."

"The Mayflower Program Book."

By Miss Jeannette Eloise Perkins and Miss Frances Weld Danielson. The Pilgrim Press.

No worker with children fails to appreciate the value of little dramas, dialogues and programs to interest and educate them. The same workers also appreciate the task of finding proper and adapted exercises for such occasions. This charming and well-prepared volume meets this "long-felt want." The second part has linings of drawings for the handiwork of children. Kindergarten and first and second grade teachers will find this book a touch of providence to aid them.

"Guiding Girls to Christian Womanhood."

By A. H. McKinney, D.D. Fleming H. Revell Company.

The author has written a companion volume—"Guiding Boys over Foot Hill." This one is a most excellent treatise for the help of mothers, teachers and Y. W. C. A. workers. 'Tis a guiding torch from girlhood to young womanhood, throwing light on the physiological, physical, mental, social and religious life of girls and young women. Each lecture is preceded by an analysis of the contents. It is admirably adapted for the classroom and for the private library of those whom it specially concerns.

"A Jewish View of Jesus."

H. G. Enelow. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

'Tis said that with every passing decade more "Lives of Jesus" appear. He is becoming more and more a living force in the life and progress of civilization. The author of this volume is a Jew of the "reformed" type. The trend of the discussion and the conclusion are what might be found in a volume written by a Unitarian. There is here the gratuitous assumption common with this class of writers that events and records out of harmony with their preconceived fancies, beliefs or desires are "legendary" and "interpolations," and they are flouted.

A lack of space precludes quotations. No reputable biographer of Jesus we have known presents such incongruous guesses of his trial and death. The author's extreme desire to exculpate the Jews from their responsibility for the tragedy is manifest. The whole work denudes the great Teacher of all that is divine and supernatural, and accounts for his life and work on the crassest naturalistic grounds. The book is charmingly written and by indirection adds much to the history of the great Galilean. The volume closes thus: "Among the great and the good that the human race has produced, none has ever approached Jesus in universality of appeal and sway. He has become the most fascinating figure in history. * * * The Jew cannot help glorying in what Jesus has meant for the world; nor can he help hoping that Jesus may yet serve as a bond of union between Jew and gentile." Not often have we so enjoyed reading a volume as we have this one—representing, as it does, the present Jewish views of Jesus.

WILLIAM LESTER

A PUNGENT SUGGESTION

A RECENT letter to this department presents a laymen's view-point so clearly and so forcefully that I have succumbed to temptation and printed the epistle as it came, simply eliding the name and address of the sender—not that there is any particular point to the omission except that I do not like to use personal letters without express permission to reproduce them. And I realize that this time I am taking an ethical liberty. I take this opportunity to gratefully acknowledge the implied compliment to my literary ability—incidentally, I wish that it were deserved! One thing I do know: the writer of this letter has achieved a terseness of language and a forcefulness of expression that better anything that I might be tempted to laboriously concoct. Here is the case at court:—

"Permit me to suggest that you insert at some time in the course of THE BAPTIST a little preaching on the subject of self-effacement, as applied to church singers. I know that the space at your disposal is limited, but I believe you could put the idea across in a few crisp paragraphs if you feel on this subject as I do.

"Dr. Jowett has given three rules for fishing, which he says apply also in spiritual work. They are these: (1) Keep out of sight. (2) Keep further out of sight. (3) Keep still further out of sight. I believe that in many churches the spiritual tone would be much improved if this principle were heeded by the singers, as well as some other members of the congregation.

"Our object in going to church is to meet God, and it is unfortunate when the personality of the minister or any one else intrudes between us and God. I suppose that is why in the Christian Science services the personalities of the leaders are so obliterated. In so far as our attention is taken up with the people around us, even if only to admire their appearance, our communion with God is hindered. There is unquestioned advantage in the wearing of surplices, especially in view of the prevailing custom of scanty dress for women. But few churches can afford to supply their singers with these additional garments.

"To my mind it is an excellent plan for the choir to take seats with the congregation before the sermon. This has the double advantage of removing a number of people from the vision of the audience, helping the listeners to concentrate their attention on the message, and also of giving the preacher more persons before him to stimulate him to do his best. If the singers are really interested in the preaching they should be glad to change to a place where they can better see and hear the preacher.

"Another thing that often disturbs me is the unnecessary amount of gesticulation on the part of the leader. I know it is the established custom of music-leaders to make conspicuous motions, and I do not suppose that a word of protest from a layman would have any weight; yet I cannot refrain from observing that there is danger of the movements of the leader detracting rather than helping.

"Recently I attended a college glee-club concert where the leader stood in the half-circle with his men and only occasionally directed them with a nod. They sang as one man, and the effect was certainly more artistic than it would have been if he had been waving his arms like a semaphore officer in the center of the stage.

"In rehearsal it may be necessary for the leader to make a regular acrobat of himself, but when it comes to the time of public worship if the singers are doing reasonably well I think he should refrain from making himself conspicuous. For the spiritual loss would not be compensated by the artistic gain. In fact, from the artistic standpoint, I think that naturalness gives real art, and if the leader has to labor so hard to get a proper rendition, the effect is not really artistic."

FOR THE BUDDING COMPOSER

THIS department is often asked to advise as to openings for original compositions—what publisher to submit the works to, what terms to ask for, etc., etc.! And all too often, when the manuscripts come, they are poorly written, indefinite, and almost impossible from the engraver's standpoint! And the pathetic thing is that the material is often of value and of market use but the amateurish look of the mss. and the difficulty of its reading are such as to seriously handicap it in the publisher's eyes. It is to offset this weakness, at least to some degree, that we are reviewing a book that is not a "new issue"—it was published in 1917 by the H. W. Gray Co., of 2 West 45th Street, New York, and is entitled "HOW TO WRITE MUSIC," by Clement A. Harris, and priced at the modest sum of fifty cents. A careful perusal of its fifty-odd pages will certainly bring out many points of practical service to the writers and will surely react to sweeten the dispositions of the much-harried victims of the careless composer—that modest martyr of the composing room, the engraver! It can be stated as an axiom that the clearer we place our desires on the paper, the better chance we will have to hear the results approximate our dreams. This little booklet will be of invaluable aid to many a writer of music who flounders for lack of knowing just how to say what is in himself. Something of the scope covered may be adduced from the division headings: Choice of paper, Scoring, Barring, Clefs, Notation of Rhythm, Placing of notes, Stems, Legibility, Copyright—to mention but a few.

Anthems published by Novello & Co., London, England, H. W. Gray Co., agents for the United States.

The anthems whose titles appear above can be conscientiously recommended to all choirmasters desiring effective service material of no particular difficulty. They are uniformly well-written, of high grade, musically, in short—splendid examples of modern English sacred music. No particularly detailed analysis is called for. The names of the composers are sufficient warrant for their standing. All choir-libraries will be enriched by the possession of one or all of the numbers.

Any organist or choirmaster who is not so fortunate as to be recorded on the mailing list of the H. W. Gray Co., should hasten at once to remedy that lack. I value highly the Quarterly of new anthems and other sample material sent out by that firm. Get in touch with the company at 2 West 45th Street, New York, if you want such expert help. And do us the favor of mentioning THE BAPTIST—we are vain enough to desire that these companies may know that someone besides the editor reads THE BAPTIST MUSIC PAGE!

NEW WORLD MOVEMENT

OUR SHARE IN THE KINGDOM

April 30

"There's a reason"

Why:

On April 30, 1921, the fiscal year of our missionary organizations will close.

Between April 1 and April 30 over Four Million Dollars must be received to meet the first year's pledges made on the New World Movement.

It is an important and anxious date for our great Societies and Boards. We must not let them carry over any deficits.

Since April 30 falls on Sunday the books will remain open till May 5, to allow churches to remit to State Promotion Directors after the Sunday services.

A VIEW OF THE MOUNT OF OLIVES

THE BAPTIST is glad to be able to present to its readers this new and quite unusual view of this famous ridge. It gives a fresh appreciation of the beauty of the landscape and a hint of the wealth of scenery in Palestine yet undeveloped by photography. It makes one want to travel through the Holy Land with a kodak.

Christianity in a New World

Edited by PROF. E. D. BURTON, D.D.

Another volume of papers from representative Baptists on themes of living interest. The character and value of the work are evident at once when it is noted that among the authors are such men as Presidents W. H. P. Faunce and M. G. Svans, Professors E. D. Burton and H. E. Fosdick, and George W. Coleman, President of the Open Forum National Council, and that among the topics discussed are these: How shall we treat tradition? Can a nation be moral? Can business be Christian? Can Baptists co-operate? What is the modern Christian gospel? Is religion always in the making under the guidance of the Spirit?

Cloth, $1.25 net

The Religion of Jesus

By ALBERT G. LAWSON, D.D.

In method of treatment, descriptive rather than historical or philosophical; in style, addresses, not essays; in matter, Biblical; the work of a lover of good books—these four papers have the charm of sincerity and beauty in expression that well supports their practical purpose. Boards, 75 cents net

Manual for "Pathfinder" Girls

Compiled by PLINETTE ALLEN

In the "Pathfinder Girls" is contained a suggestion for independent organization of teen-age Sunday school classes, for the grouping of such classes for midweek club activities, or for a community or inter-church affiliation of young and older teen-age girls for all manner of approved club objects. This new and enlarged edition of the manual contains the necessary information as to equipment, program, achievement, and ceremonies.

Paper, 25 cents each; $2.50 a dozen

The Preceding God

By JAMES TAYLOR DICKINSON, D.D.

A collation of material from a varied and colorful literary output—sermons, addresses, letters from abroad. Occasional pieces, these, but possessing the charm of beauty coupled with ease and naturalness and having elements that fit them to serve more than the moments their author had in mind.

Cloth, $1.00 net

Story-Telling Lessons

By HENRY EDWARD TRALLE, M.A., Th.D.

We have in this volume a scientific approach to a popular subject, couched in simple, vigorous English. "The author handcuffs the reader's attention in the first chapter, and holds it captive to the end." Suitable not only for rapid reading, but a real text-book for use in training classes in the local churches and in community schools. The book is a product of twelve years' experience in telling stories and teaching story telling.

It is one in the series of volumes on religious education known as the Judson Training Manuals for the School of the Church. Cloth, 75 cents net

Hymns for the King's Children

A Song-Book for the Children's Division of the Sunday School

In this collection are 136 hymns, the words being set within the music. In addition, there are eight special services adapted for opening and closing periods for Easter, Thanksgiving, and Christmas, for patriotic, temperance, and missionary occasions, and combining Scripture reading, song, and prayer in reasonable proportions; ten additional hymns are given in these services.

Attention has been given to the requirements of each department in the Children's Division, and the range of children's voices has been kept in mind. A number of the favorite hymns of the church have been included. Special indexes of hymns adapted to the departments are provided, together with the indexes of titles and of first lines.

Boards, 40 cents; $35.00 a hundred

Friday's Footprints

By MARGARET T. APPEGARTH

Here are missionary stories—almost two-score of them—told by a master of story-telling who has so co-ordinated her work and who presents her material in such a fascinating way that to read her chapters is to take a personally conducted tour around the world of missionary interest. Miss Appegarth's charming style in expression of her thorough grasp of facts is most effective to win attention and to lodge information.

Fresh from the Field

Dr. John A. Earl has accepted an enthusiastic and unanimous call to become the pastor of the First Church, St. Paul, Minn. He will close his work with Des Moines University on June 1 and begin work at St. Paul at once. The church has voted him a three month's vacation following the meetings of the Northern Baptist Convention and he will spend July, August and September on the Pacific Coast, returning to St. Paul for the opening of work in the fall. An associate who will have charge of the recreational and educational work of the church will act as pastor in his absence.

In a personal letter to the editor, Dr. John Clifford of London speaks of having been robbed of his energy by his accident of some weeks ago but adds, "I am recovering slowly, I am happy to say."

On the afternoon of Easter Sunday, Dr. Shailer Mathews of Chicago spoke at the forum meeting in Dallas, Texas. In the morning of the same day, he occupied the pulpit of the First Church of Dallas, Dr. Truett, the pastor, conducting the services. Dr. Truett has recently been holding special meetings, doing his own preaching and speaking each noon to great crowds in a theater.

Mount Hermon School for boys, Northfield, Mass., founded by D. L. Moody, will celebrate its fortieth anniversary July 30-Aug. 1.

The First Church, Fort Worth, Texas, Dr. J. Frank Norris, pastor, which claims to have the largest Sunday school in the world, broke its own record on April 3 when 4,295 attended the sessions of the school.

Edwin Faxon Osborn, 809 E. Washington St., Ann Arbor, Mich., has issued a challenge to anybody to debate him on the subject, "Resolved that the habitual use of tobacco is injurious to the individual using it and to the race." He, of course, will take the affirmative and the debates may be held in the principal city of any county or state.

Pastor E. A. Blakesley has resigned at Codell, Kans., and will finish his work on June 1. In addition to his pastoral work he has been teaching in the High School.

Rev. F. E. Witcraft, university pastor at Lawrence, Kans., was ordained to the gospel ministry on April 11 at Lawrence.

"Bethlehem Kristlig Kalendar fur 1921" is a book sent to us from Stockholm. It is edited by Dr. J. Bystrom and published by the Swedish Baptist Book Concern there. One of its articles is illustrated by portraits of Drs. J. H. Franklin, J. B. Gambrell, E. W. Hunt and E. Y. Mullins, who visited Sweden last summer.

Rev. Robert W. Van Kirk, who acted as pastoral supply for the Church of Christ, Grand Rapids, Mich., during February and March, is now visiting friends in Washington, D. C., and may be addressed at 2375 R. I. Ave., N. E.

The First Church of Chicago has extended a call to Dr. Carter Helm Jones of Philadelphia.

Help! Help! Help!!

Why did we ever ask our readers to send us their Pet Peeves? If mercy is granted we promise never to do such a thing again. Some are peeved because we do not come out in favor of the Irish Republic. Then there is the League of Nations, alien immersion and one subscriber goes so far as to say, "When I'm right I shoot." O brethren, have a heart!

Killam's Kollum

Can You Beat It?

DEACON SMALL has discontinued his copy of THE BAPTIST and walks a mile to borrow one of a neighbor who has just subscribed. He saves $2.50 and we understand is greatly benefited by the walk. It should also be said that Deacon Small knows a good thing when he sees it and is willing to go after it even if he is unwilling to pay for it.

Denominational Illiteracy

Brother Dense is not in the same class with Deacon Small. He has never had enough interest even to borrow a copy of a denominational newspaper. Brother Dense, however, can be depended upon to speak at length and with feeling upon all matters of denominational policy. He is perfectly sure what should be done although he has no certain knowledge of what is being done. He has all the fluency and "cock-sureness" which characterizes a certain type of ignorance. Would it not be a good thing to take a convention census of our denominational illiterates? Who will send THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS to the list we now have on file? They will deal a death blow to such density.

Depletion by Matrimony

Sister Charity Jones has recently completed a tabulation of the losses which the Baptist church in her town has suffered in the past decade through matrimony. It is both illuminating and alarming. It has come to pass that the church dreads to see its young people leave the junior department for practically it means that they are soon to be lost to the church. "It is taken for granted," says she, "that when a Protestant marries a Catholic the Protestant will cease to protest. But why should practically all the young men in our church who marry Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, et cetera, feel that it is their duty to join the churches of which their brides are members? The Baptist girls seem to think that they ought also to go with their husbands. It is a strange providence." Sister Charity is right and she is wrong. She is right in calling attention to a condition which is all too common. She is wrong in thinking that the facts are traceable to a "strange providence". The answer is perfectly simple. If there is no deep-seated conviction in the case of our Baptist young people it is much more easy and convenient for them to make a change than it would be for their partners to do so. Can we reasonably expect any great measure of loyalty upon the part of those whom we have allowed to remain in ignorance of the challenging work of our denomination? To these young people who come into our churches we owe at least the care which will provide them with the facilities for knowing our history and far-flung interests. Why not give each new convert a year's subscription to THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS? It would mean more than a baptismal certificate.

The Air We Breathe

JOHN R. MOTT remarked in Chicago the other day that he is increasingly convinced of the importance of the atmosphere in which men live and in which they attempt various forms of human service. If they live in the spirit of Jesus, with the consciousness of the divine presence, they will come to a knowledge of the truth and to an effectiveness in service which they will otherwise miss. And he quoted the Scripture, "In thy light we see light."

The observation is not new, but it is as timely now as it has been in every generation in the past. Men have always noted that contentious assemblies often achieve harmony when they give themselves to prayer. Wise moderators have more than once turned a gathering into a prayer meeting in order that men's judgments might be clarified and their decisions made wise and kindly by a sense of God. Men cannot quarrel when they are on their knees. They rapidly achieve unity when there comes the sense that the place in which they are is hallowed by Christ's presence. Christ and contentiousness do not abide together.

One of the great tasks of Northern Baptists in these weeks immediately ahead is to develop an atmosphere, is to come into that place where our thoughts and our plans shall be charged with the sense of God. All of us love truth and are seeking truth. All of us are zealous for Christ's kingdom. We must do our seeking and our working in Christ's spirit. The solution of all our difficulties and misunderstandings is to be found here. This is the way to the avoidance of mistakes. Give us an atmosphere of suspicion and distrust and the devil will chuckle. Give us an atmosphere of faith and love and brotherly kindness and we shall achieve a real and lasting fellowship in Christ.

See Whence This Prophet Derives Honor.

QUITE interesting is the manner in which the various utterances of the Baptist denomination in the field of applied Christianity manage to secure publicity.

No denomination has produced more clear and influential prophets of the new age than ours. But for the most part the pulpit and the press of the denomination are silent as the grave on the subject, and the superficial observer might suppose that the social consciousness of the Baptist brotherhood has not advanced an inch since the days of John Bunyan. Thus it would seem that the most democratic people in the world, as we habitually boast of ourselves, are among the least able to discover the practical implications of their democracy.

But our bushel has not quite extinguished the rays of our candle.

The Church League for Industrial Democracy, a national organization composed of members of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in an advertising campaign which it is promoting, recently honored the Baptists with a full half-page display in the Baltimore News, quoting at length from various declarations of the Northern Baptist Convention and other denominational agencies.

This was no accident, nor a half-hearted experiment performed in a corner. For The Living Church, an Episcopal weekly published at Milwaukee, in its issue of April 23, gives two of its best consecutive pages to a special article under the head of "Baptist Social Service"; and its treatment is dignified, comprehensive and thoroughly sympathetic.

What would happen if a Baptist paper should do such a thing? The fact is that the Baptist denomination uses the soft pedal on its principles when it comes to their application to the vital social problems of the times, and acts as if it did not half believe in them. We owe thanks to the Episcopalians for rescuing us from an oblivion to which we seemed about to consign ourselves.

Cannot Afford Brains

PERHAPS no other single phenomenon in social life today indicates more strikingly the folly and chaos of these times than the state of education. Many public school organizations are reported as being so near to bankruptcy that the school terms must be cut down. In others many of the pupils can attend school only half-days. School buildings are in bad condition and afford insufficient room, and money is lacking for improvements and for new buildings.

On the other hand there is an unprecedented rush of students to the higher institutions, overcrowding them and overtaxing their facilities for instruction. They are calling for larger endowment and equipment. The University of Chicago calls for $10,000,000; the University of Pennsylvania, $10,000,000; Illinois University, $10,000,000; and scores of other askings for educational purposes run into the millions each.

Under ordinary circumstances such a hunger for learning would awaken in the American people a high enthusiasm. It would be welcomed as the dawning of day for a higher civilization in the new world. But as things are, we complain gloomily about the tax rate, stupidly appropriate billions for war purposes, spend other billions for luxuries and calmly cut off the educational opportunities for our children on the plea that we cannot afford to maintain schools for them. We have millions for soldiers, millions for self-indulgence, mites for students and schools.

How long, fellow citizens are we going to starve the mind of the nation in order to feed its pride of power, its pocket and its paunch? It is time we were getting ready to answer that question; because a national day of judgment is approaching, and is not far off.

This May Be a Boundry Line Between Two Eras

A LONG with the letter of Dr. John Clifford, which appears on another page of this paper, interpreting the reply of the free churches of Great Britain to the Lambeth appeal of the Episcopal bishops for greater unity, came to the office of THE BAPTIST a copy of the Times and Freeman containing a verbatim report of that reply as it was given to the public.

That reply was formulated by a joint committee of the Federal Council of the Evangelical Free Churches and the National Council of the Evangelical Free Churches. In these councils the Baptists of Great Britain as well as other evangelical bodies are represented. The committee appreciated so gravely the importance of the declaration it was preparing that the occasion seemed to it likely to "prove to be an epoch in the history of Christendom."

A sympathetic consideration for each other, a common desire for the attainment of that unity of Christians for which Jesus prayed, and an increasingly clear understanding of each other's point of view, are manifest on both sides; and the reply, studied side by side with the appeal, serves to bring into clear light precisely what are the final obstacles to union that must be removed by surrender.

Cleared of all circumlocution, the free churches stand for the direct lordship of Christ over the soul and in the church, for the validity of any church organization which he accepts and blesses and for the validity of the ministry constituted by any such church under its own responsibility to him. They definitely reject any and all proposals by which the validity of church order, ordinances and ministry may depend on episcopal succession or on any historic creed. They remind the bishops that already the free churches enjoy among themselves a wider fellowship than the Episcopal church can offer them, and that until it frankly recognizes the validity of their several communions and of their administration of baptism and the Lord's Supper, that church is imposing a condition of unity which, even if some of them should accept it, would produce schism in other directions. They suggest that the surest approach to union is that along which they are already proceeding, namely, the maintenance of a common gospel message, a common fellowship in the sacraments and a common co-operation in service.

The committee frankly says that it does not speak officially for the several denominations represented by it, and has no power to do so; but there is no question that on the issues at stake it has interpreted truly the mind of the free churches.

In the nature of the case a discussion of baptism in relation to the subject of church union was omitted; and there is a good deal of phrasing to which many Baptists would refuse assent. In fact the committee exhibits embarrassment because at some points it could not find grounds of settled agreement among the several bodies represented, on which it might tread with firm and decisive steps.

But in the most vital questions involved in the appeal, the reply makes it perfectly clear that even when men are in the most serious, irenic and sympathetic mood, no union on the basis of an historic succession, of an established order, or of a creed has a ghost of a chance for realization. There must be surrender, and the surrender must be ecclesiastical rather than spiritual. With all the goodwill in the world, the course of Christian development cannot be reversed. The democratic communions have set their faces towards the age of the Spirit and are entering the era of a new and spiritual catholicity in which the Baptist dream of the centuries will come to increasing fulfillment.

Keep the Home Fires Burning

IN these times of confusion, when ideals and morals seem drifting towards the wreck already accomplished in business and government, it is refreshing to turn to the ever radiant Christian ideal of the family, namely, the union in pure love of a fit man and a fit woman for life, to found and maintain a home as a center of love, service and culture.

Only as we recall and enshrine that ideal, with a view to building the whole social structure about it and true to it, shall we begin to emerge from chaos and evolve the better civilization for which the whole world is groaning.

Amidst innumerable destructive influences growing out of pagan ideals and customs, bad social organization and individual imperfections, the Christian family has endured and still endures like a lighthouse at night on the coast of a stormy sea.

Blessed be those pairs of young Christian men and women who, under the tremendous difficulties that surround their enterprise, are faithfully giving their best together to sustain and make worth while a normal, Christian family life. Whatever may be said of others, these are clearly the creators of the only civilization that is fit to be.

Particular attention is called to an article by General Director Aitchison on page 405. The fiscal year is almost at an end, but the books will be kept open until May 5 in order that no receipts which should properly be credited on the year may be omitted. Many churches are making herculean efforts to see that all pledges are paid up to May 1 and some are securing in addition generous cash subscriptions. If such a policy is followed by all the churches, our great societies will be able to enter the new year with confidence and without crippling indebtedness. Is there any more important task for pastors and churches during these next few days than that of bringing the current year of the New World Movement to a triumphant conclusion?

San Francisco Not a Friend to Grace

But a Christian minority is and always has been heroically active for the city's redemption—The First Baptist church is the oldest Protestant church in the city—Under the direction of Dr. Arthur S. Phelps it sustains its high record of former years

"THIS is a great city," wrote Dea. Meadows to his wife, on his first visit to the city of San Francisco, after returning to his lodgings from a stroll up Market St., under the thrill of lights, throngs, and blare of music, "only how I wish I'd come here before I was converted!" Most of the population have. There are nearly a million folks about the bay, more than half of whom dwell in "the city." 200,000 of them, we are told, care nothing for any church: 250,000 are said to be Romanists; and 25,000 struggle for the weak churches. It is the "Frenchiest" city in America. There are no Sunday laws. Prohibition is voted down by her congressional representatives in state legislation at every opportunity because they know what they will get if they don't. The papers, some of them, attack censorship of moving pictures, which run at full blast Sunday with concerts at morning church hours. The vilest of dance halls are closed with difficulty by Arthur Layne, the determined police captain. (He was raised a Baptist.) Isn't it strange that when the papers call upon everybody to "boost for a bigger city," they don't realize that the kind of people that will raise the city's tone, increase its volume of business, and reduce the expense of its jails, are pushed away by the corrupt standards advocated by these papers? New York is a good second to San Francisco as the kind of field that Jesus Christ would have chosen in the twentieth century.

But God has his heaven in this

Washington's Prayer for the United States of America

ALMIGHTY GOD, we make our earnest prayer that Thou wilt keep the United States in Thy holy protection; that Thou wilt incline the hearts of the citizens to cultivate a spirit of subordination and obedience to government; and entertain a brotherly affection and love for one another and for their fellow citizens of the United States at large.

And finally, that Thou wilt most graciously be pleased to dispose us all to do justice, to love mercy, and to demean ourselves with that charity, humility and pacific temper of mind which were the characteristics of the divine Author of our blessed religion, and without a humble imitation of Whose example in these things we can never hope to be a happy nation.

Grant our supplication, we beseech Thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord; Amen.

brilliant city. When the gold-seekers swarmed hither in forty-nine, the seekers after God came with them, and founded that year the First Church, the oldest Protestant church in the state. It occupies a corner, though too far out, on the principal street of the city. It has had a succession of pastors, of whom it cannot be written that "the seven had her to wife, and last of all the woman died also." Dr. J. Q. A. Henry, whose name is like the fragrance of the Master's garments throughout the Christian world, Dr. George E. Burlingame, who laid his heart next to the city's heart, pastoral supplies like Bryant Wilson, Russell Brougher, and other earnest men, have maintained the spiritual momentum of the church. The personnel is of a rare enthusiasm and godliness. Her reapers are swinging the scythe in all lands. In important official positions at this moment in our own state are twelve members.

Everybody asks: "How has the First Church, in a city like San Francisco, been able to maintain itself in such strength for four years without a pastor?" It is owing to the spirit that prevails among her splendid people. Three characteristics stand out: a deep religious life expressing itself in numberless prayer-meetings, in soul-winning at the city rescue mission, in old-fashioned convictions of duty; a sociability that is like a warm south wind blowing off the hills of heaven; executive administration of a dozen different departments of church life. And one might add a fourth element of force, the keen interest expressed in the city's moral reform movements.

Under the present ministry, about seventy-five have been added to the membership during the past six and a half months, without special meetings. New converts are born constantly in the Sunday night services, which average as large numerically as at any time in the church's history. Dr. Arthur S. Phelps, who has been preaching pastor since September, has declined the unanimous and hearty call of the church, but remains as stated supply during the interim between pastorates. A debt of $3,000 has been met, and $2,500 approximately been added to the current income; besides an advance in pledges to the New World Movement. A new evangelistic association, composed of men of the various churches of the city, has just been organized, and it is believed much will be accomplished through its street meetings and other aggressive service for the Master. Recent visits of Drs. Brooks and Agar have been an inspiration to the church. This church has a mighty appeal to the denomination.

The above facts will show why the old First Church is so mighty a force for Jesus Christ in California, and has so certain and brilliant a future before it.

The Free Churches Reply to the Lambeth Appeal

Gospel first—No union on the illimitable vague—A call for clear thinking—Episcopal ordination intolerable—Creeds no basis of union: they are fetters—Free churches of England give a courteous but decisive refusal

BY JOHN CLIFFORD

AT last the first reply to the Lambeth appeal for reunion issued by the bishops has been framed and sent forth. Chosen men representing the National Council of Free Evangelical Churches and the Federal Council deliberated long; and now the report of their work is in the hands of the members of the churches. It is not authoritative for any one church. Each denomination will, it is expected, be invited to voice its own response; but this document prepared by a body of leaders composed of members of all the churches will serve for guidance to each denomination, and will afford our Anglican friends an opportunity of judging of our spirit and purpose, the principles of which we are trustees, and the attitude we take towards the Episcopal proposals.

Of course it is fraternal in spirit, courteous in tone, dignified in statement and irenic in purpose. It seeks to be equally just to the claims of ecclesiastical unity and of New Testament truth. It is frank but not full. It gives the vital factors of the free church positions; but not the whole of them; it does not surrender one of the great convictions which impelled our founders to separate themselves from the church established and ruled by Parliament; and which have sustained and inspired our predecessors through three centuries in which they have endured shame and obloquy and suffering for the sake of the gospel of Christ. In a whole-hearted manner it repeats the desire for fellowship and co-operation in various ways for the advancement of the kingdom of God, and asks for further discussion of the subject.

The Gospel All in All

The most distinctive note of the free church reply is, of necessity, the absolutely primary place given to the gospel of Jesus. This is the standpoint of the response. From the gospel of Jesus all else follows about the church, the ministry and the ordinances. That gospel is first and last; not the church of the churches; not the ministry; not the ordinances.

This is pivotal to the reply. The gospel is set forth in these words: "In the gospel, Christ is proclaimed as the power and the wisdom of God unto salvation. This salvation is essentially a personal relation of the soul to God—a relation which is immediate, and is constituted by grace on God's part and by faith on man's. Through this gospel, the Holy Spirit is shed abroad in the hearts of those that believe; and this common possession of the Spirit creates a fellowship in which the humblest and loneliest Christian is a fellow-citizen with all the saints. This fellowship, which is the church, gives visible expression to its corporate life in common faith, order, and worship; and to it belongs the vocation of witnessing for Christ and of winning the world for him and thus bringing in the kingdom of God." Therefore the essentials of the church are in the gospel and not in organization, and hence the question of organization takes at once a secondary place. In that gospel and of its very essence is "the priesthood of all believers," and from these facts it follows that we cannot and dare not compromise even for the sake of unity itself. "This, indeed, is our supreme and, in a sense, sole principle, for it contains the others; the church is the outcome of the gospel—hence the importance which has always been attached by evangelical churches to the 'preaching of the Word'—and the church thus made by the gospel must be free."

The Demand for Clear Thinking

If the first distinctive note of the reply is its strong emphasis on the gospel, the second is its resolute ef-

It is impossible not to respect men who have strong principles and convictions, and who will not falter with them for the sake of any gain. Many of us feared that Lambeth was a little too optimistic, though we determined to say nothing at the time, but to wait till the Non-conformist leaders spoke. The task for the next few years is a thorough discussion of the theological questions involved, and we are far from hopeless concerning the results of such a discussion on the problem of reunion.—Church Times.

fort to clear the ambiguities of the Lambeth appeal out of the way.

These are not few. It is not made certain that our free evangelical churches are recognized as part of the church of Christ. There is no frank and full affirmation that the free churches are "churches of Christ." The appeal leaves it vague. The reply says this must be cleared up, and our claim must be freely and frankly admitted, not for the sake of our denominations, but for the sake of truth and fact. We are trustees for New Testament teaching concerning the church as well as concerning the gospel. Union cannot be based on the illimitable vague. Ambiguities open the door for insincerity, unreality and the paralysis of the religious life. Clear thinking is a religious duty, and for ecclesiastical union it is as necessary as a gracious spirit. We must not in our quest for unity add to the temptations to unreality in religion.

Episcopal Ordination

—is put aside on the general plea that free churchmen "cannot consider any form of polity which claims to be an exclusive channel of grace." The question is asked, what is meant by the statement that free church ministers should be authorized to officiate in Anglican churches by a commission through episcopal ordination. But it is the judgment of free churchmen that re-ordination is not only impossible; but the very suggestion is intolerable.

The idea of episcopal ordination is a product of that conception of the church as one visible organization, vast and all-comprehending, which has taken possession of some minds, and is held to be based on the prayer of the Lord Jesus for unity. That prayer is for a unity like that of the Father and the Son, and surely that is not an external unity; it is a unity of spirit and purpose and aim and service with infinite variety of manifestation and method of action. Moreover history condemns with one voice huge mechanical ecclesiastical organizations as hindrances to real religion, feeders of tyranny, tending to immobility and superstition on one hand, and to magic and mental decrepitude on the other.

The Lambeth appeal takes us back to the great creeds of the churches as foundation for reunion; but the reply indicates the unsatisfactory character of that proposal.

Creeds as Basis of Reunion

Free church men value creeds as records of important battles of thought in the life of the church, and as registers of decisions reached, if not generally accepted, and of conclusions affirmed though differently interpreted.

But though we take a curious interest in the charts and maps of the men of the seventeenth century, yet we do not use them in crossing the seas; so though we see much that is historically interesting in the creeds of the churches, we must take our way by the light that shines from God's Word and the teaching of the Spirit or we shall not reach the desired haven. To take the creeds of the churches as grounds for union is to turn the past into a fetter instead of using it for instruction and inspiration. Creeds are exclusive. That is how they have been used and mostly they exclude the most honest, clear thinking and conscientious.

"Where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty, and where there is liberty, truth is sure to triumph in the end of the day.

With this reply in their hands our different denominations will frame their own answers; but it may be safely asserted that they will endorse all that is here, and most likely make additions of their own. Congregationalists and Baptists owe it to the Anglicans of all schools as well as to the truth of the gospel, to make their own principles and position clear.

Christ Jesus the Head of the church is its Leader, and if we closely follow him it will be proved that our fathers and founders were on the right lines; that the gospel must take precedence of all organizations; that the ministry of that gospel must be open to all his disciples, and the "ordinations" are only the symbols of facts in the spiritual life, and not the creators of that life.

A Great Merchant's Tribute to the Christian Ministry

Forty years did not dim the memory nor weaken the influence of George F. Pentecost — John Wanamaker went to Boston to stand with bared head in the Warren Avenue Baptist Church

BY WALTER CALLEY

ONE day last autumn a business man known all over the world for vast and successful commercial enterprises, one who has been prominent in the political life of this country, being at one time a member of the Cabinet, made a journey from Philadelphia to Boston that he might visit the old Warren Avenue Baptist Church. At the request of a friend, the superintendent of the Sunday school, I met the visitor at the church where the three of us spent a memorable morning.

It seemed a strange thing that such a man should make a pilgrimage to a distant city for the purpose of visiting a church edifice without architectural distinction or general historical interest. He was not a Baptist, but a Presbyterian, and had no intimate association with the religious life of Boston. He soon revealed the object of his visit. He said that he had met with a great loss in the death of his pastor and his heart sought those scenes with which his friend's life and work had been associated. Forty years had passed since George F. Pentecost was pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, but the nine years of his ministry there had lived with him and he no doubt had often talked with his distinguished parishioner about it. It was that he might see the building and carry away with him a picture of the scene of his pastor's work in the years long gone that he had come to Boston.

Before he entered he looked upon the exterior of the church with deep interest, and then asked to see the prayer meeting and Sunday-school room. He stood for a few moments in meditation at the desk and then studied the portrait of Dr. Pentecost which hung upon the wall. From this room we went to the study where he sat in the chair which in all probability had been used by Dr. Pentecost, and we waited in silence while he seemed to be endeavoring to make that past of which his pastor was the central figure, live again. We went from this room to the auditorium, now greatly changed. Standing near the pulpit and taking in the whole room with a sweeping glance, he said, "So this is where Dr. Pentecost preached. I want to take back to Mrs. Pentecost a mental photograph of this place with which her husband was so intimately associated. What a great gift of God are our pastors. I owe much to the men who have led us in spiritual service. How little would be accomplished by the church without them. The church does not appreciate its ministers. Christian men fail to rightly estimate their influence upon individual lives and the cause of Christ in general. They are worthy of our love and highest honor."

Drawing my friend and myself near to him, he prayed—prayed with the simplicity of a little child. He asked God's blessing upon both of us; thanked him for leading him into fellowship with him through Jesus Christ his Lord. He thanked him for the Christian ministry, and asked his blessing upon Christian leaders who were bearing heavy burdens, making great sacrifice and giving their best to lead the church of God to higher things. With great earnestness he prayed for God's blessing upon the church in all its enterprises.

Perhaps it would be well to draw the curtain here and let that scene make its own impression. A man prominent in the world of business and in statecraft, one who had attained great financial prosperity, has at the heart of him the kingdom of God. In him the spiritual dominates the material. More to him than the mighty men of business who as the heads of the many departments have made possible the success of his enterprises, are the men who have been his leaders in spiritual things. After all these years of material success, to him the crowning joy is the fellowship with Jesus Christ and those who love him.

It was the same John Wanamaker who when the writer was a young pastor helped and strengthened him by his friendly interest and his love for the kingdom, only grown richer in the grace of God as well as in material things.

Summer Bible Hours Are Happy Ones

Bootsy and Allah prefer Bibles to balls—Native children and foreign born, Protestant and Catholic, rich and poor, Jews, Chinese, Mexicans, Italians, Hungarians and Negroes flock to the D. V. B. S.—Bolsheviki despise churches but welcome the schools—Their children sing hymns

BY HARRIET CHAPPELL

"WHEN shall we have Daily Vacation Bible School again?" the children began to ask last September, and the question is ready whenever they meet a vacation-school teacher on the street. "Fresh Air" funds provide for some of the poorest of our city children, but those of many classes, some quite prosperous, must often depend upon the D. V. B. S. for any helpful summer program or outings.

Enthusiasm Grew Daily

A host of varied incidents about the schools have appeared in the reports sent in by the workers of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society. Here is a culling of some that center about the Bible work. Playgrounds and the hand-work taught in public schools have familiarized us with two features of work in the vacation-school program, and the music has had the benefit of special development until there is a distinctive collection of songs and the tradition of a correct and happy manner of singing. But the Bible work, with the related habit talks, is the part of special importance to the churches; and the Baptist schools have the advantage of a keen interest in the Bible stories on the part of the home mission teachers, to which the children respond heartily.

For examples of the general impression made by the schools, listen to this from Mrs. Fannie E. Reid of Philadelphia: "After five weeks of personal touch with the D. V. B. S. as principal of my own school at Shiloh, I am convinced that it is a wonderful agency for creating a community interest in religion." Or this: "Our school, the first one ever held in this town (Milford, Mass.) was a great success. It started with a good interest on the part of the children and the enthusiasm grew stronger every day until we closed the school."

Many foreign-born children revere some portion at least of the Scripture stories and are well trained in them, while they have serious doubts of the piety of any Protestant. So the Protestant teacher can most quickly earn authority for herself by proving a mastery of the Bible stories, while the Bible words will demonstrate their own age-long power to feed the lambs.

"Do You Think They Will Kill Him?"

Shiloh, a Philadelphia Baptist school, won this commendation from an expert of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, who had been visiting many schools as a speaker: "Of all the schools I've visited, this is the best from three angles; first attendance, second order, and third the attention given the leader while she was giving the Bible lesson. Most of the schools seem to have the idea they are for play; yours gives a different impression."

It was in this school that the following incident occurred. Two little street boys, Bootsy and Allah, were very troublesome and had to be given seats to themselves. The principal said to them later, "If you promise me that you will be good boys and not give the teacher any more trouble, I'll give each of you one of these nice balls." The ready answer came, "Oh we will, Mrs. R., but can we have a Bible 'stead of a ball?"

In an Italian mission in Lawrence it was noticed that the interest increased with the continuation of a series of stories. Continuity is a great help to the children's interest, as it provides new stories which have relation to some familiar character or place, and it also helps in the recollection of the stories. In this mission the day that Joseph was sold to the merchantmen one of the boys asked, "Do you think they will kill poor little Joseph when they get him down into Egypt?" At the scene where Joseph makes himself known to his brethren the children excitedly clapped their hands. When at last they buried Joseph, a girl inquired with a sigh, "Will you tell us some more about Joseph tomorrow?"

Four-fifths Catholics

At the other end of the country in a school in Seattle where eighty-two out of 107 were Catholics, the Bible memory work won mention as being quite wonderful. The children were frequently called upon to repeat verses and they showed that they had retained them well. Several of the most regular pupils said, "When I first came to this 'Sunday-school' I didn't know anything about the Bible; now I do and I like it."

At Judson Memorial, out of 114 girls registered, sixty earned certificates for good attendance and work, fifteen won rewards for Bible memory work and six wrote Bible stories for commencement. Several visitors commented upon the improvement of the children in personal habits and in the spirit with which they came to the school, which demonstrated the immediate effect of the teaching received, working out into the lives.

A BIBLE STORY IN A NEW YORK D. V. B. S.

One of the largest visible results, says another teacher, is the realization that the sayings of Jesus are not limited to a few but apply to all mankind, and this realization comes when Catholic and Protestant listen to the same stories and children from crowded tenements listen side by side with those from more favored sections.

The schools were conducted by staffs of all sizes. On an average it seems that one teacher is able to care for not more than twenty-five children well. The numbers are greatly enlarged, however, by the skillful use of monitors and the help of volunteer teachers.

All Creeds and Races

All creeds and races are gathered into these schools but perhaps the latest mixture was that of a school at a Mexican mission in Denver. "The Mexican children were in the lead with thirty-two enrolled. Next came fifteen Spanish children, most of them recently from Cuba. Then came smaller numbers of Jewish, Chinese, Syrians and Americans.

At another Mexican school in San Diego a novel feature was introduced in making the approach through English. The Mexican and Italian children came from homes where English was not spoken, so instruction in English was promised as an inducement to the parents for them to permit the children to attend. About thirty school readers were borrowed from a public school near by and the children spent part of each session in reading. Becoming interested in the Bible stories the children made request that the Bible be used for the reading textbook. So many of the children joined the industrial class of this mission in the fall that it had to be divided into two sections, each meeting weekly.

An important situation with one group is reported by a Cleveland worker who says, "Experience has taught me that parents (among the Hungarians) are not willing to send their children to Sunday school, as they are to week-day activities which they suppose are not religious. These parents are usually Bolsheviks and are absolutely opposed to churches. They must be won before they are willing to send their children to Sunday school." The vacation school proves an effective means for winning them.

As a worker in the new South Chicago Neighborhood House suggests, it is cheering to think that the best results of this seed-sowing work are far in the future. She says, "It was not only in the school room that they remembered what they had learned, but we could hear in the streets and in the back yards groups of children singing, 'Holy, Holy, Holy,' and 'Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us.' They may not understand the meaning of it all now but the days will come when they will."

A Hint for Your Life

BY P. H. J. LERRIGO

In foreign mission service the key man is the one who, having mastered the language and become familiar with the customs of the country can serve as the centre and directing force of the evangelical activities of a large area. He is commonly called the station missionary and his duties are varied and numerous. He will train evangelists, organize churches, choose leaders, institute schools, build houses, dispense medicine, advise pastors, conduct itineraries, serve on committees, council with state officers, translate scripture and tracts, write books, promote hygiene and sanitation, transact mission business, preach the Gospel and win men and women to Jesus Christ.

There are many branch lines in missionary service, all of them honorable and worth while, but this is the main line, to which all others are more or less tributary. To undertake such a task one needs a simple devotion to Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour, with a determination to make Him known to others; a physical equipment which will enable one to withstand hardship as a good soldier of Jesus Christ; a mental equipment in which common sense is the prevailing quality; an adequate training for leadership which should include ordinarily high school, college and theological seminary; a thorough knowledge of the Word of God, together with experience in bringing men to Jesus Christ.

The preeminent need of all our fields is for such men as are here described to man vacant stations and open new ones.

Assam—"Workers are breaking in a health and spirit. There are six evangelist missionaries only to lead a Christian church of eighteen thousand, in saving four million people speaking seventy-four languages and dialects—and five stations are vacant!"

Congo—"Five families are imperatively needed for evangelistic and educational work, two of which should be prepared to do work along the lines of an institutional church at Matadi, a growing center of civilization. At present there is no missionary at Mukimvika a work which has been constantly curtailed by being intermittently sustained."

South India—"Eleven stations in the Telugu Mission are without a station missionary to do the touring, evangelizing and other work needed on the same number of fields. The need is very urgent for strong, able and consecrated men.

Japan—"We beg of you to send us reinforcements at once. Our force is now shattered and bleeding and our veterans are getting weary unto death. It is men we need and without them our work is certainly going to suffer irreparable loss."

West China—"There is great danger of underestimating the opportunity for work as a 'station missionary,'—whether his task is to be that of doctor, teacher or preacher. The West China University is today turning out the finished product,—men who are to become the future builders of a Christian civilization for Western China,—because some station doctor, teacher, or preacher, sometime in the past, had the ability to pick men of promise and to leave his impress on them.

There is immediate pressing need for at least thirty-eight station missionaries at the present time.

Why Do Only Christians Sing Hymns?

Try sitting erect for twenty years with a brass band on your head, or live in a temple on the top of a hill 4000 feet high where no hymn is ever heard; then you will understand the spirit of Christian song—How Confucius, Gotama, Jesus and Mahomet died

BY ROBERT F. FITCH

AND when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives." (Matthew 26:30.)

It was when reading these words that the question came to me with special force. I had been born in China, had mingled with Chinese of various religious faiths since early childhood, had met certain Confucian scholars and a few Buddhist priests for whom it was impossible not to conceive a deep respect, and yet not in one of them had I once detected the spontaneous spirit of song, of joy and gladness, and of praise to the Creator, or even to some primal Power. I had spent one summer on the Island of P'u-T'o, one of the most romantic spots in all China, covered with temples, wild rock formations, and beautiful beaches of sand along which the pilgrims wend their way. On this island I had talked with hermits. I remember one of these men with a brass crown on his head who claimed that for over twenty years he had never reclined in a sleeping posture, in order that by sitting upright the mental and spiritual might always predominate within and never give way to the physical. I had spent an entire summer in the T'ien T'ai Mountains where were great monasteries, and to one of these monasteries alone was attached one hundred and eight hermitages, situated along the bank of a stream in the forests. These monasteries are the center of Higher Buddhism for China, and to a considerable extent have served this same purpose for Japan. These monasteries were somewhat difficult of access, and situated about four thousand feet above the level of the sea. Yet never among these men who inhabited this place and had forever renounced the world, did I ever detect the spirit of song. There were formal chants in praise of Buddha, but they were formal.

Songless Mosque at Hangchow

In Hangchow we have a Mohammedan Mosque, one of the ancient landmarks of the city and yet in none of its devotees have I seen any proof of a possession of surplus, a surplus which is evidenced by the spontaneous spirit of song.

Still less in this spirit of song in evidence among the masses. There were the ancient Vedic Hymns, there are formal chants to-day, in non-Christian faiths, but it can be truly said that throughout the world to-day, only in Christian communities do faith, hope, and love exist in such surplus measure that they make the soul of men to seek suitable expression in song. The heathen world is a songless world.

Raptures of Judean Song

Even in Judaism, before the radiant message of the Gospel had come to men, do we find hymns of praise and of gladness. Perhaps one of the earliest expressions is found in the Song of Moses and the Children of Israel which begins with these words,—"I will sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea." After the victory of Deborah and Barak over the hosts of Sisera we have their song of exultation,—"Praise ye the Lord for the avenging of Israel, when the people willingly offered themselves." In the times of David, even in the captivity in Babylon, and in post-Babylonian times do we have psalms of faith, resignation, and of joy. Even in the presence of sorrow and of trial, men are called upon to see a beneficent purpose and "to give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; because his mercy endureth forever." In the days of Nehemiah when the wall was being rebuilt, "The singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer. Also that day they offered great sacrifices and

---

It is a marvel to me that though Christ knew, more intimately than we can ever know, the seeming tragedy of life, the hatred of men, he nevertheless had a clairvoyant faith and a radiant love towards his Father, and his attitude towards those who drove the nails into his hands was that of one who was pleading for erring brothers. He irradiated the souls of men and revealed the true heart of God so that men sang in this world as little children sing in a home where love is the primal experience of their lives.

rejoiced: for God had made them to rejoice with great joy." Among the prophets, in times of persecution, political corruption, and national decadence, there was a great faith that God would some day restore his people and bring them to a yet higher plane of religious achievement and prestige among the nations of the earth. But it is when Immanuel, "God with us," comes into human life, in the form of a little child, growing in stature and thus interpreting the Divine in terms of human experience to men, that we witness the first great outburst of song. Prophetic of the life that is to come, when Mary visits Elizabeth in the hill country, she is welcomed with the words—"Blessed art thou among women and blessed is the fruit of thy womb." Mary, whose heart does not simply acquiesce in motherhood but is filled with joy, replies,—"My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." When the tongue of Zacharias was loosed and he saw the part his son was to take as the great forerunner of a new era about to begin among men, in ultimate fulfilment of the hopes of the great prophets of Israel's history, he said,—"Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, for he hath visited and wrought redemption for his people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David."

Gloria in Excelsis

It was not enough that the shepherds should receive formal announcement of a babe, wrapped in swaddling clothes, who was to be a Saviour. Such news must be followed by an outburst of song, so that with the Angel of the Annunciation there was suddenly a "multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased.'" When these same shepherds had seen the fulfilment of their hopes, they "returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, even as it was spoken unto them." When the Christ Child was brought to the temple for his first presentation, he was expectantly awaited by Simeon who "received him into his arms and blessed God, and said 'Now lettest thou thy servant depart, Lord, according to thy word in peace; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples.'"

Christian Song Can Never Die

The aged Anna, coming up at that very hour, "gave thanks unto God and spake of him to all them that were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem." The spirit of song can never pass from the Christian Church. Even in the darkest days of the Church, during the Roman persecutions, hundreds of thousands of Christians sang their hymns of praise to Jesus. Even in the arena of the Coliseum, when wild beasts came up from the chambers below, Christians were there to welcome them with songs of faith and of triumph. Hitherto the world had never seen anything greater than a stoical, unmoved acceptance of the inevitable, even of death, but this surplus of faith and of hope in the hearts of men, this they could not understand. It is this surplus that distinguishes Christianity from all other faiths and is the assurance of its ultimate triumph. Not long ago I saw a remarkable statement by a historian, that there were two forces, co-equal, that had brought the Reformation in Central Europe. One was the translation of the Bible into the German tongue by Luther, and the other was the hymns of Luther. This same writer made the same statement regarding the Reformation in England, that the translation of the Bible into the common tongue of the masses and the hymns of Wesley, had brought the Reformation to that country. He even went so far as to claim that religion would have been far less normal in England if the people had had only the Bible; that much more of sweetness, sanity, and of joy had come to the masses through the singing of Wesley's hymns than could have come otherwise.

It Puzzles a Philosopher

In trying to answer the question "Why do only Christians sing hymns?" I went to my writer, himself a graduate of the provincial law college in Hangchow, a man with an exceptionally keen philosophical mind, a Confucianist and also a student of higher Buddhism of which he professed much admiration, especially as to its remarkable philosophy. The question elicited unusual interest on his part. He was frank to confess he did not believe that outside of Christianity there was any such thing as the spontaneous spirit of song.

[Here intervenes an account of the writer and this gentleman together trying to work out an answer. Confucianism is studied to find that 'it sought to produce a perfect social order here on earth, but it did not reach out into the future and the eternal significance of things.' 'Righteousness and a harmonious order in things may produce acquiescence

When Gotama was about to die he called his cousin to him and said—"O Anantha, I am about to die. I am like an old, worn-out cart, that can with difficulty be made to move. Henceforth be your own inner light. Trust in none else. Trust in your self alone." They were the words of resignation of a man who was tired of life and who was ready to withdraw from material things. But in his heart there was no song.

but they never make the soul of man to burst forth into spontaneous praise. A sympathetic study of Buddhism finds its results to be passive acceptance and contemplation rather than upspringing faith and joy. 'There are formal chants of praise to Buddha, never sung by the masses—and even by the priests never from radiant and spontaneous hearts.' A brief consideration of Taoism and Mohammedanism yields similar results. Then the writer continues.]

It seems to me that in later Judaism and in Christianity we have the fundamentals of real religion, a belief in the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man. In Christianity we have something more, an interpretation of these two relationships in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ.

Compare Them in Death

It might also be of interest to compare the closing hours of Mahomet, Confucius, Gotama, and of Christ. Is there a difference in the experience of these four, consistent with the teachings of their lives?

The last hours of Mahomet are a puzzle to us. There were short periods of a kind of mystic rapture which we must admit, but he also was calling down God's wrath upon Christians and Jews, he sent an expedition forth to destroy his enemies, he co-habited with the women of his harem, and was also petulant and complaining.

When Confucius was near death, he arose early one morning, dragging his staff and crooned these words,—

"The great mountain must crumble,
The strong beam must break,
The wise man must wither away like a plant."

He then said to Ts-Kung, "No intelligent ruler rises to take me as master. My time has come to die." His attitude was also that of resignation. He accepted the inevitable fact that man must wither away. But in his heart there was no song.

How was it in the experience of Christ? He had loved humanity as no man had loved. He had experienced for it a suffering of the soul such as no man had known. In little children he saw the potentialities of eternity. It was in the presence of death, not ordinary death, but death at the hands of a humanity that he loved with an infinite love, while partaking with them of the Passover Feast which henceforth was to be to his disciples a symbol of the great sacrifice on Calvary—it was in the presence of these things, knowing that before him was the death of a malefactor, despised and rejected of men, with the seeming failure of all his hopes for establishing a divine kingdom,—it was in the presence of these things, I say, that with his disciples he sang a hymn and went out to Olivet. If we take the testimony of Edersheim, this hymn was a selection of Psalms in which, more than in any other psalms, praise is ascribed to God for his mercy and his wonderful goodness.

The Dying Christ in Hymnal

And then at the last, with malefactors on both sides of him, with a mocking crowd below and around him, with the pain of the cross and the fast ebbing away of life's strength, with the apparent prospects of the divine kingdom utterly gone, he could yet look up into the blank skies above and say, "Father, into Thy hands, I commend my spirit." Such an attitude of loving trust and of praise from one who was more marred in soul than any other man, it seems to me, is not only the supreme achievement of moral character but also of intellect.

The non-Christian may face suffering and death as a stoic, accepting the existing order of things as being inevitable or even just, but the Christian is privileged to face suffering and death with a song on his lips and praise in his heart.—

A Review of Contemporary Denominational Biography

BY W. B. LIPPHARD

DAVID DOWNIE

In the stirring history of the South India Mission, which was opened in 1835 by Rev. Samuel S. Day, the name of Dr. David Downie holds a place of honor. Not only among the people but throughout the mission fields of Asia, he is known and respected. With his parents he came from Scotland to America when fourteen years of age. His college years were spent at Brown University and his seminary course at Rochester. In 1873 he sailed for Nellore, South India, to assume the great task being laid down by Dr. Lyman Jewett in the Lone Star Mission among the Telugus. Three months later he accepted the additional duties of mission treasurer.

The forty-seven years which he has spent on that field have witnessed marvelous achievements. In his earlier years there was one mission station and only three missionaries. Today there are twenty-nine stations touching the remote corners of South India as well as the larger centers, with 113 missionaries. Associated with these are almost two thousand Telugu preachers and teachers. More than 70,000 men and women are enrolled in the 181 churches. In 1878 one of the greatest ingatherings in missionary history took place on this field, when 2,222 converts were baptized in a single day.

MARCUS C. MASON

In 1924 Dr. M. C. Mason will have completed half a century of missionary service. His early youth was spent on a farm near Buffalo, N. Y., and after his education at Colgate University and Seminary he sailed for Assam. He has given his life to foundation building in our mission work among the Garos on this field.

He was first designated to Goalpara, but as the station was not centrally located he determined to move up into the hills to the government station of Tura, among savage tribes. His absolute fearlessness won for him a welcome among these people against whose hostile attitude he had been warned by the government. On one occasion on a trip through the hills Dr. Mason was confronted by two rows of Garo men with pointed spears and drawn swords. He walked directly up to the group, when suddenly the leader stepped forward and with a low salaam received him cordially. In this fearless spirit beginnings were made, and foundations laid for a lasting missionary work. A school and church were soon established, which have supplied teachers and preachers for the entire field.

The work of Dr. Mason has been fundamentally the development of a new field among a race untouched by Christian influence. His great contribution is his translation of the Bible and many other books for the people.

WILLIAM ASHMORE

Occasionally the priceless heritage of a father's career is enriched by a life of service of the son to the same great cause. Dr. William Ashmore, Jr., son of the famous Dr. William Ashmore, of Swatow, China, was born in Bangkok, Siam, and at seven years of age came to America. After his education at Brown University, he taught at Peddie Institute and then spent two years in study at Leipzig and Berlin. Upon his return to America, he taught at Shurtleff College and at Brown University, and in 1876 entered Rochester Theological Seminary.

Early in his missionary career he began the work of translating the Bible, and completed the New Testament during his second term. Some years later he completed the revision of Genesis, which had been translated by his father in 1879. In 1911 his acceptance of the presidency of Ashmore Theological Seminary necessitated further postponement of his chosen work. During his presidency he held the seminary to the highest standards and was able to superintend the addition of buildings and equipment that have made possible much more effective training. In 1915 he was finally able to begin the translation of the Old Testament. This he completed just prior to his return to the United States last December. Accordingly he has placed the entire Bible in their own dialect into the hands of the Chinese to whom he has devoted his life.

DANIEL A. W. SMITH

Few men are able to achieve the enviable record of Dr. D. A. W. Smith of Insein, Burma, with fifty-seven years of missionary service. He is the son of Dr. S. F. Smith, the author of "America." Born in Waterville, he spent his boyhood in this typical New England city, and after studying at Harvard and at Newton Theological Institution, he received his appointment in 1863 as a foreign missionary, reaching Burma a year later. For forty years he served as president of the Karen Theological Seminary at Insein, teaching the youth of Burma the fundamentals of Christianity and helping to make them efficient leaders of the kingdom among their own people.

As president of the seminary Dr. Smith has in recent years been able to give additional time to literary activities. A mere list of his works gives an idea of the great effort he has expended in order to increase the Christian literature of Burma. His publications include "Personal Effort for the Unconverted," a Karen commentary on Mark's Gospel, a commentary on Luke, "Principles of Interpretation," "Pastors' Handbook," Psalms arranged for Responsive Reading and numerous others, including over sixty hymns in the Karen Hymnbook. For fifty-two years Dr. Smith has edited and supervised the monthly publication "The Morning Star." At times the strength of this veteran missionary has not been sufficient to meet the demands of his indomitable spirit, but always he has pushed forward to greater accomplishments. "Oh, that the days were longer," he writes, "or that the nights too might be utilized for my work." Such has been the spirit which has prompted his fifty-six years of service in Burma. What a joy it must be for our people to realize that for more than half a century they have been represented by this great life on the frontier of Burma.

A Place to Talk

The buzz of many voices in conversation before the service of public worship begins is not conducive to a worshipful spirit. The First Church, Los Angeles, is trying to correct this by printing in its calendar such reminders as this: "We again suggest that as far as possible the auditorium be reserved during the hour for worship only. Use the vestibules for conversation."

Are You Going to Europe?

The commission on relations with religious bodies in Europe of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America desires to receive information regarding ministers, officials and laymen representing our churches who expect to be in Europe during the present year. This information should be sent to Rev. Chas. S. Macfarland, 105 East Twenty-Second St., New York City.

Chicago University Acquires Old Letters

Four original letters bearing on religious wars of France and written in the sixteenth century have been acquired by the University of Chicago. Two were written in 1574 by Henry III of "Massacre of St. Bartholomew" fame; one in 1589 by Henry IV of Navarre, and one to Charles IX from Cardinal de Rambouillet, dated December 2, 1570. The letters were obtained in Paris by Prof. James W. Thompson while investigating Huguenot history.

Prohibited Amusements at Duluth

A news item from Duluth conveys the information that the Swedish tabernacle mission church has resolved to dismiss from membership for fishing, hunting, berry-picking, doing work around home, joy-riding or saying anything against the pastor on Sunday. Rev. John J. Daniels, pastor, introduced the resolutions.

Believe It When You See It

A news item going the rounds of the press contains the information that "expulsion of rent profiteers from churches of which they may be members, on the grounds that their unwarranted rent advances constitute an un-Christian 'Phariseism,' is announced in a resolution adopted by the Pittsburgh Baptist Minister's Association at its regular meeting." One's curiosity is aroused to get a glimpse of a Baptist expelled from a church for profiteering.

The Forward Movements and New Missionaries

The forward movements of the last two years in the various denominations have had a direct result in stimulating the desire of young people to dedicate their lives to the missionary program. Robert Wilder, general secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, reported recently that the Student Volunteer convention held at Des Moines last year resulted in signatures to cards declaring a purpose to enter foreign mission work 30 per cent larger in number than those following the Kansas City convention six years ago, and that during the present year there have been 60 per cent more signatures than last year. These encouraging conditions thus reported by the Student Volunteer Movement are reflected in our own Baptist work. The New World Movement has directly stimulated the interest of our own young people. In the candidate department of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society alone there are more than 1,000 names upon this list.

Burma Calls for Reenforcements

"The need for station missionaries in Burma is acute. In 1905, there were forty-four station missionaries on the field, while in 1920, there are only thirty-three. Meanwhile, the work in the stations has grown by leaps and bounds. We then had two high schools in charge of station missionaries. Now we have eleven. Then there were nine middle schools, while now there are twenty-four and about the same number of primary schools that will soon grow into middle and high schools. These are all Anglo-vernacular. There are only eight Karen missionaries on the field to look after about 50,000 Karen Christians organized into about 800 churches. The average age of these men is nearly sixty.

Damned by Their Mothers

Superintendent Mortenson of the public schools of Chicago is quoted in the Herald-Examiner of April as follows:

"The morality situation among school girls is not showing any improvement, but we have been doing everything possible to protect and guide the young women in Chicago and, I believe, are succeeding as far as possible.

"There is a serious handicap to our efforts, however, in cases of girls whose mothers are of the alleged 'better' families. These wealthy mothers seem to resent our efforts at warning their daughters against extravagances of conduct.

"And besides, the girls naturally follow the examples their mothers give them. In the wealthy homes the school girls see the elder women of the family wearing extreme costumes and conducting themselves in a fashion many of us would call indiscreet."

Will God Know Whether They Mean It?

Our aldermen have turned to religion to help them out of their knotty problems. By unanimous vote yesterday, the council directed its committee on committees to prepare a new rule requiring all future council meetings to be opened with prayer. The rule will be the first of its kind in the city's history. The resolution was introduced by Alderman Guy Guernsey and recommended by Chairman Oscar H. Olsen of the judiciary committee. It was passed amid a silence that bordered on awe, consternation, bewilderment and timidity.—Herald-Examiner, Chicago.

They Were Sure They Could not—But They Did It, Plus

The Moulton Memorial Church of Newburg, N. Y., Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor, was given a quota for the New World Movement of $28,007. It was beyond all expectation, beyond all precedent, beyond all reason, far beyond their ability, the members were sure. But loyalty to the Northern Baptist Convention and above all loyalty to Christ compelled a real campaign to get the nearest approach to this, not-to-be-thought-of amount. They subscribed $30,279. Now they knew their own powers so they purchased a parsonage, added $600 to the pastor's salary and saw the baptism of many converts.

M. Viviani Appreciates Help of Churches

The commission on relations with France and Belgium of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America recently invited M. Viviani of France to speak to them regarding French reconstruction. The event took the form of a luncheon at the Metropolitan Club in New York. The entire meeting was conducted in French, addresses of welcome being made by the chairman of the commission, William Sloane Coffin, and the general secretary of the Federal Council, Rev. Charles S. Macfarland. M. Viviani said: "The work done by your churches has awakened our highest gratitude. Material help avails little without moral help, and I have sufficient proof that you mean to continue the moral aid which France still so deeply needs."

Reenforcements Are Taking the Field

Between April 1, 1919 and April 15, 1921, missionaries of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society have been appointed and sailed as follows: Men, thirty-one; wives, thirty-one; single men, six; short term men, three; single women (clerical), four; women to be married on field, four; total, seventy-nine. Appointees who have not yet sailed include men, ten; wives, ten; single men, twelve; women to be married before sailing, two; single women, one; total, thirty-five. Appointees of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society include fifty-six who have sailed and twenty-two who have not sailed, making seventy-eight. In all one hundred thirty-five have sailed and fifty-seven are yet to sail. The grand total appointed since April 1, 1919 is 192.

Light is Breaking Among the Burmans

Christians on the foreign fields have many things to teach American Christians — Here is the story of the way in which a rich Burmese lumberman combined religion with business and gave the gospel to his lumberjacks — The New World Movement is trying to start such work in a thousand places.

A Saw Mill Gospel

MAUNG BA TSEE is a product of our Mission School in Rangoon, though he did not become a Christian until after leaving the school. He taught school until the government requirements for teachers became too stringent, when he bought an old saw mill and began the business in which he has been very successful.

Worth Rs. 200,000

His wealth is estimated at 200,000 Rupees. During the war Maung Ba Tsee supplied much timber for the railroads and bridges in Mesopotamia and Palestine. For this and other helpful services he received from the British Government a medal. He has become the most trusted and important timber contractor in our neighborhood. Recently while building the branch railroad from Bynmana to Lowe he was given the whole contract for the Pyingado Railway ties.

Chapel Goes With Saw Mill

But while he hired men to saw his logs he preached to them too. His foreman and managers were given as full instructions about Christianity as about lumbering. A chapel was built in the lumber camp beside the saw mill, and the workmen were called together and heard the Gospel.

Called for a Campaign

This had gone on for about sixteen years, when during our evangelistic campaign throughout the district Maung Ba Tsee asked us to have a campaign at the saw mill village. The first year about five hundred people came from the surrounding villages and saw the pictures and heard the message. Three of the workmen were baptized. About a dozen nearby villages were visited during the months that followed. Maung Ba Tsee urged the claims of Christ on those who came to him to discuss business. Last year the second Evangelistic campaign was held at the village and at the close of the meetings the manager of the saw mill asked for baptism. An old foreman of former years, who had resisted the preaching of Maung Ba Tsee for seventeen years said he wished to be a Christian.

A Mass Movement Begins

That day down in the pool under the great arching bamboos of the forest Rev. Braton Case baptised thirty-four Burmese. To quote from Mr. Case. "This is the largest number of this race I know to have been baptised at one time. It was the first time I had seen the majority of the heads of the households of a Burmese village turn to Christianity at a step." It made us feel that after one hundred years of resistance against Christianity here was the beginning of a mass movement of the Burmese people toward Christianity. The whole section was in a ferment. There were many others waiting who said they wanted to become Christians and that they would form a model Burmese Christian village on the edge of the forest, and Maung Ba Tsee said he would help them. The inspiring thing about it all is that the response of these Burmese was due to the years of faith and work on the part of a Burmese layman who is using his influence and money with a joyful enthusiasm for the conversion of his workmen and their friends. He considers making Christians as important a part of his business as making money, and when he hires men and places them in positions of trust, he thinks of the Christian influence that will result.

"I Will Gather 1500 Persons"

The day Mr. Case left Pinyinana, for his furlough in America Maung Ba Tsee came with a signed statement. Translated it reads as follows:

"The seed which you have planted in these towns and villages I will surely water and care for until you return, and will endeavor to have it bear fruit to the utmost of my ability. Next year I will also be responsible for carrying on the evangelistic campaign here on even a larger scale than we did last year. I will assemble fifteen hundred people at my saw mill village, and will bring in those who are believers to meet your successors, the younger Saya Case and Saya Josif, to receive baptism."

Ready to Turn if—

When the 4000 Burmese Baptist church members are filled with a like spirit of enthusiasm for the Master, the 10,000,000 Buddhists of Burma will be won for Christ. The hopeful sign is that in many quarters of Burma this aggressive evangelistic enthusiasm is taking hold of the Burmese. Where three years ago we were satisfied with thirteen converts, this past year, with the help of such native Christians as Maung Ba Tsee, we have won 145 converts. The village population, which predominates in Burma, is ready to turn to Christ in large numbers, not only among the Burmese but also among the Karens, the Chins, the Kachins, the tribes of Kentung and the Talaings, if only we had the missionaries to send to them and the money to pay the native helpers.

Where to Get the Fuel

ANY christian minister can preach one missionary sermon, to preach regularly and often on this theme requires study. Rev. William A. Hill, of the Department of Missionary Education, suggests these themes for sermons and a few strong books on each topic:

The Adventurous Note

WE must do our utmost to complete the financial campaign. Failure here would mean loss to great interests of the Kingdom in so far as they are represented by Baptists.

But I am most burdened for a joyous and adventurous note in Christian experience; for the great seed thoughts of the Kingdom, justice and good will, mercy and faith; for the whole temper, virility and outlook of Christian living. Money is needed, sorely needed, but money alone will not bring us salvation.

We are realizing how hard it is to install new denominational machinery against long established habit and tradition, and how slowly the vitality and consecration of a great fellowship like ours, is lifted. Yet surely we are accomplishing these things. But oh for the tide to come in and the breezes of heaven to blow! Not to relieve us of plans and effort and study, but to thrill our people with a mighty impact of power.

Selected.

Choir Walked 300 Miles

There was a choir of twenty-one young people from the Lahu country near China, who walked 300 miles, plus a railroad journey, to attend the All-Burma Convention at Mandalay. Can you get this idea—you church people? Twenty years ago there was not a Christian Lahu on the earth. Now our church has 12,000 or more members. Perhaps, it would do American choirs good to walk 300 miles before they sang. Let that be as it may, this choir sang magnificently. The Kachins are speedily becoming Christians and only a score of years ago almost nobody knew this tribe existed.

The Devotional Life

Close the Door

Yes, ever so gently, close the door. Shut out the disquieting distractions, the dirt and dust of the daily grind. Leave without, the ever-grasping love of self, that load of lost hopes, the over-anxious cares, the deathly secret longing for sin. Thus only, may we follow the Master, very early in the morning before the break of day, or alone into the silences of the grove, or up the mountain sides, to the sacred stillness of the shrine where, alone with Him, earth's grime forgotten, its seductive summons silenced, only the perfume of His presence greets us at the portal of its door.

Nor should we dare to cross the threshold with unforgiveness within, as he who would be acceptable in bringing his gift to the altar; so must we first face the world unashamed, and hesitate to rush into such a presence with unwashed hands or bitter heart; but with calm poise and expectant joy, quietly pass from sight into that presence, whom to know is life, joy, happiness and peace.

The quiet hour is past. The door again is shut; but life is never quite the same. It is fuller, sweeter, more in tune. Now one is vaguely conscious that it is much easier to sing, when clouds hang grey, far easier to laugh when life runs cold and dull; the warmth of our hand-grasp attests a fervor unrealized before, and the face just sheds sunshine, even amidst tears—for have we not just closed the door?

For one short hour we are brothers to those worthies, who have toiled and won; we are comrades of the heroes of ages; we talk with the only One, absolutely true, who lived and talked both in them and through them.

For one short hour our giving and our receiving is unsoiled by pride, uninfluenced by want. All earth is not only worthless, but blessedly forgotten. We live in a world where at last, we are understood, encouraged, loved and forgiven.

There is something wonderfully strange, almost past understanding in that richness of power, past reason, received; the sheer joy of living, really living life at its full; the calm whose quiet no tongue can express, may all be found behind that closed door.

Two or Three

There are some words, so familiar yet never losing their fascination, so surcharged are they with deep, precious meaning, I often like to take in a very literal sense, as including in their import, only two or three souls; such an unfolding of their intent has grown more and more captivating.

"Where two or three are gathered to-

Meditations on Prayer

BY THEODORE BACON

Close the Door Two or Three Dare to Pray

gether in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

What mountain peak stands out more clearly in the light of after years than the childhood prayers at father's or mother's knee? Then the bubbling emotion of the first springs of childlike trust in a personal heavenly Father are poured forth in their crystal purity. Yet only two are present.

Later in life when the new home was in its making, nothing was quite so precious as those first prayer gatherings of two souls. The early home life with its misunderstandings and—well! it was all smoothed and hallowed as two knelt before the mercy seat and sealed not only their love, but their unlearned, and better selves, with a chain whose golden links reached 'round the throne.

When some emergency, some daring adventure of faith or fortune loomed in the near future, the same unfaltering trust in the same ever sympathizing Father seemed to sweep these two into a kind of haven of comfort and inspiration, there to repeat their endless thanks and to receive a fresh supply of love and trust.

Did you ever realize how effective forgiveness is when sent through oral prayer? The sting of wrong so quickly removed, the wounded heart so wholly healed, when two together kneel at a common throne; when two, in the hush of almost wordless prayer, confess a common saviour, one of them for the first time; while the other repeats the ever real and living experience of the joy of redeeming love.

No lifeless words can half express one living hour like this. Its treasure none can express, and only His loved ones know.

Dare to Pray

The obvious prayer of the drowning sailor or the trapped fireman, no human sympathy could deny, much less a merciful heavenly Father. Though they are but cries wrung from the heart-strings, only stone could resist.

The prayers at the bedside of the slowly dying child, so pitifully helpless, have the blessing of being unselfish and are so wonderfully human, linking us in kindly sympathy to all who love and lose. Then there is the prayer for health and strength, for altruistic service. They too, have their own unmeasured rewards.

So many hearts there are with so many needs and so many kinds of prayers. It would seem as if prayer was a measure of Christian growth; and yet, have we ever dared to pray the prayers impelled by love? Prayer seems sometimes to move so slowly while our better self outruns it.

Dare we pray, "Thy kingdom come," when we falter at the task so near at hand? Dare we pray, "make us more like Thyself" as we see the shadow of a mighty cross in the way we should have to take? Dare we pray the simplest words, "forgive my sins" while lurking so near, their very breath reaches us, are those very sins we have not wholly conquered?

One of the most comforting facts about prayer is the conscious assurance that, however feebly uttered, however faultily framed, the answer and the reward, the crown and the prize, are limited only by our capacity to receive and our ability to appropriate.

The inspiration from this thought is the incentive to measure up to our best, to dare to ask up to our capacity, and to keep the sacred trust involved.

For the "bruised reed shall he not break and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory."

PRAYER FOR THE WEEK

O GOD, Our Heavenly Father, we pray that Thou wilt awaken in us a keen and quick responsiveness to all Thy calls and revelations. Let not the cares of this world, nor the deceitfulness of riches, nor the lure of pleasure smother our dreams and longings for the better things and the better day. We would live with the open mind, we would be guided by Thy Holy Spirit. Give us a great burning passion for the truth. Grant us, O Lord, the courage of our convictions and the Christlikeness that will make us endure with joy the sacrifices and hardness of the way that leads to the goal of all our highest visions. Help us to complete our tasks with honor to ourselves and glory to Thy name. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. We ask it all in the name of Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Christian Evangel.

Not Too Heavy

THIS present week marks the first anniversary of a beautiful event in our lives—of a week in the year 1920 when, as Northern Baptists, we began picking up the burden of a hundred-million-dollar task for redeeming the parts of the world which, by agreement with other denominations, are exclusively ours to evangelize and educate and doctor.

To any of us who have groaned a bit now and again over this added burden, the following true story is earnestly recommended. Perhaps it should even be cut out and pinned in the mirror where we tie our Sunday cravats on the first day of the week.

Kate Douglass Wiggin once met a little girl on a city street carrying a little boy almost as big as herself.

"Isn't he too heavy for you?" asked Mrs. Wiggin.

"Heavy?" answered the little girl, "no, he isn't heavy—he's my brother!"

In the simple reading and re-reading of this naive reply may there percolate into each of our hearts the passionate desire of the Lord Jesus when he prayed "that they all may be one."

A golden dream was sent to dreamers two:
One scorned the dream,
The other made it true!

Plenty—Down in Egypt

TO EVERY Baptist who likes to prove his religion by chapter and verse, we recommend the passages in Exodus where Moses brings to Pharaoh the command of the Lord: "Let my people go into the wilderness that they may serve me."

For Pharaoh presents four subtle compromises that have their analogue in our day.

First of all this strategist said: "Why not sacrifice to your God here in this land?"

But the man of God shook his head: "It is not meet so to do—for how can we worship our God in the strongholds of idolatry and paganism? You would mock us!"

Yet there are Christians today who think they can worship God—down in Egypt! It is at them the worldling looks as he says: "There's mighty little difference between us!"

Then Pharaoh made a subtle amendment to Moses: "Go—but don't go very far away."

Border-line Christians follow that program, with one foot in the kingdom and one foot in Egypt, trying to serve both God and mammon—and succeeding to the point of dwarfing every noble project, and of stunting every line of growth; so that the worldling says: "What's the matter with the churches nowadays? They don't do anything."

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

The third compromise struck even deeper: "Go serve the Lord your God," said Pharaoh, "but who are they that shall go?"

"We will go with our young and with

Omit a Verse? or Sing the Whole Hymn?

Now is the acceptable year of the Lord. Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above and cometh down from the Father of lights.

Whoso hath this world's goods, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his heart of compassion, how dwelleth the love of God in him?

Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thy hand to do it.

Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring; and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.

Remember the words of the Lord Jesus how he said: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven.

Make straight in the desert a highway for our God.

Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.

Verily I say unto you, the harvest truly is plenteous but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he send laborers.

Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee.

Make mention that his name is exalted: praise the Lord, call upon his name, declare his doings among the people.

Every man according as he purposeth in his heart so let him give, not grudgingly, nor of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver.

Not every one that saith unto me Lord! Lord! shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven: but he that doeth the will of my father which is in heaven.

Today if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

"Thy kingdom come," we pray. Ah, we must send our money to fetch it!

our old, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go."

"Not so!" exclaimed the crafty king, "ye that are men go and serve the Lord, but leave your little ones—down in Egypt."

And this, too, we parallel today. Christian parents neglect the religious nurture of their children, and are careless in teaching them how to pray, to read their Bibles, and to serve their generation. Children "down in Egypt" are given dancing lessons, music lessons, horseback lessons. They are well fed, well dressed, busy with endless trifles, but their souls are starved with nothing but "Egypt" for nourishment.

Next came the climax of strategy: "Very well," Pharaoh agreed, "go ye, serve the Lord with your little ones, only let your flocks and your herds stay down in Egypt."

But Moses replied with fervor: "Our cattle also shall go with us; there shall not a hoof be left behind; for thereof must we take to serve the Lord our God; and we know not with what we must serve the Lord until we come thither."

This fourth compromise strikes accurately at the root trouble in modern Christianity: wives, husbands, children, going up to worship God, but their possessions down in Egypt!

There always seems to be plenty of money down in Egypt: manufacturers and store-keepers and hotel men can tell us that. There is money for automobiles, silk shirts, rich furs, jewelry, "room with a bath, please"—the list is endless. There seems to be plenty—down in Egypt, while up in the house of the Lord the same people frown at the size of an enlarging budget!

It is to those of us most conscious of this discrepancy in our own religious life that the challenge of Moses sounds forcefully across the centuries: "Our possessions shall go with us out of Egypt, for thereof must we take to serve the Lord our God." And the New World Movement pledge card will become an instrument by which the contributor, as he sits in his pew, can touch every continent and do a work for Christ where his own footsteps can never tread.

"What Do Your Wear?"

(FROM "MISSIONS")

A MISSIONARY who was at home on a furlough was invited to dinner at a great summer resort, where he saw and met many women of prominence and position.

After dinner he went to his room and wrote a letter to his wife. He said: "Dear wife: I've had dinner at the great Hotel ——. The company was wonderful. I saw strange things today. Many women were present. There were some who wore, to my certain knowledge, one church, forty cottage organs and twenty libraries."

In his great longing for money to provide the gospel for hungering millions, he could not refrain from estimating the silks, satins, and diamonds of the guests at the dinner in terms of his people's need.

What are you wearing?

"Go ye into all the world," we say to our missionaries. "Stay right here in my pocketbook," we say to our greenbacks.

Sing a Song of Sixpence

By "Peggy"

THIS is really chapter four of "Winning the N. W. M." but Polly Prim and I wanted every possible $ to appear even in the title, because at first—just at first—both Peter and Polly laughed at Bill and me for industriously saving and earning money to pay our N. W. M. pledges of seven cents a day.

"How's a tiny little bit of a seven cents ever going to win that great big N. W. M.?" they would cry.

"If everybody did it you'd soon know," we answered, and Bill added: "It only takes a hundred pennies to make a dollar, and every dollar counts in supplying what our missionaries need."

So we four talked and talked and talked, but Peter and Polly looked unimpressed; so every day for two whole weeks Bill and I wrote them a card and slipped it in their mailbox on our way to school. The cards read like this:

1. $alarie$ of our Baptist missionaries everywhere begin and end with Baptist dollars.
2. $hip$ and $ail$ and $team-car$ to carry them to their mission fields begin and end with Baptist dollars.
3. $addle$ and $led$, $edan-chair$ and $ampam$ to take them around their mission stations begin and end with Baptist dollars.
4. $chool$ and $cholar$hip$, $late$ and $tudy-book$, $eat$ and $cissor$ all begin and end with Baptist dollars.
5. $ickness$ and $urgeon$, $tretch$ and $plint$, $ponge$ and $pray$, $oap$ and $oup$, $heet$ and $upplie$ for every Baptist hospital begin and end with Baptist dollars.
6. $hoe$ and $ock$, $hirt$ and $kirt$ for the poor barefoot refugees in Central Europe begin and end with Baptist dollars.
7. $wing$ and $hower-bath$, $ewing-classe$ and $cissor$, $hutter$ and $ide-walk$ and $teps$ on Baptist Christian Centers all begin and end with Baptist dollars.
8. $cripture$ and $croll$, $ong-book$ and $ervice$ in Baptist missions begin and end with Baptist dollars! etc., etc.

Bill and I had great fun getting these ready, and long before Peter and Polly had received our fourteenth card they were eager to save and to earn, for they soon saw why every Baptist girl and boy should sign a New World Movement pledge card.

Their allowances are much larger than our, so they did more saving than earning to pay their pledges, although Peter became an agent and earned a tidy income getting subscriptions for a certain well-known boy's magazine, and Polly painted pretty place-cards for all the dinners her aunts and cousins gave last winter; and as they gave a great many parties, she actually earned nearly $10 this way.

But the queerest, strangest, grandest, finest thing they did was to interest their own father in the N. W. M. He is a perfectly splendid man, but ever since their mother died years ago he has stopped going to church, and he's out of town so much that Peter felt he had probably never even heard we had a New World Movement.

"And the least we young Reserves can do is to remind our parents of it," Polly Prim added.

So they kept on reminding him and reminding him and reminding him for fourteen days in succession, by mailing him our fourteen $ cards, with a note on the back of the card telling how interested they were becoming, how they were saving and earning, etc. Well, fourteen cards can make quite an impression, you know! And on the fifteenth day they sent him their copy of "The Survey". With red crayon Polly marked an X opposite the Baptist work she hoped would be helped with her money, while Peter put a green star beside his favorite places.

Mr. Printon was very much amused at first! Then he was astonished at their interest! And finally he became interested

Put on Your Thinking Caps!

DEAR YOUNG RESERVES, its high time to pull on your thinking caps, sharpen your pens, and write your very nicest thoughts about Truth to be sent by May first to Miss Applegarth, care of THE BAPTIST, etc. Sixteen letters have arrived (today is only April 15), and they are good letters, too, but maybe there's an even better "thought" tucked somewhere inside your head—who will ever know, though, unless you jot it down on paper right away? A boy who is not a Baptist Reserve decided to send in his "thought" even if he was not eligible to compete for the prizes. This is one of the good things he wrote: "A lie is very comfortable at the time, but the truth is more comfortable to live with all the time." But it isn't just our own comfort that counts the most is it?

Hoping to hear from many more of you soon,

himself! Next they sent him their free copy of "The World at the Cross-Roads," which is brimful of large quaint pictures, as I told you several weeks ago. He sighed over the forlorn people, he grinned at the merry ones, and smiled at the happy old Christian grannies so different from the heathen ones. Then he said to himself: "I'm glad we Baptists are doing something so big and worth while. And he made a marvelous fat pledge then and there!

Well, were we happy? ? ?

Outside the Gate

ONCE upon a time there was a very attractive girl,—the kind who is called a debutante. She had been very popular in school, and now that she had graduated she was received into good society everywhere, in spite of the fact that she thought nothing of telling a lie: either a little white lie to save herself socially, or a rainbow lie to dress up a dull story, or a really black lie to hurt someone else. But somehow or other she thought nobody noticed, for she kept growing more and more popular.

One day at home she was boasting about what fine society friends she had—"everybody who's worth knowing in town," she said!

But her keen old grandfather said gently: "Then I'm afraid, my dear, that you are going to be frightfully unhappy in the after life, standing around outside the gates of heaven forever and ever with all that wretched crowd of other persons who can't be admitted, either."

The attractive debutante frowned: "Outside the gates of heaven—but why should I be kept out there, grandpa? Surely not just 'because I love parties?'"

"Oh, no, not that at all," the old man replied quickly; "but every once in a while, dear child, I am startled to overhear you plainly competing for a place among that rather low-down group of outcasts whose acts on earth will necessarily bar them outside the gates."

Seeing her puzzled expression, he reached for a Bible and opening it at its very last page he pointed to two verses in the twenty-second chapter of Revelation saying, "Perhaps you don't realize what horrid companions you are choosing!"

She took the Bible and read with a rapidly beating heart: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter through the gates into the City. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie."

"Oh dear me!" she gasped, "I didn't dream I was that kind of person. O-oh!"

And because she was really the dearest kind of a girl, who loved pleasant society, she took one last frantic look at those other wretched people who would be so uncomfortable to have around through an eternity. Then her grandfather turned over some pages of the Bible until he found her a motto she has repeated every day since then: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord my strength and my redeemer."

HOW TO ENJOY ONE'S WORK
Eccles. 3:1-13; 5:18-20

"I know that there is nothing better for them, than to rejoice, and to do good so long as they live. And also that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy good in all his labor, is the gift of God."

Suggested Literature

"The Man Who Dares" by Prince; "Making Life Count" by Foster.

The above words were not written to the time-server nor to the man who never expects to get anywhere in the world. The aimless, shiftless sort who aim at nothing in this new world, will be sure to realize their aim.

1. Have a job. Every young person should have some commanding task. Of course, his parents may have money. But, the reason there are so many parasites in the world today is because wealthy parents have not seen to it that their children had worthwhile tasks to perform. The discipline of a real man-sized job is simply wonderful.

2. Know the job. No matter how difficult or how exacting. Know your job better than anyone else. There are other people related to your job. Know them and learn to do team work.

3. Do your job. Do not leave it to chance. Excuses are not in order for the healthful, virile young man or woman. If you are employed to perform a certain service, forge your daily program in such a way as to do that service with the highest efficiency. To slight your job means to injure your character.

4. Be happy. Do not always be looking for a change. Better dismiss the clock from your mind. Get sufficient rest at night. Eat as a human being ought to eat. Bring to the office with you all the joy and vigor of your young life and success will be yours.

Missionary Maps

Young people who are interested in the missionaries and the mission stations of the Northern Baptist Convention should write to The General Board of Promotion, literature department, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City for a description of the eight new maps showing location of every missionary of all our missionary societies, general and woman's.

Canada

The Baptist Young People's Union of St. John city and county have published a very attractive program of activities for 1921.

The city B. Y. P. U. of Detroit has made a distinct advance in adopting an educational basis for the awarding of city banners. The requirements are in keeping with the objectives of the ten-point standard of efficiency. The rating of the local union is determined as follows: 1, Per cent of membership who read the Bible daily; 2, per cent of membership taking an approved study course; 3, per cent of membership attending the B. Y. P. U. weekly devotional meetings; 4, per cent of membership contributing regularly to the local union, church and missions; 5, per cent of membership attending the monthly rally of the city union.

Way Down in Dixie

Mr. F. H. Leavell, state B. Y. P. U. secretary for Georgia gives the states of the Southern Baptist Convention with the number of unions as follows: Alabama 425, Arkansas 200, Florida 165, Georgia 1,150, Louisiana 246, Maryland 102, Mississippi 315, North Carolina 450, South Carolina 210, Oklahoma 500, Tennessee 400, Texas 2,100, Virginia 500. Mr. Leavell further states: "It is evident from these figures that if complete reports were in, there would be in the South about 7,500 Baptist young people's unions, about 500 of which are A-1 (standard). Figuring that the number of Baptist churches in the South is 25,000, this means an average of one union to three churches."

Nebraska

The goals for this great state are as follows:

1. Fifty standard churches in religious education by May 1, 1921. This means that the new denominational standard for churches shall not only be adopted, but put into actual operation by at least 100 Nebraska churches by the end of the fiscal year.

2. Three hundred life enlistments for the ministry and missionary service by May 1, 1921. Those who have previously enlisted and are now in college elsewhere in preparation are to be included, as well as the new recruits.

3. One thousand student enlistments for higher education by May 1, 1921. This goal includes all Baptist students now in Grand Island College, state university, state normals, or other state schools, or schools of other denominations within the state, and those who will sign a pledge that, barring unforeseen obstacles they will enter some institution of higher learning during the next school year.

4. Five thousand new church members by May 1, 1921. This includes those who come by baptism, letter or otherwise, and all who have been received since April 30, 1920, will count on this goal.

5. Remainder of state quota of $1,500,000 for New World Movement by May 1, 1921. "One Hundred Churches Over the Top This Year" is to be the slogan.

TITHING TESTIMONIAL

Mr. John Hipp, clerk of the City Park Baptist Church of Denver, Colorado, in ordering tithing pamphlets, writes:

"I am sure that you will be glad to know that the literature heretofore received from you and from the Layman Company and distributed in the City Park Baptist Church of this city, has produced great results. Largely through the influence of this tithing literature, our church the first day of the canvass for the 'New World Movement' for which our assignment was $51,000, subscribed $58,000. On the Sunday after Christmas it subscribed $1000 for the relief of the starving children of Europe. At the communion service the first Sunday in December it gave nearly $50 for the famine sufferers of China, and in the Christmas entertainment gave about $35 for a new Indian church recently organized in Nevada. The church also gave a liberal donation for the education of two Indian twin orphans attending Bacone College, and, best of all, we have paid up every cent of current expenses, practically as fast as it has accrued.

"If the entire church tithed, what a difference it would make in the progress of Christ's kingdom on earth and how it would enrich the lives of all believers."

How the New World Movement "Killed" Our Church

By ARTHUR V. WILLEY

"It will kill our church spiritually and financially," said many a good brother to me about the New World Movement. And now after eight months of the "un-spiritual movement," let us notice just how it has "killed" our church.

1. It has crippled (?) the cause of missions.

Offerings last year $519.40.

Eight months of this year, $1,430.57.

2. It has crippled (?) the current expenses.

$800 added to pastors salary.

$400 improving parsonage.

3. It crippled (?) our building prospects.

We raised $1,679.00 for building site. Plans are being laid for a building to cost $60,000 to $75,000.

4. The church is spiritually dead (?) Forty-eight additions last year.

Ten young people have volunteered for ministerial and missionary work. The Bible School has doubled its enrollment. Special meetings are to be held. We believe we have been blessed because we have honored God with our substance. We thank him that he has killed our church in the foregoing manner. Idaho Falls, Idaho

International Uniform Lesson for May 15

WORKING WITH OTHERS

1 Cor. 12:14-27, Golden Text: 1 Cor. 12:27

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

One of the problems which Paul had to solve was the problem of pagan disintegration. Working with others is not a pagan virtue. In non-Christian lands today the missionary meets the same problem. The people have to be taught to get together and work together. This is the reason for the sustained insistence of the Apostle Paul in all his letters on unity and integrity in the Christian societies called churches. After the conversion of the pagans to Christianity the old environment and habits exerted a mighty pull upon the converts, and the tendency was to carry the spirit of disintegration over into the church. Therefore Paul kept urging them to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

The Lesson Taught

Working together depends upon three things, viz., communion of spirit, community of interests, and cooperation of effort.

Communion of Spirit

I place this first because it is logically and chronologically first. Team-work is impossible without team-spirit. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," necessarily precedes "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me." One cannot work with Christ until he has taken on the spirit of Christ. In his great chapter on the unity of the church found in Ephesians, 4:1-16, Paul traces all Christian unity back to its source in the Spirit (Eph. 4:3-6). The inversion of this order always has and always will work against the very unity that is sought. The unity sought among the nations at Versailles was not found, because there was not first and last unity of spirit. The marriage relation is often marred in spite of the legal contract sanctified by the rites of the church because the unity of the spirit is absent. The unity which is lacking in the industrial world is not lacking for want of a program, but for want of a spirit. The spirit of mutual confidence and respect must be cultivated by both capital and labor before they can be much of a change for the better in industrial relations. The spirit of self-seeking is destructive of the spirit of unity. The spirit of altruistic service is a team spirit and cannot work in single harness. In the chapter from which the text of the lesson is taken, Paul makes much of the Spirit, and his emphasis is placed just where this outline places it.

Before he touches the diversities of gifts and operations of the Spirit, he says, "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit." Communion of spirit or fellowship with the Spirit of Christ is the sine qua non of all successful working with others.

Community of Interests

This is the second condition of worthy cooperation. A great modern writer is at present setting forth in one of America's popular magazines his ideas concerning a United States of the World based upon the form and plan of the United States of America. It is interesting reading, but purely academic, because it fails to make allowance for the "personal equation," or what might be called the diversity of interests involved. The United States of America is held together by a community of interests. If such a community of interests could be secured among the nations of the world, then a United States of the World would be possible. The community of interests in the industrial world are the same whether represented by labor or by capital. Much of the trouble from this source has arisen because the community of interests represented is not sufficiently emphasized and cultivated. The glaring weakness of Protestantism lies in the fact that the community of interests which should characterize a united Protestantism has been sacrificed for the sake of diversities which do not always involve vital principles. Society in general is a crazy quilt of conflicting colors and pieces because the community of interests which should guide and govern mankind in social living has been set aside for an independence which creates and sustains nearly all the religious sects the competition of business, the stratification of society and the warring nations. It is quite possible to emphasize and cultivate community of interests without destroying creative genius, personal initiative, private property, national patriotism, or even Christian denominations. The happily married couple with community of interests and yet with personalities unmerged is the type for society.

Co-operation of Effort

With communion of spirit established and with community of interests recognized, there is no reason why cooperation of effort should not follow successfully. These three constitute as it were the personality of society. Cooperation is the body through which the personality of society expresses her spirit and mind. Without cooperation of effort, communion of spirit will languish and community of interests will lose their appeal. City building illustrates the point. The communion of spirit finds a common bond in community of interests, and community of interests are enhanced by cooperation of efforts through the work of all civic organizations pulling together for a bigger city, a better city, a more beautiful city. No civic organization gives up its identity. On the contrary its identity is strengthened because it exists and works for a worthy object in common with other civic bodies.

A Great Victory Possible

By J. Y. AITCHISON

The following information is given in three letters which came to my desk this week:

The First Church at Roselle, N. J., with 350 members contributed during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1920, $1,200. The first eleven months of this fiscal year the 307 members who made pledges to the New World Movement paid $6,002.35. From other members $800 has been received, making in all from this church $6,802.35. A year ago when the New World Movement pledges were taken this church had a debt of $750 for repairs on the building. During the year they have increased their current expense budget from $4,000 to $5,000 and paid $600 on the debt.

The Toulon, Ill., church went over the top on its allotment a year ago. It has recently held an evangelistic meeting of three weeks which is characterized by one of their leading laymen, as "the greatest meeting the Toulon church ever held." Fifty-eight people made public confession of Christ. Forty-nine have been baptized and eight received by letter.

At a meeting of group leaders of the First Church, Hartford, Conn., recently held it was unanimously voted to raise the balance of their quota by April 30. During the campaign a year ago the church subscribed about $130,000. It expects to subscribe $20,000 additional to complete this quota by May 1.

It is most enheartening to have reports such as these come from different parts of the country. This will be our last message to Northern Baptists before the close of the fiscal year. If all our churches pay the amount due on pledges up to and including May 1, and secure cash subscriptions from those who have not previously pledged, these receipts, together with generous contributions from others, will enable us to close our books on May 5 without deficits.

The outlook is hopeful. The victory could easily be lost by a spirit of overconfidence, inactivity or lack of faith and prayer for God's blessing upon us during these crucial days. We are counting on every Baptist church to give, "not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver."

Our Own Folks

Philadelphia Letter

By ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

The newspapers report that there were over 10,000 accessions to the churches in and about Philadelphia during the Easter season. Concerning the truth of this, deponent knoweth not. We have the exact figures, however, from seventy-two Baptist churches. They report 1,576 additions of which 1,112 were by baptism, 354 by letter, and 110 by experience. Moreover the season's work is not ended. There will be many more additions before June 30. A conservative estimate for all our own churches up to June 30 is 2,500.

The new cardinal came back from Rome as prophesied and his followers did their best to rock the old city. There were committees, bands, processions, displays. Zealous adherents in the city hall prepared an official sign under high authority which was to be displayed from that building, "Our Cardinal." After a committee from the Baptist conference got busy however, the sign was hustled off to a Catholic institution and now no one can be found in the city hall who had anything to do with it. Protestants have some tremendous affirmations to make, but once in a while, as then, we have to make our negatives and protests heard. Rome will take every trick unless we are eternally on guard, if you know what I mean.

Mantua Church is rejoicing in the coming of her new pastor, Rev. Walter R. Alexander from Stamford, Texas. We appreciate the fact that Texas did not want to lose him but if Philadelphia called, of course there was nothing to do. The field is an important one and has waited long for the right man.

Norristown. First, announces a two-day Bible conference on Thursday and Friday, May 5 and 6, Dr. J. C. Massee of Brooklyn is to be the principal speaker. We are glad to hear encouraging reports from this church. Pastor Will H. Houghton has been on the field only six months. The average attendance during the winter months has been 324 in the morning service and 491 in the evening. The prayer meetings run from 150 to 180. Fifty-two members have been received. The church very properly added $500 to the pastor's salary at the end of the six months.

Two social union meetings are announced for May, the Northeast on May 10 and the West Philadelphia on May 19 in Belmont Avenue Church.

Your correspondent regrets that infrequent letters make it impossible for him adequately to report the Baptist ministers' conference. Its meetings each Monday morning are attended by upwards of 125 ministers and its programs have been rich and inspiring. A particular feature this year has been a devotional period inserted in the heart of the exercises, after the brethren all arrive, led by someone particularly appointed each month for this service. The speakers for April have included William A. Creditt D.D., P. C. Wright D.D. of New York, Judge

O. B. Dickinson who spoke on the Constitution of the United States and Lyell Rader of Chicago. I know what the Baptist readers of the dispersion are saying as they hear of these things but they will have to stand in line. There are not many vacancies at present.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

Spiritual Blessings

Wisconsin, in company with all the states of the Northern Baptist Convention, has been experiencing many spiritual blessings as a result of the New World Movement. On Easter Sunday many churches baptized, and some of the churches baptized more candidates than had been received by baptism in a number of years. To date thirty-seven churches have reported 639 baptisms as the result of the year. And when it is remembered that this only represents a fifth of the Baptist churches in this state, it is quite evident that a great blessing has come upon the churches of our state.

Among the churches reporting the largest number baptized on Easter is the First Church of LaCrosse, W. S. Stewart, pastor, the South Church of Milwaukee, Robert W. Shaw, pastor. "There were thirty-five baptized at LaCrosse, and twenty-two were baptized at the South Church. With the increased consecration to benevolence there has come increased spiritual blessing.

The Walworth Association

On March 24, a council of recognition, made up of delegates of the Walworth and Janesville Associations met at Clinton to pass upon the question of recognizing and receiving into the Baptist ministry, Rev. R. E. Moss, formerly affiliated with the United Presbyterian denomination, but for some time acting pastor of the Baptist Church at Clinton. R. G. Pierson, of Janesville was made moderator, and R. L. Kelley, of Delavan was selected as clerk. The council after a thorough examination expressed itself satisfied and recommended his recognition as a Baptist minister. Brother Moss satisfied the Council by credentials of his standing in the United Presbyterian Church, and gave as his reasons for making a change that the study of the Scriptures has led him to it. On April 6 the services of recognition were held at the Clinton Church. Pastors Mayo, Kelley, Pierson, and Palmer had a part in the program, and the sermon was given by Rev. J. R. Knight, of Pontiac, Mich. Mr. Moss has been serving the Clinton Church with great acceptance since the first of the year. We welcome him into the Baptist brotherhood, of this state.

The Delavan Church, Pastor R. L. Kelley, has received ninety-eight members the past year, one-half of them coming by baptism. He has received four whole families, where the husband and wife have together accepted Christ and followed him in baptism. He has recently been preaching a series of sermons on Jesus as Teacher, Physician, Savior, Servant and Lord. The church by special action has had the sermon on "Jesus as Servant" printed for distribution.

Among the other churches receiving members by baptism recently has been the East Delavan, the Brick Church of Walworth, Lake Geneva, and Elkhorn.

Some Notes

Pastor O. R. Hauser, of the Immanuel Church, Milwaukee, has recently undergone a minor operation. He is improving and will soon be back in the harness.

Pastor A. Soltys, of the Christ Polish Church, Milwaukee, is greatly rejoiced over the enlarging of his work. He recently baptized twelve into the church. On a recent Sunday night a great congregation filled his church. One of the editors of the Polish daily was present, and another one connected with the paper gave one of the addresses of the evening. Pastor Soltys goes ahead slowly, but persistently.

Pastor Pierson, of Janesville received twenty-five at Easter time by baptism. He makes the moving picture machine draw him a crowd on Sunday evening, but when he gets them there he gives them a good gospel message. He finds the investment a paying one.

Rev. H. O. Rowlands, is the acceptable supply at the First Church, Milwaukee, while the committee searches for a successor for Dr. R. A. Ashworth.

The time of the associations is at hand. The Milwaukee Association will meet with the West Allis Church on May 3 and 4. Pastor Parsons and his church are greatly rejoiced over doubling the Sunday school since removing to their new location, and over receiving about forty members in recent weeks.

On Sept. 12 the South Church, Milwaukee had 107 in its two Sunday schools; on Easter Sunday there were 353. A young people's society is now in the process of being organized. A big field challenges this church and the Christ Polish Church, the only two Baptist churches in a population of approximately 90,000.

A New Project

Recently the committee of laymen which has been fostering the fundamentalist movement purchased an abandoned church building on the South Side, Milwaukee, and plan to open a gospel center, similar to the Hope Mission of Detroit. They recently held a conference in this renovated building with Lyell Rader, W. H. Griffith-Thomas and several others as the speakers.

The National Baptist Memorial

The contract for the beginning of the National Baptist Memorial to Roger Williams and Religious Liberty has been let, and the ground-breaking ceremony set for Saturday afternoon, April 23, and Pres. Harding has consented to be present and turn the first sod on that meaningful occasion. Among those who went to the White House to present this request to the President were Dr. L. R. Scarborough and Dr. J. F. Love of the Southern Baptist Convention; Dr. J. Y. Aitchison, Dr. J. C. Robbins, Dr. Clarence Barbour, and Mr. Henry Bond, of the Northern Baptist Convention; Dean W. A. Wilbur, Rev. Paul Langhorne, Mr. Percy Foster, and Mr. Charles Werner, of the Columbia Association, along with Pastor Gove Johnson of the Immanuel-Memorial Church.

It is hoped that the work may go on so that soon the time may come for the corner-stone laying, and that the Secretary of State, Mr. Charles E. Hughes, is to be the speaker on that great occasion. The above delegation visited Secretary Hughes also for this purpose, and he gave hopeful intimation that he might accede to this request.

As fast as payments can be made by the Northern and Southern boards the building committee proposes to push the work on the Memorial, for which the plans and specifications are completed. American Baptists cannot afford to let this enterprise drag, in view of these circumstances while other denominations are pushing theirs to completion in the nation's capital.

The Divinity School at Chicago

By P. G. MODE

Conditions are rapidly returning to pre-war basis. In point of registration the attendance during the quarter just closed exceeds that of any previous winter quarter. But the personnel of our student body is more largely graduate than previous to the war. It will be some time yet before the younger men having in view the ministry rather than teaching begin to come to us in normal proportions from the colleges, where attendance fell away so seriously while the war was in progress. Our academic morale has been well sustained, and the religious tone has been deeper probably than for many quarters. It has been easier than usual for us to secure remunerative religious work for the men who have to support themselves while studying. Several student pastorates have met this need, and an increasing number of opportunities in religious educational work. The demand for ministers comes to us from all over the nation, and we are absolutely unable to make recommendations to all these many inviting fields.

Professor Baker has vigorously entered upon his work in the department of missions, and in addition to teaching has organized a missionary club, which proposes to draw together for social fellowship and study all those who have missionary service in prospect. It already has sixty members, one-half of whom are missionaries on furlough and now pursuing courses with us.

An important extension of influence to the Divinity School has been created by the appointment of Professor Artman as Director of the Abraham Lincoln Social Center. This will provide not only a large initiating and inspirational field for Mr. Artman's leadership, but also a training center for our students interested in sociological investigation.

In addition to teaching, several members of the faculty have been engaged in lecturing and the production of religious literature. During the March recess Dean Mathews has been giving the Slocum Lectures on the Bennett Foundation at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., on "The Validity of American Ideals," and Prof. Gerald B. Smith has been the Earle Lecturer at the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Cal., the subject of his course of lectures being "The Making of a Christian World." "The Dictionary of Religion and Ethics," under the editorship of the Dean and Prof. G. B. Smith is well on the way to publication, and will appear during the present year. After twenty-five years of ripening scholarship, Dr. Burton's "Commentary on Galatians" has just been published. Almost, if not quite as notable, is the "Greek Harmony of the Gospels" which Professors Burton and Goodspeed have jointly prepared after a careful course of revisions extending over many years. Prof. J. M. P. Smith is engaged upon new editions of Harper's "Hebrew Method and Manual," and "The Elements of Hebrew," which will appear this summer. In the near future he expects to publish a study on "The Morals of the Old Testament." Prof. Case has been giving a course of popular lectures on Sunday afternoons in the Garrick Theatre upon the "Development of Early Christianity." To a smaller group he is also lecturing upon "The Origins of Civilization." Dr. Soares recently elected to the presidency of the Religious Education Association of America, continues to minister as the stated preacher to the Hyde Park Congregational Church. He has been college preacher in several eastern institutions—Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, and Harvard. Crowded congregations greet Dr. Haydon during his second year of ministry to a university congregation in Madison, Wis. For two years the writer has been engaged as acting minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Wheaton. His "Source Book of American Church History," long delayed through printers' war troubles, will soon be published. Later will follow a study of American Christianity entitled "The Frontier Spirit in American Religious Life."

St. Louis Letter

By W. E. DARROW

The Baptist churches of St. Louis and vicinity are in the midst of revival. Some of them have closed special evangelistic meetings, others are still in progress. It is impossible, therefore, for an exact tabulation as to the increase, but it will be considerable. Prayer meeting attendance has been greatly increased. Almost every Sunday there are additions to all our churches.

Interest at the Third Church is strong and steady. Rev. Dr. W. H. Geistweit is in the beginning of his fifth year of pastoral service, a service notable in its constructive activities and evangelistic power. Never was the church more prosperous than now. A new pipe organ, to be known as a "Mothers' Organ," is being installed. Between Easter, 1920 and Easter, this year, 230 were added to the church membership. A very successful training school for its workers recently closed. It covered a period of ten weeks and was held in connection with the Wednesday evening prayer meeting.

West Park Church held special services. Pastor P. G. Van Zandt, with the help of neighboring pastors, conducting the meetings. A substantial growth in membership appears. Plans are being perfected for the new house of worship, costing approximately $100,000, which the church hopes to erect in the near future.

Pastor R. B. Whiteside and his people are rejoicing in the continued spiritual progress of the Euclid Church. There have been 232 added to the membership between the two last Easters. Mr. Charlie Butler rendered most acceptable and efficient service in song during their recent special meeting. On Thursday evening, Apr. 7, Mr. Charles Galloway, the noted organist, gave an organ recital, the occasion being the dedication of the new church organ. Dr. E. Y. Mullins was the preacher on a recent Sunday.

A remarkable religious awakening is now in progress at the Tower Grove Church, with about 100 additions at time of writing, and the special meetings still in progress. Evangelists Oliver Reed and Jack Lamkin are rendering great help to Pastor Albert Holliswell.

Without special meetings, Lafayette Park Church is adding to its membership every week. Pastor R. K. Kelly and his people are in great need of more room. They are hoping soon to erect a more commodious house of worship, costing approximately $100,000. The problem of location is delaying somewhat the realization of their hopes. Record breaking crowds attend all services. There were 127 additions to church membership between the last two Easters.

Our own work at Grand Avenue Church is making substantial progress. It was to a discouraged people that we came in June, 1918. They were in debt, their house of worship greatly in need of repair, and they lacked much in business method and achievement. Since Oct. 1, last year, the church has been self-supporting, our property has been greatly improved. To-day, we have a membership of 266. Our church held an evangelistic campaign Mar. 9-27, Major E. W. White, D. D., of Omaha, Neb., assisting the pastor. He rendered effective service in quickening our people to a fuller sense of their opportunity and duty. Thirty-seven have been added since the beginning of the meetings, (thirty-two by baptism). There have been fifty-seven additions since the first of January, 1921 and eighty since Easter, 1920. The total increase since the beginning of my pastorate is 139. Thus God has blessed our work at Grand Avenue, for which we are glad.

A new Italian Center at 10th and Carr Streets was dedicated Apr. 10. Of the First Italian Church, which worships in this building, Rev. Amedeo Pascuita is pastor. The building is owned by the St. Louis Baptist mission board. Services were held at 11 A. M., 3 P. M., and 7:30 P. M., on the day of dedication and the principal speakers were Rev. Prof. A. Mangano, dean of the Italian Baptist Theological Seminary, New York City, Rev. Dr. S. E. Ewing, Supt. of the St. Louis Baptist mission board, Dr. E. Y. Mullins, Rev. A. Pascuita and other Baptist pastors of the city. The Delmar Church furnished the orchestra for the occasion. Words of congratulation were heard from Rev. R. K. Kelly, Rev. Herbert A. Meyer, Rev. E. M. Ryan, Rev. George W. Graham, Rev. Ernest A. Main and the writer. The St. Louis Baptist ministers' conference held its meeting Monday morning, Apr. 11 at the Center. Luncheon followed, provided by the First Italian Church and the St. Louis Baptist mission board.

At the call of the St. Louis Park Church, and on approval of the standing committee of the St. Louis Association, a number of pastors met with the St. Louis Park Church on Sunday afternoon, Mar. 20, to ordain Herbert A. Meyer. Mr. Meyer is a graduate of the Rochester Theological Seminary of the class of 1920, and upon leaving the seminary entered upon the pastorate of the St. Louis Park Church. Twelve ministers were present. Dr. S. E. Ewing served as chairman. The writer offered the ordaining prayer. The following brethren took part in the services: Rev. Olie C. Thurmond of the Indian Prairie Church; Rev. J. W. McAtee of the King's Highway Church; Rev. R. K. Kelly of the Lafayette Park Church; Rev. Oliver Shank of the Fourth Church; Rev. Albert Linder of the Ebenezer Church and Rev. E. P. Reimer of the St. Louis Park Church. Benediction by Brother Meyer.

Interest in the coming meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Chattanooga, Tenn., is being quickened. A number from our city expect to attend. The young people are urging attendance on the B. Y. P. U. A. convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, June 30—July 3, and also a large delegation at the Arcadia Assembly, August 1-14. Some from St. Louis will be at the Des Moines convention in June.

Credentials for Des Moines

The executive committee of the Northern Baptist Convention has prepared a standard form of credential card for delegates from churches to the next meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention, which will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, June 22-29, 1921. The high cost of printing, and the present indebtedness of the convention, and the necessity for economy demand that there shall be as little waste as possible in the circulation of these credential cards. Those who have been appointed delegates by their churches can obtain these standard credential cards by writing to the secretaries of their State Conventions. They should do so in ample time to provide themselves with proper credentials. The by-laws of the convention are explicit:

"Section 1. The Convention shall be composed of accredited delegates as follows:

(a) Any Baptist church in the United States may appoint one delegate, and one additional delegate for every one hundred members.

(b) Accredited officers and members of boards of managers of cooperating organizations shall be delegates ex officio.

(c) Officers and members of committees of the Convention during their terms of service shall be delegates ex officio."

Those who expect to attend the meetings in Des Moines should at once write to Mr. F. E. Goodell, Valley National Bank Building, Des Moines, Iowa, with regard to their accommodations.

Negro Delegates to Des Moines

The pastors of Negro churches in Des Moines have made arrangements so that all Negroes attending the convention June 22-29, as delegates or representatives of special work will be taken care of in homes of people of their own race for a nominal sum. Persons who are interested should correspond with Rev. L. H. Griffith, 1440 E. Mattern Ave., Des Moines, Iowa.

All requests for hotel reservations should go to F. E. Goodell, 3620 Adams St., Des Moines.

One hundred and forty-five conventions, world, national and state, enjoyed the hospitality of Des Moines in 1920. More will be entertained in 1921. Des Moines people take an active interest in the events brought to the city and feel a personal responsibility for the welfare of its guests. The Des Moines Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations are cooperating with the Baptists of the city in planning for the Northern Baptist Convention.

The program is well advanced and will be given to the press very soon. More churches are planning to send the pastor with all expenses paid.

A Sunday with a City Mission Executive in New York City

The day began with a twenty-mile automobile ride to the Richmond Hill Church, the service of the day being devoted to the consideration of Baptist work in Brooklyn. This church is housed in a splendid new edifice equipped for worship, for religious education and for social ministry. The church is much alive under its pastor, Rev. Rollo E. Hunt, and doing a many-sided, aggressive piece of work.

The early afternoon from two to four o'clock was spent in a hurried auto visit to new communities in the eastern district of the Borough of Queens which challenges the church to provide religious facilities. At four o'clock a conference was held in the extreme southern portion of Brooklyn at the old church at Canarsie, recently turned over to the Church Extension Society. This church now finds itself on the edge of a growing Italian colony. A new mission for Italians has been started.

On this Sunday Rev. D. B. Cheney, new pastor at Kings' Highway, was installed as minister in charge, the principal Sunday appointment being a vesper service at four o'clock.

It was almost another twenty-mile drive to the neighborhood of the Creston Avenue Church, whose pastor was out of his pulpit because of the serious illness of his wife, who has since passed to the other side. This church, too, is in a relatively new community and like the Richmond Hill Church has the throb of young life and is meeting its opportunities along the lines of worship and religious education and social ministry, but without the equipment of the church at Richmond Hill, as much as 200. Nine new members have

MAINE

NORTH VASSALBORO—The pastorate of Rev. G. D. Milbury is proving of great value and promise. Congregations are large, the church increased its mission contributions many fold, going over the top in the New World Movement. Pastor Milbury has given time and companionship to the boys. In the previous fifteen years only two boys had been baptized but at Easter of the twelve persons baptized ten were boys, mostly of high school age.

MT. VERNON—This is a typical village and rural community of the finest New England order. The Baptist church has been loyally supported in the past by such families as the Hopkins, Cram, Robinson and others who have carried its good work far afield. Dea. Jesse Robinson is the only survivor of the elder generation but on other families. "Instead of the fathers are the children." The church is now pastorless but Mr. Charles A. Mitchell, a senior in Colby College, is doing excellent work as student supply. He has discovered the material and developed a remarkably successful class of young men in the Sunday school, and new interest is manifested in all departments of the work of the church.

DANFORTH—The church in Danforth, pastorless since the going of Rev. H. A. Clark to Bridgewater has had the helpful ministrations of Evangelist Benjamin C. Bubar, who for family reasons has been spending most of the winter with his father-in-law, Dea. John C. Beal. The meetings have led to conversions and baptisms and the church has been prepared for steady advance when a pastor comes to the field.

THE BREWER CHURCH reports an increasing attendance at all services, the congregations recently having numbered been received recently. Pastor H. A. Welch conducts a teacher training class and a Bible study class, each of which meets once a week. The C. E. society will entertain the Southern Penobscot C. E. Association May 13-16.

VERMONT

ON EASTER First Bennington, Rev. W. G. Towart, pastor, was packed to the doors, some going away because there was no room. Sixteen were received by baptism.

FIRST, BARRE, Rev. B. J. Lehigh, pastor, has recently received ten by baptism, two of them being Swedish young women and one a beautiful Italian girl who intends giving herself to Christian work. Pastor Lehigh has just completed five years of splendid service.

REV. G. E. CONGDON, pastor of the federated church at Grafton, has had his salary increased $100, and recently four were added to the Baptist church by baptism while four were also added to the Congregational church.

REV. ISAAC M. THOMPSON, pastor of the churches at Hardwick and East Hardwick, recently baptized two and has a class of five more awaiting the ordinance.

PERKINSVILLE, Rev. A. J. Hopkins, pastor, has suffered a severe loss through the death of Mrs. Hitchcock, the pastor's sister, who was a sweet Christian woman and interested in everything that was for the uplift of humanity at home and abroad.

SHAFTSBURY, Rev. J. C. Rawson, pastor, has suffered a great and irreparable loss through the death of H. Merle Bottum, who for many years had been the clerk of the church and one of the most generous contributors both to current expenses and missionary work.

AT FIRST, BRATTLEBORO, Rev. Clark T. Brownell, pastor, eleven new members were received into the church by baptism Easter Sunday. The Sunday school gave an Easter pageant and made an offering of $100 to the China famine sufferers. A full set of cathedral chimes, consisting of twenty tubular bells chromatically tuned, together with other important additions, have been installed in the splendid Estey organ. These were the gift of Mrs. J. J. Estey in memory of her son, the late J. Harry Estey, who was formerly an attendant of the church and joint donor with his brother, Col. J. Gray Estey, of the organ as a memorial to their father, the late Gen. Julius J. Estey. These chimes were used for the first time Easter Sunday. This church is now equipped with the finest organ in the state.

REV. WILLIAM FREDERICK WILSON, pastor of the Burlington Church, was assisted by Dr. James E. Norcross in a series of special meetings closing on Easter Sunday. The meetings were educational, inspirational and very valuable to all who attended, both Christian and non-Christian. Twelve have been baptized and others will follow.

MASSACHUSETTS

At the First Church, Hyde Park, Pastor E. M. A. Bleakney, they have all round prosperity, with record prayer meetings, an ingathering of fifty-four, and another substantial increase to the pastor's salary. In most respects, this record is duplicated all through the churches large and small. Everywhere there seems to have been an Easter culmination. It was indeed the crown of the festival this year in all the churches, consequently pastors and people are grateful and happy.

RHODE ISLAND

S. D. GORDON of "Quiet Talk" fame begins a three-week's noon-day meeting in Grace Church, Providence, April 25.

ON EASTER SUNDAY Rev. G. C. S. MacKay baptized thirty-eight and the offering was $1,028 for current expenses.

EVANGELIST LEWIS E. SMITH has just completed a ten days' meeting at Lake wood. There were between forty and fifty decisions for Christ.

REV. C. P. CHRISTOPHER, Second Church, Newport, is preaching a series of sermons on "Folks I have met in Newport." A very successful missionary institute is being held in his church with a large weekly attendance.

THE FIRST CHURCH, East Providence, is without a pastor and is being supplied at present by the brethren within the state.

CONNECTICUT

ON APRIL 10 Rev. Wallace S. Sampson, pastor of the First Church, Ansonia, baptized fourteen Italian converts, seven of each sex.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE MEETINGS at Deep River continues. Dr. J. H. Sheppard baptized nine more candidates on April 15.

REV. D. B. MACQUEEN, First Church, Bridgeport, gave the hand of fellowship to twenty new members on Easter Sunday, and baptized four more on the following Sunday. Mr. MacQueen is laying a deal of emphasis upon the family group plan in his church. During the month of March the promotional committees made 300 calls. The result is new scholars in the Sunday school, new people for membership in the church, including the Baptists that are moving into the city. This church is planning a church school of missions for next year, and a committee is already at work to that end.

AT CALVARY, NEW HAVEN, Rev. James McGee baptized thirty-seven during Eastertide. On April 11, Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale University lectured under the auspices of the woman's organization in Calvary on "The Christian Adventure." In a most interesting, illumining and gripping fashion the lecturer set forth his views centering in the words "Faith" and "Salvation". With a beauty of diction and wealth of illustration Dr. Phelps pointed out the fact that "religion is no last resort," "the uncertainties of life make religion interesting," "the challenge of faith gives zest to life," "no virtue developed on a certainty," "salvation has to do with the whole of man for the whole of life." He said "I have staked my whole life-work on the proposition that Christianity is true."

New York City Mission Society

An interesting and unique program has been arranged for the fiftieth anniversary of the New York City Baptist Mission Society, which vividly depicts the organization and development of the work of this society during the past fifty years. Striking contrasts of the city and its life in 1870 and 1920 will also be shown in beautiful stereopticon slides.

The anniversary program which will be held at the Mount Morris Church, Fifth Ave., near 127th St., on Thursday, April 28, will open at 7:45 p. m. with a short devotional service, in which Italians, Lettish, Polish, Russians, Hungarians, Chinese, Estonians, Czecho-Slovaks, Swedes and Finns, each in his own tongue, will join in the audience in the singing of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" and in the recitation of the Lord's Prayer.

Several features of the magnificent ministry of the city mission centers will be epitomized in striking tableaux presented by the Judson Day Nursery, the Judson Medical Clinic, the Harlem Kindergarten, the Second Avenue activities, the Temple and Chinese Bible classes, the Fordham Men's Club, Americanization classes, the Central Park Daily Vacation Bible School, and the Swedish Finnish Mission study class. About 200 will take part in these "living pictures."

This meeting will be preceded by the annual meeting of the woman's auxiliary at four o'clock and the annual meeting of the Baptist Fresh Air Home Society at five o'clock, both with equally interesting programs. Dinner will be served in connection with the Fresh Air Home meeting for $1.00 per plate. All delegates to these societies are expected to attend and it is hoped that a large delegation from each Baptist church will be present.

SINCE REV. HOMER J. VOSBURGH, D. D., became pastor of the First Church, Watertown, Nov. 1, 1920, the congregations fill the house morning and evening, the prayer-meeting has reached 200 in attendance, seventy have been added to the membership, a junior church and an intermediate C. E. Society have been organized and are doing effective work, an every-member canvass resulted in adding 50 per cent to the amount subscribed for current expenses and 50 per cent to the number of subscribers.

MANLIUS had a wonderful revival. Under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. R. N. Rand, the church engaged in a three-weeks evangelistic campaign, with the pastor preaching every night as well as leading the singing, while his wife took charge of the instrumental music. Fifty-five converts were won and the church membership thoroughly awakened and revived. Easter Sunday the pastor baptized thirty-nine. Manlius made a great record last spring in the New World Movement campaign, having exceeded its quota by nearly $3,000 in less than five hours after the drive was inaugurated. Pastor Rand's salary has been three times increased, the latest increase amounting to $500.00, which makes his salary $2,000.00 and parsonage.

NEW JERSEY

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Scotch Plains Church, Chaplain J. Madison Hare, pastor, showed a net gain in membership of twenty-one, making the present membership 219. There have been eighteen baptisms during the year. A recent calendar notes that Rev. and Mrs. Robert Chipman Hull, with their children, are to take up their residence in Scotch Plains during April.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the First Church, Roselle, Rev. C. E. Goodall, pastor, indicated a membership increase of forty-one. The church went over the top in the New World Movement, greatly reduced a floating indebtedness, increased the minister's salary and has paid every local expense for the current year.

AT MT. PLEASANT, Newark, twenty-one were received into the membership Apr. 3, at the communion service. Evening services are largely attended. Many interesting conversions are being made.

NEW ENGLAND DISTRICT

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING of the New England District of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, with the Golden Jubilee Celebration, was held in the First Church, Boston April 26-28. The exercises for Tuesday included a secretaries' reception and a general reception. On Wednesday afternoon a pilgrimage was made to the church at Newton Center where fifty years ago the foreign society was started. On Thursday there were reports, addresses by visitors from various foreign countries where work is carried on and an address by Mrs. Montgomery. The banquet was held in Ford Hall and was followed by the evening session at which addresses were given by Pres. Pendleton of Wellesley and Pres. Faunce of Brown. Abundant plans had been made for the gracious and hospitable entertainment of all visitors and delegates.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

DR. A. F. WILLIAMSON closed special services at the South Chester Church, Rev. Thomas Elliot, pastor, on April 17. About fifty confessed Christ. This is the second revival in the church during the present year, the total number of professions in three months being eighty-five.

Keystone Academy

The present year has been more successful than many close friends of the school thought possible, and the prospects for the next year are very encouraging. The new catalogue is in the hands of the printer and will be mailed to those interested on request. The graduating class numbers eighteen, most of whom will attend college next year. Two will prepare for the ministry, two for medicine, others for engineering and the professions. Dr. Gilbert N. Brink will preach the baccalaureate sermon, June 12.

The Keystone Alumni which has been quiescent since the outbreak of the war has revived, and the local members met at the academy recently and undertook plans for a banquet to be held soon for reorganization. The Student Y. M. C. A. has just organized a "Boosters' Club" and members are writing to prospective students and visiting the churches near at hand to increase the interest in the Academy.

The Baptist Summer Assembly for Northeastern Pennsylvania will be held at Keystone Academy July 4-10. No more beautiful place could be found for this occasion. Prin. Curtis P. Coe, has been chosen as dean of this assembly, and as instructor in the assemblies at Ridgeway Park and Collegeville.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

MONACA SLOVAK CHURCH, Rev. A. Meereis, supply, March 27, had forty present and about that number partaking of the Lord's Supper. Rev. J. Sturman, of Youngstown, Ohio, was the preacher for the day.

THE MISSION SUNDAY-SCHOOL established by the Canonsburg Church, Rev. W. J. John, pastor, is proving very successful in its work.

AT TARENTUM, Apr. 3, four received the right hand of fellowship. Sixty-two were in the B. Y. P. U. meeting.

REV. G. W. SCARBERRY, of Riverview, gave the right hand of fellowship to seven, the attendance at Sunday school was 189.

REV. W. G. CARL, stated supply of the Braddock Church, baptized thirteen Sunday, Apr. 3, and one other was received on experience.

THE 100-NEW-MEMBERS objective of the centennial year of the First Church, McKeesport, has been reached. Fifty-two members were received Apr. 3.

THIRTY-TWO have been received into the fellowship of the Crafton Church, Rev. Joseph Yule, pastor, by letter and baptism since January.

THE MARY AND MARTHA class of the Allison Avenue Church, Washington, Sunday school, has purchased a model B balloption for the use of the pastor, Rev. L. L. Bradley.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL of the Duquesne Church, Rev. W. V. Bacon, pastor, registered the largest attendance in its history, Mar. 27, when 135 were present. Two members were received into the church by letter.

SUNDAY, Apr. 3, the funeral of Victor Jones who died in France three years ago was held in the church, and 1500 people gathered in his honor.

REV. MILTON C. F. WESTFALL has accepted a call to the Union Church and will begin his work June 1. Mr. Westfall will be married this month and in May will be graduated by Rochester Theological Seminary.

AT SEWICKLEY, Rev. J. S. Stone, pastor, the last communion service was one of the largest held under the present pastorate. Eleven received the right hand of fellowship.

THE B. Y. P. U. of Turtle Creek, Rev. M. Neilson, pastor, won the silver cup from the Braddock group at the annual B. Y. P. U. rally held at Turtle Creek.

THE CLERK OF EVERY CHURCH in the Pittsburgh Baptist Association has received a letter signed by Dr. A. J. Bonnell; Dr. F. T. Galpin, and W. C. Chapell, asking the church to send its pastor to the annual meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines, Iowa, June 22-29. The minimum cost from Pittsburgh for a minister to go comfortably will be about $90.

NEW BRIGHTON welcomed nineteen, Sunday, Apr. 3.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL at Derry, since the first of the year, has increased 15 per cent over last year. The teachers training class purchased a handsome clock for the Sunday school. A new piano has been installed, which adds greatly to the effectiveness of the service.

IN THE FIRST CHURCH OF BUTLER, the pastor, Rev. R. T. Ketcham, was greeted with a pleasant surprise when the deacon, A. Alcorno, in a short address on behalf of the members of the church and congregation, presented him with a check for $900. At the same service twenty-two of the young people dedicated their lives to God for either the home or foreign field. Nearly 200 members have been added to the church membership in the past two and a half years, and nearly $10,000 paid on the indebtedness of the church.

S. L. PARCELL, pastor Broad St., Washington, with state superintendent Arthur B. Strickland had meetings full of interest and power. Thirty have been baptized, eleven more received for baptism, seven received in experience and five restored. The Bible school has been greatly revived, with an attendance each Sunday of more than 400. The cradle roll numbers 165.

DURING THE LAST FIVE YEARS Warren has received a large number of Negroes from the South. The First church has assisted in establishing a strong work among these people. A church has been organized which now has 163 members.

WEST VIRGINIA

AT A RECENT CHAPEL SERVICE at Storer College the desire of faculty and students for a new gymnasium took concrete form when amid great enthusiasm $2,736.50 was subscribed. Alumni, old students and friends will be appealed to at once. The hope is that the cornerstone may be laid at the coming announcement.

Columbus Activities

The Baptist churches of Columbus are all making progress. At the last meeting of the executive committee of the association, a committee was appointed to find points where new Baptist work should be started in the city. So the outlook is for advance. The Gypsy Smith meetings added very few new members to the churches, but helped to enkindle enthusiasm in Christian people. Most of our pastors held pre-Easter services with good results.

Memorial, Dr. G. R. Robbins, pastor, has reported the largest ingathering.

First Church, Dr. D. F. Rittenhouse, pastor is making splendid progress. Ten days of special meetings just preceding Easter conducted by the pastor resulted in twenty-five additions to the church, eleven of these by baptism. Additions at the regular service are frequent. The attendance at the prayer service fills the room. There is a steady increase at the Sunday services.

Gibbard Avenue, Charles Bebb, pastor, held a series of meetings with excellent results. A deep spiritual atmosphere characterizes all the services. The attendance at prayer meeting has doubled. The attendance at Sunday school has largely increased as has the attendance at the public worship, conversions or additions to the church occur at nearly all of the regular services, twenty-six new members having been received recently, sixteen of these by baptism.

Tenth Avenue, Dr. V. S. Phillips, pastor, reports that an evangelistic spirit prevails. Nine were received on Easter, six by baptism and three by letter.

Central, Rev. Wm. Pieffer, pastor, held a week of special services before Easter which brought results as follows: Ten were baptized, three received on experience and ten confessed Christ but not yet received by the church.

Tabernacle, Rev. G. F. Sowers, pastor. A series of meetings held in January and another in March resulted in a quickening of the spiritual life of the members, eleven additions by baptism and two on experience.

Hillcrest, Rev. Arthur E. Cowley, pastor: Two weeks of evangelistic meetings conducted by the pastor resulted in fifteen additions on Easter, twelve of these by baptism. The Easter offering from the S. S. was $65. The Sunday school has outgrown the present building and four new classrooms are nearly completed. The old building debt of $1,500 has just been paid off, and the church is ready to assume the debt of $3,000 for the new addition to the building.

Linden: Rev. C. H. Reeb came to this field Jan. 16 last. Since his coming twenty members have been received, fourteen by baptism. The interior of the building is being redecorated, and a debt is to be cancelled soon. A library is being installed composed of 150 volumes on Baptist teaching and Baptist principles.

Hildreth, Rev. E. L. Averitt, pastor, is making the best progress in recent years of its history. The pastor conducted two weeks of special meetings before Easter which resulted in twenty-two additions, seventeen by baptism. Congregations are good and the spirit and fellowship very fine. The pastor reports a very happy pastorate and the outlook for the church seems to be better than for many years, and the prospects good for a strong church.

A Cincinnati church recently took Dr. Colborn, and now a church in Louisville, Ky., has called Rev. E. L. Averitt, who closes his work here the first Sunday in May.

AT GREAT VALLEY, B. A. Wagner, pastor. A union evangelistic meeting was held in the Baptist church, which resulted in a deep spiritual awakening in the churches, and between fifty and sixty conversions. Twenty have been baptized and come into this church; also four by letter and one on her experience.

FIVE HAVE BEEN BAPTIZED and joined the Humphrey church.

Ministers of Dayton Association

The ministers of the Dayton Association held their monthly meeting at the First Church, April 11. Pastor Brandt of Troy reports good results from the meetings, Dr. Smith and Peter Quartel assisting him. Seven were baptized, Pastor Slocum of First Church, has recently baptized eighteen. Pastor Scruby at Haynes Street has enlarged the Sunday-school quarters by adding four classrooms. Pastor MacFarlane of Memorial church has baptized eight and twenty are waiting. Pastor Swigart of Greenville is finding many Baptists who are in the city. The Bible school has doubled. Twelve have been added. Pastor Cosby of Tippecanoe City reports two baptized. The Bible school has now double the attendance since the beginning of his pastorate. Pastor Hall at Summit Street has baptized eight and received three by letter and two by restoration. Pastor Patt of Sidney received twenty-one new members. Pastor Jones of Piqua gave the hand of fellowship to seventeen last communion and baptized four. The church has about one hundred tithers and a prayer meeting attendance of nearly 100. Pastor Copeland of Clifton Street, Springfield, had fourteen additions. Pastor Fletcher of Fletcher Church baptized three. Pastor Sloman of Third Street baptized forty-three, gave hand of fellowship to fifty-two. Pastor McFarlane of Franklin is developing interesting work among the young people. Pastor Fenner of Bellefontaine baptized eleven, and received one by experience. Pastor Bagby of Colorado Avenue received two by letter. Many new scholars are visiting the school. Pastor Johnson conducted a two-weeks meeting, baptized twenty, received one by experience and one by letter. The Bible school average is 450. North Dayton received ten by baptism, two by letter. Congregation is now clearing the lot to make room for the new church.

Pastor Albert Read of Xenia gave an excellent address; "To ordain or not to ordain is the question." He set forth in masterly and convincing argument that the Baptists need to be more cautious in setting aside men for the ministry.

Philip Bauer.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF RICHWOOD, H. C. Gillespie, pastor, dedicated its new house of worship on Easter. The new building is of colonial design, impressive, attractive, restful. The material used is a combination of Bedford stone and buff brick with opalescent glass windows.

The main auditorium has a seating capacity of 300, the Sunday-school room 150, the balcony about 200, every part is in full view of the speaker's stand. By the use of roller partitions and especially provided class rooms there are provided thirteen individual Sunday-school, class rooms, a rest room, choir room, study and cloak room. The basement has a commodious kitchen, a dining room with tables and equipment to seat 135, also a gym, where our young people may have their basket ball and other amusements. The building cost $60,000 exclusive of the pipe organ.

NINTH STREET, CINCINNATI. J. F. Herget, pastor, has elected Rev. G. N. Thomssen to serve as assistant pastor. Mr. Thomssen did a long and valuable work as a missionary to the Telugus in India, but the failure of his health compelled his return to America.

FIRST, STEUBENVILLE. Pastor W. Leo Brown, notes a large increase in financial receipts during the last year, paid off its debt and burned the mortgage, received forty-three new members, and enters the new year greatly encouraged.

PASTOR W. F. PARMELEE at Rutland has a "wonder" Sunday school, with every department thoroughly organized, and the largest men's Bible class in the county.

CEDAR AVENUE, CLEVELAND, has received during the last year seventeen by baptism, five by letter and three by experience, so that the membership now stands at 287. The offerings for the year were $11,104.12. The B. Y. P. U. has done remarkably well, having increased its membership and finances, the former to eighty-five and the latter to double any previous year. This society is now one of the largest in the state of Ohio. The church has been steadily growing during the past three years under the leadership of Dr. Milton M. Bales.

ZANESVILLE CHURCHES observed Easter with special service and a number of baptisms. At First, Pastor Martin baptized eleven, received two others for baptism and three by letter. At Market street, Pastor Eddy baptized a number of converts and spoke to the Masonic Order who attended the evening service in a body. At Fair Oaks, Pastor Davies had a good day, but postponed baptismal services until the following Sunday when he had a goodly number.

FIRST, ZANESVILLE, will celebrate its 100th anniversary the week of June 16. It was here that the Ohio Baptist Convention was organized. It was in this church that the noted missionary Dr. William Ashmore was converted and baptized. Many ministers of note served the church as pastor, and several men of reputation went out from it into the ministry. The present pastor is anxious to get into communication with former members, and especially pastors, that he may send them invitations to this anniversary. Please address the pastor, Rev. O. L. Martin, at Zanesville, Ohio.

MRS. JULIA E. CHAMBERLIN, long a faithful member of the church at Geneva, died on March 10 in her eighty-third year. She was a sister of Rev. Hervey Williams of Sibley, Iowa. She has been closely identified with all good enterprises in the community.

DR. ROBERT BRUCE SMITH has just entered upon his fourth year at the First Church, Springfield. During this time a chapel has been erected, offerings for current expenses increased 100 per cent, the allotment for the New World Movement pledged, the pastor's salary twice increased and 315 new members received. Rev. L. S. Gaines, a student in Denison, has been serving as assistant pastor for the last year. In these three years five members of the church have been approved for the ministry and two of them ordained. Two others are to prepare. Dr. Smith does much evangelistic work in his own and other churches.

ILLINOIS

BARRY—A men's class room is being fitted up. A fine Easter prelude by the orchestra and Young Ladies' class brought out a large crowd. Sunday evening, Apr. 10, the pastor, T. Elmer Jones, preached to a large audience and there were 140 in Sunday school.

DR. H. B. Cox, pastor of the Fifth Street Church, of Hannibal, Mo., assisted Pastor Meigs of the Central Church, of Quincy, Ill., in special meetings, closing Easter with forty-one additions, twenty-seven by baptism. Others were approved for baptism. Pastor Meigs is now assisting Dr. Cox, at Hannibal.

THE BAPTIST COUNCIL of the Alton district, modelled after the Baptist executive council of Chicago, will hold its first annual meeting, May 2. It is composed of delegates from five churches; it has purchased lots in an unchurched district in Alton and is planning a building for the South Wood River Mission. D. T. Magil is president and Dr. M. W. Twing is the secretary.

UPPER ALTON CHURCH completed a three-weeks evangelistic campaign with Easter Sunday. The first two weeks the pastor was assisted by Rev. Ernest A. Main of the Water Tower Baptist

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH, RICHWOOD, OHIO

Church of St. Louis as the preacher and Prof. Ira L. Deal of Waterloo, Iowa, as chorus-leader. Thirty have already been baptized. A number have been received on letter and experience. The leaders of the church say that it was the best series of meetings that the church has had in many years.

MATTOON, CENTRAL, Sunday school has so grown that it has been found necessary to rent the German Evangelical church building to care for the overflow. On a recent Sunday morning 240 were present in the Sunday school, and 91 in the Grant Park mission Sunday school in the afternoon. From March 13 to 27 special meetings were held. Some thirty persons took a stand for the Christian life and a number were reclaimed. On Easter Sunday afternoon Pastor J. M. Lively baptized twenty-four, and at the communion service on April 3 there were thirty-two new members given the hand of fellowship. The Pastor's salary was increased $240 per year, $980.03 given for the quarter's current expenses, and the $287.36 given for missions, a total of $1,267.09 for the quarter.

SINCE THE COMING OF the Rev. Geo. R. Stair as pastor at Englewood Apr. 18, 1920, nearly 170 members have been added to the church. An aggressive financial campaign was carried on last May and resulted in large sums raised for the New World Movement and for a new church house. Attendance at the regular services, the Sunday school and young peoples' union has been increased and strengthened. An interesting mission study class under the leadership of Mrs. Ira M.

Price has been conducted during the past eight weeks with very satisfactory results.

ON EASTER THE FIRST CHURCH, Rockford, closed special meetings which had lasted for two weeks. So far seventeen have been baptized and more baptisms will follow each Sunday evening this month. Pastor Sheets was ill at the beginning of the meetings but planned the services so well that excellent results followed. Rev. Joseph C. Dent was the evangelist.

SINCE THE COMING OF Rev. J. W. Hoyt to Belden Avenue, Chicago, on Nov. 1, 101 new members have been enrolled, about half of whom have been baptized. There are baptisms almost every Sunday.

HARP EVANGELIST GEO. H. THOMPSON closed a meeting with the First Church, Benton, on April 10 with fifty accessions to the church. On April 17 he began a union meeting at Blandinsville.

THE FIRST CHURCH, FREEPORT, Rev. Frank G. Sayers, pastor, has just closed a three weeks' meeting led by the Rev. H. W. Vom Brush party in which 117 decisions were made. So great were the crowds that the Odd Fellows temple was rented. The party has been invited back for a fall campaign. The pastor has baptized thirty-five since September.

REV. H. F. WARING of Berwyn four weeks before Easter asked for twenty-eight additions by Easter. Without a single special service his personal-work campaign was 125 per cent effective. The work has continued since Easter and there have been fifty additions largely of adults and mostly by baptism. In view of the extra strain this has meant, the pastor's vacation has been more than doubled.

THE WOMAN'S BAPTIST MISSION UNION met on April 12 at the Evanston church. There were, besides the regular order, addresses by Mr. Abraham Bowers and by Dr. L. K. Williams, pastor of the Olivet Church.

MICHIGAN

THE HILLSDALE COLLEGE CHURCH, Dr. Hervey M. Ford, pastor, added thirty-six to its membership at Easter, twenty-six of them by baptism. The church exceeded its apportionment in the New World Movement, has increased the pastor's salary by $250, purchased a parsonage, recently sent $600 for foreign relief and generally improved its property, including the pipe organ.

ON EASTER, THE FOUNTAIN STREET CHURCH, Grand Rapids, Rev. A. W. Wishart, pastor, added 101 new members, thirty-one of them by baptism. A church banquet attended by 957 members of the church and congregation and addressed by Dr. Willett and Dr. Soares of Chicago, was held in the Klingman Exposition Building on April 8.

ON APRIL 10 THE FIRST CHURCH, Detroit observed "Founders Day," it being the ninety-fifth anniversary of the founding of the First Church and the fortieth anniversary of the North Church, the two churches uniting in 1912 and keeping the name of the older organization. Historical addresses were delivered by Senior Deacon George A. Maten, who was instrumental in starting the North Church, and by Dr. Thomas J. Villers, the present pastor of the united bodies. Since he became pastor nearly eight years ago, 1349 new members have been added; 529 by baptism, 696 by letter, 112 by experience, and 12 by restoration. The membership now is 1750. Within these eight years, $134,639 was raised for current expenses, $145,773 for benevolences, and $33,295 received from other sources, making a total of $313,707.

REV. C. J. McLEAN has resigned as pastor of the First Church, Jackson, to accept the call of the First Church, Akron, Ohio. During his brief stay in Jackson, the work has been significantly blessed.

MR. J. R. STEVENS who has been serving the churches at Pentwater and Hart was ordained to the gospel ministry on April 7 in the First Church, Owosso. Rev. W. T. Woodhouse of Corunna was chosen moderator of the council and Rev. George Woolcock of Ovid, clerk. Pastor H. A. Waite of the First Church, Owosso, preached the sermon. The service was made especially impressive by the baptism of the candidate's wife and eleven-year-old son.

REV. N. W. WERNER NELSON has resigned at Gladstone and will begin work at Sister Bay, Wis., the last of the month.

Conference for Rural Ministers

The annual conference for Michigan rural pastors will be held at the Agricultural College, East Lansing, June 20 to July 1. A strong program has been arranged. Dean Davenport of the University of Illinois, Prof. Thomas Nixon Carver of Harvard, R. W. Gammon of the religious education dept. of the Congregational Church, Lee Driver, supt. of rural schools for Pennsylvania, are on the program. There are several others. The course in modern English literature which has been so popular will be repeated. Last year many churches sent their own pastors, and in other cases the denomination assisted in the expense. This is a cheap and profitable vacation. Room costs one dollar per week and board costs five dollars. The ministers and their wives stay in the college dormitories.

INDIANA

A RALLY OF THE B. Y. P. U. of the Orleans Association was held on March 20 at the Mitchell Church. Officers were elected and a number of interesting addresses heard. Plans were made for another rally to be held at Huron in June before the convention in Cincinnati.

IOWA

EVANGELIST JOHN M. LINDEN closed on Easter Sunday a campaign with the First Church, Fort Dodge, with some seventy-five decisions and with sixty-two volunteers for Christian work as a vocation.

ON EASTER SUNDAY, Pastor W. G. Jones at the First Church, Vinton, baptized fourteen and six more wait the ordinance. Audiences are large every Sunday evening. On April 24, Geo. E. Guille of the Moody Institute begins an eight-day Bible conference.

COLORADO

A CHURCH WAS FORMED on April 10 in Branson, a new town on the Colorado and Southern R. R. about two miles from the New Mexico line. There were a week later thirty-six charter members and it is expected that there will be fifty. The attendance on Sunday evenings is more than one hundred.

NEBRASKA

SINCE LAST SEPTEMBER 104 members have been added to the church at Ansley, eighty-seven by baptism. All but fifteen of this number were added as the result of special meetings held in country school houses in the vicinity of Ansley. Rev. R. Richards is pastor.

KANSAS

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, Scott City. Rev. J. W. Smith, pastor, the average attendance for the last quarter was 75 per cent more than the church membership.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, WICHITA, Dr. John Bunyan Smith, pastor, there have been since Sept. 1, 210 additions to the church, sixty-three of them by baptism. A special Easter offering of $1,108.57 was taken. For ten weeks Dr. Smith conducted on Wednesday evenings at the close of the prayer meeting a popular Bible study class with an enrollment of 200. The study was in Thessalonians. Another class has been organized to study the great doctrines of the Bible.

NORTH DAKOTA

SAWYER: As a result of special meetings held by Pastor B. H. Thorlakson and Colporteur C. J. Hill, ten have been received into the church; six by baptism.

PROPHET MOUNTAIN: Special meetings were held in this place by the same pastor and colporteur. Nine have been received into the church by baptism. The church is meeting its New World Movement pledges, although the district has suffered drouth for the past five years.

Pacific Coast

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE HAMILTON SQUARE CHURCH, San Francisco, received fifty-nine new members during the first three months of the year. During the five years of the pastorate of Rev. Creed W. Gawthrop the membership has grown from 269 to 489.

ON APRIL 8 the Twenty-Third Avenue Oakland, celebrated the fourth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. J. N. Garst by a reception to him and to sixty-six new members. During the four years 224 have been received.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

REV. CARL BASSETT has resigned as state evangelist and has left for an evangelistic campaign in the southern states. He may be addressed at 447 S. Seville Ave., Huntington Park, Cal.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

REV. C. A. NETHERY, of Ferndale. Rev. William Jackson, of West Seattle and Rev. I. V. Maxey, of Kent, closed their pastorates April 1. Rev. B. A. Hylton, of Raymond, has presented his resignation to take effect May 1.

GREEN LAKE CHURCH, SEATTLE: On the night of April 6 the church was entirely destroyed by fire. It is hoped that plans can soon be formed for the erection of another building. In the meanwhile, the people have secured the use of a hall in which to hold their services.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society and the celebration of the Golden Jubilee for the Columbia River District will be held in Seattle May 31 to June 3.

A SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION FOR WORKERS in church vacation schools will be conducted under the department of religious education of the Western Washington Convention in the First Swedish Church, Seattle, April 20-23. The instructors will include Miss Meme Brockway, Rev. F. W. Wightman, Mrs. Frieda C. Davidson, Prof. Geo. B. Cole, Mrs. W. W. DeForrest and Miss Grace Cheever.

REV. AND MRS. HENRY TOPPING, missionaries stationed at Morioka, Japan, now on furlough in this country, are in Seattle, where they will spend a few months giving assistance to the Japanese Mission work in the city.

THE CENTRALIA CHURCH. Rev. Edker Burton pastor, and the CHEHALIS CHURCH, Rev. F. C. Stannard, pastor, are only four miles apart. They are both vigorous organizations, showing fine growth. Recently there have been a number of fellowship gatherings which have not only enabled the members of the churches to become better acquainted but have stimulated the work in each church. The Chehalis B. Y. P. U. entertained the Centralia B. Y. P. U. at a valentine party in February. The Centralia W. W. G. entertained the Chehalis W. W. G. at a banquet in March to meet Miss Helen Crissman. On March 28 the Centralia choir repeated in the Chehalis Church the cantata it had rendered on Easter in its own church, and on April 1 the Centralia B. Y. P. U. gave a party for the Chehalis B. Y. P. U.

In response to inquiries received from Polish Baptists concerning the reported death of Rev. K. W. Strzelec, the Foreign Mission Society is very glad to announce that a cablegram just received states that Mr. Strzelec was in excellent health and that he was finding enormous need for relief work in Poland and Galicia. The rumors concerning his death were doubtless based on the fact of his severe illness with rheumatic fever because of which he had been confined to his bed for more than five weeks. He narrowly escaped with his life, but after having been transferred to Wiesbaden for a period of rest and recuperation his recovery set in rapidly.

After a six year pastorate, Rev. Herbert Hines has resigned at El Paso, Ill., and on May 1 becomes pastor of the First Church, Kankakee.

Mr. Simon S. Gerig was on March 30, ordained to the gospel ministry at Wanson, Ohio, in accordance with the findings of a council of the churches of the Toledo Association which met on the same day. Bro. Gerig is now preaching at Fostoria.

The War Department has asked the aid of ministers in placing the Victory Medal in the hands of veterans of the World War. Application blanks may be secured from the commanding officer of any army post, camp or station, or from Victory Medal officers who have replaced recruiting officers in most of the larger cities of the country.

At a recent student conference under the leadership of Sherwood Eddy, held at the University of Wisconsin, Rev. Norman B. Henderson, pastor of the University Church, Minneapolis, represented the Baptists and preached to the students in the First Church, both morning and evening of the Sunday included in the meetings. His able ministry was most acceptable and inspiring.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

The Largest Bond Issue Since the Armistice

TWENTY years ago, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroads obtained control of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, buying almost all of its stock at $200 per share. To raise the funds, the two roads issued and sold about $215,000,000 of their joint bonds, putting up the stock of the Burlington as collateral security. These "Burlington Joint 4's," as they are popularly known, mature July 1, 1921, and because they are in effect backed by the resources of these three of the best roads, have always enjoyed an excellent investment standing.

We are again reminded of changed investment conditions by the preliminary announcement that on April 26 a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan and Company will offer a new issue of $230,000,000 bonds executed jointly by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, running fifteen years and bearing 6½ per cent. In addition to the Burlington stock which has been security for the maturing issue, it is planned to deposit with the trustee additional security in the form of $33,000,000 Northern Pacific Refunding and Improvement Mortgage 6 per cent bonds and a similar amount of Great Northern General Mortgage 7 per cent bonds.

In contrast with the twenty year 4 per cent bond issued originally, it will be seen that present conditions require a 6½ per cent offering running fifteen years. The strength of the three roads is shown by a recent statement, that after allowing for all underlying issues, their joint assets applicable to this issue are over four times its amount, while available income for 1918 and 1919 covered the interest requirements of the old issue seven or eight times.

At this writing, final details as to denominations and price have not been announced.

"Is Mark a Roman Gospel?"

By Benjamin W. Bacon. Harvard University Press

It one desires the nearest possible approximation to an answer to that question, if he wishes to get a good idea of the matter and method of higher criticism, and the reliability of its results, if he wishes to form or to renew an acquaintance with the sources of the history of the New Testament, this thesis of 106 pages will serve his purposes admirably. It is number seven in the series of Harvard Theological Studies, and its author is Buckingham Professor of New Testament Criticism and Interpretation in Yale University. From tradition, from the early dissemination of the story of Mark and from internal evidence, it is shown that Mark is a "Roman Gospel," in a sense and with consequences somewhat different from that commonly and loosely held.

"My Son."

By Corra Harris. New York: Geo. H. Doran Co., $1.50 net.

A mother, widow of an old-fashioned circuit rider, to whose heroic memory she is constant, has a son, also a preacher, who is what is called "modern" in thought and method. There is a natural conflict of ideals, but a happy ending. The book is certain to be interesting to all who love the churches and who can appreciate a quiet but lively humor.

"A Harmony of the Synoptic Gospels in Greek."

By Earnest De Witt Burton and Edgar Johnson Goodspeed. The University of Chicago Press. $3 net.

This book is identical, except in the use of the Greek text, with the recently published "Harmony of the Synoptic Gospels for Historical and Critical Study." It is a splendid piece of work, not likely to be duplicated and indispensable for any careful student of the Scriptures. The purpose is not harmonization but the exhibition of the parallelism of the Gospels as they stand. The text is that of Westcott and Hort.

"Mother of Mine."

By John Frederic Hessel. Champaign, Ill., Municipal Problems Publishing Co. Cloth, $1.50.

A tribute in verse to a man's mother, put into such shape that it becomes a suitable gift book for any mother on a birthday or on Mother's Day. Besides the principal poem, a number of other short poetic tributes are added.

"The Sword and the Cross."

By Kirby Page. Chicago: The Christian Century Press. $1.20.

During the war, the Department of Justice ruled that to publish the Sermon on the Mount, without note or comment, for free distribution was "pro-German." Now it can be printed. Of late attempts to show that the war and the teaching of Jesus cannot be reconciled have not appeared in print. Now they can be published. And here is one. Through it there breathes a noble Christian spirit. Whether one can go all the way with the author or not, he adduces considerations which merit careful thought on the part of all those who are looking for some cure for the curse of militarism.

"The Vision We Forget."

By P. Whitwell Wilson. New York; F. H. Revell Co. $2.

The man who became known to the Christian world by his book, "The Christ We Forget," now presents a fresh and colorful presentation of the Revelation of John.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

MANNA FOR THE MUSICIAN

Sometimes those of us who devote at least a goodly part of our time and interest to the music within the church get a little discouraged at the vicissitudes that fall to our lot. We feel that we are not always truly appreciated, or the organ springs a delicious pungent cipher on Easter morning, or the bellows blows up, or we "get fired." And then again, we once in a while have some real troubles. It is good at these, and other times, to read what one of the greatest of church-musicians has to say in "Our chosen Field":

In the year 1894 Sir John Stainer delivered an address at Exeter, England, on the subject of congregational singing. It was published later under the title "Music Considered in its Effect Upon, and Connection With the Worship of the Church." The most striking part of it dealt with the people's part of the service—the importance of which was strongly emphasized.

We are sorry that this address is not as well known in this country as it should be—and we fear that even in England it is out of print.

If any of our readers are inclined to "rescue devotion from the hungry maws of the choir," we would advise them to meditate upon the following excerpt from the Exeter address:

"There is only one valid excuse for not having a choir, and that is, inability to pay for it. If any one should ask me what is the use of a choir when a congregation knows how to take its part in worship, I would ask in return, what is the use of those mullions, and that delicate tracery, and richly colored stained glass? Away with it all! Good plate glass in strong wooden sashes will admit twice as much light in winter, and give plenty of wholesome ventilation in summer. If we are to approach sacred art from a purely utilitarian point of view, what is the use of a tower or spire? You cannot have a vestry or an organ up there, or hold a mothers' meeting in it. Ah, but I forgot; as the anthem only exists in order that the choir may 'show off,' so, perhaps, the spire is a sort of architect's anthem—perhaps church architects cannot be 'kept together' unless indulged with an occasional spire; it is, no doubt, merely thrown into the plans lest architects should desert church work and devote their best powers to the construction of municipal buildings and music halls."

"I am sure it is unnecessary for me to argue further against the utilitarian view of art in worship; and I may at once say that the function of a trained choir is to sing many beautiful compositions which can never be rendered by the most musical of congregations. An anthem rightly listened to, and devoutly sung, is a short sermon to the hearers, and a beautiful offering to God. The anthem, in its present form, seems to be the peculiar and special growth of our English Church, and therefore deserves cultivation and encouragement. When we come to the music of the office of the Holy Communion, we are immediately led to realize the catholicity of our art of music. If the inflection of the priest's part be included, or the melodies of the ancient hymns, our range of selection extends over a thousand years at least. If certain celebrations are set aside for those who do not like music, surely there should be other celebrations beautified with the highest and most splendid resources of our heaven-born art. Every great musician, almost without exception, has contributed the choicest fruits of his genius to the music of the Eucharist. Let us not wantonly cast aside this glorious heritage, borne along on the gathering crest of rolling ages, because, forsooth, John Noakes and Tom Styles cannot take their personal part in the performance of it."

Whither are we tending and what will come of all this accumulated interest in chorus singing? First, it is bound to give those gifted with either voices or musical talent a chance for growth, an education and an appreciation on a wholesale scale, because of the numbers who participate and who hear the singing. Secondly, it will offer opportunity to individuals to enter the musical profession. Choruses need orchestra accompaniment and orchestras need trained musicians, even soloists on different instruments, as well as vocalists to assume the solo roles so often required with a choral work to add variety. Lastly, this extended musical activity should stimulate composition. When there is chance for a hearing, there are sure to develop compositions worthy of performance. Who knows but that this tremendous desire to sing will not only raise trained choruses to the level of finest choral effort, but also inspire the growth of American composition to the world recognition for which we have long been waiting.

NEW MUSIC

Springs in the Desert.....A. B. Jennings, Jun.
Now Our Hymn Ascendeth.....Arr. by Dickinson
How Excellent Thy Name.....Lester

Anthems published by H. W. Gray Co., New York.

ABOVE are listed three very serviceable anthems suitable for use by either quartet or chorus choirs. The first named is by a writer not long known as a writer of church music, but destined, in the opinion of this reviewer, to rank with the leaders in that field if present indications count for anything. The present contribution is a melodious, diatonic chorus, introduced by an effective solo for tenor, not difficult, but appealing both to the listener and to the performer. The text is especially suitable for missionary services—a field of music that has been sorely neglected by composers. The arrangement by Clarence Dickinson is an effective version of an old fifteenth century church melody, with a singable text by the arranger's gifted wife. It is simple, but rarely beautiful. We can always count on the intrinsic and artistic values of works by the splendid musicianly organist of the Brick Presbyterian Church of New York City. Since the last named anthem is a product of the reviewer's own pen, he will content himself by reprinting another's verdict upon it—from the current issue of "The New Music Review":—"William Lester is a composer whose melodic invention seems never to run dry. His secular choruses and cantatas are among the best and most popular of recent years, and in many of them he has had the able collaboration of Frederick H. Martens, who has also made for him the paraphrase of the Eighth Psalm which is the text for this anthem, 'How Excellent Thy Name.' There is a tenor solo, and two bright and joyous choruses."

NEWS ITEMS

For Easter music at the Ashland Ave. Baptist Church of Toledo, Ohio, the morning was devoted to part 2 of William Lester's Easter-cantata, "The Triumph of the Greater Love," the second section being devoted to "The Fulfillment of the Passion." The opening portion of the cantata was given the Sunday morning preceding, and the final section was scheduled for Sunday, April 3. Stainer's little known Easter cantata, "St. Mary Magdalen," was heard at the evening service, Easter Sunday. Mary Wilting Megley is the organist and director of music at this progressive church, and the fine quartet consists of Mrs. Charles Ellis Lackens, soprano, Mrs. Reginald Morris, contralto, Mr. Reginald Morris, tenor, and Mr. Harrington Van Hoesen, bass.

Pre-Convention Pan-American Baptist Conference

Des Moines, Iowa, June 21, 1921

Announcement by Committee on Fundamentals, J. C. Massee, Chairman

In accordance with the instructions given the executive committee at the Conference of Fundamentals at Buffalo last year, another conference on fundamentals has been arranged to precede the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines. The scope of this conference has been somewhat enlarged to include both the Southern Baptist Convention and the Canadian Baptist Convention. From the South two distinguished speakers will be heard, Dr. John R. Sampey of the Southern Theological Seminary, Louisville, and Dr. Lee R. Scarborough, President of the Southwestern Theological Seminary, Ft. Worth. From Canada, Dr. T. T. Shields of the Jarvis Street Church, Toronto. Also distinguished ministers from the Northern Baptist Convention: Dr. D. F. Rittenhouse of Columbus, Ohio, First Church; Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland, Ore., East Side Church; Dr. Jacob Heinrich of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary of Chicago. It is hoped to have the addresses to be delivered by these brethren in print and ready for distribution at the conference. Announcement concerning them will be made later. Opportunity will be given at the conference for vital discussions from the floor. It is expected that a very large attendance will make this one of the most notable events in Baptist history.

Send Your Pastor

The following letter which has just come to the office is respectfully commended by the editors to the consideration of all our churches. The Des Moines convention is June 22-29 and all our churches should be represented.

"I can think of no other way in which your excellent paper could be of such great benefit to the churches of your constituency during the next two months as to induce them to send their pastors to Des Moines. In this regard they seriously need a campaign of education.

"Churches that pay $5,000 and up, usually send their pastors, who are well able to defray their own expenses, but the great majority of the churches think of such trips as simply "pleasure trips." They certainly are a great joy, but the churches do not realize that they as members of the convention should be represented in its deliberations and decisions.

"Churches do not realize how greatly they as churches would benefit by the broadened horizon, the deepened interest, the intellectual stimulation and above all spiritual quickening, that would come to the pastor, if he were privileged to attend these great gatherings.

"The pastors who realize these things cannot even suggest the matter because of those who are unable to realize the things above suggested. If you should urge this I would suggest that it be done as a matter of the church expense rather than by special individual gifts, for this latter method places the recipient under obligation to those few who make up the purse to send him. Pastors are usually under sufficient obligations, (in the estimation of some) without any more being added in this way."

Shall We Have Biennial Conventions

The executive committee of the Northern Baptist Convention in its report to the meeting in Des Moines will propose amendments to the by-laws of the convention providing for biennial sessions. The law committee is busy preparing the changes for submission. It may not be possible to give in detail this report before the meeting of the convention in Des Moines. The Pennsylvania state convention adopted resolutions requesting the executive committee to consider the change to biennial sessions. At the meeting of the executive committee last November, a sub-committee was appointed to consider the matter. At the meeting in March this committee unanimously reported recommending such a change and after discussion, the executive committee voted to recommend the change to the convention.

Fresh from the Field

Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, is to visit MacMaster University, Toronto, for the commencement celebrations in May, when he preaches the baccalaureate sermon and delivers the commencement address. He has received a letter from Professor Farmer, dean of the Theological faculty, stating that the Senate has unanimously decided to confer upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity on the Occasion.

The death of Rev. R. J. Colpitts, editor of The Maritime Baptist has called forth many warm and appreciative personal tributes in the paper of which he was editor. His sudden passing came as a great shock to his constituency, in which he was very highly esteemed.

Each year increasing numbers of missionaries are spending at least a part of their time while on furlough at the University of Chicago. More than fifty returned missionaries have been in attendance during the last year, coming from Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines, the Malay states, Burma, Assam, India, Syria, Egypt, the Congo, and South America. The presence of such a large number of experienced workers from all over the world affords to the student volunteer the exceptional opportunity of coming into personal contact with men and women of wide missionary experience, and to the missionaries themselves the joy and inspiration of a world wide Christian fellowship.

Mrs. George E. Whitman of Kaying, China, has arrived in McMinnville, Oregon, to be present at the graduation of two of her children, Avard and Zella, who are completing courses in McMinnville college. Avard is the president of the associated students and the representative of his class as speaker on the commencement program.

Rev. Tillman R. Braddy, recently pastor at Barnesboro, Pa., is now living at 7612 So. Shore Drive, Chicago, and serving as acting pastor of the Windsor Park church.

Rev. H. O. King, David City, Nebr., one of the old pastors of that state for the last twenty years, has just accepted the unanimous call of the church at Silver City, Iowa, and enters upon his labors May 1.

Rev. J. W. Merrill has resigned at Carbondale, Ill., to accept the work of district superintendent of missions for Eastern Illinois, the work recently laid down by Rev. George H. Yule. He will begin his new duties July 1st. Rev. Wilson Mills has just closed a very helpful revival meeting with this church.

Pastor Cox of the Fifth St. Church Hannibal, Mo., assisted Pastor Meigs of the Central Church of Quincy, Ill., in a pre-Easter service. About fifty were added to the church. Beginning April 6, Pastor Meigs assisted Pastor Cox in meetings at Hannibal. The meetings continued sixteen days. Fifty-six have been baptized, and Twenty-nine have come by letter. Pastor Cox has done a great work in the two years he has been with the church, and had baptismal services nearly every Sunday night.

Rochester Theological Seminary Anniversaries will take place this year beginning Sunday May 22, and ending on Wednesday, May 25. Among the speakers will be Pres. Clarence A. Barbour, Pres. Emory W. Hunt, Pres. Charles E. Goodell, Prof. William Adams Brown, Rev. David Lee Jamison, Pres. Clifton D. Gray, Rev. William C. Bitting, Pres. Arthur H. Norton, Rev. Bernard C. Clausen and Rev. Samuel D. Bowden.

Report concerning Rev. E. J. Nordlander in THE BAPTIST of April 9 is correct, we are informed, except in one sad particular, namely, that a good while ago Mrs. Nordlander passed away from this world.

Following a visit of the chapel car, "Emmanuel" in the early spring, the First Church of Fort Lupton, Colo., was organized on March 13 with a membership of thirty-one.

On March 1, Pres. L. W. Riley celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of his inauguration as executive head of McMinnville College. In honor of the occasion Dr. Doney, president of Willamette University delivered an address before the faculty and students at the chapel hour and the students were granted a half holiday.

After a pastorate of almost nine years, Rev. Parker Smith has resigned as pastor of the First Church, Parker, S. D. The resignation took effect April 10.

The First Church, Waukegan, Ill., observed its seventy-fifth anniversary with appropriate services April 15-17.

Our Future Before Us

One of our admirers wrote us the other day commending some of the features of the paper, especially this Kollum. He startled us by saying, "You have a great future before you." We had always supposed that it was behind us. It is great to find that we still have something to live for.

Killam's Kollum

It Is Its Name

"Forgive me for saying that your 'Fresh from the Field' department is a misnomer. A short time ago you had an item calling attention to the birth of my little boy. He was married last week."

This example should be a warning to our many correspondents. There are at least two dangers (aside from the subscribers) to be avoided in the newspaper game. The one is "prematurity" and the other "overmaturity." Perhaps we should say that the instance chronicled above is an example of the latter.

A few weeks ago we chanced to learn that a certain well-known minister was to be called to a certain well-known church. It was "news." The Associated Press thought so. Unfortunately the brother in question happened to be in town when the first copy of THE BAPTIST came from the press. He was distressed almost but not quite beyond expression. We stopped the presses. We took out the real "news" and substituted a note telling of the gift by the ladies aid society of a silk umbrella to Brother Xerxes. This item to say the least did no harm. In a religious newspaper we must avoid "prematurity."

Just Before Finis

While we are talking about "news" we may be permitted to say a few things. We cannot of course say what we want to say or ought to say. A thousand of our readers would have an attack of "peevishness" which would certainly disturb the serenity of this office. We have trouble enough without sharing that we cause our readers. We shall, however, venture a few words.

In writing "news" it will greatly help the author to imagine himself a reader in a far distant part of the country. Let him ask whether "pink carnations graced the tables loaded with nature's bounties" sounds like "news" a thousand miles from the perfume of said "pink carnations."

Again we are moved to say, when your own pithy, pointed, poignant, powerful sermonic products are in question would it not be well to assume all these descriptives? It would certainly save paper, ink and especially blue pencils.

A month in this office will convince any competent judge that we have as a denomination our full share of shrewd advertisers. Under the guise of "news" we get columns of material which should be paid for at double the advertising rate. It is such good publicity. When we take out the personal puffs we destroy the "news" in the judgment of some.

O, that we might speak right out from the shoulder on these subjects!

What City Wants It?

TWO propositions may come before the next convention of the Northern Baptists: first, that conventions be held biennially instead of annually; second, that three or more centers of population, east, middle west, and west, be selected for holding conventions.

The increase in attendance, with the growing work of, and interest in, the convention, makes it a very considerable burden upon the hospitalities of any but a large city. Also, not every place which would be glad to entertain the convention has the auditorium, hotels, and facilities for such an event.

The following named persons have been appointed by President Tustin, a committee to consider this suggestion and report thereon to the executive committee before the next convention. Henry H. Kendall, of Boston, Rev. J. C. Hazen, of Peoria, Ill., and Rev. John Snape, of Oakland California.

The committee will welcome communications from cities which would like to become permanent paces of meeting, stating their ability to provide meeting places and hotel accommodations, with adequate transportation facilities, and sufficient membership in Baptist churches to carry the responsibilities of entertaining the convention.

Should the proposed amendment be carried it is to be noted that not oftener than once in six years would such provision be required.

The committee would welcome individual suggestions as to the desirability of such a plan as well as comment thereon.

HENRY H. KENDALL, Chairman,
142 Berkeley St., Boston.

Illinois Churches Set a New Standard of Giving

FIFTY Illinois churches with 17,158 members subscribed for the New World Movement $1,551,601.05 an average per member for four years of $90.43.

Here is the List

Alton—First, Cherry street, Upper; Alpha, Aurora—First; Berwick, Bloomington, Bethany—Highland; Chicago—Austin, Belden Ave., Covenant, Englewood, Hyde Park, Second, Windsor Park; Delavan, De Kalb, Dry Hill, Danvers, Evanston, El Paso, Graymont, Greenville, Gilman, Galesburg, Galva, Hutsonville, La Grange, Morris, Mt. Carroll, Morgan Park, Monmouth, Marengo, Moline, New Berlin, New Stonington, Ottawa, Oak Park, Oquawka, Princeton, Pipestone, Rockford—State street; Rochelle, Rockton, Stillman Valley, Toulon, Tiskilwa, Urbana—First, Herald of Hope; Waukegan.

There are other churches in the state whose per capita pledges equal some indicated in this list. Others would be included but for a temporary and extraordinary local demand such as building programs, etc.

The advance in the standard of giving in these churches for denominational benevolence is inspiring. In 1917 the per capita standard was $3.99; in 1918, $5.16; in 1919, $7.81, in 1920, $22.61.

Forty of these fifty churches have also increased their pastor's salaries!

It Can be Done Again

A study of these fifty churches will soon convince an Illinois Baptist that the list does not represent any special class or section of the state. In the list 13 Associations are represented and the churches range from 8 to 1,571 in membership. Some represent rural communities and small villages, while others are located in county seats, and in largest cities of the state. It cannot be said, therefore, that these churches have a more favorable opportunity than any similar list which might be selected from various sections of the territory. There are hundreds of churches as financially able to reach this standard of giving.

The secret of their success is found in the fact that they faced staggering allotments with good will, with courage, with faith, and with determination to do their very best, and with the gripping conviction that this movement is of God! So they prayed and preached, and organized, and canvassed, and now they say to the Baptists of Illinois, "It can be done; we have proven it."

President Harding Turns Sod for Roger Williams Memorial

THE foundation of the Memorial to Religious Liberty, and to Roger Williams its great apostle, has been started and President Harding turned the first sod. The great structure will be placed alongside the present Immanuel Church of Washington City on the corner of Sixteenth and Columbia Road and is to cost a half-million dollars. The pastor of Immanuel, Dr. Gove G. Johnson had been tireless in his efforts in projecting the memorial behind which the Baptist of the entire country have placed themselves. The presiding officer of the auspicious occasion was the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Alexandria, Rev. E. B. Jackson who is chairman of the building committee.

As Mr. Harding with bared head put the shovel in the ground he remarked on the side (for he declared he had not time to make a speech), "We cannot have too many occasions celebrating religious liberty and we cannot have too much religion in this country."

The Rev. Dr. J. J. Muir pronounced the invocation. He is pastor of Temple Baptist Church and chaplain of the Senate and dean of the Baptist pastors in the city. The presiding officer told how nearly one hundred years after the work of Roger Williams, the great Baptist pioneers of Virginia were suffering imprisonment in order to force the matter of religious liberty upon the attention of the revolutionary leaders. Jeremiah Moore had been placed in the old colonial jail of Washington's home city, Alexandria, for "preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ with out a license." Other denominations had conformed and were unmoled but Moore got a larger crowd by preaching through the latticed jail door. Patrick Henry, probably with Washington's approval, defended him before the justice, and with such an impressive speech that Col. Broadwater told him he was free to preach wherever he pleased. This great Baptist leader and martyr deserves to be immortalized with that small elect company of men who gave the western world civil and religious liberty. Moore had the audacity to plant the First Baptist Church in Alexandria upon the ground where he had suffered martyrdom for soul liberty.

"America" was sung by the great crowd, the president joining lustily. It was a great disappointment that Drs. Gray and Hunt, chairmen respectively of the Southern and Northern convention committees, could not be present. Mr. E. Hilton Jackson, moderator of the Columbia Association, was among the special guests. Mr. Ambrose Swasey from Cleveland represented the Northern Baptists on the national executive committee and Congressman B. C. Rowley of Mississippi represented Southern Baptists.

Dean Wilbur of George Washington University spoke very appropriately of the great significance of the occasion. Mr. W. W. Everett of Calvary Church, Mr. Swartwout, the architect, from New York City, Dr. Alfred Bagby of the Virginia Baptist Historical Society were present. Rev. Dr. Bishop of the Episcopal Church was conspicuous, with several other direct descendants of Roger Williams. Mr. Oscar Straus, promoter of the Memorial and biographer of Roger Williams sent a message containing these words:—"It is notably fitting and glorifies the Memorial that our great hearted and liberal-minded President, the most eminent member of the same church to which Roger Williams once belonged, should step aside from his high duties to turn the first spade of earth. . . . May the Memorial serve to hand down to future generations the name and fame of America's pioneer of Religious Liberty, Democracy's most precious heritage for enfranchised mankind."—Eugene B. Jackson.

Annual Meeting of Central District

BAPTIST women of Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, attention! Are you making plans to attend the annual meeting of Central District to be held at Immanuel Church, Chicago, Ill., May 18, 19 and 20?

For many years Central District meetings have been featured by a union program, the Women's American Baptist Foreign Mission and the Women's American Baptist Home Mission Society co-operating, but the organization has been a part of and under the auspices of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. On May 19, Central District will become a union organization, and the dream of many women of the states that comprize this district, will be realized.

Golden Jubilee

Another great feature of this memorable meeting will be the observance of the Golden Jubilee, of the Womens' American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Never has there been such an opportunity presented for us, who live in America, to see the result of our prayers, our endeavors, our gifts of the years. Think of entertaining and listening to addresses by Dr. Ma Saw Sa of Burma, Madame Frances Kolatorova of Checko-Slovakia, Miss Martha Wesnke of Poland, Nakaji Chickn San, of Japan, Dr. J. Handamah of India, Khanto Bala Rae, of Bengal-Orissa and Kanen Vong of China! All these noted women will be in attendance. National state and associational officers will greet you, a wonderful pageant is being arranged and a stereopticon lecture "The Story of Fifty Years Told in Pictures" will give information and inspiration.

World Wide Guild Rally

World Wide Guild rally begins on Friday night with a banquet, at which all delegates are invited.

On Saturday there is a "method meet" and "chain supper." The rally closes with a vesper service on Sunday. Every day from May 18 to May 22 will be full of real joy! Baptist Women and World Wide Guild Girls, come!—Mrs. W. P. TOPPING.

God Help Us to Help Them

THE Chinese people through private benevolence and governmental action have helped the famine sufferers more largely than in any previous emergency,—more largely than China's friends have dared to hope for. England, Japan, Canada, America have sent aid. America's total is approximately $5,000,000. Through this amount, during the long winter months, millions have been kept alive—just that. Other millions, hoarding week by week their lessening store of grain, grass, leaves, bark, have kept themselves alive—they have barely lived. Tens of thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, their grass, corncocks, willow bark exhausted, have turned their faces to the wall and died. No one will ever know their number."

Such is the record up to April 22nd. But what of the present need? Has the China Famine Relief organization completed its work? Is the famine past? Are the starving millions safe now? One conservative and well-known missionary writes that of the 2,300,000 people in his district, at least 450,000 must die before harvest unless helped, and that the food allotted to his district will enable him to care for only one in eight of these 450,000. Scores of such reports have come in.

Between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 people face starvation—death from starvation, mind—and they must be cared for at least till the first of July.

Unfortunately, the impression has gone out that contributions already made by the churches and other agencies of help, have provided sufficient funds for these needs. This is a mistake. The number needing help is naturally larger now than at any previous time since the famine began, and the money already raised has practically all been expended for the supplies needed to provide for the most pressing requirements up to the first of May.

There is no question of the careful and capable handling out of these funds. Nobody has suggested a breath of criticism. The case is clear and simple—shall we let these millions die or shall we give them still further help? Shall we stand between them and death till their own fields bring them relief.

This matter lies with the churches locally, for there is no plan for another concerted drive. The responsibility is now fully distributed. It is upon each of us. And the churches of America are the last desperate hope of starving China.

Pan-American Baptist Conference

IN ANOTHER column appears the announcement and program of the pre-convention conference on fundamentals which is to be held at Des Moines. This program appears to be well-balanced and interesting. Attendance will probably be large just as it was last year, especially since the newly-organized pastors' conference meets the day before and is to consider some important matters.

One significant change appears this year in the make-up of the conference. It is announced as the "Pre-Convention Pan-American Baptist Conference." That is to say it is no longer presented as a conference of Northern Baptists but has been enlarged to include Canadian and Southern Baptists. Two Southern and one Canadian speakers are among the list of men scheduled to address the meetings. Presumably also there will be an attendance from a wider area than that covered by our Northern churches. If this is so, the relation of the conference to the convention has been somewhat changed.

Northern Baptists will be interested in further announcements. Does this enlarged constituency mean that another year similar meetings will be held preceding the gatherings of the Canadian and Southern Baptists? So far as we have observed no announcement has been made of this sort in connection with the meetings of the Southern Baptists at Chattanooga this month.

As loyal Baptists we welcome all opportunities for the presentation of Biblical truths and for free discussion both on such teachings and on Baptist policy. In the long run only good can result. The only essential is that gatherings shall be representative and that discussions shall be wide open to all who are members in good and regular standing of our churches. And this, we understand, is to be true of this meeting in Des Moines.

Baptist Patriarch Seconds Our Motion

ON ANOTHER page appears a letter from Dr. J. B. Gambrell, president of the Southern Baptist Convention. His clear eye kindles with the same vision THE BAPTIST is holding before the Baptist brotherhood the world around, and he particularizes the way to make that vision a reality.

What is the prospect that the Baptists are going to follow that way?

More and more the tendency grows amongst us to imitate the Baptist Fathers in drawing our message from the Bible directly, each interpreting it for himself, rather than from philosophies and creeds. Dr. John Clifford's explanation of the reply of the free churches of Great Britain to the Lambeth appeal marks clearly the set of the tide, which is even more pronounced in America than in Great Britain.

As for over-lords, if there is any man among the Baptists of America who is ready to insist that the rest of us follow his way in program or in theology on pain of his refusal to co-operate with them, let him get ready for a hard fall which is coming to him as soon as the Baptists find him out.

The one common note of the whole Baptist brotherhood even now is that of "a straight look up to God, with simple faith in the imminence of the spirit and the power of the gospel." Nearly all of the misunderstandings that have threatened our fellowship in recent years have grown out of the fact that some of us did not know that the rest of us are singing just that song. We are finding each other out.

And our common vision is approaching its realization.

Certainly, Let Us Make It as Loud as Thunder

IN THE issue of April 2, page 273 reference was made to a suggestion of Pres. Mullins that the materialism and worldliness of Europe are due a neglect of the Baptist principles of the new birth and of believers' baptism. Our comment was, "Observe how the teaching of believers' baptism renders America immune to mobs" etc.

A reader in Massachusetts is indignant. He says that with such a sneer at Baptist principles we are "like a bird that fouls its own nest." And a reader in Denver writes:

"Now I would like to exclaim loud enough to be heard by every Baptist in the Northern Convention who believes in regeneration as taught by the Master to Nicodemus, and in believers' baptism as distinguished from any other baptism, that our denominational organ, THE BAPTIST, has already found it possible in the manner indicated by the foregoing paragraph to attempt to ridicule a great Baptist leader because of his expressed faith in the two doctrines, regeneration and believers' baptism, and in their practical effect upon the lives of men who as a nation believe in and practice them!"

Well, the purpose of that little joke of ours was achieved: somebody waked up. We congratulate our critics on their jealousy for Baptist principles. In fact we join them in it and wish to make our testimony to those principles both heard and practiced not only throughout the field of the Northern Baptist Convention but all over the world.

But zeal is more effective when supported by a clear recognition of the facts.

The paragraph to which exception is taken contains no hint of ridicule towards either Pres. Mullins or Baptist doctrine. It calls attention rather, as a careful reading will show, to the fact that even in America, the most Baptist country in the world so far as the proportion of adherents goes, Baptist doctrines may be, and to a considerable extent are, so held and propagated as to be largely barren of the results to which they logically tend.

Holding to the new birth and to believers' baptism ought to breed a certain type of people. As Dr. Mullins says, "logically the result is inevitable." That is correct logic, but what are the facts?

Germany had several thousands of Baptists before the war. By the logic of their principles they ought to have testified clearly against German militarism. Did they?

There are millions of Baptists in this country. As a group they are second to none in their power to influence the business and politics of this nation. Their principles are logically opposed to profiteering, but the wildest profiteering goes on right under their noses. What are they doing about it?

Baptist principles lead logically to democracy and to freedom of conscience, of speech, of the press, of assemblage, of the propaganda of individual or collective opinions. How far can Baptists be trusted to stand for these rights for all men?

Logically, Baptists ought to have closed ranks solidly in the New World Movement. Did they?

Baptist principles we hold sacred. We want to see them put into practice by Baptists themselves. To save Europe, America or any other part of the world, we need only principles but a program and a backing fit to go along with those principles and to make them effective.

No, this bird has not fouled its nest; it is pecking at those who do so. And we reserve the right to poke either fun or fire at Baptists who mouth principles and do not live up to them.

Shall We Preach Negations?

WITH a tone of holy authority comes abundant advice to avoid preaching negations. Considered as a generality, it sounds well, but for practical uses it requires precise definition.

Shall our gospel message contain no denial of anything, no opposition to any falsehood, no denunciation of error?

A mere catalogue of things which one does not believe has of course no saving power. To know that this or that is doubtful, as merely isolated information, is of small profit. And of course there is no such thing as a gospel of mere denials.

But whether one's form of statement should be affirmative or negative depends on the circumstances and the nature of the subject under consideration.

Do you believe in Christian Science, in polygamy, in theosophy, in bolshevism, in profiteering, in imperialism, in the liquor traffic, in slavery, in prize-fighting? Are there no occasions in which the Christian preacher may not express his dissent from such things? In brief, is it not as clearly one's duty to deny falsehood as to affirm truth?

Moreover, if a thing is wrong or doubtful is it not an affirmation of truth to say so?

Some of the advice against proclaiming negations is of the nature of special pleading. The pleader simply means that what he affirms is too sacred for anybody to call in question; and he insists that we take his word for both its truth and its sacredness.

All of this does not excuse the vain imaginer who raises questions about clear, settled and saving truth, merely for the sake of raising them. It does not excuse the throwing of dust merely for the sake of seeing the dust fly.

Deny what ought to be denied and affirm what ought to be affirmed. In case of doubt, investigate.

These suggestions are so elementary that in order to remember them one ought not to find it necessary to keep in his pocket a copy of "Watts on the Mind."

Let Us Make It a Reality

BY J. B. GAMBRELL

THE BAPTIST of Chicago recently carried the following:

"One vision is among the fairest that ever threw its radiance over the souls of men: it is the vision of eight millions of Baptists, true to the spirit and ideals of their fathers, advancing with every advance of God in the march of human progress, and throwing their united strength into a sublime endeavor to swing into step with God. No man can serve the Baptist cause at such a time as this who does not give himself, above all interest of self or faction, to make that vision real.

That is a great word. The fathers were mainly men of one book, they were men of simple but stalwart faith. Out of one book they envolved their faith. It tracked the great commission from beginning to end—the all-authority of Christ, evangelism, Baptism, and on, everything in its order. They let Christ Jesus, the Lord, think out their program for them, and they undertook to carry out his orders. They grew in all the ways Christians can grow. They laid the foundations of our present strength.

I have lately visited most of the countries of Europe, getting contact with Baptists in these countries. One fact stands out to view as clear as the mountains. Wherever the Baptists are throwing themselves into their work in the spirit and for the ideals of the Apostolic Fathers, they are going forward. Nothing is too hard for them. The gospel, preached with apostolic simplicity and directness, without compromise, is just as much the power of God now as it ever was. It is God's dynamic and we need power now.

Let's give the religious over-lords a good rest and let God have his way with us once more. The whole world is sick, but does not know what it needs. The sick rarely do know what they need.

I remember the dreadful days following the civil war in the South. Society was dynamited. There was no responsible government. All the evil passions of humanity were turned loose. Violence and sin of all sorts were unrestrained. The churches were in many cases disrupted. Many meeting houses were destroyed. Poverty was universal. The race question was in its most acute stage. Modern history presents no sadder picture. There was crepe on every door.

What was done? There were true Christians, white and black in nearly every community. They cried unto the Lord and he heard them. The spirit of revival began to move on the hearts of the people. Revivals broke out in unusual ways and sometimes without a preacher. They were conquering revivals. Sometimes they were quiet, subduing, but revolutionizing, always from the heart out. Sometimes they were pentecostal in their demonstrations. Men and women shouted aloud, swept by the spirit of God. They were conquering. Difficulties did not count, not even what seemed insurmountable difficulties. I saw two strong men who went to church, armed to kill each other, converted in the same service. They rushed into each other's arms. Whole communities were tranquilized by a revival. Lawlessness ceased. Hearts were comforted and made strong. The land was healed and civilization was reborn in great revivals.

This is what America, north, south, east, west, needs now. We do not need revival experts. We do not need elaborate plans. We need a straight look up to God, with the simple faith of our fathers in the imminence of the spirit and the power of the gospel. We need to match God's power against human needs. The vision of THE BAPTIST stirs my soul. I want to see it a reality. There are many things wrong among Baptists. The way to correct most of them is to throw ourselves into the business given us by the Master. We should make every church a soul winning station, lead the converts to follow their Lord in baptism and then go on teaching the all things. In this way we promote unity among ourselves, most honor our Lord and best serve humanity, including Christians of other orders.

Mother of Mine

IF I were hung on the highest hill,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

I know that your tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were lost of body and soul,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know that your prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

—RUDYARD KIPLING

HOW beautiful she becomes as old in years she grows.
In the strength, dignity and pride of character
Chastened and softened by the bitter losses of the past, Sweetened by the beautiful memories of the past.
Closer and closer to you she clings,
For, perhaps, you are the only one left to feed a hungry heart.
To her, an idol, a wonder, a marvel you became
In whatever you seem or say, in every thought and deed.
Do not disillusion her, for you could not if you would.
And you would not if you could,
Mother of mine, O mother of mine!

America's Indebtedness to the Bible

"Neither the Dutch nor the French nor the Spanish have left a single institution that has survived."—Wyclif made the Bible talk the language of the common people—Lollards, Puritans and Americans, Bible products

BY R. A. ASWORTH

IF the institutions of the American Republic, political, social and religious, rest upon the Bible, it would seem reasonable to conclude that their strength and perpetuation depends upon the retention of the foundation upon which they have been erected.

The dependence of American institutions upon the Bible as their basis can, I think, be very plainly read in the history of the republic. The moral and religious ideals and the political institutions of America we owe to the English. As Maurice Low has pointed out, although the Dutch planted New York, the Swedes Delaware, the Spanish Florida, the French Louisiana, and since that day, Irish, Germans, Scandinavians and other peoples of Europe have flowed in, they have all been absorbed into, and have not absorbed the English. The law, the speech, the institutions of America are English, and have been modified only by conditions peculiarly American. "Neither the Dutch nor the French nor the Spanish left a single enduring law nor a single institution that has survived."

Pilgrims and Puritans

Now the English who came to the shores of New England and from whom we have drawn as a people our political, social and religious inspirations were Puritans. I am aware of the distinctions that we must draw between the Pilgrims of Plymouth Bay and the latter founders of the Massachusetts Bay colony; but they were both alike Puritans. And who were the Puritans? They were a people the product of the new knowledge of the Bible which had been disseminated in England for at least two centuries before the Pilgrims set foot in Plymouth or Francis Higginson and his companions in Salem.

When John Wyclif of Oxford translated the Bible into the vernacular and circulated it among the people of England in the fourteenth century, he set in motion forces stronger than even he could have dreamed. The origin of the Puritans is to be sought in the teachings of the Lollards who took the book that Wyclif had translated to the tradesmen and artisans, yeomen and ploughboys of England to be pondered over and talked about and learned by heart. There is dynamite in this old book sufficient to blow up the social and political order and make it over new. When Wyclif, taught by the Bible, denied transubstantiation, disapproved of auricular confession, opposed the payment of Peter's pence, and called in question such dogmas and rites of the church as did not seem to find warrant in the sacred text, he began a movement which, reinforced by Luther's Reformation a century and a half later, explains the Puritans in England and America.

Brought the Geneva Bible

When the Pilgrims set sail from Delft Haven every family in the Mayflower, without a doubt, brought with them a copy of the Bible. It was the Geneva Bible which the Pilgrims read, and not the King James' version, which, though authorized in 1611, had not yet been popularized. This Bible they knew by heart. They had been nourished upon it, and it explained the sturdy proportions to which they grew.

So I say we cannot explain the Puritans without the Bible, and since we cannot explain America, or its institutions and ideals, without the Puritans, it is a reasonable conclusion that we cannot explain or understand them without the Bible.

The Bible explains their conception of the church and of religion. They took the whole Bible as their textbook, and enthroned it in the place of the pope or bishop or council within the church. If it seems to us that they lived too much within the confines of the Old Testament, and failed to give to the New its rightful supremacy, it yet remains true that salvation by free grace on the ground of faith alone was the rock on which they built. This made them free. They bowed their heads to no man and reserved their allegiance for God alone.

The Puritans were men of one book, and that the one book, the Bible. In their days the Bible served as the whole literature of life for the common people because they had access to practically no other books. They made their appeal to the Bible as the divine standard of right living and right thinking. The Bible made them what they were, and whatever fault we may find with them, they were the best men of the time. Call them fanatics, if you please, but they lived in a day when all men were either fanatics or scoffers, and it is a token of the guiding hand of God in history that such fanatics, and not the scoffers, shaped the course of civilization, and left their impress upon American institutions.

This made them independents. The Pilgrims were independents before they set sail upon their historic voyage. The settlers of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, it is true, asserted their allegiance to the Church of England with solemn asseverations when they left the shores of the mother country, but as John Robinson and William Brewster had foreseen and foretold, the logic of events and the necessities of the new life in a new and distant land, soon made them independents like their brethren in Plymouth. Ultimately, despite the narrowness of the early days and the spirit of intolerance and persecution which it engendered, the logic of their convictions and the influence of the Bible established a free church in a free land.

Bible Made Them Independents

The Bible explains the political theory of the Puritans and thus of the state which they founded. Bible religion is always a religion of freedom and democracy. The open Bible has always been a proclamation of liberty. The policy of the despot and the oppressor is to keep the Bible a closed book and withhold it from the people. With the Bible in their hands the people learn that every man stands upon an equality before God, and they begin to question the inequalities and unearned rights and privileges which distinguish the society about them. The basis of democracy is religious equality.

The history of New England is the history of the progress of the principle of self-government. It is true that in the earliest government established by the Massachusetts Bay Colony only church members were allowed to vote. The intention of John Winthrop and his friends in coming to New England was the foundation of a true theocracy which should be to the Christians of the colony all that the theocracy of Moses, Joshua and Samuel, as John Fiske has pointed out, had been to the Jews of the Old Testament times. The Bible was the constitution of the Puritans. The laws of the state were founded upon the Bible and, indeed, largely borrowed from the Bible. But the policy of exclusion which first prevailed, soon broke down. With the coming of the Quakers and other sectaries, there was produced a cleavage and ultimately a discontent which compelled a widening of the suffrage to include all free citizens. The cry over which the War of the Revolution was to be fought, "no taxation without representation," was first raised within the colony itself, and the principle had first to be fought out there. The "town meeting" of the Plymouth colony, in which every freeman had a vote, the revival of an early Teutonic institution carried over to Britain by its early Teutonic conquerors, was a pure democracy, and where we find the first traces of the county meeting we find the origin of that principle of representative government which is the germ of all modern legislative assemblies. It is a product of religious democracy founded upon the gospel of Christ.

A Rebel of Rebels

Thus when Thomas Hooker, a rebel among rebels, led his band into the wilderness of Connecticut and founded a new colony at Hartford, he propounded a principle which has become fundamental in the union of these states and, indeed, in every democracy the world over. When Hooker declared that "the foundation of authority is laid in the free consent of the people," and added the declaration that "they who have the right to appoint officers and magistrates, have the right to set the bounds and limitations of the power and place of those who are called," he was stating in effect the principle of self-determination—that "government rests on the free consent of the governed"—and establishing the principle of "government of the people, by the people and for the people" which has guided the development of the republic in all the days that followed. The initiative, the referendum and the recall, and every principle of a radical democracy are imbedded in this earliest instrument of the will of a sovereign people.

All this must be entered in the account as a part of the debt which America owes to the Bible. If our country were compelled to pay that debt today by the surrender of all that she has derived from the Bible Neglect of the Bible and ignorance of its teachings is not only a mark of ignorance and of lack of culture. It is positively unpatriotic. The dissemination broadcast throughout the citizenship of America of a knowledge of God's word would be the strongest safeguard that could be devised against the weaknesses and perils that threaten the republic. It was their conviction of the necessity of understanding that word that induced the fathers and founders of this republic to establish the system of free public education that has long been the bulwark of our institutions. Their successors have excluded from the schools the use of the very book in whose interest they were founded, but it is a short-sighted policy. The schools of America will never do that which we have a right to expect from them in education for good citizenship until the Bible is restored to them.

she would lose all that has made her truly great and be left impoverished indeed.

Finally the Bible explains the Puritans themselves and those ideals of character that they have left to America as their most priceless bequest. The truths with which the Puritans were indoctrinated made for individuality. The relation in which each man stood before God fostered the growth of personality. It separated the man from the mass. Every soul had worth in its own right, and every soul must bear its own measure of responsibility. That made for character. The leaders of the Puritan migration were strong individuals, as no man can doubt who looks upon their portraits. Strength shone forth from those calm steady eyes, as intelligence sits upon their brows, and determination and courage is written upon their firm-set mouths. He who greatly fears God is not likely to be afraid of men. Hence they look the powerful of the earth in the eye with steady and level gaze.

They were men of a serious cast of mind. Life was not play to them, though contrary to prevalent opinion they knew well how to play. The source of the happiness of the Greek, as Matthew Arnold has phrased it, was to have his thoughts hit the mark; the Puritan found his happiness in the service of God. True, he thought of God rather as a Lawgiver than as a Father, but the law of the Lord was his delight nevertheless. The language of Scripture was his vernacular. He dwelt among the lofty and inspiring phrases of the Holy Book, and they gave color, not to his speech only, but to his character. He was willing to suffer for his convictions, and having suffered for them could not lightly give them up.

Of such stuff were the fathers formed, and the heritage that we draw from them is still the most valuable element in our national life. If we have been saved in fact from becoming the nation of money-grabbers that our detractors have called us, it is because of these priceless ideals of character that we have inherited from them.

How the Thesis Works Out

Now if I have in any degree succeeded in proving the thesis with which I set forth, that the strength of America is based upon the Bible, is it not obvious that the house cannot stand if that foundation is removed? That which was required for the establishment of our institutions is necessary for their perpetuation. It is no accident that no democracy has long endured that has not been buttressed by the sanctions of religion.

He who organizes or supports a Bible school is engaged in patriotic service of the highest order. We speak at times as though the separation of church and state involves their mutual indifference toward one another and independence of each other. But the church is a partner of the state in the making of men and the founding of homes and the exaltation of righteousness; and, in the division of labor, it is the special function of the church as such a partner to teach and promulgate the principles of this Holy Book. Viewed from the angle of the interest of the nation there is nothing else that the church is doing that is comparable to the work of the Bible school. Unless the Bible school is the heart of the church the church cannot function as the conscience of the republic.

This is the contribution that the church must make to the maintenance of all that we hold precious as a people.

Half a Million Seamen Have Souls

Big overgrown good-hearted boys out for a good time—A shaky plank table of the church supper type, a heterogeneous mass of crumpled magazines and an old Victrola squawking defiantly are not friends to grace for the jolly tars

TODAY the American flag flies over one of the largest merchant marines in the world. By a very narrow margin Great Britain alone surpasses us. The Shipping Board controls 1677 merchant ships aggregating over ten and a quarter million tons. There are about 300 other privately owned deep sea and smaller craft bringing the total up to about 2000 ships. Each one of these ships carries a crew of thirty men or upwards, the average being about fifty. In addition to this hundred thousand there are several thousand men employed on shoal-water tugs and barges, and on shipping on the Great Lakes which is not included at all in this estimate. Add to this the thousands of men in the American navy and the thousands of foreign seamen who constantly visit our ports and you will find that there are about one-half million men with us every day who are not adequately reached by the churches today. This is the field. The Seamen's Bethel Societies and the Y. M. C. A. are the principal agents of the Protestant denominations promoting this work. At present they are inefficient and inadequately conducted.

Big, Over-Grown Boys

They have a different code of morals from landmen, but that arises partly from ignorance and partly from a different interpretation of the moral law. They seldom bring up families. Their children are cared for by the state and by charitable organizations, and their influence does not affect their offspring one way or the other. Very few of them will ever live straight, according to the opinion of landmen, no matter what is done for them and most of them will never disturb peaceable citizens. The modern seaman is just a big, overgrown, good-hearted boy out for a good time. It is incumbent upon the church to provide amusement for him. If you substitute a better diversion for those he has at present you will not only render him tremendous assistance, but you will improve the moral tone of your community, provided you live in a seaport town.

Before I offer any constructive criticism let me indicate the most prevalent and serious mistakes that

The author of this interesting article is a student in Harvard College, who in the summer of 1920 spent three and one-half months as mess-boy on a Shipping Board steamer, touching at Canadian and Mediterranean ports. Glad recognition is given to the work done by the American Seamen's Friend Society, the Seamen's Church Institute and the Y. M. C. A. The latter organization has started a service which it hopes will ultimately extend around the world, providing for sailors while on shore decent living quarters, excellent food at a minimum price, mail and banking facilities, a free employment bureau and social center. The Brooklyn and Manhattan branches are doing a large work. Similar work has been begun at Liverpool, London, Southampton, Havre, Brest, Bordeaux, Antwerp and Havana. This, however, is merely a beginning. The Mediterranean ports touched by the writer are, many of them, rotten beyond description. The churches should be quick to lend their support to the program of the Y. and the other organizations as they fight the battle for the sailor against those who prey upon him.

I have found in the present institutions. Their inefficiency may be due to poor location, poor equipment, inadequate advertisement, lack of attraction, or any combination of these factors; incompetent officials or management; improper division of administration, and separation of departments. I shall illustrate my meaning by extracts from a diary I once kept.

"In this small and important coaling port (....., Nova Scotia) the Seaman's Bethel Society was housed in the third and top story of an old wooden building on the waterfront street. After ascending a long flight of creaking stairs I emerged into a shabby, unplastered and unpainted room, filled with a collection of antiques which some charitably inclined souls had caused to be deposited there. There was a melancholy assortment of chairs, every one different, and every one hideous and uncomfortable in varying degrees. There was an old, faded, green plush sofa with wooden roses that stuck into your back when you sat down, and a ponderous straight-backed arm-chair with mahogany sides, which bore a striking resemblance to many pulpit chairs I have seen. There was a good, inexpensive piano which was serviceable and in remarkable condition as regarded the strings. It was the most valuable specimen in the collection. There was a shaky plank table resembling the church-supper type, with a heterogeneous mass of badly worn magazines and insurance circulars spread over it. A venerable Victrola with some records which had been worn out a long time ago squawked defiantly in a corner. No rug attempted to cover up the bareness of the pine floor. Everything was scrupulously neat, but old and worn out. A very nice old gentleman attired in a natty uniform hovered about to answer our questions and tell us that some ladies from the church were coming over to sing to us after the service.

Fine Spirit: No Substance

"This society had the proper spirit; it had a fine location; but it had neither equipment nor attraction, nothing with which to recommend itself to a seaman. The chairs were uncomfortable. We wanted the joy of sprawling out in big arm-chairs, or on a divan; we wanted to play pool; we wanted some boxing gloves. In other words we wanted something we did not get on ship-board. The place was very largely patronized by our crew but there was nothing to keep them there the whole evening. The churches of that town are missing a remarkable opportunity to help a great number of seamen, and incidentally some of their own daughters.

In ....., Spain, the American Red Cross operates a reading room for American sailors. When we reached this port we were fresh from the terrible and demoralizing conditions of the Balkans and Asia Minor. We needed some mental and moral rehabilitation. At the time I recorded these impressions:

"Our seamen's reading room is about a mile from the waterfront, situated on the fourth floor of a large office building in the center of the banking district. The daily papers of New York, Chicago, and Boston arrive here only a week old. How wonderful it was to find a Boston Transcript only eight days old, when I had not seen any kind of an American newspaper for three months! I can never describe my feeling of exultation as I seized it. In addition there are all of our American magazines here up to date. Mr. . . . . the attendant, is a real live man who understands a sailor's problems and temptations and who knows how to put across the right advice. The U. S. Shipping Board's office is in the same building, and the American consulate is soon to move in, but even then few seamen are likely to find the room. If this room is to do what it can do, circulate wholesome literature among a crowd of lonely sailors, it should be located down near the waterfront, among the saloons and houses of prostitution, and advertised by a big electric sign. It can never drive either out of business but it can interfere seriously with their patronage."

Six Flights Up to a Washbowl

In Paris last October I visited a certain well-advertised club for American soldiers and sailors. It is operated by a prominent denominational organization.

"I found it easily enough and went in. It occupies a whole building, is lavishly furnished, and perfect in all its appointments. At the desk was a young ex-soldier who had been badly wounded in the war. I asked him to recommend me an inexpensive and decent hotel. He went to considerable trouble, found several, and located them on my map, besides showing me how to find some shipping offices for which I was searching. At my request he allowed me to use the wash room. I climbed up five or six flights of stairs as the elevator was not running, and found some clean towels, but no hot water nor any soap. Not having had a wash for four days during my interrupted journey across France in the third class conveyances, I appreciated this opportunity immensely. When I came down I saw many big, leather-upholstered armchairs, but since the attendant did not invite me to remain and eyed me rather suspiciously, and since I saw nothing to read nor anyone who wanted to chat, I went out feeling lonelier than ever but considerably cleaner."

Now what do these things mean? In the first case there was nothing attractive or comfortable about the rooms. In the second case the room was poorly located and insufficiently advertised. In the third case a cheering welcome was absent. I asked for information and an opportunity to clean myself up and I got it. I craved a little comfort and cheer and I didn't get it. The young man at the desk was a clerk, and an excellent one, but he was not a social worker. There should have been another man, a chaplain for example, who could have given me a bit of encouragement and fatherly advice.

How to Hold Them

Here are some suggestions I have for the improvement of our seamen's welfare work. The rooms should not be filled with civil-war furniture; the attendants should not all be tottering old men; and the religious element should not predominate to the exclusion of the social. First of all the rooms should be social centers; that is the only thing which will attract seamen. Secondly, there should be a separate, religious director who will emphasize the spiritual side of the work. And last, one of the most important things of all is that they be properly advertised. We cannot depend any longer on our old fashioned method of the modest little sign on the building and printed flyers cluttering the Union halls and sea-service enlistment bureaus. The sailor must be dazzled by a huge electric sign hung out in front, such as a theatre would have. Large signs should be displayed all through the waterfront district directing to the building—and there should be something there to attract him when he arrives.

A modern seaman's club should have pool tables, athletic equipment; a gymnasium and hall where services, lectures, bouts, etc. could be held; a widely assorted library; a good collection of up-to-date newspapers and magazines; comfortable, upholstered chairs and lounges such as appeal to a man uninitiated to luxury; a piano with considerable music, not omitting the latest jazz pieces, and rooms for lodging to be let for what a man wants to give. A sailor is not a tightwad. If satisfied he will reimburse royally. The club should dispense medical literature, particularly that dealing with venereal diseases, and films on that subject such as the army film, "Fit to Fight," should be shown regularly. A list of the good shows at the theatres should be posted beside a bulletin of church notices.

A Boy in a Strange Place

I realize that I have given only examples of seamen's societies in foreign ports. But remember that every sailor has but one home port. Every other place is strange and foreign, and he needs the work as much in a port in his own country where there are common ties of language and nationality, as he does in any little known foreign port. And remember further that there are thousands of foreign seamen who come to us and leave us every week. They must not be disillusioned as regards our moral condition, either.

There are one-half million of our own seamen and as many more foreigners who are practically untouched by our social work among them at present. During the war we did all we could for our seamen. During this period of reconstruction we are doing nothing. What are you going to do about it, you lake and seaboard ports?

The need elsewhere is indicated in a recent letter from Constantinople:

Our own American sailors, numbering five thousand, are coming into this rotten city. There are a total of seven ships in the harbor, besides those in these waters. Last month there were more than 88,000 sailors here and twenty ships. If the American sailors need help anywhere, they need it here. On pay day they take the town and . . . join in a gay jamboree that could hardly be equaled in the days of Sodom.—OUTLOOK.

God's Healing Hand Extends Over Kityang

Dr. Henry W. Newman, son of the well-known Baptist historian, was stationed at Hopo, South China, as a medical missionary with meagre facilities and equipment. The American Red Cross called him among others to join the Siberian Expedition, which he did and where he

THE conference at Swatow approved our plans for organizing a worthy hospital at Kityang. We are to go there to live as soon as a house shall be built for us, and are to organize the hospital work there. Our women have a good hospital at Kityang with twenty years of good work to its credit. We will plan with them to make of our combined work a hospital institution that we can be very proud of.

I spoke of the legacy of hospital supplies that the American Red Cross from Siberia was to give me for my work. Hundreds of mission hospitals received gifts of supplies, but I suppose none was more favored than my work. Surgical instruments—I never saw such a list of instruments as they sent, instruments such as I never seriously expected to buy. The set of instruments was designed for use in a base hospital in Siberia; more than likely they were the very ones that were on the way to the hospital under my command at Cheliabinsk when we were driven out in the summer of 1919. The last lot of supplies has just arrived at Swatow—six large cases of drugs. That brings the total up to well over $10,000 in value. And there it lies, still unpacked at Swatow. My problem now is to find a chance and a place to put all these fine things to practical use. With the tens of thousands of sick needing the very attention that these things would make possible for us to give them, it would seem a shame to be stopped because we have no place to work.

Two Hospitals in One

We have just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of the founding of our mission and to this day we have never built in this South China field a hospital for the treatment of men patients. Two hospitals, built under the auspices of our woman's board, are for women and children. The women workers in the women's hospital at Kityang are very cordial in their invitation for me to work with them pending the time when I have a place which I can say belongs to my own work. I shall offer to put the greater part of the Red Cross equipment into this hospital to be used by the women workers as well as by myself. And they will offer me the hospitality of their plant for the work I shall find to do.

was commissioned a major, in charge of a base hospital. The United States later withdrew from Siberia and Dr. and Mrs. Newman returned to this country and were at the Buffalo convention. There an arrangement was made with Rev. T. J. Villers, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Detroit, that they should return to China as representatives of the First Church, which agreement was gladly confirmed by the church. The accompanying abstract is taken from a letter written from Dr. Newman to Dr. Villers.

But it will be more than just a place to work that I shall have by the co-operative arrangement with our women. To the great credit of the workers there now and in the past, it is to be said that they have built up there an operating-room technique, that intangible something built up of cleanliness and care and long experience, that might well be envied by some hospitals I have visited in America. This is one of the things that is going to make it possible for us to build up at Kityang a hospital institution of the first rank.

Chinese Notables Take Notice

And what a city it is. The population verily teems through the narrow stone-paved streets of the markets. And the river boats and the launches come and go and the ferries carry their tens of thousands of people across and up and down the rivers that wash both the front and back doors of the city. There are no less than 2,000,000 people who will find Kityang their only chance for foreign medical attention. We plan to have there two men and two women doctors and two American nurses. The people of Kityang are beginning to take a real interest in the matter of a general hospital. At the time of our conference in Swatow there came from the city eight representatives, delegated by different organizations—the Chamber of Commerce, the magistrate's Yamen, the Literati, and the Baptist Association. They presented a memorial officially asking the mission to establish a general hospital at Kityang. They assure the mission that they will have more than words with which to back up their invitation.

Early in November I was asked to operate on a case, a young woman member of one of the most prominent families of Kityang, daughter of one of our ordained Baptist pastors. It was rather a critical case and the Chinese in general hardly expected her to go through alive. Her recovery was prompt and complete, however, and the affair being so widely talked about had its effect in making the invitation to the mission more hearty and spontaneous. Then after a few days came another delegation from a large market center up the north branch of the river from Kityang, the Tong Kang district. They also presented an official paper to the mission conference saying that they had made up their minds to build a hospital and asking if it might be possible for us to take the enterprise under our supervision, helping them to select a 'capable' Chinese doctor, trained in our methods of practice, and having our doctors at Kityang make occasional visits of inspection to keep the hospital up to the mark. Two of the most substantial men of the Tong Kang market came personally with the request.

Does it not look as though some other than our own human hands was opening up these great opportunities for our mission work?

A Soldier's Hurry

I wish that it were possible for us to push ahead with the first hospital building this year. But if we have the appropriation for our house this year we cannot expect to start the hospital building until next year's funds shall be available. It is a bit hard to be patient at a time like this when we see the need for our services. I suppose it is harder for me since so recently in my war service quick results and big movements were paramount and the cost figured after it was spent. But we are going ahead and consider it a rare privilege that we are able to work here as missionaries with other missionaries and to do things in the missionary way. After all, not the size of our plant nor the speed with which we shall have it ready for work, but efficiency will count.

The First Lay President of the Missionary Union

George Nixon Briggs would rather be president of a missionary society than governor of Massachusetts—He was both—In both he dignified the office

BY W. H. MORSE

IT was at the thirty-sixth anniversary of the American Baptist Missionary Union. The meeting was being held at Buffalo. There was an attendance that thronged the spacious church to its utmost capacity. The number of delegates registered exceeded 1100. With these came others who were not especially attracted by the aim and spirit of the meeting, but were there to hear what the new president of the Union had to say. He, but recently the successor of the Rev. Dr. Wayland, and occupying the chair hitherto occupied by the distinguished clergymen of the denomination, Furman, Semple, Cone, and Johnson,—was a layman, the first called to that responsible place, and destined to remain there for fifteen years. He was George Nixon Briggs the governor of Massachusetts. Favorably known to the denomination because of his career in Congress, and for six years chief magistrate of the Bay State, there had been an accession of interest in him because of his notable letter to the President of the United States, Zachary Taylor, who was so soon to be called away, to be succeeded by Buffalo's distinguished citizen, who was one of those who had come with expectation to listen to the Union's president. For Millard Fillmore, as well as citizens in general, was interested in the man of that darkening hour, who had written to the hero of Buena Vista a few days after the inauguration, to assure him of his congratulations, but at the same time to make it plain that while he respected the President's honesty, he could not see eye to eye with a slaveholder. It was not expected that there would be any reference to the letter or to politics in any form, but Baptists of the North and Baptists of the South were present with different angles of vision.

A plainly-dressed man wearing an old-fashioned stock without a collar, and carrying his soft hat under his arm, was passing through the assemblage, when a gentleman in conversation with another, remarked, Strange thing that the governor of Massachusetts should be president of a Baptist missionary society!"

The speaker may not have noticed the plainly-dressed man, but as he spoke he saw him turn, and with an affable smile, say quietly, "Sir, I think it more honor to be president of a Baptist missionary society than to be governor of Massachusetts!"

And he did. All the honors conferred on him by his native state counted as nothing in comparison to that which his denomination had put upon him in making him chairman of its missionary body. He felt the inspiration of the opportunity, and magnified it.

His opening address was hearty, but it was when he gave the address to the newly appointed missionaries that he rose grandly to the occasion. With fire and fervor, and with impassioned pathos and power, he spoke:

"You go on an embassy compared with which all the embassies of men are insignificant. You go forth as the ambassadors of Christ. You go to crumble idols, to convey light to minds benighted, to kindle love to God in the souls of the ungodly. Who can over-estimate the qualifications requisite for such a work? Our Lord has not left you without the instructions you need. In his precepts you will find all you want. Let the heathen see by your daily deportment, by your every word, by the very air and motion of your persons, that you are filled with love and good-will toward them all.

"You have been told that you know not what is before you. And true, you do not. But the great Captain, who, on so many occasions heretofore, has so signally interposed in behalf of His servants, is able to carry you safely through. Never forget that no evil can befall you like that of betraying your Master. Doubt not you will be remembered by those that you leave behind. Thought shall speed its way through the globe to meet you. Fervent, effectual prayer shall ascend to the mercy seat for you. You shall never see the day when your brethren who sent you out will turn their backs to you. But look higher. The Saviour has told you, 'Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.' That Almighty Friend will always be by your side to sustain you.

"You go to carry to perishing men the glad tidings of salvation. You go to hold before them the crown of righteousness, and to rouse them to the holy ambition of wearing it."

Then, pausing for a moment, till all the vast audience was eager with expectation of his next words, he looked from the missionaries over the vast audience, and in deep, thrilling tones, said: "Is there anyone in this congregation who will not on that day wear the crown of righteousness?"

The effect was thrilling. The excited feelings in many hearts were relieved by gushing tears.

"Brethren," the speaker resumed, "under God, you go to work such changes that those dark skins shall make the snow to blush. Thousands and thousands of now benighted heathens shall, we trust, through the labors of missionaries, come up from every part of the globe to receive that crown in the last great day. In the name of this Union I am instructed to give you the parting hand. Accept it as a pledge of the warm interest with which we shall follow you to your respective stations. Farewell—farewell!"

Mother's Day

By CLARENCE S. BURNS

*"Forsake not the law of thy mother,"
Said the seer of the long ago.*

*And the truth of his words, as we learn mother's worth,
The world is fast coming to know.*

Her love, care and sacrifice given For the sake of her child, we believe,

*Has taught to mankind the great lesson
" 'Tis more blessed to give than receive."*

*All honor then, and obedience
To mothers the wide world o'er;*

*May God in His goodness e'er grant them
The blessings he holdeth in store.*

The Devotional Life

God Gave Him a Sign in the Night

THERE are those who believe that the faith which lives and saves does not come by argument. Argument has its place, but when the great controversy between belief and doubt is pleaded to its last plea, the issue is uncertain. It is then that supernatural power steps in, exerting a final compulsion of faith. The solid rock of experience cannot be shaken. It will beat up against the strongest headwinds of scepticism. Doubts are at rest for the soul which has obeyed the call "Flee into the Mountain," the mountain where Christ made peace.

A recent biography of Bishop Moorhouse, of Melbourne and Manchester, has a most genuine little chapter headed, "A Mystic Experience." The bishop was a strong, sensible, open-minded, industrious and courageous man. He was not in any sense imaginative or poetical or emotional, but what he knew, he knew, and he accomplished a great work. He left for publication an account of a wonderful and sacred mystic experience. He could not speak of it. Only to two persons did he ever disclose it, and that towards the end of his life. But he was anxious that the deep and lasting influence exercised upon him by this spiritual victory should be known after his death as it might be a help to others. Briefly, the experience was this.

He was a young man engaged as a tutor and exercising himself in thoughts and ideas about religion. He went on very slowly, but he was in danger of ending in unbelief. When the struggle was at the hottest and his mental suffering the greatest, when he seemed alone in the darkness groping his way, he prayed one night most earnestly for some sign of God's presence. He awoke during that night in such a state of exultation that he felt as though a barrier had fallen. A door opened, and a flood of transfiguring and golden light poured in upon him. He was filled with the sense of God's infinite love for all creatures and for himself. The joy and the happiness could not be described. He felt so full of love to everybody that the words of the Sermon on the Mount seemed not only possible, but the natural outcome of his state of mind. The words of Paul were actually true, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." He was possessed by the personality of Christ, God the Father manifesting Himself through Christ, though at first he did not think of it as Christ, but as God the Father. This state of mind continued for about a fortnight. He felt so changed that he could hardly go about his ordinary work. He felt very much tempted to speak of it to somebody, but he never did. Afterwards this feeling faded into the light of common day, and he never had it again in full strength. But it left him with strength to stand up and fight battles for the truth.

"Besides its being the most certain proof of answer to prayer that I have ever had, another thing is the wonderful sense I had of being possessed by the personality of Christ. That to me now is a great proof of the truth of the Resurrection of Christ; it was a living, vivid personality, nothing dead about it.

"I am a most sceptical person, not given to imagining things; but I know from my own personal experience that direct communion of the soul with God is possible. How do I know? I have felt it. I know through Jesus Christ and my own

Mother

By S. P. STAFF

The dearest friend you'll ever find
Is not a sweet-heart sister, kind,
Or brother;
But one whose love is daily shown
In toils and labors for her own—
'Tis mother.

And then, when life with you goes ill,
As you will find it surely will,
No other
Can all your troubles understand
And give to you a helping hand
Like mother.

She cared for you through helpless years,
She kissed away your childish tears,
None other
With just such sweet and lovely grace
Can ever come to take the place
Of mother.

Her hands are busy all the day,
Working unselfishly away
For others.
Although those hands are worn with care,
No other hands are half so fair
As mother's.

Though she may not be with us now,
We feel her spirit yet, somehow,
Does hover
So near us, as this day we wear
With grateful hearts a flower fair
For mother.

Some day, it may be soon, I know
The way of all the earth I'll go,
As others.
Then, when I've crossed the surging tide
And anchored on the other side,
With Christ forever I'll abide—
And mother.
Wellston, Ohio.

consciousness. This is a fact as real to me, and of far greater importance and more wonderful than anything that has happened to me in the whole course of my life. But I have never spoken of it before, and I do not wish it to be published during my life-time."

Blessed are they who thus realize the living Christ. Blessed are they whose faith has stood firm. Blessed are they who receive and have continued to receive the communications of grace. All things may seem against them. The whole current of modern thought may run against their beliefs. They, too, have to face the perils innumerable which evolution and revolution bring. It is possible to maintain the faith in spite of all that makes against it? Possible? It is not only possible, but by millions it has been proved in the miracles of their own heart. There are those not ignorant of the warfare and the turmoil of their time, not ignorant that many brilliant and scholarly men are against them, who are yet quietly, calmly, blessedly sure, because they have discovered that the living communion of the soul with Christ is no dead bygone thing, but a thing which they may share—British Weekly.

A Preacher's Mother

DURING my infancy my godly mother had dedicated me to the Lord as truly as Hannah ever dedicated her son Samuel. When my paternal grandfather, who was a lawyer, offered to bequeath his law-library to me, my mother declined the tempting offer and said to him: "I fully expect that my little boy will yet be a minister." This was her constant aim and perpetual prayer, and God graciously answered her prayer of faith in his own good time and way, I cannot now name any time, day or place when I was converted. It was my mother's steady and constant influence that led me gradually along, and I grew into a religious life under her potent training and by the power of the Holy Spirit working through her agency.

I did not make a public profession of my faith in Jesus Christ until I left school and entered the college at Princeton. The religious impression that began at home continued and deepened until I united, at the age of seventeen, with the church of the Lord Jesus Christ. As an effectual instruction in righteousness, my faithful mother's letters to me when a schoolboy were more than any sermons that I heard during all those years. I feel now that the happy fifty-six years that I have spent in the glorious ministry of the gospel of redemption is the direct outcome of that beloved mother's prayers, teaching example and holy influence.—Theodore L. Cuyler.

The Bulletin Board

President Endorses the Bible

In reply to a question from Mr. Jim Hicks, Supt. Prison Bible Society, 768 West Van Buren Street, Chicago, Illinois, President Harding wrote recently:

"I have always believed in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, whereby they have become the expression to men of the word and will of God. I believe that from every point of view the study of the Bible is one of the most worthy to which men may devote themselves, and that, in proportion as they know and understand it, their lives and actions will be better."

World Prayer for Christian Unity

Pentecost, Sunday May 15, is to be observed this year in all countries as a world's day of prayer for Christian unity. It is significant that this day has now been adopted as Christian Unity Day by all of the leading movements for unity. The observance of the day was proposed by the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity in 1917, since which time a large number of churches have kept the day with sermons, prayers and offerings for the cause of church unity. In 1919 the American Council on the Organic Union of Evangelical Protestants meeting in Philadelphia named Pentecost Sunday as Christian Unity Day to be observed throughout the Protestant churches of the United States. Last summer at Geneva, Switzerland, the preliminary meeting of the World Conference on Faith and Order, a meeting made up of delegates from forty nations and eighty church groups, named Pentecost as a day of prayer for unity to be observed throughout the world. Literature concerning the present day movements for Christian unity and suggestions for observing Pentecost as Christian Unity Sunday can be obtained from the secretary of the World Conference on Faith and Order, Mr. Robert H. Gardiner, Gardiner Maine.

Would You be a Farmerette?

The Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, Inc., an organization of women farmers all over the country, held its annual business meeting recently at the National Board, Y. W. C. A., 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City. To succeed Mrs. Francis King of Alma, Michigan, who resigned, Mrs. Russell Tyson of Brattleboro, Vermont, was elected president. Mrs. Tyson is the owner of the Rice farm in Vermont, well known for its Guernsey cows. To afford a market for the products and handiwork of farm women as well as to furnish scholarships in agriculture to girls, the Association maintains salesrooms and office in New York. For girls who wish to go out as farmerettes this Summer the Association is co-operating with the Y. W. C. A. in finding openings.

Sings Its Swan Song

The General Committee of the Interchurch World Movement held what may be regarded as its final meeting, April 8, at 25 Madison Avenue, New York. About fifty persons were in attendance representing co-operating denominations.

The representation was very wide. The two outstanding questions passed upon were, first, the decision to commit all further responsibilities with reference to the conclusion of the affairs of the Interchurch World Movement to the Executive Committee making it unnecessary to call together again the General Committee; secondly, the approval of the plan for the appointment of a Consultative Committee to serve as a point of contact between the co-operative agencies of the Protestant denominations already in existence, namely: the Foreign Missions Conference, the Home Missions Council, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions, the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, the Council of Church Boards of Education, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the Reorganization Committee of the Interchurch World Movement.

Mantles Begin in Honduras

Beginnings are being made in Honduras where in terms of interdenominational comity the Baptist denomination has been given the right of way. During the past year Rev. and Mrs. Lance A. Mantle have established themselves at Tegucigalpa, the capital of the Republic. These first missionaries are carefully making their spiritual contacts with the people. This work, so providentially made possible by gifts of friends in California, bespeaks the prayers of all, that in the beginnings of our labor in this needy land we may once more abundantly prove that "If we seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all other things shall be added unto us." A hospital and school are among the early needs of this mission.

Rough on Rouge

"During the last year the world spent twenty-two times as much for tobacco, movies and entertainment as it did for education. During the same period the women spent as much for rouge and powder as the world did for education."

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon of Topeka, Kans., editor of the Christian Herald, made these assertions in his address before the Sunday Afternoon club of Evanston, Ill.

Seek to Relieve Dementia Praecox

The Society for the Promotion of the Study of Dementia Praecox is supporting a bill before the fifty-second General Assembly of Illinois designed to establish a laboratory of research into the causes, the possibilities of cure and the prevention of dementia praecox and other mental diseases.

In an appeal to the public for support it states that the 300 asylums in the United States contain more than 150,000 dementia praecox patients. None recovers sanity. Though only one-quarter of the admissions in Illinois are of persons suffering from this disease, more than sixty per cent of the beds in our State Hospitals are occupied by these unfortunate, most of them young people, whose life expectancy after commitment is nearly twenty years. Their care and custody require more than half the annual state appropriation of $10,000,000 for the insane.

For Her Sake

The spirit with which the tragedy of the famine is being faced by the people in China is magnificent, says Theresa Severin, who recently returned from a tour of the famine district.

"The night before our arrival in the village a man hanged himself in order that his blind wife might have his share of food," Miss Severin writes in a report received from her at National Board, Y. W. C. A. Headquarters, New York City. "The courage of the village people in facing starvation is heart-rending. They reply to questions with a smile that has no hope in it. Among the victims are formerly prosperous families accustomed to a thoroughly self-respecting existence. We went into their homes and saw the bark of trees and thistles, the food with which these people are hopelessly trying to fight off their hunger."

Can Reach 30,000 Men

Since the organization of the Baptist Brotherhood Federation 167 new brotherhoods have been organized. Reports are being received from over 600 men's groups. It is possible through the headquarters of the federation to reach upwards of 30,000 members of these various groups through 2,400 selected laymen whose names are on file in the office of Rev. J. Foster Wilcox, director of the movement.

Sunday School Co-operation a Fact

There are two great interdenominational Sunday-school organizations in the United States and Canada, namely: the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, which includes in its membership thirty-two different denominational Sunday-school boards and agencies, and the International Sunday School Association with lines running out to every state, province, county and community in the land. They are uniting their efforts to put over a program of religious education that will more adequately reach, teach and save for Christ and Christian citizenship the 26,000,000 children in the United States not now receiving any religious instruction.

To make this new venture possible a joint committee of six has been appointed as follows: From the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, Rev. G. N. Brink, general secretary A. B. P. S.; Rev. Harold McGlee Robinson, secretary U. S. A. Presbyterian Board of Publishing and Sabbath School Work; Robert H. Hughes, publishing agent, Methodist Book Concern, from the International Sunday School Association; Robert M. Hopkins, general Bible school secretary, Disciples of Christ and chairman executive committee International Sunday School Association; R. M. Weaver, chairman business department committee International Sunday School Association; W. H. Stockham, chairman board of trustees International Sunday School Association.

Y. W. C. A. Honored by French Government

In response to an invitation from the French Ministry of War, the National Board, Y. W. C. A., is sending an exhibit to be placed in the Hotel des Invalides in Paris. In commemoration of its war service in France, the Association with other war organizations is to be permanently represented in the American exhibition of war materials there. Now on view at Gorbams in New York, the exhibition includes a miniature model of a typical Y. W. C. A. Hostess House, the original of a war poster made for the Association by Clarence Underwood, and medals bestowed on the Chairman of the War Work Council, Mrs. James S. Cushman of New York, by the American and French Governments. A resume of the Association's war work in France completes the exhibit.

Send Indians After Indians

It is the hope of those who are leading us in our work for Indians at our schools and missions that steps early will be taken to interest our Indians in Oklahoma, Arizona, California, Montana and Nevada in providing from their own tribes young people who shall be trained as missionaries, and in giving adequate missionary funds for reaching their brethren whom they have not seen in Mexico, but with whose tribal life in the long past their forefathers must have had relations. One of the great outstanding needs of the present time is to teach the Indians to give to their own educational and missionary institutions and to make ample provisions in missionary life and gifts for the Christianization of other Indian people living south of the Rio Grande.

I. W. W. Beats us to Them

An excerpt of a letter from Edwin R. Brown, Superintendent of Mexican work in the Southwest states:

"Right now the Mexicans are at the parting of the ways. They are eager to hear, to learn, to accept. But the question is, What are they hearing? The I. W. W. is very active among them, distributing literature, sending out workers, organizing branches, and securing members. The red element is at work among them with the most wild and fantastic doctrines. Atheism, socialism, spiritualism, and many other things are making progress among the Mexicans. The Christian Church is hardly touching them. They are eager to hear and accept. From every one of our missions come reports of new converts and many baptisms. But we have only a few missions."

Self-Supporting Holidays Popular

"Cherry ripe" is the latest thing in vacations! Formerly the girl who lacked money to take a holiday, stayed at home. Now she hikes out and earns it, fun and all. Under the supervision of the Y. W. C. A. girls are going out to camp to pick cherries and other fruits for farmers. In Door County, Wisconsin, next July, a camp of one hundred and fifty girls will occupy new barracks built for their occupancy near the orchards. Payment from the farmers for cherry picking pays the girls' expenses and gives them pocket money besides.

Getting a Grip on Salvador

In Salvador, through the supervision of Rev. William Keech, the year has been one of seed-sowing and spiritual harvesting, under conditions that have been most difficult. A suitable meeting house and equipment at San Salvador are now being provided, and it is hoped before many months to dedicate the new building, which will cost approximately $25,000. This is one of the several meeting-houses which must be provided as we lay enduring foundations for our spiritual work in Central America.

Pictures Got the People

This is what two of our pastors say about motion pictures.

1.

"I have found motion pictures of considerable value in church work. Altogether I ran pictures for nearly six months, but discontinued them two months ago in order to observe the reaction and study the situation in my own church. During the time I ran features I increased my congregations from fifty to over two hundred. I have found that people want Bible pictures with a twentieth century conception of Christianity, and would rather have them than anything else in the churches. When I stopped showing the pictures there was a drop of over a hundred in my congregation, but many of the young people have remained and identified themselves with the B. Y. P. U., Girls Crusaders, and Boys' Club."

2.

"On a Sunday afternoon in February the four reel picture 'Armenia in Distress' was shown—with the mercury down below zero—and the wildest gale of the winter blowing—there came out an audience of 150. Except for the pictures there would not have been ten people out. The service was most impressive, with Scripture, Prayer and addresses by pastors between the various reels. At social gatherings the pictures have been of great service. Not as a substitute for the Word but as an aid to the church in all its varied program, social, educational and evangelistic, the motion picture machine has come to the Kingdom for such chine has come to the kingdom for such

Audrey's Rice Cup Saves a Baby

Every day, after each meal, little Audrey Warner, six years old, of Grand Rapids, Minn., puts a penny in a rice cup for an unknown, unseen baby six thousand miles away in some famine village of North China. Those pennies are saving the life of the far-off baby; and, with her rice cup and her daily savings, Audrey has started, among the children of the United States, the movement to "pick a pal in China," with the result that thousands of small children are now following Audrey's example and thousands of lives of little unfortunates in China are being saved by the pennies that go into the rice cups all over the country.

Laymen Push Tithing

Tithing is taking a strong hold upon the church throughout this country. Several of the churches are making special effort to advance the practice among their people. The Northern Methodists have adopted as their slogan: "A Million Tithers in Methodism." The Baptists are saying: "A Million Tithers by 1922."

The Disciples are trying to enlist 25 per cent. of their membership as tithers. The practice of tithing is growing rapidly in our own church. There has been in the past much discussion as to whether the law of the tithe is binding upon Christians of this day. This question has not been decided and as a theoretical matter, it may never be decided. But the laymen of the Church are taking up the matter in a very practical way, trying to get as many people as possible to take the tithe as a basis for Christians of this day. They generally take the ground that a man ought to be willing to give at least that much in recognition of his obligations to God for His goodness to him.—The United Presbyterian.

Amity in Homiletics

A sample of real Christian co-operation is being given at the great Methodist theological seminary of the Middle west—Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill. President Charles W. Stuart, being absent, the latter part of the school term, has arranged for his course in Homiletics to be taken over by various clergymen of other denominations. Dr. Geo. Craig Stuart, Episcopalian, gave a week's lecture on the use of the church year; Dr. James M. Stifler, Baptist, a week's lecture on expository preaching; Dr. Hugh E. Brown, Congregationalist, variety in preaching; a Disciple, two Methodists and representatives of other denominations will present other phases of the subject.

"Arbeit," say the Germans

One of the strongest impressions brought back by Mr. Rushbrooke from his recent travels in Germany is that the German people are setting to work with a passionate intensity which will speedily efface all the effects of the war and restore the commercial prosperity of the country. Work indeed, seems to be the meat and drink of all classes of the community. The watchword of Germany today is Arbeit. It is, indeed, a question we ought seriously to consider, whether by our policy with regard to the indemnity we are not forcing Germany into an activity and a position in which she will be a much more dangerous rival for us than she was even during the war.—Times and Freeman.

The Unemployment Situation

The January, 1921, report of the nation-wide survey of unemployment made by the United States Employment Service showed that there were 3,473,446 fewer workers employed in industry during the first month of this year than during January, 1920. Statistics for February 1921, indicate that in spite of local fluctuations there was a decrease in employment—16,295 fewer workers were employed on the last day of February than on the last day of January, 1921. Thirty-six cities reported decreases aggregating 60,235, while 29 cities reported increases aggregating 43,904. In Youngstown, Ohio, there was a decrease in employment of 8,105; in Indianapolis, 3,706; in Philadelphia, 4,360; in Chicago, 5,132. On the other hand in Detroit there was a significant increase in employment of 20,417 and in New York an increase of 3,090.—Christian Evangelist.

International Uniform Lesson for May 22

THE CHRISTIAN HOME

Luke 10:38-42, 2:51-52, 2 Tim. 3:14-15.
Golden Text, Col. 3:20-21

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The text of the lesson opens the door of three New Testament Christian homes: the home of Jesus in Nazareth, the home of Martha in Bethany, and the home of Timothy in Lystra. The opening story of Genesis is a home story. The outstanding genesis of the Book of Genesis is the genesis and development of family life. The fifty chapters of Genesis are chapters of family life containing the romance of Adam and Eve, Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob and Rachel. Genesis is strictly a home book in which monogamy is established as the original law of the home, and in which the family is sanctified as the one vital and fundamental institution of society. The whole Bible following the lead of Genesis is built around the family. The first five books of the Bible are family books which tell the story of the development of the family in tribes, laws, worship and landed possessions; the brightest star among all the books of the Old Testament in point of literature and life is the simple, unaffected story of a family in trouble, and the love and loyalty of Ruth to Naomi; the highest peaks in the wisdom of Proverbs are lighted by home fires; and among all the books of the prophets there is none more merciful, more tender, more human, more divine than Hosea who remained true to his own fireside in spite of the wife who sinned against his unfaltering love and unselfish patience.

When we come to the New Testament the atmosphere of home pervades the books. Opening the gospels we are at home experience. When we read the letters of Paul and their perspective in the Book of Acts, we are again in the atmosphere of home. The whole Bible is a home book.

The Lesson Taught

I have already suggested that the Bible of the Christian religion is a home book. Two additional suggestions are worthy of development, viz., the principles of the Christian religion are family principles, and the Christ of the Christian religion is a domestic Christ.

The Principles of the Family

Lyman Abbott says there are four fundamental principles of the Christian religion: viz., fatherhood, saviorhood, forgiveness, love. These are family principles. Some of the trouble caused by theology comes from the fact that theologians did not keep theology in the family. They took it out among lawyers and got it mixed up with the language of the courts to the interminable confusion of simple home folk. And not content with this digression they dipped into the marketplace and gave us a commercial theory of the atonement. How much better if they had followed the example of Jesus and expressed the principles, processes and philosophies of the Christian religion in terms of the fireside. Jesus had one name for God,—the family name of Father; he had one designation for the people,—brothers and sisters; he revealed the charm of a little child and made him the type of his kingdom; he preached and once introduced to the homes of Zacharias and Elizabeth, Joseph and Mary and all the tender and delicate things connected with the birth of John the Baptist and Jesus. The miracles of Jesus were in large part home miracles, the best parables of Jesus are home parables, and the sweetest experiences of Jesus were demonstrated the divinity of love; and when he drew aside the curtain which shuts out the life here from the life beyond, his disciples saw "the Father's house."

Paul, the greatest interpreter of Jesus, keeps close to the home as basic institution of society. If his letters are less domestic than the gospels it is because he was the apostle to the Gentiles among whom the home had not been developed and sanctified as it had been developed and sanctified among the Hebrews. However, the best thing Paul ever wrote, the thirteenth of first Corinthians, is luminous with the light of home; and when he deals with the home directly as he does in his letter to the Ephesians he brings it into the very holy of holies. "Husbands love your wives even as Christ loved the church and gave himself for it." The principles of the Christian religion are therefore the principles of the Christian family.

Jesus Domestic

We cannot think of Christ as anything but a home Christ. Kingship did not appeal to him. He was not at home in the city with its congestion, its artificialities and superficialities. Bethany, the little country town, and the seclusion of the home of Martha was his harbor when in the vicinity of Jerusalem. Even on the cross the home was in his mind when he said to his mother, "Woman, behold thy son," and to John, "Behold thy mother." I cannot think of Christ as an ecclesiastic. The princes of the church, so-called, are not after Christ. They have borrowed such titles from the world, the flesh and the devil, and it is little less than sacrilege for any human being, however honored, to be called a prince of the church. Jesus remained domestic even after his resurrection. The most beautiful picture of him is painted by Luke when he reveals himself to the two astonished disciples at the family table. And it is not without significance that when he left the earth he ascended from Bethany.

All the institutions of society are never better than when patterned on the model of a genuine Christian home. The state should be only a home enlarged, and the church should always be one big family. All the inequities and iniquities of society will cease when the true family idea prevails in business, in industry, in government, both national and international, in the church, and in the hearts of men. CHILDREN THROG SUMMER SCHOOLS

Daily Vacation Bible Schools are becoming an established form of church work among churches of all denominations, their number is growing every year. Already schools and institutes for the training of leaders for workers are announced in several places.

The Love of Trees

TO those of us who feel the peculiar attraction of a mere mortal for something ageless, sublime, and mysterious, this small group of Tree Poems may bring an even deeper appreciation of their beauty. For there is a poetical instinct in each of us. It may never find expression in neat stanzas of words that rhyme at the end, yet we can say with Walt Whitman:

"Why are there trees I never walked under But large and melodious thoughts descend upon me?"

Although it is an autumn rather than a springtime fantasy, surely this exquisite story of Lyman Abbott's should head our list, for it bears endless repeating in almost any connection:

"I pick an acorn from the ground and hold it to my ear, and it says to me, 'By and by I'm going to be a place where birds can build their nests. By and by I shall be used to build great houses; and men will keep warm beside me on winter evenings. By and by I shall be the strong ribs of a great vessel, and the tempest will beat against me in vain while I carry men over the oceans.' But I say: 'O foolish little acorn, how canst thou be all this?' And the little acorn whispers: 'God and I! . . . . . God and I!'"

The Tree God Plants

By LILLIAN E. BARR

The wind that blows can never kill
The tree God plants;
It bloweth east, it bloweth west;
Its tender leaves have little rest.
But any wind that blows is best.

The tree God plants
Strikes deeper root, grows higher still,
Spreads wider boughs, for God's goodwill
Meets all its wants.

My Cathedral

By HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

Like two cathedral towers these stately pines
Uplift their fretted summits tipped with cones;
The arch beneath them is not built with stones,
Not art but nature traced these lovely lines,
And carved this graceful arabesque of vines.
No organ but the wind here sighs and moans,
No sepulchre conceals a martyr's bones,
No marble bishop on his tomb reclines.
Enter! the pavement, carpeted with leaves,
Gives back a softened echo to thy tread!
Listen! the choir is singing; all the birds
In leafy galleries beneath the eaves
Are singing! listen, ere the sound be fled,
And learn there may be worship without words.

Inscription for the Entrance to a Wood

By WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT

Stranger, if thou hast learned a truth which needs
No school of long experience, that the world
If full of guilt and misery, and hast seen
Enough of all its sorrows, crimes and cares,
To tire thee of it, enter this wild wood
And view the haunts of nature. The calm shade
Shall bring a kindred calm, and the sweet breeze
That makes the green leaves dance, shall waft a balm
To thy sick heart.

A Ballad of the Trees and the Master

By SIDNEY LANIER

Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent;
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame;
But the olives, they were not blind to him,
The little gray leaves were kind to him,
The thorn tree had a mind to him,
When into the woods he came.

Out of the woods my Master went,
And he was well content;
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When death and shame would woo him last,
'Twas on a tree they slew him—last,
When out of the woods He came.

On Being a Tree

By CHARLOTTE P. STETSON

I wonder if they like it—being trees?
It must feel good to have the ground so flat,
And feel yourself stand right up straight like that.
So stiff in the middle, and then branch at ease,
Big boughs that arch, small ones that bend and blow,
And all those fringy leaves that flutter so.
You'd think they'd break off at the lower end
When the wind fills them and their great heads bend.
But then you think of all the roots they drop—
As much at bottom as there is on top,—
A double tree, widespread in earth and air,
Like a reflection in the water there.

Trees

By JOYCE KILMER

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree;

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast;

A tree that looks to God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain;
Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

The Palm-Tree

By JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

Of threads of palm was the carpet spun
Whereon he kneels when the day is done,
And the foreheads of Islam are bowed as one!

To him the palm is a gift divine,
Wherein all uses of man combine,—
House, and raiment, and food, and wine!

And, in the hour of his great release,
His need of the palm shall only cease
With the shroud wherein he lieth in peace.

"Allah il Allah!" he sings his psalm,
On the Indian Sea, by the isles of balm;
"Thanks to Allah who gives the palm!"

The Tree of Heaven

IT is in the Bible that one meets the real love of trees, where they are used as symbols. For does not the Book open in a garden, a garden full of all manner of trees—with one, forbidden—and does it not close in a city, a city through which a river flows? "In the midst of the street of it, and one either side of the river, was there the tree of life, which bore twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month; and the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations."

Ah, that tree of life! Do you not dream about it on spring mornings when new green leaves proclaim all nature's resurrection? Perhaps it may be given you, as Isaiah prophesied, to "go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree."

And dearer than any dream, perhaps you, too, have been the blind man whose eyes the Lord opened, so that it has been given you to see "men as trees walking"—a man "like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

You may dwell beside cobblestone curbing, high up in some sunless "third floor back," or instead, by some bleak yawning coal pit, or out on some wild barren prairie; but wherever you are, the tree of heaven is yours. It grows within you, and by its fruit you are known.

The Young Reserves

The Pearl of Great Price

ONCE upon a time the king's son was going on a long pilgrimage and wanted to buy a pearl of great price to leave on the altar of God at his journey's end; so he sent for a certain merchant, asking him to bring his rarest gems to the place.

He knew very little about jewelry himself, and he urged the merchant to tell him frankly which stone to choose. This the merchant was glad to do, picking out an enormous white pearl, which would cost a real fortune because of its many perfections.

Needless to say the prince was delighted to have secured something so rare, and the merchant left the palace loaded down with hundreds of golden ducats in payment.

Weeks passed by. Then one day the merchant's shop was entered by robbers who stole every jewel and every golden ducat, and even ran off with the merchant's beautiful daughter, whom they held for a very high ransom.

The poor man was in utter despair, since he had neither silver nor gold nor jewels to redeem this precious child. But as he was groaning and moaning, behold! the king's son rode by on his prancing horse, starting off on his pilgrimage. When he saw the merchant in such deep distress he dismounted to hear the tale of woe, and instantly cried: "Cheer up, my good friend, worry no more, for here is the pearl of great price which I bought from you. Take it and sell it to some other merchant, so that you may buy back your lovely daughter."

But the merchant turned red, then pale, and refused to touch the pearl: "No, no," he stammered, "I cannot sell it, sire. It will be no good to me."

"Oh, come now," pleaded the prince, "of course you can sell it. It's worth a fortune, think what I paid you for it,—foolish man, any merchant will be glad to buy it!"

"No! no!" lamented the merchant sadly, "only money will do me good just now. Not the pearl!"

The prince lost his comforting voice as he enquired severely: "Then tell me, is my pearl so worthless that no man will buy it of you?"

"It is—only—p-paste," admitted the poor fellow in a muffled tone. "I thought you need never find out, since you wanted it only for a gift to God at the end of your pilgrimage."

And the Prince rode away with a heavy heart, for he said to himself: "If I cannot believe his word about buying pearls when he speaks from the business corner of his mouth, how dare I believe he has been robbed when he speaks from the personal corner of his mouth? He has taken me in once too often."

For a lie that is told to gain money is never forgiven by prince or by pauper, and always turns up at unexpected moments to mock one.

Five Puzzles

Here are five puzzles. When you have guessed them all, place the five answers side by side and they will spell something which was of highest importance in the recent Young Reserve contest which closed May first.

I. What is this?

You need it to finish your breakfast; Your tea must begin with it, too. Don't have it with luncheon or dinner—You'll have a bad spell if you do!

You need it with turkey and biscuit. Two times you must have it with toast. But never with pickles or cookies Or candy—but always with roast.

You're little? It's weakly and cambric. You're big? It's brownish and strong. 'Tis doubled and bubbled in kettles—O guess it, and don't you guess wrong!

II. What one letter will turn:

- (1) use into a mean trick?
- (2) ice into a vegetable?
- (3) ope into a clothesline?
- (4) ail into a car-track?
- (5) aid into a police attack?
- (6) ally into an assembly of people?
- (7) ash into an eruption of the skin?
- (8) ear into something behind?
- (9) eel into a dizzy swagger?
- (10) end into tear or wrench?

III. Who's this?

Once upon a time there was a Young Reserve (can you possibly guess who?) who was:

- (1) Always second in a muddle?
- (2) Nearer one end of a tunnel than the other?

TONGUE
FIRST

Peggy and Bill begged the editor to put these "speaking letters" here for you to see. She made them for the young Hathaways; but surely you've discovered by this time that they're forever wanting to pass things on. Perhaps you'll like to remember, with them, five of the things that make Truth truth. (Each of the five points begins with the proper letter, so that they will stick in the memory better.)

- (3) Never quite halfway up a mountain?
- (4) Found at the very core of truth?
- (5) Always in the midst of making a pun?
- (6) At the very center of fun?
- (7) Who, toward the end, was always generous?

IV. Proverbs, which need the sound of what letter to complete them?

- (1) Curiosi— killed at cat.
- (2) Chari— begins at home.
- (3) Hones— is the best policy.
- (4) Necessi— is the mother of invention.
- (5) Brevi— is the soul of wit.
- (6) Vani— thy name is woman.
- (7) Sweet are the uses of adversi—.

V. Guess!

'Twas whispered in Heaven, 'twas muttered in Hell, And echo caught faintly the sound as it fell:

On the confines of earth 'twas permitted to rest, And the depths of the ocean its presence confessed.

'Twill be found in the sphere when it's riven asunder, Be seen in the lightning and heard in the thunder.

'Twas allotted to man with his earliest breath, Attends at his birth, and awaits him in death;

It presides o'er his happiness, honor and health, Is the prop of his house, and the end of his wealth.

In the whispers of conscience its voice will be found, Nor e'en in the whirlwind of passion be drowned.

In the heaps of the miser 'tis hoarded with care.

But is sure to be lost by his prodigal heir.

'Twill not soften the heart, and though deaf to the ear,

'Twill make it acutely and instantly hear. Without it the soldier and sailor may roam,

But woe to the wretch who expels it from home!

So in shade let it rest, like a delicate flower:

Oh, breathe on it softly, it dies in an hour!

Riddles

(1) My first is a girl's name taken from the Latin, my second is a very large town; my whole always speaks the truth.

(2) My first is darning that which is torn, my second means "one," my third is a place where thousands of men have built their homes; my whole tells lies.

(3) My first is a beverage at ladies' afternoon parties; my second is a popular name for a girl; my whole is a correct statement of facts.

(4) My first is a make-believe, my second is a covering for the head; my whole is a lie.

(5) My first is a word of two letters meaning above, my second is the opposite of wrong; my whole is the name of a certain kind of piano, also of a certain kind of Christian.

(6) My first is an adverb meaning over, my second is the home of birds; my whole is sincere and trustworthy.

MY FAVORITE SAYINGS OF CHRIST AND WHY

John 6:63, 68; Matt. 7:24, 25

"O Lord Christ, grant to me today in the simple routine of my life a strong up-welling inner sense of the presence of God."—Bosworth.

1. The necessity of a new life.

"Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

2. The Father's love.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

3. The great source of supply.

"I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."

"If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink."

4. Our luminary.

"I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

5. Freedom in discipleship.

"If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

6. Our shepherd.

"I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture."

"I am the good shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine."

7. He is our source of comfort.

"Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."

8. He is our companion.

"Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me."

9. We have eternal life through Him.

"I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?"

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON

The "New Era Movement" in the Northern Presbyterian Church and the "Progressive Movement" in the Southern Church were inaugurated about the same time.

The membership of the Northern Church, as given in the Assembly minutes for 1919-1920, is, in round numbers, 1,637,000; in the Southern Church, 376,000.

The goal of the Northern Church for benevolences for 1919-20, was $13,300,000, about $8.00 per capita; of the Southern Church, $3,500,000, about $9.00 per capita.

The offerings for benevolences in the Northern Church were less than $5.00 per capita; in the Southern Church for the same causes, $11.81 per capita.

The Northern Church fell short of their goal more than $5,000,000, contributing only about $8,000,000; the Southern Church gave $4,300,000, exceeding their goal by more than $800,000.

If the Northern Church had given to benevolences in the same proportion per capita, $11.81, their contributions would have been more than $19,000,000—six millions more than their goal—instead of $5,000,000 less; a difference of more than $11,000,000.

The goal of the Southern Church for the year 1920-21 is $4,000,000, $300,000 less than they gave in 1919-20.

In the Northern Church the goal decided upon at the General Assembly in May, 1920, was $23,000,000.

In December, 1920, the executive committee reduced the goal for 1920-21 to $12,000,000, a reduction of $11,000,000 from the amount agreed upon in May.

These are the facts up to Jan. 1, 1921. (Continued on page 446)

Great Baptist Leader Takes Off Harness

In Wisconsin, "a foreign province with here and there an American colony," Rev. David Willey Hulbert has led the Baptist advance nearly a quarter of a century

BY ROBERT W. SHAW

"RECENTLY I submitted myself to an examination by a physician. He said to me, 'Your liver is all right; your stomach is all right; your kidneys are all right; and your head is all right. But if you wish ten more years of active life you will have to begin working five days a week instead of seven.'"

On April 12 in a statement decidedly Hulbertesque, of which the above paragraph is an illustration, Dr. D. W. Hulbert, for more than twenty-five years, state superintendent of missions in Wisconsin, submitted his resignation to take effect, May 31.

So long a service as Dr. Hulbert has rendered seems to require more than the passing announcement through a newspaper paragraph.

The Man

David Willey Hulbert is a native of Ohio, coming from an old New England family. He attended "the little red schoolhouse on the hill," and received his college training at Oberlin and Denison Universities. He received his seminary training at Morgan Park Seminary at Chicago.

Before entering the seminary he was married to Miss Ella J. Farrar, of Cleveland, whom he had met at Oberlin.

During his seminary days he was pastor at Burlington, Wis., and continued his work there for one year after graduation. Then he went to Circleville, Ohio, where he served for over three years. Then he was called to the South Church, Milwaukee, where he spent more than six years. Here he led in the erection of the present meeting house. Two churches were organized out of this congregation during this pastorate, and yet when he left the field the church had more members than when he began. From here he went to the Wauwatosa Church where he served for more than three years. And in 1896 he was elected state superintendent of missions to succeed D. E. Halteman, and he began his work on Feb. 1. In 1905 Denison bestowed on him his D. D. degree.

The Field

Wisconsin is one of the more difficult fields of the Northern Baptist Convention. It is estimated that practically 75 per cent of its population is either foreign born, or the children of foreign born. It has been aptly described as "a foreign province with here and there an American Colony." Religiously 83 per cent of the population are either Catholics or Lutherans, leaving only 17 per cent to be divided up among the other denominations.

In 1895 there were 16,582 Baptists reported, but in 1920 there were 19,771. This is not a large gain, but to have more than held their own during the years when Wisconsin was changing from a state in which the old American stock was giving way to the new people from over the seas is no mean task. Then there were but $600 in the invested funds of the denomination, now there are $142,000. Then the corresponding secretary, as he was called was the only general paid worker of the convention. Now there are two field workers; two persons giving their time to the department of religious education; a business manager, and three office girls, besides the general superintendent. Then the office of the convention was in the home of the secretary, but now we have a fine headquarters building, with ample room for all the offices necessary. Then the secretary had a little iron box in which to keep valuable papers. Now there are two large safe-cabinets in the office, beside the rented space in a down-town bank.

Today the Wisconsin Baptists are doing work among the Swedes, Norwegians, Danes, Germans, Poles, Russians, Italians and are ready to take up further work as soon as the opportunity presents itself.

Hopefully and optimistically Dr. Hulbert has gone on from year to year, making each year's work a little better than the last. Despite the heavy routine of work he has kept young and fresh, and has kept the confidence of his brethren all these years.

The Larger Work

Dr. Hulbert has been a real denominational statesman. Only a few people realize the large part he has played in originating and developing the machinery which today is common in all the states.

In 1901 he wrote an article and in 1902 he gave an address at the annual meeting in St. Paul on "Quickening The Missionary Interest Of The Churches." In that address he proposed a number of things which the denomination has since adopted. He proposed that instead of having eight missionary periodicals there be one. Eventually there was one, and it is called Missions. He advocated a bureau which would have for its task the providing of the churches with good, inspiring missionary reading material. Ultimately that came about with John M. Moore as its head.

Wisconsin was one of the first states to develop the single collecting agency idea. Nebraska has the credit of first putting it into operation. This was in 1909. Dr. Hulbert was anxious to make it more than a mere bit of money raising machinery. He desired to put alongside that idea, an educational feature. This bureau was not only to collect money, but was to stimulate interest and enthusiasm for missions, by giving to the churches missionary information and providing studies of the various mission fields.

With this idea in mind in 1910 Wisconsin Baptists adopted a new constitution which departmentalized its work, and put the single collecting idea into operation as a department of the convention.

In 1919 at the convention in Janesville, Dr. H. A. Heath, was present to describe the newly organized Board of Promotion. As he proceeded some one would say, "but we have that." And again and again he was told that all Wisconsin Baptists had to do was to simply change some names and they would be in line with the new movement. Finally in desperation he turned to the smiling secretary and said, "Dr. Hulbert, what haven't you got in Wisconsin?" Now with the General Board of Promotion, the state conventions have come to be the clearing houses of the denomination. Eight states had such an organization before the General Board of Promotion adopted it. But Dr. Hulbert was just about ten years ahead of the denomination on that very matter, for to him must be given the credit for working this out as more than a collection agency, and having it adopted in Wisconsin, with the consent of the various missionary societies.

The Future

Dr. Hulbert has two ideas which he desires to work out. One is that he would like to visit the theological seminaries, and lecture to the students out of his long experience as a pastor and general worker. The other is that for a part of the year he would like to visit the smaller churches and help them solve their problems. And since we have so many small churches in Wisconsin, Dr. Hulbert would have a field which would afford him ample opportunity to work out many of the ideas which he has in mind for the little church.

One cannot close this article without mentioning the one who has given to Dr. Hulbert undying devotion and support in all these years of service. When in the midst of a perplexing problem on the South Church field, he was given an opportunity to take a position with the seminary in Chicago, Mrs. Hulbert said to him, "Stick to your job." In his letter of resignation Dr. Hulbert said, "I began this work with the cordial support of Mrs. Hulbert, and now that I am laying it down I have her support in the matter." The board of managers remembering how she used to be the unpaid assistant, and her loyalty to the work in the lean years, said to Dr. Hulbert, "Take Mrs. Hulbert and go to the Des Moines convention and we will pay the bills."

Dr. A. LaGrande, of Kansas City, has been selected as Dr. Hulbert's successor.

Nine New Missionaries

Nine candidates for service in missions in the Far East were accepted by the board of managers of the Foreign Mission Society at its meeting April 12 in New York. The board also appointed nineteen single women missionaries on recommendation of the woman's board. This group makes a total of 192 missionaries to be appointed since the New World Movement program was adopted May 1, 1919.

Ralph E. Henderson, in seeking service in Burma, is following in his father's footsteps. He is a son of Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Henderson of Taunggyi, Southern Shan States, Burma, and the first twelve years of his life were spent with his parents. He has been educated in Newton High School and in Harvard College, and has had experience in farm, shipyard and cotton mill work in this country. He is a member of First Baptist Church, Newton Center, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew Phillips of Wheaton, Ill., are to go to Assam for regular service. They have been trained in the Divinity School of the University of Chicago. Mr. Phillips was previously educated in Springfield, Mo., Business College and Teachers' College, also in Drury College, Springfield, Mo. He has been active in Y. M. C. A. work and also has taught schools in Louisbury, Mo., and Harmony, Ark. Mr. Phillips has held a brief pastorate in Elmhurst, Ill., nearly tripling the membership of the little church there during his stay. Mrs. Phillips, a native of Jay, Okla., received her undergraduate training in Stephens Junior College, Mo., and has worked as a teacher among the Indian people of her native state.

Lionel Crocker of Ann Arbor, Mich., and Herman G. Spencer of Alexandria, Ohio, are to go to Waseda University, Tokyo. Both were religious leaders in their respective schools, Mr. Crocker being head of the Student Evangelistic Band and assistant to the pastor of his church at Ann Arbor. Mr. Crocker has been a teacher in the University of Michigan, his alma mater, and in the University of Minnesota. Mr. Spencer was an athletic leader in Doane Academy and Denison University, as well as being active in religious life of the student body. He has been a teacher in the public schools of Alexandria since leaving school, and is now principal of the high school of that place. He is a son of Prof. Spencer of Denison.

Miss Edith V. Goetsch of Appleton, Wis., who will go to Assam as a medical missionary, has had a wide experience in Red Cross and public health, school and infant welfare work. She was trained in the Illinois Training School for Nurses and in the School of Civics and Philanthropy.

Miss Mabel F. Ivins of Atlantic City, N. J., a popular kindergarten and playground worker of that city, as well as a leader among the young people of her church, is to go to Burma to inaugurate a school for the children of the missionaries.

Erville E. Sowards of Huntington, W. Va., a graduate of Marshall College, has been on the Y. M. C. A. cabinet and has had some experience with Sunday-school work in rural communities. He has awakened to the appeal of the foreign field through the Student Volunteer Convention in Des Moines last January. Marshall College instructors indorsed Mr. Sowards as a leader of student Christian activities. He will teach in Rangoon.

Sanford Wayne Gard of Jacksonville, Ill., who will also go to Rangoon, is a graduate of Illinois College. Turning from an agricultural course in high school when he felt determined to devote his life to Christian service, he decided on further education along lines fitting him for such service. He has had experience on newspapers and has worked at other occupations, and in all he won the reputation of being a hard worker with much ability.

New Home of N. Y. Bible Society

Impressive ceremonies participated in by leading N. Y. clergymen of all denominations and attended by hundreds of prominent clergy and laymen of the city, marked the dedication of the new home of the New York Bible Society, 5 East 48th St., Monday evening, April 25.

The building is a gift to the Society from the estate of James Talcott and is valued at $250,000. Dr. Newman, in his address characterized it as "the embodiment of the profound conviction of a New York business man as to the value of the Holy Scripture."

ment of the profound conviction of a New York business man as to the value of the Holy Scripture."

The building is of unusual beauty and contains salesrooms, board and committee rooms, kitchens and serving facilities, an assembly room and a fine Gothic study.

Move for Reduction of Armaments

The dominant issue at the present moment is general reduction of armament to the lowest practicable point. Every instinct of sound economy, sociology, ethics and religion is on that side.

The best hope of bringing it about lies in a conference of the leading nations. America should take the lead in calling such a conference. The religious forces of America should use every atom of influence to bring about the issuance of such a call.

For this reason the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the churches is arranging to give chief place to this theme of reduction of armament, at its Annual Meeting in Chicago, May 17-19. Speakers include: William Jennings Bryan; Oscar S. Straus; Edward A. Filene; E. S. Parker; John Spargo; Francis H. Taylor; E. D. Trowbridge; Amos P. Wilder; Jane Addams; Mathew Woll; Rev. Charles F. Aker, D. D.; Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, D. D.; Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D. D.; Rev. Edward S. Cummings, D. D.; Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, D. D.; Rev. George Gleason, D. D.; Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, D. D.; Rev. C. C. Morrison, D. D.

The New Indian Commissioner

By GEO. E. BURLINGAME

"For some inscrutable reason more people want to be commissioner of Indian affairs than ever before in our history." So wrote E. G. Lowry in the New Republic recently, before the appointment had been announced.

This important office embraces duties which are more or less involved with three moral and religious issues in which American non-Catholic Christians are deeply interested: the protection of the Indians from exploitation and fraud, the suppression of the liquor traffic among them, and the preservation of religious freedom.

Charles H. Burke gives promise of satisfying these requirements. His known record assures the Indian of a square deal and evangelical Christian missionaries of their rights.

Mr. Burke, so his friends in South Dakota say, is a political protégé of the late Senator A. B. Kittredge, one of South Dakota's ablest public men. Burke was a stand patter in the stormy days of Progressivism, and is aligned with the conservative wing of the Republican party. He was in Congress for fourteen years, and was for years a member of the committee on Indian affairs, being chairman of that committee in the Sixty-first Congress. He is considered one of the best-informed men in the country on Indian affairs. He is a warm friend to the twenty-five thousand Sioux who live in South Dakota.

Mr. Burke lives at Pierre, the state capital, where he owns a real estate and investment business. He has no college record, but studied for the bar and has practiced law. He came to Dakota from New York, his native state, in 1882. A gentlemen who knows Mr. Burke intimately writes me as follows concerning his church affiliations:

"Mr. Burke is an Episcopalian, attentive to his church duties, punctilious in his church attendance, is a warden and treasurer and gives his personal attention to nanacing the church to which he is the leading contributor."

In the Episcopal Church financial campaign last year Mr. Burke directed the state-wide campaign as chairman for South Dakota.

Burke's friends assure me that his record on the liquor question is creditable. A reliable correspondent writes me: "He is a total abstainer. During his fourteen years in Congress he consistently supported the temperance legislation proposed by the anti-saloon league. Locally he was dry and voted when here with the dry element. He voted for bone-dry prohibition in South Dakota and gave his support to national prohibition."

If we may accept the testimony of his neighbors in the state where he has lived for forty years, it appears that President Harding has chosen for the Indian Bureau a man of high personal integrity and an expert in the field in which he is to serve.

Last Call to the Atlantic Jubilee

Washington, D. C.
May 11, 13, 13, 1921.

The first session will be on Wednesday evening May 11th, in the Emanuel Baptist Church, 16th and Columbia Road. Any car marked "Mount Pleasant" at the Union Station, will go to the church. The World Wide Guild Banquet comes that evening at 6 o'clock. It will be in charge of the Washington ladies as well as the World Wide Guild Pageant entitled "Such Stuff as Dreams are Made of." For banquet tickets—$1.00—write Mrs. S. F. Gordon, Folkstone, Ct., 14th and Fairmont St., Washington. Reservations must be made not later than May 5. Officers, missionaries and invited guests will be the guests of the Washington ladies.

All other sessions—three each on Thursday and Friday—will be held in Calvary Church, 8th and H Streets; Mrs. Abbie Gunn Baker will have full charge of the Pageant, prepared by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, on Thursday evening. Miss Nellie Prescott will give the illustrated lecture on the same evening. The foreign guests will all appear on Friday evening and be introduced by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody. A fine program is promised.

Delegates must bring credentials. Owing to the housing conditions in Washington which forms a serious problem, free entertainment can be given only to the following:

- Board and officers,
  - Missionaries,
  - Invited guests,
  - State and Association secretaries,
  - Jubilee Months, Weeks and Days,
- allowing only one day to a church. The President or one representative from each circle; the President or one representative from each World Wide Guild Chapter, allowing for only one Chapter in each church.

Eckington Manor, Third and T Streets, N. E. can take about seventy-five delegates at $2, for lodging and breakfasts; besides the Franklin Square Hotel, there are the Raleigh, 12th and Penn. Ave., with single rooms, no bath, $3. upward, with with bath, $3. to $4. Running water station, single rooms, no bath, $2. to $3. with bath, $3. to 44. Running water where there is no bath. Engage rooms at once, as other conventions will be in Washington the same week.

A warm welcome awaits you,
All aboard for Washington!

All delegates are provided with lodging and breakfast.

A reception committee will meet all trains.

Now then, Baptist Women of Columbia River District, get out your time tables and then write to Mrs. R. C. Whittlesey, 4312 Latona Ave., Seattle, Wash., chairman of the Hospitality Committee; she will arrange for your entertainment.

Columbia River District Executive Board members take notice—

The Board will be in session all day Tuesday, May 31.

"Come! Come!" Seattle Baptists say—"You're as welcome as the flowers in May."

Mrs. V. J. Didrickson.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

REV. S. FRASER LANGFORD at First, Redlands, gave the hand to nineteen at the last communion service.

IMMANUEL, LOS ANGELES, has made an increase of 70 per cent in membership since the beginning of the pastorate of Rev. Frank Durham four years ago. The church recently tendered a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Durham.

San Joaquin Women Meet

San Joaquin Valley Association held its annual meeting at Fresno, First, April 12, and the women of the association met in conference. Mrs. J. L. Mitchell presided. Mrs. Louis Peterson, Mrs. T. H. Gorman, Mrs. F. L. Blowers and Rev. John Freeman Mills had formal places on the program.

Miss Clara B. Tingley of Bassein, Burma, Mrs. C. O. Livesay of Dunlap, Miss Nora Swenson, Miss Strange and Mrs. Daves of Auberry, Miss Amy Purcell of Fresno and Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Brendel of Clovis, were some of the missionaries present and introduced. A number of Christian Indians were in attendance and participated on the program.

The ladies of the Fresno church served supper.

Mrs. J. L. Mitchell of Selma was elected president, Mrs. J. B. Travis of Hanford, vice president and Mrs. J. H. Gorman of Fresno, secretary and treasurer.

LOS ANGELES FIRST laments the loss by death of Deacon Stephen A. Burrowes, which occurred Feb. 16. He was born in Franklin, Ohio, July 25, 1845; married in the same city in 1881; later removed to Fort Wayne, Ind. and in 1904 came to Los Angeles to live; was a student at Denison University and at the University of Michigan. He is survived by Mrs. Burrowes (who was Miss Elizabeth Morgan of Fort Wayne, Ind.), a daughter, Esther M., and a son Morgan S. who is in business in Los Angeles.

THE FEDERATE SCHOOL of Missions, which will meet July 9-16 at Mount Hermon in the Santa Cruz mountains, has secured the well-known pastor of the First Baptist Church of Oakland, Dr. John Snape, to conduct the morning Bible hour.

AT OAKLAND FIRST, pastor John Snape has just begun his second year of service with the church. During the year just closed 215 new members have been received into the church, seventy-one of them by baptism. There has been raised for all purposes $31,833.06 of which $15,113.88 is credited to the New World Movement. The enrollment of the Sunday school has increased from 587 to 748 and the church membership from 880 to 1031.

EIGHT MONTHS AGO Jefferson street, Los Angeles had nothing but a lot, the church having been burned. The congregation bought a ready made church and moved it on the lot, and in about a month had every thing in working order. Since Oct. 1, pastor John G. Carmichael has baptized twenty and the church has made a net gain of thirty-three.

DR. F. CARL TRUEX recently conducted an evangelistic campaign at Vallejo, California, for the First Baptist church, Dr. L. P. Russell, pastor. The Vallejo church will break dirt for a new house of worship to cost $60,000 about June 1.

THE FIRST CHURCH, SANTA ANA, has just completed a six week's school of missions, which was largely attended. There were five study groups, covering all ages, and general assemblies in which the stereopticon was freely used. Plans are now being made for the third annual daily vacation Bible school.

WESTERN WASHINGTON

PORT ANGELES: Rev. R. W. King is greeted by large congregations and finds many encouragements in the work. The recent organization of a Junior B. Y. P. U. and the re-organization of the B. Y. P. U. have greatly stimulated the work among the boys and girls and the young people.

LYNDEN CHURCH has begun to remodeling of its church building which, when completed, will nearly double its capacity and give excellent facilities for Sunday school work.

MR. EARL COCHRAN became pastor of the churches at Lyman and Concrete April 1.

The Campaign in Seattle

During March there was held in Seattle, under the direction of Rev. Fred Berry, director of evangelism, the most extensive evangelistic campaign ever held by the Baptist churches of the City. Meetings were held in nearly all of the Baptist churches. There was a delightful spirit of unity and cooperation. Four days in the week, for two weeks, noon-day meetings were held in the Pantages Theater with Dr. C. O. Johnson, of Tacoma, as speaker and Mr. Earl Cochran as song leader and soloist. In these meetings all the pastors and workers helping them united and the meetings were followed by a luncheon conference at which reports were made. In the city of Seattle there were more baptisms on Easter Sunday than during the whole preceding year ending May first. The following is a brief statement of some of the results:

Bethany: Pastor A. H. Nickell conducted his own meetings, continuing into the fourth week. There have been twenty-four conversions, eighteen baptisms, five by letter and five otherwise.

Bellevue: Pastor D. Q. Barry was assisted by District Missionary J. E. Kanarr, and while they faced many obstacles (one being a smallpox scare in the community) yet there were twenty-six conversions and eighteen received for baptism.

Central: This church is new in its location on Queen Anne Hill but is winning its way into the confidence of the people. Director Fred Berry and Mr. Earl Cochran, singer, assisted in meetings and they report twenty-seven conversions and ten baptisms. Others will follow. Pastor F. W. Carstens and his people are heroically facing their new task.

Columbia: District Missionary D. W. Thurston assisted Pastor F. G. West with splendid results; twenty-five professed conversions; eight have been baptized. They report a most encouraging situation in the church, manifested by large attendance at prayer meeting, Sunday school and in work among boys, and a larger outlook for their big work in that section of the city.

Chinese: The pastor, Rev. Lum Ming Tak, was assisted by Rev. H. F. Chan, of Portland, Ore., for a few days. They had six professed conversions and eight baptisms and the Chinese work is hopeful.

First Church: This church has been going forward in a wonderful way under the pastor, Rev. A. M. Bailey, but they have received a new and larger impulse during this campaign. Dr. C. O. Johnson, pastor of the First Church, Tacoma, was their evangelist and the results of their meeting have been good. More than 125 professed conversions, sixty have been received for baptism, twenty-eight otherwise, and the reaping goes on. Last Sunday was a record day with them. There were 1045 at Sunday school and more than 1400 at the morning service.

Fremont: Pastor Elbert H. Hicks became "Evangelist" Hicks for two weeks, with great acceptance to his church. They all rallied to his leadership, looking after much of the pastoral work. The choir, in full force, was on hand every night at the service and helped to make it possible for the church to have one of the best meetings in its history. There were seventy-five conversions, twenty-four have been baptized; eleven received otherwise.

Gatewood: Pastor A. MacIntosh led his own meetings; five were baptized Easter and others will come later.

Green Lake: Pastor Jas. A. Banton was assisted some weeks ago by an evangelist from Canada, and during part of the two weeks of the pre-Easter campaign had the help of Rev. and Mrs. J. O. Bovee, of Kelso. The pastor baptized ten on Sunday; received six others, and finds himself in a most hopeful condition.

Immanuel: While Pastor J. H. Teale and his people did not enter into the campaign by holding meetings night after night, yet they did make some special efforts and as a result report twenty conversions; seven baptized last Sunday and others to come later.

University: Pastor Frank B. Matthews had the assistance of Rev. W. E. Henry, of Everett for a part of the time. Owing to illness it was impossible for Mr. Henry to fill out his engagement but the meetings were pushed forward through three weeks. The last week singing evangelist Earl Cochran gave some splendid assistance. There were thirty-five professed conversions, eight were baptized on Easter and the reaping will continue.

Japanese: Our Japanese friends carried on their campaign by a house to house visitation, going two by two, then having meetings for reports and for ingathering. They report forty-two conversions and twelve received for baptism.

West Seattle: Although Pastor Wm. Jackson has been sick through nearly all the meetings, yet Rev. W. H. Eaton, of Bremerton, led the meetings with much blessing to the church. There were six professed conversions. It will be regretted that the pastor will have to seek a new climate, therefore has offered his resignation to become effective May first.

Mt. Zion: Pastor W. D. Carter had the help of Rev. J. W. Anderson, of Portland, Ore., and they report fourteen conversions, seven baptized on Easter, others waiting, ten received otherwise.

First Swedish: Pastor Emil Friborg has been carrying on a preparatory campaign and now has the assistance of the blind evangelist, Freeman and his wife, who will be with them for the next two weeks. They are expecting great results. The pastor baptized five on Easter Sunday.

Second Swedish: Pastor A. J. Stormans had the help of Rev. Mr. Tipton for a part of his campaign and reports a hopeful condition in his church. There were ten conversions, two baptized Easter and three received otherwise.

First Norwegian-Danish: Pastor Tangen had the assistance of missionaries T. O. Wold and Christiansen. They had one conversion and one baptism, with others expected to be baptized soon.

Tabernacle: Pastor Dark led his church heroically for two weeks. He had the help of a little boy singer. He and his church went forward and the meetings have meant very much to the membership. They have had about twenty-five conversions, five were baptized Sunday, two received otherwise and others will come soon. There is a hopeful outlook in this church. Pastor Dark and his people are facing some splendid opportunities in the future.

The above report is but the "first-fruits" of our Pre-Easter harvest. There were over 500 professed conversions. We are expecting many more.

Atlantic Coast

NEW JERSEY

FIRST, BAYONNE, C. H. Rannels, pastor, reports all bills paid and a comfortable balance on hand, making this the best year in the history of the church. A budget of $10,000 was raised for all purposes; forty-five new members were received, and $300 was added to the pastor's salary.

REV. HINSON V. HOWLETT's "denominational day" sermons at the First Church, Atlantic City, attracted such attention that two of the city's daily papers gave front page space to reports of them.

DURING APRIL, REV. A. W. HAND baptized ten at Keyport and received ten in other ways. On May 1, after more than eleven years with the Keyport Church, he went to the church at East Elizabeth. During this pastorate, he has baptized 126 persons and leaves the church in fine material and spiritual condition. On parting the church gave him the sum of $200 and a set of framed resolutions, besides many other tokens of esteem.

NEW YORK

MAY 8 has been set aside in the Baptist Churches of Manhattan and the Bronx as Baptist Fresh Air Home Sunday. On that day, these churches will take their annual offering for the work of the Baptist Fresh Air Home Society. So all persons, wishing to make their contribution through their own church, will be given an opportunity on that day. Other contributions may be sent to the treasurer, Eugene McK. Froment, 276 Fifth Avenue, Room 1038. Attractive leaflets, descriptive of the work and needs of "Old Oak Farm" may be obtained at the churches or at the office of the Society.

PROSPECT AVENUE BUFFALO, Rev. John T. Cowan, pastor, has been doing a fine piece of community service during the past fall and winter. The membership of the church has been actively interested in the new Prospect Neighborhood House. Every Wednesday evening, the church holds a community dinner in order to get acquainted with the strangers of the neighborhood. Once a month, the men have met together for an evening luncheon and conference and then have gone out into the rooming-house section for visitation. The results of these contacts with the community have meant larger congregations, an increased Bible-School and numerous accessions to the church membership. The Church as never before in its history is justifying its existence as a down-town centre.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE MANY FRIENDS of Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Hunsicker have been greatly shocked to learn of the unexpected death of Mrs. Hunsicker. Mrs. Hunsicker has been a true helpmeet to her husband in his work and endeared herself to all who knew her. The funeral service was held in Lewisburg, April 21st, at the home of Dr. Leroy Stephens.

PASTOR CHARLES COLMAN, of First, Coatesville, gave the hand of fellowship to thirty-one at the communion service in April. The financial report showed that over $16,000 had been raised during the year, of which more than $5,000 was for benevolences. This is the best record the church has ever made.

PARKESBURG recently rededicated its enlarged building. When Pastor Norris L. Brown began work on this field upon his graduation from Crozer Seminary in 1909 the church had a membership of 70, worshipped in a small frame building and gave practically nothing for denominational benevolences. During these twelve years the membership has increased over 300 per cent, the pastor's salary has been doubled, and a building costing $10,000 erected, paid for, and now improved at an expense equal to its original cost. The church was given an allotment of $10,000 in the New World Movement, and over-subscribed its quota by $3,000.

A MOST INTERESTING 110th anniversary was celebrated in the First Church, Philadelphia on April 7. In their records it reads that in 1810 "sixteen females" met and organized a "Female Woman's Missionary Society". This was the first woman's missionary organization among the Baptists in this country. To celebrate this significant event a pageant, "The Spirit of Womanhood" was given. Besides this a group of women, many of them lineal descendants of those who took part in the original meeting, in appropriate dress reproduced the organization meeting, overrode the objections of their pastor and conservative deacon and adopted the constitution. Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston and Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery of Rochester made addresses. The church was crowded to the doors. It was a great night for missions and illustrated again the significant influence the old First can have on Baptist life of the city.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

FIRST, WASHINGTON, Rev. B. F. Taber, pastor, has just closed a series of evangelistic meetings with Dr. W. J. Cambron as evangelist, and his son, Wm. J. Cambron, Jr., as soloist and song leader. The meetings brought a great blessing to the church. The pastor baptized ten on Easter Sunday, fourteen on April 24, and others are awaiting the ordinance.

KNOXVILLE AND DUQUESNE have voted to send their pastors, Rev. F. W. Stanton and Rev. W. V. Bacon, to the Des Moines convention, with all expenses paid.

SHERADEN, Rev. W. W. West, pastor, has just made another payment of $100 on the mortgage, making a total of $350 in its reduction during the winter. Eleven were baptized Easter Sunday and the hand of fellowship given to seventeen, April 4.

DR. FREDERICK W. GORDON, of St. Charles, Mo., has accepted an invitation to serve the Sharpsburg church as stated supply for two months.

ALLISON AVENUE, Pittsburgh, Rev. R. L. Bradley, pastor, reports eight baptized Apr. 10.

REV. A. B. BOWSER, Ford City, baptized nine Sunday evening, April 24.

WILKINSBURG has voted to send the pastor Rev. Floyd L. Carr and his wife to the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines.

AT NEW KINSINGTON, Rev. A. J. Meek, pastor, a two-weeks campaign closed last Sunday with Evangelist H. E. Shade and his singer, J. M. McCleery, assisting. They were aided by an orchestra of ten pieces and a chorus choir of fifty voices. The meetings were full of interest from the start and the church was greatly revived. Seventy-two signed cards and many reconsecrated themselves. Thirty were received for baptism last Sunday and many more will be received later.

THE CORNER STONE of the new building of the Park Baptist Church, McKeesport, Rev. Wm. R. Hill, pastor, was laid Sunday, April 24, 3:00 P. M.

SHADY AVENUE will send the pastor, Rev. Royal N. Jessup to Des Moines.

RIVERVIEW, Rev. G. W. Scarberry, pastor, welcomed three new members last Sunday, two by baptism and one by letter.

MR. ALEX PETROFF, pastor of our Russian missions in Pittsburgh and Lyndora, was ordained at Union Church Monday evening, April 11, following his examination by the permanent council that some afternoon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL of the Saltsburg Church, Rev. W. P. Wheeler, pastor, has increased in attendance 90 per cent in the last four months, and 98 per cent were on time last Sunday, several coming as far as four miles.

FIRST, MEADVILLE, Rev. G. Morton Walker, pastor, conducted a pre-Easter campaign of evangelism without the aid of an evangelist, resulting in forty conversions. The church is supporting Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Gell on the Congo, and Miss Alma Broadhead as a missionary worker at Union Baptist Church, Pittsburgh. The pastor's salary has been increased substantially.

FOLLOWING THE ACTION of the Baptist ministers' association of Pittsburgh in denouncing rent gougers, the young people's societies of that vicinity are passing similar resolutions calling on religious people to take definite action against rent profiteers with the same moral earnestness that characterized their fight against the liquor business; they also raise again the question of the exclusion of the gougers from the fellowship of the churches.

REV. H. ALTON LEWIS who has been serving First Newcastle during the illness of Pastor F. B. McAllister, and who has done excellent work, is now available for the pastorate of a good church. Address him Corner East and North Streets, Newcastle, Pa.

RHODE ISLAND

PROTESTANT CHURCHES of Westerly united in a series of meetings April 19-24, under the leadership of Rev. W. E. Blederwolf.

LAKEWOOD, Rev. W. L. Wood, pastor, has made remarkable progress during the past year in conversions, baptisms and financially.

THE RECOGNITION of Rev. JAMES STRUTHERS of Hope Valley occurred Sunday, April 17. Mr. J. Willard Baker, Mrs. L. M. Murdock and Secretary Livingston addressed the congregation at the morning service and also in the Sunday school.

REV. S. R. VINTON lectured during April 25-28 in Phillips Memorial, and The People's, Auburn, and in South Providence and Westerly.

SECOND, NEWPORT, Rev. C. P. Christopher, is having a series of six special missionary services on Wednesday evenings. Among the speakers are Mrs. F. L. Wilkins, Prof. Daniel H. Kulp, Rev. W. L. Ferguson of India and Rev. B. T. Livingston.

CONNECTICUT

THE MINISTERS' MEETING for the Fairfield Association was held with the Hungarian Church, Bridgeport, on Monday, April 18. Rev. A. W. Rider, D.D. of Southern California gave the principal address on the subject "A Small Question and a Great Answer." Dinner was served by the women of the church in Hungarian style. The pastor Rev. Stephen Gazsi is doing a remarkable work among his people in this great industrial centre.

REV. JOHN GRAINGER, pastor of Calvary, Bridgeport, since January has welcomed fifteen new members. Two were baptized on Easter and nine are awaiting the ordinance.

AT MEMORIAL, BRIDGEPORT, where Rev. Walter M. Richardson was settled March 12, the work is opening up most encouragingly. Eight have been received by baptism and the prayer meetings have greatly increased in attendance and interest.

AT SECOND, BRIDGEPORT, Rev. H. S. Foster, pastor, baptisms have been frequent. Among those uniting with the church were four Spaniards.

REV. FRANK S. CLARK is being encouraged in his work in Rowayton. Seven new members have been received by baptism.

AT SOUTH NORWALK, Rev. J. L. Schoeppler, pastor, several were received through baptism at Easter.

REV. J. C. GAVIN has resigned at New Milford after a pastorate of eight years. The church and community showed appreciation of Mr. Gavin's work by presenting him with a generous purse.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

SOUTH CHURCH, Laconia, is encouraged under the leadership of Rev. H. H. White, pastor. Forty-one have been added to the church since January, 1920. Ten were baptized Easter, making seventeen in all during the past three months. All services are well attended and the Bible school membership is increasing. The pastor has an efficient assistant in Miss Ruth Wheeler.

Rev. J. K. ROMEYN formerly pastor at Pennacook, has accepted the call to New London. This is one of our important churches on account of the large student body in attendance at Colby Academy. The pastor here is a large factor in the academy and in the town as the Baptist church is the only one in the town.

Rev. A. J. ARCHIBALD of Nova Scotia has accepted the call to the First Baptist church of Nashua to succeed Rev. J. B. Gilman who closed his work with this church March 31.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES of Colby Academy recently held a meeting at Young's hotel, Boston. It was voted at this meeting to remodel Colby Hall, the dormitory occupied by the boys. The board at this meeting were the guests of Sherman Whipple, Esq.

Rev. CHRISTINA MACKENZIE for three years pastor at London Centre has accepted a call to the church at Deerfield. The Congregational church here will unite with the Baptist church in the support of a pastor.

Rev. H. G. BROWN, recently pastor at East Poestenkill, N. Y., has assumed the pastorate of the South Lyndeboro and Wilton churches.

Thirty-first Thank Offering Call to New Hampshire Women

May again! As we note the signs of reviving life in the realm of nature, our hearts are filled with a spirit of gratitude. The buds are bursting into bloom, the birds trill forth their gladness, and we, too, rejoice in the return of spring. As the child trips and dances for the simple joy of life, we feel the need of some means of expressing the joy that floods our hearts because of all these "benefits toward us." Our beautiful "thank-offering," established by the women of the F. B. Woman's Missionary Society, over three decades ago, just fits our needs.

Never in our history have we had such reason for thankfulness. Throughout our land, poverty and danger appear because of the financial stress of the times. That it has not touched us, we are thankful.

When we think of Europe, we shudder. Children orphaned, poorly clothed and starved; women, in hopeless dejection, stretching out pleading hands for help; aged people, whose closing journey should be smoothed for weary feet, struggling wearily on to death; while War, with bloody hands, still clutches viciously at its prey! How high our blessings loom in comparison!

What of that continent in which our mission work mainly centers? Words fail us if we try to express our admiration of those Christian men and women who in pagan lands are meeting problems so much greater, and so much more vital than ours. Our puny trials wane into nothingness beside them.

Surely this is no time to withdraw our hand, or forget our May-time custom of returning to the Lord of his own, in most liberal fashion, not of what we can spare, but of what we delight to give as an expression of our overflowing hearts. Shall we not make the offerings of this year so much larger that our joy may circle the earth?

Note: For information and thank-offering supplies, address Miss Edna A. Folsom, 8 Pleasant Ave., Sanford, Me.—

Blanche C. Butterfield, Laura Hartley, Ethel E. Demeritt, Thank-offering committee.

VERMONT

ON APRIL 7, THE ILSLEY MEMORIAL Church, Middlebury, tendered a farewell reception to Principal and Mrs. MacFarland, who go to live in Sturtevant House, Saxtons River, where Professor MacFarland is principal of Vermont Academy. The reception was largely attended by members of the church and congregation and invited guests from other churches and from Middlebury College, where Mr. MacFarland has been a professor for eleven years. Rev. H. L. Howard, Pastor of the Church, presided and spoke very enthusiastically of Principal and Mrs. MacFarland and the work they have done at Middlebury. State Superintendent W. A. Davison spoke of the splendid opportunity for Professor MacFarland to build up Vermont Academy and of the encouraging outlook. Pastor Newell of the Congregational Church, Rector Holmes of the Episcopal Church and Mrs. Gould of the Methodist Church brought Christian greetings from their respective denominations. Professor Harrington paid a glowing tribute to the fellowship and work of Professor MacFarland while at Middlebury College.

FIRST, BRATTLEBORO, Rev. Clark T. Brownell, pastor, has just closed the best year ever. At the annual meeting, reports showed approximately $18,500 had been raised for current expenses and benevolences during the past year. About 200 persons were present at the annual supper and annual meeting which followed. Pastor Brownell spoke appreciatively of the splendid loyalty and service of his people and of the different organizations during the year. A telegram of greeting was read from Hon. Henry Bond, an honored member of the church, who was attending a conference in Washington, D. C. that day. Twenty-four new members have been received by baptism, all coming from the Bible School which is under the efficient superintendency of Deacon Luther W. Hawley. The total membership is now 663, the resident membership being 500.

RANDOLPH, Rev. Frank S. Tolman. Pastor, received five new members on Easter Sunday. Another class is in training for church membership.

ENOSBURG FALLS, Rev. E. E. Scates, Pastor, received four new members at the last communion service. The members of the Bible school gave a most excellent concert Easter Sunday evening. The Woman's Missionary Society is studying "The Near East Crossroads of the World." The church has recently purchased enough copies of "The New Baptist Praise Book" for the auditorium. The Sunday-school recently observed Temperance Sunday.

AT MONTPELIER, Sunday morning, April 10, in response to the presentation and request of Pastor Piper, thirty-eight people signed tithers' pledges agreeing to give one-tenth of their money to the Lord's work. On April 17, Pastor Piper buried with Christ in the beautiful ordinance of baptism eleven persons—one of them to unite with the Methodist Church and ten to unite with the Baptist Church; and a most beautiful sight it was, for five of them were from one family, being the father, mother and three children.

MASSACHUSETTS

REPORTS AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FIRST CHURCH, Lynn, Dr. A. E. Harriman, pastor, showed receipts for the year of $19,521.93, the largest in the history of the church. The present membership is 601. The anniversary banquet is to be observed on May 12 with an address by Dr. W. Quay Roselle. Additions for the year have been thirty-two. The church school has a total membership of 1145.

Rocky Mountain States

IDAHO

BETHANY CHURCH of American Falls is not yet four years old. There is probably no church in the state that has made better progress in that time. It has a beautiful new building, almost free from debt, an enthusiastic Sunday school, a crowded house at all services and a fine spirit among the people. Twenty-five were recently baptized. The pastor, Rev. J. Alexander Ford, is now on his third year over this church. Recently one of their deacons, C. H. Torrence, a deputy sheriff, was shot while arresting a gunman.

MONTANA

THE FIRST CHURCH, Billings, Rev. Wm. D. Whan, pastor received fifty-five into the church at Easter, thirty-seven of them by baptism. Members received by letter represented eleven different states. This is the result of an organized campaign of personal evangelism conducted since the beginning of the year. Ground for a new church building will be broken as soon as conditions will warrant.

ARIZONA

Rev. A. P. HOWELLS closed a series of meetings at Douglas with forty-six additions, twenty-eight of them by baptism. A good many soldiers from Harry J. Jones' camp at that place attend the services. Mr. Howells is now serving as acting pastor at Jacksonville, Ill.

COLORADO

AT THE COMMUNION SERVICE in the First church of Denver, Dr. A. H. C. Morse pastor, on April 3, the band of fellowship was extended to sixty-five new members—the most ever received at one time in all the history of that church.

Mississippi Valley

IOWA

CARLISLE had Rev. C. E. Hillis and Rev. Ada Maria Hillis in special meetings.

REVIVAL MEETINGS are in progress at Waukon. Rev. E. H. Shanks, for the Iowa Baptist State Mission Board is conducting the meetings. There were fifteen decisions for Christ the first week, and indications are that many more will come the second week of the meetings.

ANAMOSA has called Mr. Fred White of Wm. Jewell College to the pastorate, following the revival meetings held there by Rev. E. H. Shanks. Twenty-four new members were received and fourteen of them were heads of families—twenty-two by baptism.

Rev. W. O. ROTEN, Marysville, Tenn., was called to the pastorate of Waukon

Sunday, April 24. He has accepted and is staying on the field. He has been assisting in the revival meetings. Mrs. Roten will join him at Waukon in a few weeks.

REV. JAMES M. WILSON of Anamosa, has been supplying What Cheer, Iowa for a few weeks, and is ready for a call to a good church. Brother Wilson has been out of active work for a few months owing to illness.

MUSCATINE, FIRST—April 17 marked the third anniversary of the Pastorate of Rev. W. H. Rogers. During the three years the pastor has delivered 825 sermons and addresses, held 462 interviews, officiated at seventy-three weddings and seventy-six funerals, attended 1424 meetings, made 1022 visits; the Sunday school has grown from an attendance of 295 to 487; 95,896 people have attended the morning and evening services at the church; membership has grown from 967 to 1200; during the present pastorate 302 have united with the church, forty-six by letter, thirty-six by experience and 220 by baptism; the church has raised and spent in Christian work, $57,617, and is preparing to launch into a great building campaign.

EVANGELIST C. E. HILLIS and wife recently closed a two weeks campaign in Woodward, Iowa. There were sixty-eight conversions and forty-eight reconsecrations making a total of 116 that came forward in the meeting.

OHIO

PASTOR ALBERT KING MORRIS of First, Toledo, baptised thirty-three Easter Sunday and twelve Palm Sunday. This is the largest number at any one time in the history of the church. The membership record of the year was also broken. Ninety were received into membership during the year ending March 31.

URBANA, FIRST—Seventeen young men and women were baptized on Easter Sunday. These were the fruits of a series of special meetings in which Pastor J. A. Moe did the preaching. The Sunday School is flourishing. The last quarter showed the largest attendance in years.

WISCONSIN

AS A RESULT OF MEETINGS conducted by the pastor, A. T. Erickson during the Easter season about thirty will join the church, most of these by baptism. A survey of the field is being made by a special paid worker with a view of enlarging the work of the Bible school.

DURING PASSION WEEK the pastor of the First Church, Madison, Dr. Donald D. MacLaurin, at the request of the officers and pastor, Eugene G. Mintz of the Baptist Temple of Oshkosh, preached every night except Saturday night with a happy and inspiring result. Forty-six people were presented and accepted in membership, thirty-five of whom were baptized on Easter Sunday.

INGRAM E. BILL, pastor of the First Church, Beloit, received forty new members Easter week, of this number twenty-seven by baptism including a number of heads of families.

NEBRASKA

FIRST, OMAHA, Alonzo Alvin DeLafme, pastor, held its annual meeting April 20. Principal J. G. Masters, moderator of the church, presiding. The reports showed the most prosperous year in the church's history. There were 115 new members received during the year, forty-six by baptism. Total contributions reported were $31,211.71, for the New World Movement, $11,106 and $70,000 were subscribed for the proposed new parish house. A committee was appointed to recommend to the church a pastor's assistant and director of religious education.

SOUTH DAKOTA

IPSWICH—Pastor A. Pierce Waltz has entered upon the fourth year of his pastorate. Under his leadership the church has increased its membership 25 per cent, and its expenditures on the field 54 per cent. The per capita subscriptions for the New World Movement are $253.24, with a total pledged of $27,856. Two meetings have been held recently in out-stations, in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. Clay Morris, pastor-at-large, with good results. A generous layman of the church has fitted up a downtown office for the pastor in the public library building, and has also installed there a circulating library of books for the church and congregation.

MOBRIDGE—This church, organized Feb. 6, 1921, is being cared for by pastors-at-large of the state convention pending the settlement of a pastor. The Sunday school under the direction of Mr. E. E. Empey has already had a fine development. Baptists face a splendid opportunity here and also a great responsibility. The Congregational, Episcopal, and Baptist churches are all without pastors. Evangelist Charles Cullen Smith recently conducted a series of meetings with the Congregational Church, which received twenty-six members as a result of the campaign.

ABERDEEN—Pastor Elba A. Gilmore, after a ministry of peculiar tactfulness and devotion involving a burdensome building enterprise, concluded that his work in Aberdeen should close, and offered his resignation. The church protested so vigorously and generally that for the time Pastor Gilmore remains with his people. He has had a prominent and honorable place in the religious life of the community, as well as in the work of the state convention of which he is vice-president.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the First Church, Mitchell, showed that there had been fifty-three additions during the year making a present membership of 432. Expenditures for current expenses were $6,240.24 and for benevolences $2,140.21. Rev. Walter Ingram has just completed his fourth year with the church.

NORTH DAKOTA

REV. JOHN STEWART who was compelled in February to relinquish his pastorate of the First Baptist Church, Downers Grove, because of impaired health; has taken up his residence at 160 Hazard Ave., East Providence, R. I. where his friends may address him.

FIRST, JOLIET, shows a marked increase in interest and attendance since the new pastor, Rev. R. Theodore Gasaway, began his work the middle of December. Four new members have been received by baptism and several by letter.

PASTOR REV. J. H. PURCE at Toulon was assisted by State Evangelist Frank M. Dunk. Fifty-eight came forward during the meetings and since forty-nine have united by baptism and eight by letter and experience.

DR. H. B. COX, pastor of the Fifth Street Church, of Hannibal, Mo., assisted Pastor Meigs of the Central Church, of Quincy, Ill., in special meetings, closing Easter with forty-one additions, twenty-seven by baptism. Others were approved for baptism. Pastor Meigs is now assisting Dr. Cox, at Hannibal.

THE BAPTIST COUNCIL of the Alton district, modelled after the Baptist executive council of Chicago, will hold its first annual meeting, May 2. It is composed of delegates from five churches; it has purchased lots in an unchurched district in Alton and is planning a building for the South Wood River Mission. D. T. Magill is president and Dr. M. W. Twing is the secretary.

UPPER ALTON CHURCH completed a three-weeks evangelistic campaign with Easter Sunday. The first two weeks the pastor was assisted by Rev. Ernest A. Main of the Water Tower Baptist Church of St. Louis as the preacher and Prof. Ira L. Deal of Waterloo, Iowa, as chorus leader. Thirty have already been baptized. A number have been received on letter and experience. The leaders of the church say that it was the best series of meetings that the church has had in many years.

Chicago Ministers Tackle Irish Question

Irish relief got a dash of cold water at the Chicago Baptist ministers' meeting April 25. After reciting appeals on behalf of the "starving people of Ireland," resolutions adopted for publication: "deplore this attempt to impose upon the sympathy of our people by false statements as to conditions in Ireland in general and Belfast in particular;" express confidence "that the great city of Belfast with its thousands of our co-religionists, many of them men and women of means, would not permit such conditions as have been reported to exist, without extending help to the starving, irrespective of creed;" "look upon this whole scheme of the American Committee for Relief in Ireland as a part of Sinn Fein propaganda to raise funds to assist those who are in rebellion against the constituted authorities of their country;" and finally "urge upon our people to do nothing to aid a movement having for its object the creating of a spirit of antagonism between the United States and its friend and ally in the late war, Great Britain."

INDIANA

EVANGELISM HAS had the right of way in Indiana the last six months with some remarkable results. The city of Indianapolis has greatly benefited from a four weeks' tabernacle campaign under the leadership of Gipsy Smith. Anderson, Washington, Shelbyville, Vincennes, Laporte and Kokomo are among the number of churches over the State reaping large harvests.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT, S. G. HUNTINGTON, recently led in a campaign which gave the first church, Evansville, over $51,000 to complete a fund of $90,000 for a new church house. Building enterprises are under way all over the state.

A NEW CHURCH has been organized at Tell City, the largest town in Perry county, with 44 charter members and 22 to be received for baptism at the first meeting.

SUCH IMPORTANT churches as Franklin, Peru, Marion First and Terre Haute First have recently called pastors and soon will be back to "normalcy."

RETURNS from the churches on the New World Movement are very encouraging. During April $51,081.89 was received at headquarters.

REV. F. A. HAYWARD, Seymour has entered upon his duties as District Superintendent of Indianapolis and Central Associations. There are now seven officials of the State Convention with offices at Baptist headquarters in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis

At Tabernacle permanent improvements are being made that will house the school and church to better advantage. Pastor Chas. P. Greenfield not only leads this church in its splendid work but also preaches at Lynhurst, a church with large possibilities as the subdivision grows.

Calvary Church Pastor A. Slaughter, recently held its annual fast day and self-denial service which brought together many of the people in a service of uplift and blessing. At the evening service two came forward accepting Christ.

Northwestern, meeting temporarily in an "upper room" finds encouragement in the cheerful vision of Pastor McGregor. Two weeks ago at this service four came forward acknowledging the Master.

Emerson Ave. Mission is in a field of great promise. 277 were at the school on April 25th, and they occupied all the mission and completely filled the little cottage next door.

The Gipsy Smith Meetings just closed have proven a blessing. Probably 2,000 cards have been signed and sent to the Baptists of which about 400 will be a positive addition to our working force.

FIRST heard Sherwood Eddy Apr. 23. Dr. F. E. Taylor, pastor, is preaching a series of sermons to various classes of people on Sunday evenings. Mrs. Frances Augusta Putter died Apr. 1 at the age of ninety.

KANSAS

WELLINGTON had lately Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Bowdlin of Japan. He gave a stereopticon lecture on Japan at the church the evening of April 12.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION in the Blue Valley Association was held with the Winifred Church April 11 and 12. Jno. Anderson of Blue Rapids was elected president and Fred Tilley of Frankfort, secretary.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION in the N. E. Association met with the Horton Church, April 14 and 15. Rev. A. L. Bain of Africa was present and gave stirring missionary messages. Rev. O. W. Stanbrough of Troy was elected president and Mr. Chester Norris of Horton was re-elected secretary.

HORTON CHURCH, Rev. Wm. Little, pastor, is very much encouraged. Fifteen young people presented themselves for membership on Sunday, April 10, nearly all of them for baptism.

MORRILL, HORTON, TROY AND HIAWATHA CHURCHES are planning to put on church vacation schools this summer, with a training institute in May to help prepare the workers for their special task.

HUTCHINSON looks towards the construction of a new church building, and a committee was appointed to take the matter in hand. The church voted to increase pastor H. W. Cole's salary.

EVANGELIST ARMSTRONG and WIFE are conducting meetings with the Mt. Union Church, out from Wamego. A very good interest is developing.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION in the Miami Association met with the Stilwell church April 15 to 17. Miss Viola Folz of Stilwell was elected president, and Miss Edna Umstot secretary-treasurer.

DR. WM. H. LESLIE OF AFRICA, now at home on furlough and living at Granville, Ohio, assisted in the Sunday-school and young people's conventions in the state, beginning March 25 and continuing till April 10, making the meetings at Colby, Leland, Codell, Barnard, Cawker City, Junction and Council Grove.

REV. A. L. BAIN OF AFRICA, now in this country on account of the health conditions of his wife, and living at Valley, Nebr., gave valuable assistance in the Sunday-school and young people's conventions in the state, making the meetings at Winifred, Horton and Stilwell.

PASTOR E. L. RYALS OF CANEY made quiet evangelistic efforts at Easter time, and rejoices that twenty-two came into the church, mostly boys and girls. The new church building will soon be completed. It is costing $20,000 and will be well equipped for the work.

VERNON CLONINGER held a meeting in the open country of Labette County recently, resulting in many conversions. A church was organized in the Hopewell community, and Mr. Cloninger has been called as pastor for half time. He will preach the other half time at LaBette.

PASTOR ISENBERG of Cedar Valley had the assistance of Evangelist W. J. Parmery in special meetings recently with five additions to the church.

PASTOR CHAS. GROVE OF LEOTI is leading the church in putting a basement under the church building. He is giving full time to this field and outstations.

ASSOCIATIONAL EVANGELIST W. E. TANNER of Erie held a splendid meeting at Walnut recently. There were twenty additions to the church. A pastor is badly needed to lead forward in the work there.

BETHEL CHURCH at Mt. Hope has turned its property to the Bethany Church and the members have transferred their membership there. Pastor, Rev. J. M. Bandy, held meetings recently. The church was greatly strengthened.

LYONS will receive twenty-five or thirty new members. Rev. Walter Davenport is the pastor.

LESLIE SAGE OF OKLAHOMA assisted Rev. A. H. McHenry of Wakeeney in a meeting recently. There were ten conversions and ten additions to the church. The church is agitating the matter of a new building.

WICHITA, First, John Bunyan Smith, pastor, has received 250 new members in seven months, and has called Walter J. Mead to serve as assistant for recreational and religious work.

PASTOR B. W. WISEMAN OF IOLA is a very busy man now. The Church voted recently to take steps looking towards building a new building costing $40,000.

REV. R. N. HILLYER OF HAMLIN was ordained to the gospel ministry March 10. The Hamlin church where he is pastor called the council.

FIRST, KANSAS CITY, Louis Bowerman, pastor, is in favor of going ahead with the completion of the edifice, finishing the front part of the building, which will mean to complete in permanent form the present rooms, enclose the auditorium, roofing and glass, and if the Lord wills, to finish the auditorium itself.

THE WALNUT VALLEY ASSOCIATION met with the Winfield Church April 12-14. M. L. Wortman is the Moderator and Paul Hudson of El Dorado is the Clerk. The attendance was large.

PROF. FRANK HERRIOTT of Winfield, is the new pastor of the Pleasant Valley Church.

REV. E. C. MAGRUDER of Wichita is the new pastor of the Kechi church, located northeast of Wichita.

REV. J. M. TINNELL is the new pastor at Dexter, east of Winfield. He comes to the Baptists from the Southern Methodists and is to be ordained soon to our Baptist ministry.

PASTOR J. M. ROBINSON of Wellington Place Church in Wichita is soon to have the assistance of Dr. Wilson Mills of Kansas City in special meetings.

REV. C. H. SHANKLIN of Wichita has accepted the call of the Little Walnut Church in Walnut Valley Association. He is also preaching at Derby and Leon churches.

REV. J. C. HOLMES of Wichita preaches half time for the Viola church, southwest of Wichita, and is supplying for the Goddard Church, west of Wichita, till they secure a pastor.

REV. E. LOONEY has recently become pastor of the Latham church. This church has been without leadership for some time but is greatly encouraged in the work now.

EVANGELIST SCHEUSSLER and party closed a very successful meeting with the Valley Center recently, with some thirty-two conversions and eight restorations. Some twenty-five came into the church. He and his party are now assisting the Associational Missionary W. A. Ayres in special meetings at the Mt. Zion church, near Winfield.

MICHIGAN

SCOTTEN AVENUE, Detroit, has a wave of prosperity since the coming of Pastor W. A. Steinkraus some months ago. Plans are on foot to move to a new location and build a house.

WASHTENAW ASSOCIATION met in Ypsilanti, April 26, C. S. Burns, pastor.

GILBERT MEMORIAL, Mount Clemens, E. Bond Griffith, pastor, recently installed a Simplex motion picture machine in a fire-proof projection room, and on Friday evenings high class picture entertainments are given. Easter Sunday there were 152 in Sunday School and the offering was $151.38. One of our members recently presented a piano to the church to be placed in the B. Y. P. U. Hall. Baptisms are frequent and the church is progressing along all lines of community service.

GANSON STREET, Jackson closed recently "one of the most wonderful revivals the church has ever known." Rev. A. W. Littrell and Mr. D. L. Moody were the evangelists. Pastor B. H. Taylor baptized fifty-eight, Apr. 17. The church has added $400 to his salary.

LANISING, FIRST received last year 101 new members into the central body and forty-eight into North and Olivet stations. The budget is about $260 a week. Sunday school has an average attendance of about 400. A community house will be erected soon.

BETHEL, KALAMAZOO—Eighteen recently baptized. At the last communion service twenty-five received the hand of fellowship into the church. Reports show marked progress in all departments, 116 new pupils having been added to the Sunday School, making a total enrollment of 370. During the two years and a half that H. Sidney Bullock has been Pastor, eighty-one new members have been added to the church, forty-nine by baptism, making the present membership 167. Total expenditures were $4150. An increase of $200 was added to the pastor's salary.

FIRST, PORT HURON, Rev. C. Frank Vreeland, pastor. Additions during the fiscal year seventy, developed Wadhams, Gardendale and North Street under the pastoral care of Associate Pastor H. H. Bowser. The first doubled in membership. The second had a large bunch of converts, and improved the church building. At Marysville work began under Rev. H. S. Davis. Choir loft was enlarged and baptistry built, cost $1200. Beside the improvements $12,000 were raised for all purposes.

PRECEDING the regular prayer meeting of Calvary, Muskegon, Pastor Robert Leitz conducts a Bible study class which is commanding much attention. Church membership has been increased and the actual attendance in the Sunday school has grown from eighty to one hundred. Cottage prayer meetings are being held and much personal work is done.

GREAT ACTIVITY is noticeable in all departments of the First Church, Alpena. A men's club has been organized and the thermometer of the Sunday school is steadily rising toward the 200 mark. I. M. Compton is the pusher here.

REV. A. E. HAYES gave the hand of fellowship to ten new members at Charlotte at his last communion service.

MARSHALL has inaugurated a plan by which every new member coming into the church is given a copy of the New Testament and Psalms by some other member of the church. In this book is printed a copy of the church covenant. Pastor Bouwman has received sixty-three new members since November 1.

KINDERHOOK. A traveling library and a record system have been installed in the Sunday school, a map made of the community, 265 pieces of literature distributed, the beginning of systematic calling upon the whole community—such is the record of Rev. C. P. Moss for the first six weeks of his pastorate.

REV. C. H. VATCHER had the joy of baptizing twenty-two converts into First, Sault Ste Marie, during the Easter season. He is preaching to large congregations each Sunday evening.

PASTOR McREA of Atlas has organized a band of twenty-seven pieces. Only three of the members had played in a band before. The oldest member is past sixty while the youngest is in the early teens. But the band works and plays, too, and is helping the church grow. Mr. McRea also has organized the girls in a uniformed squad. The church membership has doubled during his pastorate.

NEW MEMBERS are being baptized into the Muskegon Heights church by Rev. A. W. Lyons—fourteen during these past few weeks.

FIRST, PORT HURON, and our denomination at large, have suffered a distinct loss in the death on April 5, of Mr. Elsworth E. Wilkinson, aged fifty-six.

PASTOR A. P. McDONALD, St. Charles, had the joy of baptizing four adults April 10, and at the close of the service two others came forward requesting church membership.

Women's Executive Board

This body met at Woodward Avenue, Detroit, April 12, Mrs. Edward Wilson presiding. Mrs. Lovett, first vice-president was unable, because of sickness, to be present.

Participants on the program were Mrs. Netting, Mrs. N. H. Bowen, Mrs. Conrad, Miss Howell, Miss Cooper, Mrs. Wreggit, Mrs. L. N. Smith, Mrs. Power, Mrs. Brennan and Miss Heaton.

Letters were received from workers in the several departments and from the field at large.

Reports from the several secretaries showed the work in all lines in an encouraging condition.

Miss Lulu Jackson has received appointment to serve as a missionary in Central America.

Selling Bonds Directly to the Investor

RECENTLY the State of North Dakota has advertised an issue of $3,000,000 bonds of the State, bearing 5% per cent. interest, to be dated July 1, 1921, and maturing ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-five and twenty-seven years hence. Like state issues generally, these bonds are the general obligation of the state, backed by its power to levy and collect taxes. An unusual feature of these bonds lies in the fact that as additional security there are deposited first mortgages on North Dakota farm lands to an amount equal to the face value of the bonds, the mortgages averaging about 40 per cent. of the actual value of the farms. Intrinsically, therefore, they would appear to be an attractive investment, especially as they are free from Federal taxation.

The especially interesting feature of this offering lies in the fact that the appeal is made directly to the investor by the state, instead of selling them through investment bankers. Outside of the various Liberty Loan campaigns, we have witnessed practically no widespread sales of securities direct from borrower to investor. Frequently an entire issue of a community's bonds is placed at home, particularly when offered in moderate amounts and in wealthy localities. But where the amount involved is greater than local capital can absorb, and it is necessary to find a wider clientele, this is as a rule most economically accomplished by selling the entire issue to a dealer or group of dealers, in investment bonds, who in turn sell them to their customers scattered over the country. North Dakota's nation wide campaign will accordingly give a good indication as to whether without the unusual stimulus that attended the Liberty Loan campaigns, it is practicable to float a large issue in this manner."

Obituary

FRANCIS A. EVERETT

Mr. Francis A. Everett was born in St. John, New Brunswick, Canada, Sept. 20, 1844. Entered into rest, San Jose, Calif., Apr. 4, 1921. He was one of seven sons, Doctor William P. Everett, well known as pastor at Alton, Quincy and Elgin, Ill., being the second of the seven to make "their home" in the "States."

Mr. Everett was married Oct. 1, 1867, to Miss Flora E. Doe, at St. Stephens, N. B. Four children were given: Anna, Frank M., Walter and Flora B. The elder daughter and the two sons had passed on before; Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Louis S. Bowerman, the daughter, surviving him. In 1869 they moved to Springfield, Mo., and in 1874 to Quincy, Ill., where, with the exception of a single year in St. Louis, they lived until seven years ago, when on account of health conditions they moved to San Jose, Calif.

Mr. Everett was converted in early life. In Springfield, Mo. he was made a deacon, and in the First and Vermont Street churches of Quincy and Grace Church, San Jose, he filled and honored the office.

He was a man of strong character of deep convictions and of an unusually generous nature. A firm believer in experimental religion, his faith in the Lord Jesus was childlike in its simplicity. He was the pastor's friend, a business man who put his best ability into his church. For this reason he had much to do with the finances. The tithers league found him a staunch friend. Deeply interested in the Bible school he was, not only in the main school of his church, but also in some mission school.

As a manufacturer of union overalls his business carried him over a large area. "The friendly man" will be missed by the large number who have known him in the years. "Looking for that blessed hope," for him to die was indeed gain.

The funeral services were held Saturday, Apr. 9, in the new Grace Church edifice, in the erection of which he had been deeply interested. A loving tribute was given by his pastor, Rev. J. A. Sutherland. The final interment will be at Quincy, Ill.

JOHN J. JOHNSON

Deacon John J. Johnson of Emmanuel Church, Mead, Neb., passed from earth on March 12, 1921. He was born in Waldo Co., Me., Dec. 2, 1850, reached Nebraska March 6, 1874, was baptized in the spring of 1876, and for nearly forty years gave faithful service as deacon of the church. His integrity and strength of character, his good business judgment, together with his kindly spirit, made him, in a large measure, the trusted counsellor of the community. "A father to us all," said one neighbor. His family and friends find consolation in rich memories of a life well lived and of a strong faith in the Almighty.

An Interesting Comparison

The all important question is, What are the reasons for this remarkable discrepancy?

Mr. Thos. Kane finds the answer to this question in the fact that the Southern churches gave large place to tithing in their program, while the Northern Church did not.

Pastors, young people's presidents and churches interested in a tithing and stewardship campaign may secure, free, on request, a package of eighteen leaflets on the subject by addressing the B. Y. P. U. of America, 125 No. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill., or 408 Humboldt Bank Building, San Francisco, Calif.

Book Notices

"The Religion of Jesus."

By Albert G. Lawson. Judson Press: American Baptist Publication Society.

For many a snappy epigram, many a happy syllabus, many a sentence or paragraph finely adaptable to the purposes of pulpit quotation, here is a good place to turn. Dr. Lawson has cleared away the scaffolding of the study and given us the completed structure in four addresses shot through with light.

"Jesus and Paul."

By Benjamin W. Bacon. The MacMillan Company. Price $2.50.

"The New Testament literature shows that Christianity, once it left its source in Jesus, became in some degree stained and discolored by each bed of ideas over which it flowed. By successive crossings of mental frontiers, the new religion made its way to its latest New Testament expression in the Epistles and Gospel of John." This quotation is the key to the book. The solution to the problem of harmonizing apparent divergences between the teaching of Jesus and that of Paul, Dr. Bacon believes is to be found in the Gospel and Epistles of John, who presents in them the "higher synthesis" of Jesus and Paul.

"The Preceding God"

By James Taylor Dickinson. Philadelphia: The Judson Press.

At the request of many friends Dr. Dickinson has put into permanent form some of his sermons, addresses and contributions to the press. The volume takes its title from the initial sermon which was preached before the Foreign Mission Society at its annual meeting in Buffalo in 1903. Ten sermons furnish ample evidence of Dr. Dickinson's power and helpfulness as a preacher. They breathe spiritual passion; the preacher is concerned that they carry over into other lives the love and devotion which fill his own heart. This gives to his messages a reality and fervor which cannot fail to make strong appeal to those whom he addresses. The evident sincerity and kindness of the preacher's spirit prepare the reader for the acceptance of the great truths presented. Many readers will find special satisfaction in the tributes to men whom Dr. Dickinson has known and loved. His honored father, Rev. A. E. Dickinson, heads the list, and the tender and just appreciation of one who filled a large place in the life of our denomination will be read with great satisfaction by a great number of men and women who knew and loved the gifted father of this not less gifted son.

"Essays Speculative and Political"

By A. J. Balfour. New York: George H. Doran Co.

This miscellany—essays, lectures and occasional pieces—written for the most part within the last dozen years, covers subjects of the most varied character, ranging from a review of Bergson's "Creative Evolution" to brief notes on "Zionism" and "The Freedom of the Seas." Among the other speculative topics are essays on "Francis Bacon," "Physical Research," "Beauty: and the criticism of Beauty," and "Decadence." After pointing out that decadence and arrested development are not less normal than progress, Mr. Balfour concludes that "so far" there are no symptoms either of pause or of regression in the onward movement characteristic of the last thousand years of western civilization. But this was written in 1912—before the war.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

TO THE CLERGY OF AMERICA

From the National Association of Organists comes the following bulletin, addressed primarily to "The Clergy," but more definitely of interest to the music committees of our churches, in the opinion of this writer. Let the appeal speak for itself—the motive behind the action is certainly worthy of substantial support and encouragement:—

The National Association of Organists, through its committee for promoting the interests of Organists, begs to present to you the following facts concerning the preparation and musical equipment the organist must have to carry on his work effectively, and regarding his relations with the church he serves.

Qualifications and Recognition

It is hardly necessary to state that, rightly conceived and executed, music has a great devotional value, and that its planning and maintenance are of prime importance.

The organist must possess high intelligence, and, having secured a good general education, must thoroughly master the various subjects which are essential to his work. He must keep abreast of the times by constantly studying the best new music.

As the organist of a church is nearly always the choir-master, he must have a knowledge of voice training, and a wide acquaintance with vocal literature.

He must not only be in full sympathy with the devotional function of religious music, but he must be trained in its use and be familiar with its history.

It is obvious that this work involves as much preparation and equipment as that of a person entering any other profession. The music of the church cannot be adequately rendered by those who have not the requisite qualifications.

In view of these facts the Association asks you to consider whether the organists who are serving your churches receive the recognition and encouragement they deserve. Do you keep in close touch with them, thus preventing them from feeling isolated? Such contact will reveal the scope of their attainments, and possibilities of service as yet unrealized.

The Association would also express its grateful appreciation of the inspiration which organists are receiving for the better performance of their work in many a church throughout the country.

Raising the Standard of Church Music

What of the future? It is undeniable that the standards of church music have greatly improved during the last few years. It is equally true that unceasing vigilance, persistent education and really trained musical leadership, are necessary to continue that improvement. The conditions under which organists work must be such as to induce the finest young men and women to enter that profession,—or ministry, as it can rightly be termed.

One encouraging fact is the increased interest in religious education. Vacation Bible schools and week-day church schools require music, and organists may assist greatly in working out the musical program. This affords valuable experience for young organists under proper supervision.

Co-operation

The Association invites your suggestions and also your co-operation. It is reaching organists throughout the country. What message can it take them from you? What do you need that they can learn to supply? There are also special musical problems in your churches that await solution. The facilities for training organists can be increased, and young players encouraged to make up the study of the instrument. A used organ returns real results in producing the material from which your trained leadership will come. You may also be able to organize a committee to advise with you and your organist on all musical matters in the parish, thus securing a continuity of musical policy that is often lacking.

The Association hopes to become a clearing house of facts and methods, at the service of all the churches of the country.

Its aim is the advancement of church music, and a better understanding between clergy, congregation and organist.

NEW MUSIC

From the Fillmore Music House, Cincinnati. O.
Heyser's Anthems and Chorus for Men

For a church dependent upon a male chorus for its music, or for that rare choir that can boast of an exceptional surplusage of male voices, here is an invaluable collection of easy, melodious numbers, not so "high-brow" as to be boring to most of the congregation, but still of musical worth to prove of interest to the musically inclined. The printing and get-up are neat and substantial; the price, 75 cents, is remarkably modest for the value offered. The tone of the selections is strongly evangelical.

From Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago, Ill.
O Silent Land—William Lester
America, the Promised Land—Roy R. Murphy
All for America—Clay Smith

This series of choruses for mixed voices is especially well adapted for use at Decoration Day services. The first number is a quiet, reverent setting of a beautiful poem by Whittier, for chorus, preferably unaccompanied. It has been widely used with much satisfaction. The chorus by Murphy, a stirring four-part hymn-like patriotic eulogy of this, our country, is one of the most effective selections to be found; unlike many much more pretentious choruses it really "sounds well." It should be in the library of every choir, ready for use on patriotic festivals. "All for America" is a unison march, best for use by junior choirs or as a processional march. It is easy to sing, has a vigorous swing, and voices graceful sentiments, by Edmund Vance Cooke.

NEWS

THE Baptist Church of the Master (formerly known as East End Baptist Church) of Cleveland, O., has recently changed its music from that provided by a solo-quartet to a chorus-choir assisted by soloists drawn for the most part from the membership of the church. The talented organist and choir-director of the church, Mr. Edwin L. Bottle, in announcing the change to this department, goes on to say: "We have recently displaced a quartet with a volunteer chorus, and its success has been extraordinary. We have a choir whose members look upon their part of the service as a factor in promoting the religious life of the church—not as an exhibition of vocal skill primarily—and we are hopeful of making the music the help to the minister and the inspiration to the people, it should be," which, incidentally, is a very good summing up of the purpose of music in divine worship!

On Sunday evening, Feb. 27, the choir of thirty-eight voices, assisted by Miss Naomi Crittenden, Miss Florence Smith, Mr. Harry P. Cole, and Mr. Gustave Bernike as soloists, under the direction of Mr. Bottle, gave a fine performance of Stainer's beautiful cantata, "The Daughter of Jairus."

Frances Ann Cook, organist, and Mildred Smith, contralto, gave a very interesting program at the Hyde Park Baptist Church of Chicago, the evening of March 15. This large church boasts a splendid Skinner organ, rich in color and ample in volume.

High Class Investments in Men

By MARTIN S. BRYANT

A YEAR ago last January I personally made it financially possible for one of the strong young men of the University Baptist Church at the University of Illinois to attend the Student Volunteer Convention for Foreign Missions at Des Moines, Ia. I had baptized this young man less than two months before. Six months after that convention this student—a noble fellow—made a carefully thought-out and prayed-out decision for the ministry and foreign missionary service. Before going to Des Moines he was preparing to be a journalist. Now he is headed straight for the theological seminary as soon as his college course shall have been finished. Before he was an exemplary Christian character; now he is a living apostle for Christ fairly aflame with a love for souls. He never goes into a cafeteria but that he will in some way find out from every student who happens to be at his table whether he is a Christian or not.

A year ago last June I attended the annual student conference at Lake Geneva, Wis. Last June I stayed at home and made it financially possible for one of our strong young men to go in my stead. Six weeks ago that young man made one of the strongest and most clear-cut decisions for the Christian ministry I have ever known. I wish you could see him. As you look into his frank and open face you know at once that you are looking upon a young man who has nothing to hide and that there is a life filled with determination, purpose, strength and character. I wonder every day if there possibly could have been any place where that little money could have brought so great returns in so short a time to say nothing of the future. But do you want to know the whole story of this young man? His father is dead. He is washing dishes three hours a day in a boarding house for his meals and putting in several hours a week in an office to help pay his room rent and other bills and already it has become necessary to begin borrowing money, so expensive is an education these days. Yet he is determined to get the best preparation possible for his life work. Now what are the alternatives confronting this young man? Either to go on doing as he is now doing through the remainder of his college course and into the theological seminary, running the risk of entering his life work with broken health, crippled with debt, and perhaps with a faulty preparation, or to drop out of school to earn money in order to go on, thus depriving the church of several years of his ministry at the most important time of his life. What an opportunity for some one!

Last month I made it possible for still another young man to catch a larger vision that we could possibly give him here. This time he went to the state student volunteer convention for foreign missions, held at Hedding College. This young man is looking forward to medicine. As one looks upon this fellow how he loves him! What about the convention? While there he had a long conference with a medical missionary. Now he is reading and studying up on medical missions. I am praying and confidently expecting a decision for medical missionary service. And what about him further—tending furnace and waiting table to get his college education? And then medical school! I hardly dare look ahead for him. But he does. How I love him! And how thankful I am that I put a little money into him! Champaign, Ill.

No Foreign Money in These Buildings

THE mission at Bassein, Burma is asking the women's board to appropriate 30,000 rupees for equipment of the new Ko Tha Byu Hall, and the new Sgau Karen girls' school. They desire to call attention to the fact that this is for equipment. As no foreign money has gone into any of the buildings of this station.

It is not at all likely that any further appropriation will ever be asked for, as there is good reason to believe that from this time henceforth our people will be able to meet all future requirements as they arise. It is hoped that the full amount of Rs. 30,000, may be made immediately available, as at least two thirds of the amount will already have been expended.

Both buildings and equipment will be of the very best and most durable quality and it is doubtful if any Christian community has ever worked more faithfully, more harmoniously, or with higher ideals than these people have in this instance, and they still have before them a gigantic task in raising the amount above indicated. Let us cheer them then in their praiseworthy endeavors to provide for their present needs and for those of generations to come.

The Memorial Hall will not be surpassed in its architecture or in its adaptation to its purpose by any structure in Burma and possibly in all India.

Listen! You Church People

YOU church people who were never out of the sound of a church bell, listen. Dr. Cronkhite tells of the "All Burma Convention" at Mandalay and answers the question: Are missions worth while? Eighty-three missionaries and two thousand native Christians of many races attended the conference.

The Kachin church sent 208 delegates; thirty-seven years ago when this mission was started these people had no books and their bodily untidiness was indescribable. In 1883 there were eleven Kachin Christians; now there are 1,200 Christians of this tribe and they have much of the Bible in their own tongue, a dictionary, a grammar, school books, a book of 370 hymns, and a newspaper.

No Police Needed

A non-Christian policeman said: "It is most remarkable that it was not necessary to send for the police to preserve order at the Christian feast." The background of his remark was a great Buddhists' feast recently held where there were many fights and two men killed so that the police were called in to keep the peace. Little by little people learn that Christianity is not so much a new system as a new spirit.

Burden of Taxation

THE rapidly increasing costs of government, local, state and national, is a problem that is causing far reaching anxieties. Incomes from investments that once were considered most conservative and assured have been greatly reduced by new taxation. The states are now following the example of the national government until the provident almost despair as to their future. If one manages to leave a considerable estate the inheritance taxes are really formidable.

Very much of the annoyances and curtailed income may be obviated by the transfer of other investments to Life Annuities such as are issued by our Baptist missionary societies. In this way your bequests are placed where you are assured of their perpetuity in kingdom service, without large deductions that inheritance taxes would make, while a fixed and assured income for life is yours until the Master's call for you shall come.

Write to the Board of Promotion for detailed information and if you desire it they will assist you in readjusting your property and income.

New York Calls for Volunteers

It is estimated that there are 800,000 children of school age in New York City. When the public schools close, nine-tenths of these children are thrown upon the city streets. What a danger!

The Daily Vacation Bible School movement (started twenty years ago in one of our Baptist churches) comes along at this critical time, with a very definite program of evangelism, patriotism, industry and play, to minister to the children on our city streets. What an opportunity!

The schools are held in church buildings. They will open July 5 and continue through August 5, a period of five weeks. The sessions are from 9:30 to 11:30, each morning for five days a week.

Surely there are some young people in our young peoples' societies who will not be busy or away from the City during that part of the summer and surely there are some in our young peoples' societies who will want to volunteer their time and their talents in Christian service. Here is their opportunity to put into practice that to which they have testified.

Last summer there were 165 daily vacation Bible schools and about 1,000 teachers in New York City alone. Those interested should communicate with Rev. Stanley B. Hazzard, director of religious education, 276 Fifth avenue, for he can locate them where they will render a great service to little children and enjoy a wonderful experience themselves. This is our slogan "The Young People of the Churches for the Children of the City."

Annual Meeting American Baptist Foreign Mission Society

The Peeve Editor Peeved

Now the Peeve Editor is peeved. The occasion is to be found in the fact that the "best" peeve received cannot be published. Its possessor says, "Not for publication." That, however, is not the only reason. If we should publish the letter Uncle Sam's postal inspectors would hold up the whole edition.

Killam's Kollum

A Skillful Though Not Painless Operation

THE manager of a large insurance company writes under date of Apr. 27 as follows: "My dear Killam: I have wept a barrel of tears over this unpaid account. Your two letters, requesting payment, would make even a dishonest man pay a dishonest debt. Your surgery is not painless but it is skillful. You certainly can make every appeal. The man is dead though unburied who fails to respond. I now understand the increasingly good quality of THE BAPTIST. Yes, I do believe in the work of the denomination and of THE BAPTIST, but if I believed in neither I would pay this bill because your letters surround a man. You add kindness to skill and patience by enclosing a stamp." Brethren, such an operation always contributes to the moral health of the patient. Is it out of order to inquire as to your health?

Prevents Cruelty to Animals

In the calendar of the First Church, Evanston, Ill., Dr. James M. Stifler, pastor, we find, "This is the week for emphasizing kindness to animals. Some persons rather than pay a dog tax turn the poor fellow loose in the streets. You would not do that but if you find a taxless dog or a case of this kind threatened, try and see that the dog does not become either a victim or a menace.

By the way, do you subscribe to THE BAPTIST?" Here we find a new argument in favor of THE BAPTIST. Who can doubt that the habitual reading of such a paper makes a man humane?

We Say It Ought to be Suppressed

Talking of church calendars let it be known that Morgan Park, Chicago, has some originality. In the calendar for Apr. 24 we find a notice of the meeting in Chicago of the "Committee of Fifteen whose purpose is to aid the public authorities in suppression of traffic in morality." We say, here and now that such traffic ought to be suppressed.

A Gruesome Reminder of Our Mortality

From the University of Chicago Press we received recently a book for review. It was addressed to "Dr." Killam and its title is "Funeral Management and Costs." Do we understand that it is to be reviewed in this Kollum? Far be it. One glance proves to us that it is cheaper to live than to die in almost any country. It is a really significant survey of burial costs and customs and will be reviewed in the proper department. In the same mail Editor Cleaves received from Philadelphia a pamphlet on "The Cheerfulness of Death." We do not attach any special significance to the occurrence but are duly reminded that even editors are mortal.

Beyond Our Fondest Dreams

"Please discontinue my subscription to this new Baptist paper. Whenever it comes up to the standard of the Journal and Messenger I will start to take it again." We miss old friends.

Send the Young People to College

THE editors are of the opinion that the present number of THE BAPTIST is of unusual interest and importance. In it is presented a survey of the educational work being done by Northern Baptists, a fascinating article regarding the new type of religious work which is being done among the students in our Baptist institutions, a story of the place which educational work occupies on the foreign field, and some valuable communications which have come to us of late from students and recent graduates. There is no page which is not worth reading.

One does not have to apologize for education. The world yields greater profit and joy, life has bigger meanings, capacity for service is larger, when one possesses what higher education may bring. A man or woman may have an A. B. degree and yet be a fool. One may never go to college and yet be well-trained. But as a general rule college puts a man or woman in possession of his powers and fills the world and life full of meaning.

Higher education means most when it is secured in a religious atmosphere. Some men become unbalanced when faced with a world of knowledge which has to them hitherto been unknown. Let the professors be Christian and the whole attitude of the institution one of reverence and men will generally come through this period with a fine faith and with a zeal for service. There is such a thing as the spirit of an institution. The advantage of a denominational college is that the spirit may be and generally is definitely Christian.

Our Baptist young people are not in college in the numbers in which they should be. Published figures are not of a kind to make us swell with pride. Possibly parents and pastors have not encouraged in young people the passion for education as has been done in some other bodies. If we are as a people to have a future, a change is necessary. It is a legitimate ambition for every boy and girl to wish to go to college and for all parents to wish to send their children.

No men and women can be too finely equipped for Christian service. No field of knowledge is too great to be made to yield its tribute to those whose task is the spreading of Christ's kingdom. The securing of larger numbers of Baptist young people for our schools and colleges is wisely made one of the goals of the New World Movement. Far-looking pastors are pointing with pride to the number of their young people who are away at school. To help kindle in our young people the passion and to remind parents and others of the importance of the subject is the purpose of this issue.

Lift the Banner of the Prince of Peace

DOORS of a great opportunity may be swinging open.

The World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches will hold its annual meeting in the city of Chicago May 17, 18 and 19. It has called for the same date a national congress to urge the calling of a conference for the reduction of armaments.

At this very juncture also, the daily papers convey the information that President Harding is moving in the direction of precisely such a conference. The peoples of the world are in a mood to listen to serious and honest proposals for a practical program of disarmament. Such a possibility ought to rouse them as no call to war could do.

If America, now by far the richest and most powerful nation in the world, will frankly offer the hand of brotherhood and peace to all nations on the basis of mutuality and co-operation, it will thereby render to the humanity a service transcending all of its past efforts for human welfare. If, standing where unexampled opportunities for national self-aggrandizement lure the nation to a policy of aggression, the Americans turn their back upon the temptation and devote their power to the service of the race, no other nation in the world can long refuse to follow such an example.

Ours is now the imperial will of the earth. If we will peace, then peace will come.

And in what holier cause can the churches serve the purposes of God than in a united movement to lay in all nations the spiritual foundation of peace through a message and ministry of conciliation?

"How Long, O Lord, How Long?"

UNDER the head, "How Long Will We Trust Education More Than Christ?" the Western Recorder does THE BAPTIST the honor to quote us as follows: "How long, fellow citizens, are we going to starve the mind of the nation in order to feed its pride of power, its pocket and its paunch?"

Then it moralizes: "Some might accuse THE BAPTIST of trying to 'beg the question' in holding up unrelieved public ignorance as the alternative of pride of power, piled pockets and plethoric paunches."

THE BAPTIST was arguing that it is poor economy for the nation to waste money on the vanities and then on the plea of poverty to starve its schools. That was the only point presented, and if "some" failed to see that point they have yet to report. Does the Western Recorder take issue with us on that point?

The only possible association of ignorance and waste in our editorial was in the relation not of alternatives but of correlatives: they go together and we are opposed to both.

But the Western Recorder supplies an example of a real alternative. It says: "We would a thousand times rather trust this country to illiterates and blue-back speller graduates, than to post-graduates in man's wisdom, who have in all their learning, been led by soul murderous teaching to doubt and then definitely reject their belief in God."

Well, if a man is placed in a position in which he must choose between pious ignorance and learned devilry, he has our pity. Just why our neighbor finds it self in such a dilemma we do not know. For ourselves, we are under no necessity of making such a choice, and we choose neither. We choose Christian culture, and we can tell any who are in search of it where to look.

For information peruse carefully this issue of THE BAPTIST.

The Great Heresy

THE thought of heresy, if not the word, is once more in the air. And definitions are varied.

But the great heresy, whatever lesser ones there may be, is clear. The great heresy is not one of thought but of life. It is summed up in ease-loving indifference to Christ's plain commands.

Christ has sent us to disciple all nations in the spirit of love. Whatever in us prevents the carrying out of that plain command, whatever excuse we give for thwarting his will, constitutes in itself the great departure from the faith.

Jesus is on the march. He knows those who march with him. And he observes those who stop by the way to dispute over terms. So long as a large part of the world lieth in the evil one, may we not imagine his voice coming to those who turn aside to lesser contentions in the same words as to one of old, "What is that to thee; follow thou me."

What About Biennial Sessions

THE Northern Baptist Convention, at its session in Des Moines, is to decide whether it will hereafter meet annually or only once in two years. The Executive Committee favors the latter course. And the reasons are obvious.

Annual sessions are expensive. To gather a great crowd of people from all parts of the country and to keep them together for more than a week costs a lot of money. Is this the best possible use of our Lord's money?

Annual sessions are confusing. Policies are no sooner adopted than they become subject to review. A start is hardly made before men begin to realize that they must pass an examination and must cram for that test. The best results are hardly achieved that way.

The convention has become a great body. Its sessions call together thousands of people. It can no longer be a little family party. Handling it is no small job. Smaller groups could doubtless accomplish more, their work being subject to review by the larger body at intervals.

If sessions were held only once in two years, there would be opportunity in alternate years for sectional gatherings which might be made powerful in developing Baptist interests in the sections where meetings are held. The regional conferences have given some valuable lessons along this line.

The general impression seems to be that the convention will vote for the biennial proposition. Other great bodies do not find it needful to meet every year in order to achieve the largest things for Christ's kingdom.

O, for a Gracious Lapse!

NORMAN HAPGOOD places us under obligation. "Just get the right phrase, and we may dispense with thought," he reminds us.

He applies this observation to the familiar slogan, "Less government in business," much used by groups of men who are ever clamoring for government to do something to help their business; but it is also highly useful in religious circles.

For examples it is not necessary to go back to the days when Christians broke one another's heads over the question whether the iota should be used twice in the spelling of "homoiousion." In these very days of ours, what tricks are played with such phrases as "orthodoxy," "Christian union," "individual and social gospel," "fundamentals," "spirituality," "inspiration," "revelation," "evolution," "the millennium," and so on!

If memory could conveniently spill all our cant while we sleep and compel us to start anew and think from the ground up, the discipline would doubtless be awkward and painful to many of us, but there would be compensations in the direction of clearness and a good common understanding.

The Lord deliver us from the man who worships phrases and thinks with his cerebellum.

Many a young person will read with interest the story of "A Slab From a Sawmill Town." Even more thrilling would be the story of the way in which its writer, "A College President," himself rose by heroic effort from poverty on a farm in a back-country township to become one of the commanding men in the Baptist denomination. Another man, known all over the world as the head of a great humanitarian organization is the son of a widow who kept college boarders to put him through the college. Again and again such achievements are repeated. Let no young person able to receive an education and willing to work for it yield to discouragement. Doors that seem to be barred can be opened. Attempt them.

So large is the amount of advertising and of special material contained in this issue of THE BAPTIST that some of the regular departments are necessarily curtailed. The news pages especially have suffered. Our justification is the importance of the subject considered. Next week, additional space will be given to features neglected this time.

THE BAPTIST urges all our churches to send their pastors to the sessions of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines, which are to be held from June 22 to 29. No investment will yield larger returns in church life.

A Slab from a Sawmill Town

BY A COLLEGE PRESIDENT

"I AM writing to tell you the glad tidings. On last Sunday I became engaged to the sweetest and dearest little girl in all the world—I just want you to know of my happiness—and I would like for you to write her a little note."

I have known this young man for years and he is true blue. I have seen the little country town where he came from, with its two or three stores, about the same number of churches, its blacksmith shop, an undertaker and perhaps also a sawmill. By a kind of irony it bears one of the great historic names of the world.

Once when addressing a farmer's institute in that county I told the story of this boy, whom many knew personally, to illustrate the human product of country life. It was a surprise and a delight to see their appreciation. They were more enthusiastic about him than any exhibit at the institute. Such good will he has carried all the way.

I have often watched him catching on the college baseball team. He would keep up a constant chatter, encouraging his team-mates to greater effort. I have seen him on the foot-ball team where he could always be depended on, held his temper, and never showed yellow. Everybody liked him. Of course there is plenty of politics about a college athletic team with intense rivalry over the question of pre-eminence. Yet I never heard a mean word about him.

I knew his mother quite well. She was a widow and had also a younger son who was very proud of his big brother. Having little of this world's goods, she had moved to the college town that she might keep a home for the boys and give them the advantage of higher education. Her health was not good, yet devotion gave her strength and by means of her chickens, a garden and work outside the home, she managed to get along.

The older son was trying to go through college and found it a hard struggle. His studies did not come easy for his early school training was not the best and, in addition, he had to do work of all kinds in order to earn something. For a time he ran a laundry route, then he developed a good deal of skill as a barber and helped in a shop on busy afternoons and evenings. Once when he had been hurt in a football scrimmage, we all turned out and dug the potatoes for him.

He came to me one day utterly discouraged and said he was ready to quit. It was wrong, he felt, to try to get an education when his mother was so poorly and had to work so hard. He could not endure to let her continue in such privations and had made up his mind to leave school, go to work, and make a home for her and his brother. I listened to his story and urged him to try just a little longer. He did, the skies brightened after a time, he completed his college course with honor, and for years now has been making a home for his mother.

I shall never forget his words to a fraternity brother, a fellow not quite up to standard, who was nominated to represent the college in some place of athletic honor—and if he were not elected the honor would go to another fraternity. "I am a friend of yours and would like to support you," he is reported to have said, "but I cannot vote to put you into this position for I don't believe you are worthy of it. I am loyal to my fraternity but I am loyal first of all to my college, and I am going to vote for another man because I believe he deserves it."

And now he occupies a responsible position in the educational work of a great city. It was a long, hard fight but he won; and his experience is not unusual. I have known many such men and women who "while their companions slept were toiling upwards in the night."

Christian Education

BY ROGER BABSON

THE need of the hour is not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or more navies, but rather more education based on the plain teachings of Jesus. The prosperity of our country depends on the motives and purposes of the people. These motives and purposes are directed in the right course only through religion. Legislation, bounties, or force are of no avail in determining man's attitude toward life. Harmony at home and peace with the world will only be determined in the same way.

Religion, like everything else of value, must be taught. It is possible to get more religion in industry and business only through the development of Christian education and leadership. With the forces of evil backed by men and money, systematically organized to destroy, we must back with men and money all campaigns for Christian education.

We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is today of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army or the navy. I say this because we shall probably never live to see America attacked from without, but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within.

I am not offering Christian education as a protector of property because nearly all the great progressive and liberal movements of history have been born in the hearts of Christian educators. I do, however, insist that the safety of our sons and daughters, as they go out on the streets this very night, is due to the influence of the preachers rather than to the influence of the policeman and law makers. Yes, the safety of our nation, including all groups, depends on Christian education. Furthermore, at no time in our history has it been more greatly needed.

We insure our houses and factories, our automobiles, and our businesses through mutual and stock insurance companies, but the same amount of money invested in Christian education would give far greater results. Besides, Christian education can insure what no corporation can insure—namely, prosperity.

This is not the time to reduce investments in schools and colleges at home, or in Y. M. C. A. and similar work in China, Japan, Russia or South America. This is the time of all times to increase subscriptions.

That Boy of Yours

He will be lonesome; he will be homesick; he will not know where to go. If only there were a real man to play Big Brother to him. You can place such a man right at his side. A postal card is all it will cost.

BY FRANK W. PADELDFORD

Time—September 23, 2:30 p. m.

Place—A small city in the middle West.

THE "down train" rolls into the station and a crowd of boys and girls pours out of all the coaches. The train has been picking up these young people at every station for two hours. It is a noisy good natured crowd. It is made up of two classes. Some of them evidently have made that trip before and as each new delegation comes aboard familiar faces are greeted with shouts of welcome. Some of them, however, are apparently making the trip for the first time. These are more quiet, scarcely speaking among themselves at all—all is new to them. Among this latter group is a boy about eighteen, shy and a bit timid. He wonders if the time will ever come when he will be a welcome member of that noisy group of friends.

Not a Face He Knows

As he alights at the station platform there is not a single face that he ever saw before. He does not know which way to go. He is told by other members of the group who are too busy to give anything more than the briefest answer to his inquiry, that he must first present himself at the registrar's office, but he does not know where that is. Then he is told that the dormitories are full and he must find a rooming place, and everybody he meets is too busy to help him. The room that he finally selects is not much like the room he slept in at home last night, but weary with tramping here and there, not knowing any of the "ins and outs", by six o'clock he is heart-sick and wishes he were back home.

But it need not have been so. There is a man in that town who would gladly have met him at the station, gone with him to the registrar's office, studied the room lists with him, advised him where the best houses were, and stayed with him until a satisfactory room was decided on. Then seeing him comfortably settled, he would have bade him good night, with the promise of a call in a few days. This man would have done all this for your boy, if only you or his pastor had sent the man a postal told him what train the lad was on and how to identify him. It would have made the opening experience of college life a very different thing for your lad if only—

In an attic room, without a friend within a hundred miles, there is a homesick boy, wishing that some one cared, wishing that he was back on the farm.

It need not have been so. There is a man in that town whose business it is to be a friend to homesick boys and girls. That is what he is there for. If he had known that that boy of yours had come to college—if you had only notified him in advance—he would have found that boy before this, would have made him feel that he had at least one friend in the world, would have invited him to a little "at home" at the Guild house that very first homesick night. He will find him out later, but he would have helped him that first homesick week—if he had only known.

Place—The same college town.

Time—Sunday a. m., September 28.

The church bells are ringing. The lad has never missed a Sunday in the old church at home, but he does not know where the Baptist church is in the town, he has not had time to look it up. He hesitates about going to a strange church to worship with strange people. He discovers that some of the other boys are not going to church, and for the first time in his life he stays away from service Sunday morning.

He Hears the Church Bells

It need not have been so. There is a man in that town who is there for the very purpose of helping new students to find a welcome in the church of the college town. If he had only known he would have had an older boy at your boy's room at 10:15, a friendly sort of a chap whom he could not help liking, who would have gone with him to church, introduced him to the minister, and a lot of other people, including many Baptist students, taken him into the Bible class, and before one o'clock made him feel that that church was the warmest place in town. If that man had only known. He will regret that boy out later, but he may not find him until he has fixed the habit of sleeping Sunday morning instead of going to church.

Place—The same college town.

Time—October 25, 9 p. m.

In this same garret room sits the same boy with his text book on geology before him. During the last month his mind has been opened to some of the great secrets of this marvelous world. He has been told that it was not made in six days of twenty-four hours each, but has been hundreds of thousands of years in the making. He has discovered that the sun is not the center of the universe, but the center of only a small part of it. What he is learning now does not seem to tally at all with what his Sunday school teacher taught from the Bible. He is all at sea. He cannot believe both. He does not know what to believe. He is conscious that his faith is slipping away. Is there anything he can believe? If only he could talk with his old pastor and ask him some questions, but it is two months before he can see him, and he may not have any faith left then. He is a heartsick boy tonight.

In his Garret Alone

It need not have been so. There is a man in that town who is there just to help boys adjust themselves to their new world, to show them that their faith in the great eternal God, Creator and Father, need not be upset a hair's breadth by the new discoveries, but that He will be a vastly greater God to them as their thought of his universe widens. This man has been trained to meet just such difficulties. He has helped scores of boys and girls to find themselves and to adjust themselves to their new world. If he had only known that your boy was among the 10,000 boys and girls in that great university, but you did not tell him, and it takes time to find the boy. It is like hunting for a needle in a haystack. He will find him sooner or later, but how much he could help that muddled boy tonight if he only knew he was there.

Just as soon as the term opens his search for the new Baptist boys and girls begins. Of the coming of many he has learned in advance by letter from pastors and parents. He was on hand to meet them when they arrived. Others he has to ferret out. He has his scouts, members of his cabinet, who spend a good part of the first days hunting out new students. He has access to the records in the recorder's office and from them he learns the names and locations of many. Before the first Sunday he has gotten a message to nearly every Baptist student in the university. But in a mass of 10,000 or even 5,000 many a student can remain hidden for many weeks, often so long that his relationships have been established before he is found.

"Who is the man you are talking about?" Don't you know? He is the University Pastor.

Eight years ago when the Board of Education was organized there were only two universities where this man had tried out his new methods of work, at Michigan and Wisconsin. Today the board of education is helping to support these men in thirty-five different colleges and universities. The number is growing from year to year and new men are being added as rapidly as funds will permit.

New Men and New Methods

The methods of work vary widely. There is no standard to which all must conform. The work is adapted to the conditions of each institution. In some localities where there is a strong Baptist pastor whose church is so situated that it can minister to the students, the board of education asks this man to assume a definite responsibility for the Baptist students in addition to the regular work of the parish, and it compensates him for his extra work. In other institutions where the number of Baptist students is not large but where the parish duties make it impossible for the pastor to give much time directly to students the board furnishes him with a student assistant who devotes his spare time to hunting out the Baptist students, bringing them in touch with the church, and looking after the interests of the student Bible class.

In institutions where there are sufficient numbers of Baptist students to engage the full time of a man, the board supports a man as regular university pastor. His work we have already outlined. He is all things to all students if by any chance he may win some to the church. And he wins a great many. He does everything in his student parish which the regular minister does in his, except to preach. This is the type of work which is most satisfactory and which the board is seeking to develop wherever it can.

In some smaller institutions where the number of students of any one of education which in many cases has not only the friendly interest but the financial co-operation of the state conventions in which the universities are located. The work is being expanded each year and a large part of the income of the Board is devoted to paying these salaries. In the budget of the $100,000,000 Fund is the sum of $100,000 to furnish needed equipment for these men.

Dr. Foster's Work

In addition to these local workers the board of education also maintains a man and a woman in the college field as general representatives. Dr. Foster and Miss Greenough visit all kinds of institutions, assist the local workers, conduct evangelistic services, hold conferences and in every way possible seek to stimulate and increase the religious life and devotion of the students. Dr. Foster has had a most remarkable experience this last year. He has visited many institutions, spoken at chapel and in the class room, held hundreds of private conferences. And from everywhere demands have come that he be sent back at the earliest possible date. Dr. Foster is doing more than any other man in the college field today to strengthen the faith of college students. It is not too much to say that our Baptist students are receiving more care and thought than other groups in our denomination.

The list of institutions in which our special work is being conducted will be of interest.

1. The university pastors: Boston (twenty-eight institutions), Cornell, the Universities of Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Chicago, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, California, Denison.
2. Joint representatives: the Universities of New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine (next fall), Massachusetts (next fall), Michigan Agricultural, Montana Agricultural, Idaho, Oregon, California Agricultural, Colorado Mines, Athens.
3. Student assistants: Columbia, Indiana, Purdue.
4. Local ministers: Smith, Ohio, Rio Grande, Minnesota, Washington.

denomination is not large the boards of education of three or four denominations are combining in the employment of one man to work among all the students and to tie them into their own churches.

It is impossible to set down the results of this work on paper. Much of it can not be tabulated. The most important part of it is that quiet personal friendly ministry of which no one but the minister himself and your boy really knows and neither will reveal it. But it is resulting in keeping thousands of Baptist students in vital touch with the church during their college days, in keeping the faith of many in periods of storm and stress, in warding off the fearful period of homesickness, in making friends among congenial students, in leading many into personal faith in Jesus Christ, in leading others to dedicate their lives to the ministry and missionary service, in keeping alive a spiritual atmosphere in the colleges.

The limits of this work are determined only by the funds of the board

Who Will Win These Millions?

White men and women can never win the world for Christ—It must be done by native Christians—One American must be multiplied by a thousand Chinamen, Japanese, Indians and Africans.

BY WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

IN 1826, the Foreign Mission Society referring to the readjustment following the Burmese war stated in its annual report:

"The missionaries now have free access to the people and employ all means of instruction within their reach. They may preach and establish schools in which the principles of Christianity shall be taught."

Even in those early days of missionary effort, nearly one hundred years ago Baptists saw the importance of having education accompany evangelism.

Today approximately 850 consecrated men and women are serving Northern Baptists as foreign missionaries. Compared with 722 in 1912 this would appear to be a creditable number. When compared with the vast untouched populations on the fields, who are estimated in millions because they cannot be counted, this missionary staff numerically seems almost negligible. In Assam alone Baptists are responsible for the evangelization of four million people. To meet this responsibility Assam has fifty missionaries. What can 850 missionaries do with a task which involves bringing the Gospel to such countless multitudes? The answer is obvious. As Prof. F. L. Anderson has said:

Something Americans Cannot Do

"We have discovered that American missionaries can never personally evangelize the heathen world. It is too vast a task and it must be done by native Christians if it is ever to be done at all."

Suppose we add seven thousand trained Chinese, Japanese, Indian, Burmese and African associates to this band of 850 missionaries. At once we have a total evangelizing force of nearly 8,000 men and women. The foreign missionary has multiplied himself practically tenfold. These 7,000 trained associates constitute an effective argument for the necessity of education as an accompaniment to evangelism and at the same time present an irrefutable demonstration of its practical results.

All mission boards now recognize the importance of education in missionary work. The foreigner may indeed devote all his time to evangelism, but without schools, the local church remains unintelligent and inefficient. Thousands of church members read the Scriptures in their own language, because missionaries reduced it to writing, translated the Bible and established schools so that new converts and their children might learn to read. We might well revise slightly Paul's famous argument. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed; and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not read; and how shall they read without a teacher; and how shall they teach except they be sent. Colleges and seminaries must be maintained if an adequate supply of trained preachers is to be provided for the increasing number of local churches. Without higher education, there is no possibility of developing men of personality and influence who as leaders in all walks of life shall lead the thought and mould the life of their people toward Christian ideals. Shall we be satisfied to leave this responsibility to government schools entirely divorced from Christian influence? Dr. Robert E. Speer, in his latest book "The Gospel and the New World" writes:

Religion Must Use Education

"Foreign missions have from the outset believed that religion must use education both because it needed it and the power which it produced; and because education without religion is a source of danger to the nation."

On their ten mission fields Northern Baptists have established 2,737 schools, of all grades including several colleges. Their total enrollment is 89,752 pupils. The 7,000 workers mentioned above are the product of these schools. In addition large numbers of others have been sent forth and are today filling important positions in commerce and industry, in government service and in other occupations. Two members of the new legislative council in India are the products of Baptist mission schools. In the great cities of China scores of Christian young men now engaged in business received their education in our academies. Graduates of Judson College are found in all sections of Burma, serving their people and commanding respect because of ability and Christian character.

An Ocean of Ignorance

Several types of educational institutions are maintained on the foreign field. The lowest form is the elementary or primary school found mostly in the jungles of Africa, in the villages of India and in the smaller towns of China. These are generally in charge of native teachers, themselves the product of similar schools and higher institutions. No extended description of the educational need of Central Africa is necessary. The dense ignorance in Belgian Congo is as dark as the color of its inhabitants. Conditions in India are only slightly better, notwithstanding the heroic efforts made by the British Government to solve the momentous problem of illiteracy. Of the 320,000,000 people living in India only 21,000,000 can read their own language. Probably two million can read English. Of the 700,000 villages of India more than half a million villages have no primary schools. It is impossible to find teachers and even if less than a living wage were paid them, the cost would be enormous. In our China missions because of China's ancient civilization and written language, missionaries face the problem of readjustment, occasioned by the collapse of the old government system and the delay in establishing the new system of universal education. In Japan education as such is little needed, because of adequate provision by the government. Japan is able to boast that 90 per cent of her children of school age are under instruction. Here Christian influence must be brought to bear upon the educational system. Missionary dormitories are therefore established in which the missionary by daily contacts with the students is able to inspire Christian ideals and bring many to a personal surrender to the Great Teacher.

Walked 200 Miles to School

Above the elementary school comes the high school and the academy. Baptists may well take pride in their academies and higher schools on the foreign field. Only a few can be mentioned out of the many rendering such significant service. The Morton Lane School for Girls at Moulmein and the Girls' School at Kemendine, both maintained by the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, are among the outstanding institutions of their kind in the world. At Ningpo, East China, the Baptist Academy, although sadly lacking in necessary equipment, has for years been sending forth its graduates into all walks of life. The entire Assam mission looks to the Jorhat Christian Schools for its trained pastors, evangelists and teachers. Young men of fifteen different races, speaking numerous dialects, have studied here. Some walked 200 miles to attend this institution whose aim is to train young men as efficient pastors and teachers in the village schools, as evangelists among the non-Christian villages and as Christian laymen working for the uplift of the Christian community. A stately concrete structure, largely through subscriptions to the New World Movement is now being completed for the Mabie Memorial School in Yokohama where, when its doors were opened as many boys were turned away as could be admitted. The student enrollment will probably reach five hundred in an-

China Union University and a similar relationship is maintained in the University of Nanking. Theological other year. It is proposed to add also a higher commercial college. While Baptists may congratulate themselves upon the splendid material equipment here, there is greater reason for encouragement over the able leadership of Principal Sakata, a Japanese Baptist. In Africa a higher school, known as the Congo Evangelical Training Institution, combines secular and theological educational with industrial training so necessary in undeveloped regions like Belgian Congo.

Young Men Throng Colleges

Above the academy comes the college or university and the theological seminary. Judson College in Burma now has an enrollment of nearly 150 students. More than 400 Chinese young men are studying at Shanghai Baptist College, which Northern Baptists maintain jointly with Southern Baptists. In West China we co-operate in the West seminaries are found in Japan, at Swatow in South China, at Shanghai in East China, at Ramapatnam in South India and two such institutions are maintained at Bassein in Burma.

Trained Men and Women Ready

What are some of the results of this work of education? Only a few typical examples, chosen at random, may be indicated. Shanghai reports twenty-eight students studying for the ministry. At the last graduating exercises at Ramapatnam, a class of thirteen men and five women equipped for the work of the gospel ministry among the Telugu people was sent forth into the harvest. They are now scattered among the mission fields and are at work as pastors and evangelists. Graduates of our mission institutions include the president of the Burma Baptist Convention, the pastor of the Boone Road Baptist Church in Shanghai, the president of the Tokyo Baptist Theological Seminary, the head masters of scores of mission and government schools, hundreds of Christian business men, physicians, journalists, etc., throughout the Orient. Year after year these mission schools have sent forth their graduates, each in his own way making his Christian contribution to the life and thought of his people. These and the graduates of institutions of other boards have furnished the stimulus that has accounted in large measure for some of those great national movements witnessed in recent years. As Dr. Robert E. Speer has said:

"A great part of the sudden transformation of China and of the slow

MISSION SCHOOL AT PYINMANA, BURMA

Our Baptist Schools

Mr. Brown has a problem. He wants to know where to send his daughter and two sons to school. He finds out. He raises a vital question and gets a satisfactory answer.

A GENTLEMAN recently came into the Baptist headquarters in New York City and asked for the secretary of the board of education. He introduced himself as Mr. Henry Brown of Eureka. He was apparently a prosperous business man from one of the central states. The conversation which ensued between Mr. Brown and the secretary will be of interest to many of our readers and we are reproducing it here.

Mr. Brown—Mr. Secretary, I have a girl and two boys who will soon be ready to go away to school. I am deeply concerned that they should go to the right place. I have come to ask if you can give me some information about our Baptist schools.

The Secretary—Certainly, Mr. Brown, I shall be glad to give any information you desire. Just what would you like to know?

Mr. Brown—I have a boy who has two years more of high school work before he will be ready for college. Have the Baptists any good academies?

The Secretary (turning to a large wall map which is reproduced on page 467)—Yes indeed, we have several academies. If you will look at this map for a moment I shall be glad to point them out to you. They are designated by black triangles. You will note that most of them are located in the eastern section of the country. In Maine there are five academies, Coburn at Waterville, Hebron at Hebron, Higgins at Charleston, Ricker at Houlton and Maine Central Institute at Pittsfield.

Mr. Brown—Why does Maine have so many academies? There seem to be more there than in any other state.

The Secretary—Yes, the Baptists of Maine planned a complete educational system with Colby College at the center and four preparatory schools in different sections of the state. It is the most comprehensive system we have. Main Central Institute belonged to the Free Baptists. Then you will note that we have Colby Academy in New Hampshire, Vermont Academy in Vermont, Worcester in Massachusetts, and Suffield in Connecticut.

Mr. Brown—What about Worcester? Is that a Baptist school?

The Secretary—Worcester was founded by the Baptists, all its buildings were erected by Baptists. Practically all its funds came from Baptists. The trustees are not all Baptists, but all that this fine school has attained has come from Baptist influence. Going on you will find Cook Academy at Montour Falls, New York, Keystone at Factoryville, Penn., Alderson in West Virginia and Peddie in New Jersey.

Mr. Brown—I have heard about Peddie. What kind of a school is that?

The Secretary—Peddie is one of the finest boys' schools in the country. It ranks up with the very best. It has a fine equipment and a splendid influence on boys. Baptists ought to be proud of Peddie. Denison University maintains Doane Academy at Granville, Ohio. Then we have Maryland Academy at Beaver Dam, Wisconsin and Pillsbury at Owatonna, Minnesota. That completes the list. Those last two are not surpassed by any schools in the West.

Mr. Brown—Are these schools all coeducational? Do they admit both boys and girls?

The Secretary—They are all coeducational but three: Worcester, Peddie and Pillsbury; these are boys schools.

Mr. Brown—What do you think, Mr. Secretary, about sending boys and girls away to school, at 15 or 16 years of age?

The Secretary—Well, that is a difficult question. Each case ought to be settled on its merits. If you have a good high school, where the influences are good, it is without question, much better for a young boy or girl to be at home under the care of his parents. But there are many towns where there are no good high schools, which can properly fit a boy for college or for life, and in some of the big cities your boy would be lost in the great mass of students. And then, Mr. Brown, you know, there are many homes where a boy or girl gets little that is helpful. These academies are filling a most important and useful place in our educational life. The right kind of an academy has an important mission.

Mr. Brown—Why are the academies all in the east and none in the west?

The Secretary—In the east, with one exception, the academies were established separately from the colleges. In the west they were made a part of the colleges. Then as the high schools developed and it was found that under ordinary conditions it is not wise to have college and academy students together, the colleges in the middle and western states closed out the academies.

Mr. Brown—Well, now, Mr. Secretary, what about the finishing schools for girls? I have one daughter, as I told you.

The Secretary—We do not have finishing schools. They are largely for society girls who want to get a smattering of education while they are waiting for their debut. We are not interested in that type of education at all. But we do have schools for girls of which we are very proud. We call them junior colleges.

Mr. Brown—Why junior colleges? That is a new term to me.

The Secretary—A junior college is an institution which gives the first two years of college work but not the last two years of highly specialized work. We believe that the trend today is toward the junior college and that there will be many more in the next twenty-five years. Of this type we have the Frances Shimer School in Illinois, Hardin and Stephens Colleges in Missouri and Colorado Women's College. These are for girls only. Then for boys and girls both, we have Broadus in West Virginia, Cedar Valley in Iowa, Rio Grande in Ohio. I should add that most of the junior colleges also give some academy work. You will be interested in studying these schools.

Mr. Brown—Now, Mr. Secretary, what about the colleges? John will be ready for college next fall. Where shall I send him?

The Secretary—That is a hard question. So many elements enter into it. I am trying to decide where to send my own boy. I do not find it easy. Not because there are not plenty of good colleges, but because there are so many things to be taken into consideration in answering such a question.

If you will follow the map I will point out the colleges to you. I will begin in New England. In

Turn Young Baptist Faces to Our Baptist Schools

College days are the apple-blossom time of life. Catch the perfume that floats about these stories. Here light grows brighter, love truer, loyalty firmer, life richer—Young men and women find themselves, God and a mission.

BAPTIST schools, and they alone, are prepared and disposed to give that deep, broad and practical culture required if the Baptist denomination is to carry out the great program which God has set before it in the New World Movement. The material in this survey has been gathered more or less casually, but it is here assembled with a view to giving a mere hint of the reasons which present an appeal to churches, pastors and people to turn the faces of our Baptist young people by tens of thousands towards our own Baptist institutions of culture and training. No other piece of Baptist strategy can surpass this in importance. None other can so enrich the lives of our young people.

I. Our Baptist Schools in Their Character and Method

A Seminary Concept of a Christian School

Pres. Clarence A. Barbour of Rochester Theological Seminary gives the following table of characteristics of a christian school:

1. A Christian atmosphere.
2. A Christian point of view in teaching all subjects, especially literature, history, science and philosophy.
3. An emphatic call to Christian faith.
4. A call to enlistment in Christian service.
5. Training for Christian service.

Colby's Typical Bible Course

Many of our colleges and universities have created or are now creating such courses as this:

Colby College offers a new course in the English Bible with credit toward a degree. The work is arranged so as to cover the entire Bible under seven definite topics. The topics and instructors are as follows: general survey of the Bible, Dr. Hannay; Bible history, to the exile, Pres. Roberts; Bible history, from the exile to the end of the New Testament, Prof. Morrow; the Prophets, Prof. Brown; Hebrew poetry and wisdom books, Prof. White; the life of Christ, Dr. Libby; the life of Paul, Prof. Trefethen.

Ministry and Missionary Life Work Group at Brown University

A partial list of Brown University students preparing for the ministry, the missionary field or other forms of Christian life work, includes from the class of '21, three; class of '22, seven; class of '23, eight; class of '24, five; in special courses, two; graduate students, nine.

Of these students twenty are preparing for the Baptist ministry; the rest for other fields and forms of work. More than a dozen of them are already acting pastors of churches in this region. The churches of Rhode Island would be in a difficult position if it were not for the leadership of these students. Moreover, they constantly send out deputations on Sunday night to hold services in the different churches. On a recent Sunday evening seven such deputations took charge of the service in seven churches of this region. All the students who go take part in the service, and the minister is glad to be relieved of preparation for the service, while the congregations are greatly helped by the vitality and enthusiasm of the young men. Forty churches were served in this way last winter.

The Christian Association was never so strong and vital as at the present time. The Secretary Mrs. George J. Heidt, is an ordained minister. It has just finished a week of religious meetings under the leadership of Dr. Albert Parker Fitch and is now preparing for a similar series of meetings next year.

II. Some First-Year College Students Give Their Impression

A Student for the Ministry at McMinnville

"It is the best town in which I have ever lived. Nearly everyone is a Christian and there are none but the best of influences. Every way a fellow turns an opportunity to make good stares one in the face. Every member of the faculty shows by his actions that he is trying to help you in life.

"Papa, — tries to persuade me not to be a minister. He says there is no money in it and that you have had so many troubles, trials, etc. But I am not going to be a minister just for the silver and the gold; it is for a great deal broader and more divine purpose, that I may live to be worthy of serving our Master. I know my mind and feel that it is my duty to help my fellowmen in this way, and no one can talk me out of being a minister by offering such selfish arguments as those of salary, hardships, etc. I want to be a good, strong minister, Father, so that I may serve our Master. Pray for me and help me that I may make a strong and stalwart servant of Christ."

Missionary Service Wins a Boy at Kalamazoo

"When I entered College a year ago last fall I considered myself a good Christian. But oh, how narrow and how visionless I was! I believed that the world was constantly growing worse, that it was only a matter of a few years until it would all end in a grand catastrophe, and that the only thing to be done was to save, perhaps, a small portion from the wreck.

"I thank God that I was directed to Kalamazoo. I have heard the ideals of Christian service set forth by various members of our faculty. I have obtained from these men through the classroom and through private interviews, which they have so kindly given, the idea of a positive gospel, one which can save the whole world and which will save the whole world if we become its messengers. Under the influence of these godly men and other leaders of Christian work who have visited the college, I could not help but grow in faith and in a desire to help in some way. And so just recently I have reached the decision to spend my life for Jesus where it will count for the most, the foreign mission field."

From a McMinnville Girl's Letter to Her Father

"The last day of my first year in college will soon be here. I wish to express my appreciation to you for giving me the opportunity of attending this college by telling you what the past months have meant to me along spiritual lines.

"You remember, father, that although a church worker, I was rather indifferent when I left home to come to college. You know I did not come to college with any definite aim except to prepare myself for teaching. I had not been here long before I realized that the spirit at McMinnville College had something in it I could not explain. It made me think. The lives of the men and women of the faculty passed before my mind every day as I studied their faces during the quiet chapel hour. I wondered why talented people as they are could give their whole time and energy to careless college students without receiving as much as a thankful reply at times. After listening to their warnings and advice for some little time, it dawned on me that they were all missionaries preparing young people for life service, and that they were giving all to their Master.

"From time to time missionaries from the foreign fields stood before us in the chapel services, living witnesses of God's power, and my heart burned within me. I began to realize that there were greater things for young people to accomplish. I forgot my selfish ambitions and began to study my Bible as never before. I also learned to pray for others. Many messages from the church services, especially from our Conquest Bible Class, gripped me and filled my mind with higher thoughts all through the following week.

"My motto now is service, and deep down in my heart I can say, 'Here am I, Lord, send me.'"

III. Do not overlook the Baptist Academies

A Girl at Frances Shimer Narrates Her Experience

From two years spent at Frances Shimer I have been convinced that influences tending toward an intensification of Christian thought and living are manifold. Church attendance I considered when I first came here a sort of necessary evil, compulsory because of a vow taken when I was received into church membership. This might have come from the fact that I was a member of a small town church where there were very few young people, or from the deplorable fact that I had devoted little time to a study of the Bible and religious work.

Little by little during these two years my ideas have greatly changed. An elective course in New Testament and weekly study in Bible classes have given me a better knowledge and understanding of the Scriptures. The daily chapel services are inspirational and because we are so isolated in our location from the hurry-scurry of a work-a-day world, we receive, through contact with God's great outdoors, a deeper appreciation and devotion for the creator of all that is beautiful and good.

Besides this increase in personal devotion there has come to me through work in the Young Women's Christian Association a wider knowledge of the many ways in which the church and other religious organizations minister to the needs of people both in our own land and abroad and a desire to aid in and to support such work has resulted.

Bethel Just Surrounds One With Helpful Influences

Out of a beautiful essay on "The Influence of Bethel Academy," by Miss Elsie M. Larsen, comes this inspiring story of self-discovery.

"The moment I entered Bethel Academy I was surrounded by an atmosphere which seemed to lift me higher, to raise me above the common level of life and which found a responsive chord in my highest and noblest aspirations. As I beheld the throng of students alive with the enthusiasm of youth, yet earnest with the desire to gain all that would help them in their journey through life, and filled with the joy that they were sharing with others the blessings showered upon them by an ever gracious God, I felt that I had found my place. Daily association and fellowship with those with whom my heart could join in every tune and with those who have a higher hope and purpose than merely ambition to succeed in this world, who feel that true joy and happiness can be found only in following the steps of the Master in living a life of service for others, has given me a broader vision of life, of the world crying out in its need, and my heart, too, has responded in the desire to give my life in service for others as God directs me."

IV. They Sing the Same Song at the Seminaries and Training Schools

Miss Bess Hall, in the Kansas City Baptist Training School says: "It is not easy to put into words, that which I so deeply feel, the deepening, strengthening influence the Kansas City Training School has been in the training of my devotional life. The Christian atmosphere is such that the presence of our Savior is felt to be ever near. The Bible truths and the needs of the world are put before us in such a way as to make us feel it our duty to carry the gospel to our fellowmen."

What the Theological Seminary contributes to personal enrichment is told by W. Harley Smith of the Kansas City Baptist Theological Seminary: "As students, we find a spiritual atmosphere glowing with a warmth born of true devotion. In class-room or chapel, among students or faculty, everywhere, one is conscious of the underlying spirit of reverence for and devotion to the Bible as the inspired word of God. While we value highly the instruction we are receiving, we realize that the friendly personal touch of our strong, Christian professors is of even more importance. From the president, Dr. Crannell, to the newest member of the faculty, each is leaving his individual impress in our lives."

Walfred C. Holmberg, of Bethel Theological Seminary (Swedish Baptist), looks to the future for ultimate valuations. "What this school means to me lies largely for the future to determine," he says. "Yet its subjective influence is even now being manifested. The essential elements of a successful ministry are brought forth. My own qualifications for the work of the ministry are revealed. A fuller and deeper knowledge of the Scriptures and other information necessary to a well-rounded and useful service in the Kingdom of God are imparted. The life and teaching of the true men of God who make up the faculty have brought me closer to Christ and confirmed my faith in God and His Word.

"All the high ideals and noble purposes of a true servant of Jesus Christ are upheld and enthusiastically propounded. The "Go" of the Master is emphatically held forth and encouragement given to preach and live the full gospel of Jesus Christ."

V. What College Training has Done for Those Now in Active Life

Noted Missionary at Mandalay Does Many Things and has a Good Distant Vision

Like many other missionaries it has fallen to my lot to pursue at various times any or many of the following occupations: school superintendent, government correspondent, bookkeeper, member of various committees, advisor, evangelistic worker, matron, housekeeper, doctor, nurse, architect, contractor, carpenter, coolie, etc., and to be a religious leader in all these lines. A college education has meant the ability to be the above at least with possibilities and with a good distant vision.

With a knowledge and appreciation of the best the past has given and the present affords, with confidence I do my part in laying substantial foundations for the generations to come, knowing that when the day comes and the ages pass in review they will be my friends. To live for such an end—to live for the master—has required all the equipment a college course could afford both mental and moral for the spiritual life.—Julia E. Parrott.

Head of Woman's Church Federation of Chicago Studied Theology and Got Her Feet Upon a Rock

In common with hundreds of others I came to a period in my life where it seemed to me that religion and science were absolutely contradictory. I was unable to translate my religious teachings into terms of modern life.

In despair I quietly dropped my religious activities in Sunday school and church and sought satisfaction in various ethical theories. Needless to say these theories did not feed my soul. My religious longings were unsatisfied. No one who has not had the same experience can understand the mental anguish which one suffers who is lost in doubt, to whom the religious concepts of early youth are no longer valid, and yet who feels nothing is worth while and nothing will satisfy outside of a thorough-going conviction of the certainty of God and soul and immortality.

I decided to venture into the field of theology in the University of Chicago and there my feet were placed upon a solid rock. It is needless to endeavor to describe the richness of the blessing of a recovered faith. The Bible indeed became "the richest treasure of religious instruction and inspiration as yet within the reach of man." I attained a clearer understanding of God and appreciated anew the wonderful story of love and redemption which Jesus came into the world to leave as an eternal heritage.—Mrs. Lena B. Mathes.

Two Alumnae of Keuka Bless Alma Mater

I entered Keuka College with a very vague idea regarding God's purpose for my life. I left with a feeling of a great world need for college women as Christian leaders, and with a strong desire to meet that need. This was due to the personal interest which the faculty took in helping each student determine her life work, and to the importance attached to the students' attending the religious conventions where needed inspiration and information would be supplied in order to help them decide this very important question.—Ruth F. Sergeant, K. C. '15.

The Christian memories of my undergraduate days at Keuka are like the memories that abide from a home in which the best is held to be always well worth the sacrifice of mere comfort. As in many another Christian college, men and women were of the faculty who loved service even to the point of hardship. And earnest students knew what it cost—this opportunity for a higher education to prepare for a higher service. They were making their sacrifice of comfort too. Many of us who belong to the earlier days have never, I am sure been able to get away from Dr. Ball's vivid conception of the onrushing river of the kingdom of God, in whose onward sweep, our college and we ourselves have our important place.—Frankie Griffin Merson, K. C., 1904.

The Impact of Our Colleges on the Mission Fields

The following Baptist institutions are represented in the West China Baptist Mission by graduates or students who have spent some years studying them: Newton Theological Seminary, 3; Rochester Theological Seminary, 6; Brown University, 1; Chicago University, 1; Chicago Training School, 3; Denison University, 6; Colgate University, 2; Bethel Academy, 1; Cook Academy, 1; Shurtleff College, 3; Colby College, 1.

These men and women are all animated by a deep love for their Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. They have heard his command and have pledged themselves to carry his gospel to this people who sit in great darkness. Their ideal and ambition is "West China for Christ." They are wide awake Christians and are ready to grasp and use any and every opportunity to bring in the Kingdom of God in this province.

We have other men and women from institutions outside the purview of the Northern Baptist Convention whose Christian character and ideals are equal to those listed above.

The query of our Mission is: Have these institutions any more men and women of like mind and purpose with these here mentioned? If so, will they put before them this work of evangelizing and Christianizing a province in China whose population equals that of France?—Joseph Taylor.

Prominent Business Man of Lewiston, Me., Says College Training Taught Him How to Read

In college I learned to read, understand, and appreciate good books. This is one of the great things that I carried away from college with me and retained. I made valuable friendships, had my outlook broadened, and my ambition awakened. I know I grew beyond what would have been possible had I missed the college course and yet to me the outstanding thing is my first statement. It is that which I value most. I realize that others may have had different experiences and will not at all agree with me, with these I have no quarrel. My work has been almost wholly of a business nature since leaving college twenty-two years ago and I have immensely enjoyed the problems that business has presented for solution, yet my life has been wonderfully enriched by the reading and the thinking that this reading provoked on subjects wholly remote from my everyday work.—L. B. Costello.

VI. Finally, Hear What Some of the Seniors of '21 Think of College Life

Stronger Faith in God and Men

Kalamazoo College with its faculty of Christian men and women has meant more to me than words can express. The atmosphere throughout all my class-rooms has always been decidedly Christian. All the members of the faculty have taken an interest in my own personal mental and spiritual life. They have always given me their time for private conferences, and have always offered helpful suggestions. The daily chapel exercises could be nothing except inspiring and uplifting. I have received such instruction in the Bible, both in chapel exercises and in biblical literature classes, as has strengthened my faith in fellow men and in my God. But further than this I can now sit down and think and interpret the Bible intelligently, for my knowledge of the Bible has been increased a hundredfold.—Emil M. Howe, Kalamazoo, '21.

"Think for Yourself," the Slogan

My faith has been greatly strengthened and my knowledge of the Bible and religious matters generally greatly increased. At times, ideas that were new to my provincial way of thinking have been advanced. At first thought, they were rather staggering. But they were always presented with the admonition to think them through, and not to accept them unless we could do so honestly. "Think for yourself" is the slogan of every class room. After carefully thinking through the new ideas, I have found them to be true. As a result, my Christian life and experience have been wonderfully enriched. I feel that I have received a large portion of that "abundant life" which Jesus came to provide. This is especially the result of my work in biblical literature.—Myra C. Carter, Franklin, '21.

Maine, Bates and Colby; in Rhode Island, Brown; in New York, Colgate (boys only), Rochester, Keuka (girls only); in Pennsylvania, Bucknell and Temple; in Ohio, Denison; in Michigan, Hillsdale and Kalamazoo; in Indiana, Franklin; in Illinois, Chicago and Shurtleff; in Minnesota, Carlton; in Iowa, Des Moines; in Missouri, William Jewell; in South Dakota, Sioux Falls; in Nebraska, Grand Island; in Kansas, Ottawa; in Oregon, McMinnville; in California, Redlands; twenty-two in all.

Mr. Brown—That is a big gap between the Missouri and the Pacific.

The Secretary—True, but it is new country and not many Baptists there yet. Some day that country will be dotted with schools.

Mr. Brown—I should be interested to know something of the assets of our institutions and their number of students.

The Secretary—We have 65 schools, all told, with 31,391 students, 1618 teachers, 427 buildings, equipment valued at over $33,000,000 and endowment over $57,000,000. It cost last year to run these schools, $7,424,970. You will be interested to know that the assets of our Baptist institutions are greater than the assets of the schools of any other denomination, with one possible exception. This is due in large measure of course to the large holdings of the University of Chicago.

Mr. Brown—Mr. Secretary, I have heard a great deal of criticism lately of our Baptist colleges. I have been told that they are not safe places for our boys and girls, that the influences tend to tear down their faith. Now that is a pretty serious matter for a parent. I do not want to make a mistake. What have you to say?

The Secretary—It is an important matter, Mr. Brown, I share your concern. If the charges are true it is serious. But, Mr. Brown,

Does Not Talk of Religion, but Has It

"Is the college man or woman really religious?" The answer must be decidedly in the affirmative. The college boy does not care to talk much of his religion but this does not prove that he does not possess the feeling as the foundation of religion. In fact, at present there is a deep current of seriousness and religious feeling running through college life in general at Franklin.—Ross Freeman.

a seminary and an academy at St. Paul, the Norwegians a seminary in Chicago, and the Danes have one also at Des Moines. Then you know that we have the training schools for young women at Philadelphia and Chicago. I shall be glad to talk with you about these schools at length. Please come in again the next time you are in New York. Good morning, Mr. Brown.

Who Will Win These Millions?

and unnoticed but equally real transformation of India has been due to the use of schools, by the Christian church partly as a training ground for leaders and partly as a fountain of ideas."

Several years ago the board of managers encouraged the missions in the Orient to send to America for special study a few college graduates who had given evidence of Christian character and of a desire to give themselves to the spiritual, moral and intellectual uplift of their people. The result has been most encouraging. Men from China and Japan have completed courses in American universities and Baptist theological seminaries, and have already returned to the Orient engaged in Christian work. They have given a good account of themselves, and most of them have associated themselves directly with Baptist mission work. Twelve Oriental students are now studying in America, with the assistance of the Foreign Mission Society, and all of them may be expected to render useful service upon their return to the Orient. In several cases the education of these men has been made possible by gifts from interested friends.

Thus education on Baptist mission fields accompanies and supplements evangelism. It multiplies the missionary staff. It conserves the progress of the Christian church. It provides trained Christian leaders for every occupation in the life of the Orient. It is never an end in itself but is always a means to an end for it brings nearer the achievement of the great task which the foreigner alone finds impossible to accomplish. Jesus was called the Great Teacher. The missionary, in establishing a school, dominated from beginning to end in all details of its administration and curriculum by Christian truth, is following his example.

I have lived with these colleges for ten years. It is the principal business of my life to know them. I do know them and I say to you without hesitancy, that these charges of which you have heard are almost entirely false. There is little truth in them. Of course some schools are better than others. Each has its individuality, but they are Christian through and through. The teachers are for the most part devout Christians and they are doing their best to influence the lives of their students. As one boy recently said to his father, "Father this is the easiest place I ever found to be a Christian; the fellow has to explain why he isn't a Christian here."

Mr. Brown, do not allow yourself to be frightened by these rumors. I am going to trust my boy to one of these colleges. I think you will find them the safest places in America for your boy during these critical years.

Mr. Brown (arising)—Thank you, Mr. Secretary for this information. It has helped me. Some day I want to come back and ask you about our graduate schools, I cannot stop now, I hope my sons and daughter are all going to the mission field and I shall want to know where to send them for their graduate work.

The Secretary—I shall be glad to talk with you again, Mr. Brown. Of course you know that we do not have many graduate schools. The University of Chicago is our only real university. That has graduate schools in law, medicine, dentistry, theology, etc. Our other institutions have no graduate work. We have our theological seminaries, eight of them. Look at the map, just a moment and I will point these out to you: Newton in Massachusetts, Colgate and Rochester in New York, Crozer in Pennsylvania, Chicago and Northern in Illinois, Kansas City in Kansas, Berkeley in California. The Swedish Baptists have

Royal Christian Marriage

The United Presbyterian says: "The announcement has been made by the king of Siam of his betrothal to the Princess Valebeha Devi, daughter of Prince Naradhip. She is a graduate of the Presbyterian school at Bangkok and a firm believer in the Christian faith. Following the betrothal, the father of the bride gave a reception to the teachers and pupils of the school in which his daughter had been educated. The king of Siam is well educated and sympathetic with the Christian work going on in his kingdom.

Huguenots' Vimy Memorial

As a memorial to the Canadians who fell in the Great War it is proposed to rebuild the church nearest to Vimy Ridge. It is to be known as the Canadian Vimy Memorial Church, and is to be used by the Reformed (Huguenot) Church of France for its social and religious activities, and also for special services in English for those visiting the battlefields.

Professor and Mrs. Smith to Return to Japan

A special call has just come from the National Sunday School Association of Japan to Prof. H. Augustine Smith, director of the Department of Fine Arts in Religion, Boston University, to come to Japan for a nation-wide tour in the fall of 1922, in the interests of Christian teaching through music, pageantry and visualization. The Japanese committee has already mapped out a three months' tour, covering every city of the empire of over 100,000 population. Fifty-four pageants and choral programs will be given in eighteen cities, including Tokyo, Yokohama, Osaka, Kobe, Kyoto, Nagoya, Nagasaki, Hakodate, Hiroshima, Okayama, and Sendai.—The Congregationalist.

Britain's National Drink Bill

The annual report on the drink trade, issued by Mr. G. B. Wilson, the secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, of Great Britain shows an appalling increase in the consumption of alcoholic liquors and in convictions for drunkenness. Mr. Wilson estimates that the amount spent in drink last year was £469,700,000, as compared with £386,000,000 in 1919. Several causes have contributed to this increase, chief among them being the advance in wages, the shortening of the hours of labour, and the relaxation of the restrictions on the sale of drink. The expenditure per head of the population was about £10, and for each adult of 21 years and upwards about £16.16s. Of course, the rise in prices has contributed largely to the increase in the total expenditure, but there was a considerable increase in the actual consumption of alcohol as compared with 1919, though it is still very much less than in 1913. As was to be expected, the extension of the hours for the sale of drink has led to a marked increase in the convictions for drunkenness both among men and women.—Times and Freeman.

Lacked Hats, Lost Wedding

The vast majority of people doubtless assume that Paul's injunction that the women should not appear in church with their heads uncovered is a dead letter. But the following item taken from the Christian World, London, indicates that there are clergymen living in that dead world:

"A clergyman may have a right to object to costumes at weddings and other functions that offend against modesty or good taste, but the refusal, at a Scarborough church, to allow two little girl bridesmaids, sisters of the bride, to enter the church at a wedding because they were hatless was a high-handed and irritating exercise of clerical power. The children, who had large bows of ribbon in their hair, were kept in the porch by an official till the ceremony was over. Such action is more than likely to increase absenteeism from church."

Plan Memorial to Miss Delano

A movement is projected to commemorate the memory of Jane A. Delano, who died in France on April 15, 1919, while general director of the Department of Nursing of the American Red Cross, by the erection of a monument in Washington. Miss Delano recruited 30,000 nurses during the war.

The Reflected Mother

(A Japanese Story Retold)

HONORABLE ONE, if you will lend me your distinguished attention, I will fill your worshipful ears with the tale of a certain quaint family who dwelt in a thatch-roofed cottage next door to an age-old pagoda. Moreover this was many, many years ago. And you must know that whenever the winds of heaven blew, the bells on the eaves of the pagoda tinkled softly: whereat the family beamed happily, both the mother and the father,—and the tiny babe in arms, did she not coo a soft Japanese coo?

Now there came a day when the mother sat in her hyacinth garden beside the diminutive lake, and behold, her husband came striding with unseemly haste from stepping stone to stepping stone. With vast importance he imparted his great news: "The serene and glorious Head of my business house has chosen poor unworthy me to leave this day on an errand of great secrecy in the Big City. So I have hurried home to bid farewell to you and our small daughter."

Never had he left her before, and with tearful eyes she watched him striding away under the great bamboo trees, until his figure grew smaller and smaller in the distance.

"But he will return to us soon," she whispered over her shoulder to the baby tied on her back, and the baby solemnly wobbled its dear little head.

My Altar

BY JOHN H. STYLES, JR.

I HAVE worshipped in churches and chapels;
I've prayed in the busy street;
I have sought my God and have found him
Where the waves of his oceans beat;
I have knelt in the silent forest
In the shade of some ancient tree;
But the dearest of all my altars
Was raised at my mother's knee.

The things in my life that are worthy
Were born in my mother's breast;
And breathed into mine by the magic
Of the love her life expressed.
The years that have brought me to manhood

Have taken her far from me;
But memory keeps me from straying
Too far from my mother's knee.

God, make me the man of her vision,
And purge me of selfishness!
God, keep me true to her standards
And help me to live to bless!
God, hallow the holy impress
Of the days that used to be,
And keep me a pilgrim forever
To the shrine at my mother's knee!

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

And the glory of his returning I may not dwell on here, for he had tales to tell the like of which that mother never dreamed in wildest fancy: ten thousand jinrikishas in the city street, yet no collisions! Monstrous temples towering up to heaven, vast residences manned by countless servants, great stores with priceless treasure.

"See, one modest little present I have bought for you," he boasted, and from his sleeve pulled forth a package wrapped in silken wrappings. She unknotted it quickly, but could not imagine what the curious gift might be: a thing all silver patterns on one side, with carven silver handle, and on the other side bright, smooth, and clear.

"Look in it!" he ordered, smilingly.

So she looked.

"Ah, me!" she sighed, "I see a beautiful lady, with lovely smiling face, and velvet eyes; and curiously enough, O Lord and Master, she wears a blue kimono, the same shade as mine. Who is this creature, anyhow?"

How he laughed! And how he relished telling of the city where every woman had this thing, a mirror, so she might see her own fair self as others saw her.

"Ah me!" clucked the country wife, and gazed anew at the winsome lady who was herself. And after that, oh! after that, the precious mirror dwelt ever in the sleeve of her kimono, and she wasted glorious hours admiring her slant eyes, her sleek black pompadour, her flashing teeth—but when she grew more used to her own loveliness she whispered one day: "Alas! I am becoming vain, and the gods will envy me my beauty if I gaze on it so often."

So she hid the mirror safely, and for years almost forgot, she owned it. Meanwhile the cooing infant became a dancing human butterfly which fluttered over all that tiny garden; then, no longer skipping, became a maiden grown, the very image of her mother, although she never knew it. And they all were very happy by the pagoda with tinkling bells.

But the moon is not always round, and flowers are not always in blossom; and sorrow came to this family, for the mother fell so ill that the doctor "threw away the spoon"; and they knew it was a matter of a few brief hours before the breath of life should flicker out.

"Cherished one," whispered the frail voice into her daughter's ear, "when my spirit has departed to be with its ancestors I fear you may be lonely, so here is a present for you,—you have but to look in it and you will see my face, to keep you company."

And she died.

But her daughter was curiously comforted by the present into which she daily looked, for always, always, she could see her mother's face. Only now the frail, wan cheeks were rose-flushed, and the tired dim eyes were velvet-bright. And when the lonely daughter wept, the tears ran also down her mother's face. And when the daughter smiled, behold the mother's face smiled back. There never was a comfort in deep sorrow like that mother in the mirror!

Then one day the father heard his daughter talking as she had been talking for long months to someone he could never see, so he walked into the room and asked: "Who is this person you converse with, precious child?"

"With mother!" she replied, and held the mirror toward him eagerly: "See, there she is! I see her every day, and talk to her. And although I never hear her answer me, I know her spirit tries, for I can see her lips moving and her eyes smiling into mine."

Whereupon the father, who feared sad

Mother's Apron Strings

By "PEGGY"

WE'VE had the most beautiful little secret in our family ever since little Timothy was old enough to talk and walk. For he has always been a regular shadow, tagging around at mother's heels all day long—upstairs, downstairs, attic, cellar, garden: it's all the same to him. We think it is so dear and comical of him that we smile at each other, knowingly, Bill and I; so you can imagine our astonishment when we went to the store with mother once.

The grocer gave mother her packages, then he said: "It beats all, Mrs. Hathaway, how these three kids of yours are tied to your apron strings of their own accord."

All of us, mind you!

"Why we're no such thing!" I exclaimed, rather provoked, for mother never wore an apron on the street in all her life. But of course it isn't polite to contradict grocerymen, especially as he and mother smiled knowingly at each other, exactly as Bill and I always do about Timothy's devotion. So when we were out on the sidewalk Bill said: "What's all this about apron strings, anyhow?"

"You haven't any!" I cried.

"Oh yes, I have," she smiled, "fairy ones!"

"Oh!" said I, "is it going to turn into a story for bedtime?"

"It is," she answered.

And for once in our lives the clock simply crawled from seven to eight o'clock. But by and by we heard this story, which we've loved and loved and loved ever since:—

For it seems that once upon a time there was a Queen so rich and beautiful that everyone turned to look at her hundred silken gowns as they cried, "Oh!" and "Ah!" Every few hours she had to change of course: first a breakfast gown, then a garden gown, next a luncheon gown, then a gown to drive in, another for dinner, another for the court ball each evening—you can see for yourself what fun it would have been to watch her. And you might suppose she would have been the happiest person in the world instead of which she was—as blue as indigo!

Because, you see, she had three handsome sons and three pretty daughters, but not a single prince or a single princess ever did what their nurses or governesses wanted them to do; it was frowns and scowls and kicks and loud words all day even, until the King and Queen were nearly frantic; for the children were a perfect nuisance to have around. When news of this behaviour leaked out into the kingdom the poor subjects wagged their heads most solemnly and sighed: "Such ill-bred children ought to die! We shudder to think of the day when such disagreeable monsters will be old enough to rule us."

Then others said: "They won't die, because they're fed too carefully and watched too thoroughly by all those guards and nurses in the palace. So if we don't want them to grow up to be our rulers, let's kill them off now, one by one."

And they exactly plotted to do this very thing!

When news of this wicked plan reached the Queen, what did her beauty or her golden crown or her hundred silken robes matter to her then?

"Ah me!" she wept, and the tears splashed down on her purple satin gown and made little marks all over it.

But when she had cried exactly half a dozen great salt tears, behold there stood at her elbow a weazened little fairy, the kind who has grown old by continually worrying over helping other people's trouble. And this kind little creature said gently: "Tut! tut! your majesty, this is no way for a queen to spoil her royal purple gown."

The Queen blinked through her tears in surprise: "Oh, if you knew why I cry—" she began, but the fairy interrupted: "I do know; and tears won't help at all. Has your majesty tried wearing apron strings?"

"Apron strings!" gasped the startled Queen, "what an absurd suggestion to make to me, you silly fairy. How would I look wearing apron strings in court? People would laugh at me."

"Oh no," breathed the fairy, "they would not dare to laugh. Besides, they would think it was a new fashion you were setting, and by the next morning every storekeeper in the whole realm would be selling aprons as fast as he could take them down from the shelves. I really think that if you sent the nurses and governess away at once, and tied each little prince and princess to your apron strings, you'd soon notice a world of difference in their behavior. And it would be such a pretty fashion, the prettiest in the world, that all the sour old duchesses who hate your disagreeable children would begin smiling and smiling, until every court lady would copy you at once. There isn't a moment to lose, if you would save your children."

"W-e-l-l," wavered the Queen, "I might try it, but where can I get these apron strings; I'm sure the court dressmakers would faint if I ordered them offhand this way."

"Oh, as for that," smiled the fairy, "I can make you some right away." "And with her little wand she touched the six salt tear drops that had stained the purple satin gown; and from those glistening tear drops long slender threads grew rapidly—three on one side, and three on the other.

So the Queen summoned her children, but as usual they refused to come, stamping their wayward feet and wrinkling their naughty noses, until they spied those curious gleaming strands which a fairy was weaving; then they crept nearer. And the fairy whispered: "It's the loveliest game in the world, my dears, just tie these round your hearts, then tag along with your mother, and whatever she does, you do, too."

"Oh, what a circus!" grinned the princes. "Oh, what a lark!" sang the princesses. So the Queen went into court with that little human train of six excited children trailing behind her. And when she graciously shook hands with the Great High Chancellor of the realm, behold, the six small children thought it was part of their new game to shake hands, too. And the old gentleman was exceedingly pleased.

"Usually they poke out their nasty little tongues at me," he said to Mrs. Great High Chancellor that night; "my dear, why don't you buy some apron strings yourself, so each of our little High Chancellors can be tied to you? I think it would be exceedingly becoming to you."

"I thought of it myself," she admitted, "for never have I seen the Queen look so adorable as when those six wee children copied her delightful manners all night long. I'm sure the subjects do not dream how dear those children really are—oh, I wish that wicked plot were at the bottom of the sea!"

"It shall be," said the Great High Chancellor emphatically. And it was.

For the Queen's apron strings made all the difference in the world. So from that day to this all really proper children are tied round their hearts to their own mother's apron strings. Oh, no, you hardly ever see those strings; they're spun from love and tears and tenderness; but the children that are tied to them grow up into splendid rulers, while the careless, rude children who cut loose from those strings are invariably spoken of like this by everyone: "I'd like to get rid of that awful child. A regular nuisance,—and so unlovable."

So whenever Bill and I do some wild, reckless thing that hurts dear mother dreadfully, we see her sweet face sadden as if we'd crushed some pale white violet, and generally one of us whispers: "Oh mother-est, you're spinning us new apron strings from love and tears, aren't you? We're terribly sorry we broke the old one—just terribly!"

And we know you have an apron string like ours, too. Don't you love it?

LIFE SKETCHES OF GREAT ADVENTURERS

Math. 4:23-25; 5:1-12

"And Jesus went about in all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness among the people."

Suggested Literature

"Ministers of Mercy," by Franklin, paper 50 cents; "Our Work on the Congo," by Mabie, 15 cents; "Ann of Ava," by Hubbard, paper 50 cents; "Judson the Pioneer," by Hull, paper 35 cents.

Dr. Catherine L. Mabie

Shortage of space makes it necessary to deal with the activities of only one of these great adventures, Dr. Mabie.

1. The call. When seven years of age she became interested in missions. After listening to the reading of a story telling about "Mabita," a little African girl, she decided that she would go over. For a time the childish resolution was forgotten in the busy school-girl years. Then, one night at a missionary meeting, the call came to her to become a missionary.

She graduated from Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago, and soon after receiving her degree was on her way to Africa.

2. The voyage over. After five weeks of voyaging, filled with both enjoyable and unenjoyable experiences, Dr. Mabie reached Matadi, the head of steamer navigation on the great Congo River. From this point she walked or rode in a hammock carried on the heads of two natives, along the old caravan road—the very road over which little Mabita who had first stirred her interest in missions was carried by the slave-traders. The trail wound over hills through grass ten or more feet high, infested by dangerous wild animals. Finally she reached the mission station at Banza Manteke.

3. The little tin hospital. At the station, she found practically no equipment, only a little wooden dispensary erected by Dr. Leslie, who spent some time in Banza Manteke, and a little corrugated iron building which she called her "little tin hospital." Crowds of sick people came to the dispensary, and the little hospital saw many operations, some of them so difficult that they would tax the skill of the best specialists and the equipment of the finest hospitals.

4. Why Dr. Mabie was needed. Africa is a land of witchcraft. Sickness and death are attributed to the evil machinations of an enemy, whom the witch-doctor must "smell out" and destroy, or to evil spirits, who must be exorcised by many torturing practices. There is no knowledge of anatomy or hygiene, and sickness is prevalent. Into such a maze of ignorance, superstition, and suffering, Dr. Mabie carried the tender care of a well-trained Christian physician.

5. Healing, preaching, teaching. In all her busy life of healing, Dr. Mabie has never forgotten her early purpose to tell the story of Jesus. Medicine and surgery are the means by which she demonstrates the love of God. From the little tin hospital patients found their way back to their jungle villages and around the village fire at night repeated to their friends not only the story of the marvelous skill and wonderful kindness of Nzambi's doctor, but the strange new tales of Nzambi, his love and his power.—Adapted from "Service."

SPECIAL ATTENTION

is called to Dr. Young's presentation of the vacation school as an opportunity for service among our Baptist young people.

The Church Vacation School

BY THOMAS S. YOUNG

What about preparing to assist in a church vacation school this coming summer? Two things, among many others, are true of these schools. First; one or more workers in each school should have special training. Why not be one of these? Second; As far as at all possible the vacation school should be conducted by local workers. This means that those who will secure the special training will in turn train the other workers of the school in which they may be engaged. In order that this training may be secured intensive training schools have been conducted thus far at Grand Forks and Fargo, N. D., Kansas City Seminary and Training School, Denver, Shurtleff College, Fond du Lac, Wis., Colgate Seminary, Moundsville, W. Va., Des Moines College and many more are being arranged. In addition we have co-operated in schools at St. Louis, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Albany and other places. The state conventions, through their directors of religious education, co-operate with the Publication Society in carrying on these schools. They are intended to prepare pastors and older young people to go to their churches and supervise schools and train local workers in this wonderful work of the church vacation school and beyond that for the school of week-day religious education that has already come to so many communities.

For our older young people there is no finer opportunity for training than is offered in these intensive training schools and the vacation school following gives splendid opportunity for service. If this is true in the vacation school the opportunity for service is multiplied many times in the coming week-day session of the church school. In some vacation schools the workers assuming primary responsibility are paid a small remuneration.

This should be the universal practice in the week-day schools.

Now is the time to plan for vacation schools. Write your state director of religious education for the date and location of the nearest training school in your territory. Plan to attend this school. Begin to talk up the school in your church and in every organization in connection with it. Get your pastor to lead the church in the same kind of preparation for it that he would seek for, preceding evangelistic meetings. Pray over the school, pray for volunteer workers for the school. Collect craft material in your neighborhood, for use in the school. Ask the homes to prepare surprise packages of the odds and ends that accumulate in every home. These are too good to burn and yet are valueless in the home life. Send them to the church week after week, by the children. If there are no children in your home, send by neighbor children. Have two or three times when the children will assemble on Saturday for "surprise package openings." Classify the material while open and lay away for use in the school. Give the boys and girls a treat. When vacation comes you will be compelled to have a school. Ask your state director of religious education for a leaflet suggesting what can be used in these schools.

Rev. W. L. Anderson of Charles City, Ia., writes: "We have had the time of our lives. While most of the ministers have been out of the city on vacations, Mrs. Anderson and I have been putting in our best licks with the kiddies and never enjoyed a vacation more. We had a hard time to close the school, the children were anxious to keep it up during the entire summer." From Fort Wayne we have the following: "The First Church held the first church vacation school to be held in the city. It was a pronounced success, all the workers were enthusiastic." Pastor C. J. Oxley at Utica, N. Y., wrote: "The church vacation school was a great thing for us as a church, a splendid training for our workers and a wonderful thing for the children, judging by their words and actions." Testimonials of this kind could be multiplied endlessly. Almost every one understands what the vacation school means to the boys and girls but few have understood what it may mean to pastors and in the training of young people as well as the service rendered in the process.

Pastors, young people! Do not let the season of 1921 pass without a school in your church. Hold it before July if necessary. In other places, get ready for it before you go to the B. Y. P. U. A. convention in Cincinnati. While there spend all the time you can with Rev. C. A. Carman at his booth, learning how to do the work.

International Uniform Lesson for May 29

MAKING THE NEIGHBORHOOD CHRISTIAN
Luke 10:25-37. Golden Text: Romans 13:10.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

It seems like a long distance between the question of the lawyer about gaining eternal life and the parable of the good Samaritan; but the distance is only an illusion, for the two are as close as cause and effect. The lawyer wanted to do something in order to get something. Jesus taught him that eternal life is not something one gets as a reward for good works; it is rather what one is. If one can be a neighbor in all that the word neighbor involves according to the story of the Good Samaritan, that is immortality.

The Lesson Taught

Making the neighbor, making the neighborhood, and making the neighborhood Christian, mark the progress of the lesson.

Making the Neighbor

Making the neighbor is primary. There can be no neighborhood without neighbors. And in making the neighbor it is necessary to understand exactly what is meant by the word neighbor. In the broad sense of the word it means a fellow man, a brother. It is in this sense Jesus uses the word in the parable. The lawyer had the narrower sense of the word in mind when he asked the question, "And who is my neighbor?" meaning, Is any man a neighbor who is not a Jew? Jesus turned the question in such a way that the lawyer was led to ask himself, "Am I a neighbor?" In the making of neighbors one must himself be a neighbor. All attempts at the uplift of society fail when the uplifter reaches down to lift up. One must be what he labors to make others be. Indeed, the best way to make a neighbor is to be a neighbor without any conscious attempt to make neighbors. The Good Samaritan did not minister to the wounded man in the consciousness that he was utilizing an opportunity to make a Jew a neighbor. He saw the man in distress and helped him without question or motive save the motive of sympathy for a fellow man who needed a friend.

The Samaritan was a neighbor to the stricken Jew despite religious distinctions, race hatred and class prejudice. These three things were strongly felt by the Jews and Samaritans just as they exist today between the Christian and Mohammedan. The Jew hated the Samaritan with a hatred equal to that of the Mohammedan for the Christian. But hatred on the part of the Jew did not deter the Samaritan from helping a Jew in trouble. The Samaritan was moved by love which obliterates religious prejudice, race hatred and class separation. Love makes a neighbor, and nothing else will make a neighbor. If love is lacking, membership in the same church, or club, or union, or order, however rich its ritual, however honored its history, however exalted its ideas and ideals, will not suffice. Again we repeat, to be a neighbor is the only way to make a neighbor.

Making a Neighborhood

Making a neighbor may be largely a personal matter; but making a neighborhood is largely a social matter. The story of the Good Samaritan helps us here only by suggesting the spirit in which a neighborhood must be made. The story says nothing about the method. To be sure, the spirit is vital and it will suggest the method; but in the social task of making a neighborhood organization is necessary. The method will depend somewhat on the neighborhood. A rural community will respond to one method, a small town to another method, and a city to still another method. Without discussing methods which space forbids, it may help us in organizing the methods to remember that the methods must run along the line of the common interests of the community. A rural neighborhood must be vitally bound together by its common interest in agriculture. Therefore the best organizer for a rural community is a man who knows farming and its problems by actual experience, and not some academic agriculturists. If we would make an industrial community a real neighborhood we must live among the workers as one of them, sharing their life, mixing in their pastimes, joining in their plans for industrial progress. This was the method of Jesus who being in the form of God thought it not a thing to be grasped to be on an equality with God, but emptied himself, taking upon him the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, yea, the death of the cross (Phil. 2:5-8).

Making the Neighborhood Christian

It is quite possible to make a neighborhood without making it Christian. A foreign neighborhood can be Americanized without being Christianized. It is important to teach all foreigners in America the language of the land and with it the ideals of our country. But to stop with that is to stop short of making the neighborhood Christian. A neighborhood can be socialized without making it Christian. Co-operative stores, elevators, packing houses, factories, may do well enough when efficiently and honestly managed; but they are not necessarily Christian. A neighborhood is Christian when it has the religion of Jesus Christ.

It may have churches and yet not be Christian. The Christianity of any neighborhood is proved by its simple, democratic living; by its broad, human sympathy; by its high moral character; by its care for the good name of its weakest member; by its modest, unassuming, altruistic service; by its fidelity to the principles of Jesus Christ; by its support of the church in worship, in work and in taking the gospel to the whole world.

CONVERSATION SEVEN

By F. F. PETERSON

Question: What does one believe if he is a Baptist?

Rom. 6:1-6, I Cor. 11:23-31, Matt. 28:19-20, Phil. 4:8-9.

This study must be largely a matter of information. Few of the young people could be expected to know much about the facts of the subject unless they had some previous instruction.

As an opening theme it would be well to discuss the various forms of church government, viz., Congregational, Presbyterian, and Episcopalian. Show the difference in the individual's recognition in these various communions.

Show the common possessions of the Protestant denominations in matters of faith and practice. After this is done there can be given a discriminating teaching on the differences, showing how the various denominations arose largely because of the neglect of certain truths. This can be followed by an announcement of the points that make one a Baptist.

I. When one believes the Bible is authority for faith and practice he is a Baptist.

II. When one believes in the direct approach of the individual to God, whom he may worship according to his own conscience and without any priestly intermediary he is a Baptist.

III. When one believes in a personal conversion he is a Baptist.

IV. When one believes that only the converted are eligible to church membership, he is a Baptist.

V. When one believes that baptism is by immersion and is a symbol of the death, burial and resurrection of our Lord he is a Baptist.

VI. When one believes in the independence of the church self governing and spiritual without any alliance with the state he is a Baptist.

VII. When one believes faith must be confirmed by service he is a Baptist.

VIII. When one believes that he has a personal responsibility for the world-wide enterprises of the Kingdom he is a Baptist.

Our Own Folks

W. A. Montgomery Honored

A unique event took place at the Lake Avenue Church, Rochester, N. Y., on the evening of April 25.

On that evening there was held a joint celebration of the fortieth anniversary of Mr. W. A. Montgomery's service as teacher of the Montgomery Men's Class in the church and the celebration of his sixty-seventh birthday. Approximately 200 members of the class gathered for the banquet and to pay him honor. The affair was an entire surprise to him. Among the guests of honor were Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, his wife, and Mrs. Hannah Montgomery, his mother. All of the members of the class were the guests for the evening of one of the early members of the class, Mr. Geo. M. Wetmore.

The Montgomery Men's Bible Class has been an institution of large influence in the city of Rochester. An interesting phase of its history is its connection with the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery. The boys who formed the original class were being taught by Miss Nellie Barrett, with whom at that time Mr. Montgomery was "keeping company." When she left to go to college she urged upon him the taking of her class of boys. Naturally at her request he acquiesced and thus began the forty years of service that he has rendered and the development of the class that is now one of the prominent classes in the city.

W. A. MONTGOMERY

During the evening many tributes were paid to the teacher of the class. The finest tribute of the evening was the fact that everyone in the room felt that the tributes paid to his remarkable integrity, his high standards as a Christian leader and gentleman, his remarkable generosity and good judgment, were all well deserved.

The class presented to Mr. Montgomery an exquisite souvenir brochure made of parchment and bound in beautiful leather, the work of a well-known artist of the city. In the brochure was a beautifully worded dedication to Mr. Montgomery, an expression of appreciation of his services and the list of the entire membership of the class. All the lettering was done by hand in the manner of the old time manuscript with illuminated texts.

Mr. Montgomery has been a churchman of the highest type and has made not only his personal contribution to the work of the church through these forty years of work with his class and the Lake Avenue Church which he loves, but has made a great contribution to the work of the kingdom in the sacrifice that has been his in giving Mrs. Montgomery so freely to denominational and kingdom service.

Sunny Southern California

By FRANK DURHAM

Day before yesterday we thought the world was better than it really was; yesterday we thought it was worse than it really proved to be; today we give ourselves a private lecture on the folly of basing large conclusions on a few bits of information, and are trying to "see things in the large." We look upon our constitutional amendment and see the better day approaching, but we do not expect to see all classes of society instantly rise up and take long steps toward moral goodness. Here in Southern California the law finds some rough sledding; but we also see some real benefits. By no means do we say that the law cannot be enforced; for, viewing the question in the large, we discover a dependable part of our population who will seek no rest until public sentiment is fully enlisted and crystallized into laws which will be intelligently administered for the safeguarding of our men, women and children. A little while ago we thought Christianity had advanced farther than was really the case. Later we heard that Christianity had failed. The larger view has given us a balanced judgment, as distance gives a better perspective. The people now know that Christianity moves right on, and the situation was not as bad as it looked. Christianity is no coward at heart. She grapples with situations. And where the difficulties are greatest she wins her greatest triumphs. "She sees the best that glimmers through the worst." She will not let any catastrophe permanently cool her hope, or upset her plans, or slacken her work in saving men.

Just now we are seeing among all our churches a deeper evangelistic spirit than has been known in years. Yonder in the mountains, last September, scores of our pastors went apart for a three-day's "Pastors' Retreat." It was specifically a time of prayer for all our churches, and for each church and pastor by name. What was then asked of God we gratefully acknowledge that he has given. A partial and unofficial list of the churches that have been richly blessed is here given. The figures are changing from week to week; but the conversions and baptisms are somewhat as follows: Whittier, thirty; Orange, six; Ocean Beach, nine; Holtville, sixteen; Brawley, twenty; El Centro, sixty-eight; Van Nuys, thirty-five; Bakersfield, thirty-eight; Calvary (Pasadena), forty-five; South Pasadena, nine; and among the Los Angeles churches—Hoover Street, twenty; Trinity, fifteen; Lincoln Heights, thirty; Immanuel, twelve; Highland Park, fourteen; South Park, seventeen; Atherton, twelve; First, sixty; Temple, seventy-four. Equally encouraging, no doubt, has been the experience of others in our convention field. All this is significant when it is remembered that our churches have been doing the largest bit of missionary giving in their history—from 50 to 100 per cent more than in previous years, and in many cases much more than this. This state-wide experience is heaven's answer to a people who have but partially met the challenge, "Prove me now herewith." What might we not expect should we go all the way and "bring all the tithes?" This certainly would include more than financial items. It would certainly mean the bringing of "all the tithes" of our intellectual abilities to the work of teaching in our Bible schools, so that the great Christian truths would have their finest setting. And what if "all the tithes" of our most richly-cultured spiritual nature were loyally and lovingly laid before God? The fact is, that evangelism is not simply a specialized message and method and a form of appeal, but is the fruitage of a well-nurtured, spiritually-cultured life.

It was a strategic move for the Kingdom that gave us the regional conferences held recently at several places in the state. San Bernardino, Pasadena, Santa Barbara, Hollywood, Los Angeles, Long Beach, and San Diego were the focal points. Among the special speakers were Dr. J. H. Franklin, Miss Ruth Shipley, and Rev. Edwin R. Brown. It is wholesome when our leaders help us all to feel that the task belongs to all of us, and that what must be faced in our general offices can be better met when the whole denomination knows all the problems. Then, too, the fresh look at the work that awaits us is inspiring and inviting. The sessions were marked by keen interest and a courageous outlook. Nor did the influence cease with the days of the conference; many churches had echo meetings for their own people. As a people we are getting under our load.

When a fine thing is done we wonder why we did not do it sooner. We are thinking of the "International Baptist Seminary, Spanish-American Department," which is getting under way at the Christian Center, Los Angeles. This has been the dream of Dr. George L. White and Rev. J. B. Fox for years. Now it is fulfilled; at least, it is making a splendid beginning. Prof. J. F. Detweiler is dean of the school, Dr. White is secretary-treasurer, and Dr. W. F. Harper the director. A board of managers of about a dozen men give direction to the work.

When one considers the many thousands of Spanish-speaking people in California and adjoining states, and that we now have this school for the training of the pastors in service, and others who shall become pastors and teachers, there is a thrill of gladness and a substantial foundation for the hope that we may invade Mexico with the gospel, and that this may be accomplished by those who have been truly taught the way of Christ and, returning to their own country again, take Him with them. After all, may not this longer process be the shortest method by which to solve the "Mexican problem"? How otherwise shall we "alchemize old hates into the 'gold of love'" and link the two great republics in the bonds of brotherhood?

Missionary Education Conference

Plans recently announced for the Missionary Education Conference at Silver Bay, on Lake George, N. Y., July 8-18, reveal several features that make this conference different from all other conferences. The first of these is the degree of specialization made possible by this year's program. Four two-hour normal classes will be offered to those who wish to learn how to lead mission study classes. During the first hour the members of the classes take turns in leading, each for a brief period, according to a carefully pre-arranged plan. During the second hour there is practical criticism and discussion of methods. In this way the classes combine the making out of assignments in consultation with small groups, observation of varied methods of teaching, a brief practice period for each individual, and criticism of methods by an experienced leader. These classes are not exclusively for those who have had considerable experience in mission study, but for all who expect to lead mission study classes.

The second point of distinction is that three or four open parlaments will be held each day on the general subjects of mission study, including the Church School of Missions, Missions in the Sunday School, Missions in the Young People's Society, and, if desired, the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. This will make possible a very high degree of specialization not found at any of the denominational conferences.

A number of one-hour mission study classes will be offered for those who do not expect to lead classes and for those interested in Sunday school and mission band work there will be three attractive courses in graded missionary education instruction in the church school. Classes will also be offered in missionary education through dramatics and in Christian stewardship.

The strength of the platform meetings is assured by the presence of such speakers and preachers as Robert E. Speer, John M. Moore, Tyler Dennett, James F. Walker. The program of the conference has been arranged by a committee headed by Dr. T. H. P. Sailer, professor of missions in Teachers College, Columbia University. In addition to Dr. Sailer the list of instructors includes such well-known leaders of missionary education as Miles B. Fisher, Fred Eastman, Mrs. Sophia Lyons Fahs, Miss Marie Preston, and Mrs. A. T. Taylor. Among the missionary education secretaries expected to take part in the conference from the various denominations are William A. Hill, Baptist; Miss Ruth I. Seabury, Congregationalist; B. Carter Millikin, Presbyterian;

Miss Gertrude Schultz, Presbyterian; Miss Laura F. Boyer, Protestant Episcopal; Mrs. M. J. Gildersleeve, Presbyterian and Ralph E. Diffendorfer, Methodist. The entire faculty will consist of about twenty experts on missionary education. Full information regarding the conference can be secured from The Missionary Education Movement, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Resignations of Dr. West and Dr. Poteat

The financial objective of the New World Movement, viz., $100,000,000 for the work of all participating organizations during the five-year period, has not yet been attained. This prevents any of the organizations from carrying forward their work on the scale contemplated. Under these circumstances, at the annual meeting of the board, a committee on correlation was appointed to study the present organization and future activity of the General Board of Promotion. In order that the board might be entirely free in its consideration of the whole situation, Dr. R. M. West and Dr. E. M. Poteat have presented their resignations respectively as executive secretaries of the departments of life work, and prayer and stewardship. These two men have thus shown a spirit of generous self-effacement and loyalty to the denomination.

The resignation of Dr. West was accepted by the Administrative Committee at its meeting held in New York, April 20. The resignation of Dr. Poteat is in the hands of the general director and will be presented at the next meeting of the committee, May 27.

The untiring services of Dr. West and Dr. Poteat have given us a good beginning in the lines of activity contemplated in establishing these two departments, and their spirit of cooperation and their devotion to all the interests centering in the New World Movement program, will be held as a cherished memory by those who have had the joy of fellowship with them during the period of their services. —J. Y. AITCHISON, General Director.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

An Annual and a Jubilee

The "Annual" was the first meeting of the New England District of the Woman's Home Mission Society. The Jubilee meeting was the fiftieth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missions Society. Both gatherings were centered in Boston, and both were notable and close together.

The Home Mission Society gathered in Clarendon Street Church, April 25-26, and brought a large representation from the entire district. The outstanding event of the meeting was the retirement of Mrs. George W. Coleman from the presidency, after a service of thirty-one years; twelve years as president of the New England branch, and nineteen as vice president of the national society. It is a long and conspicuously valuable service that Mrs. Coleman has rendered to the cause, and the resolutions passed that appreciated her character, ability and intelligent consecration and leadership so long given without stint, were emphasized with admiration and affection.

The Program

Naturally in the addresses, the various features of the home work were set forth. Mrs. C. W. Aiken of Brooklyn, N. Y., spoke on our Southern Schools, Mrs. G. W.

Coleman on "A Message from Spelman," Miss Viola Olson of Providence on "Our First Work among the Portuguese," Miss Ruth D. French on "My Friends, the Japanese," Rev. Albert J. Dahlby on "Save America and Save the World," and the closing address was by Miss May Huston of New York on "A Program of Missionary Education for the Local Church." Mrs. Florence C. Thomas of Brockton is the new president. The loving cup awarded annually to the association making the best record went this year to the Narragansett Association of Rhode Island.

The Jubilee

The fiftieth anniversary of the Foreign Mission Society began as the other anniversary was concluded. It was a three-day's meeting, and the different sessions were held in First Church Boston, First Church Newton Center, and Ford Hall. Ample preparation for so important a celebration appeared in the different features brought into the program and in the distinguished participants and their addresses. From beginning to end it was just what such an occasion should be. It was earnest and strong, and at times became inspirational and brilliant. Every part of the great world divisions in woman's missions contributed to it either through missionaries, or conspicuous native representatives from distant fields.

The historic celebration was at Newton Center; the working sessions were in First Church, Boston, and the social feast and grand banquet in Ford Hall.

High Lights of the Jubilee

The fact is the entire celebration was in pretty high light, and it is not easy to specify the outstanding features when all through there was such a variety in the events that compelled interest and awakened response. The general verdict was that the Baptist women know exactly how to do things. This seemed to have been a conviction beforehand among the churches, for they poured in their delegations of women, completely filling the spacious churches. There was an atmosphere of confidence and expectation. The well-designed program embraced all the successive developments of the society's work, and they got into the interesting reports, and were all graphically pictured in the "Golden Jubilee Pageant" given at Newton Center on Wednesday evening.

The able and brilliant leadership of the woman's work was completely apparent in the Jubilee as it progressed. The elements that enlivened the atmosphere of it were those that create a sustained enthusiasm. They kept everybody happy all the way through. The great master-stroke that made the success of the women's missionary effort so realistic was the actual presence of those native girls from the foreign fields, who were really cultivated and competent women preaching, teaching and healing in India, Japan, and the Philippines. It seemed like a golden crown on the work of fifty years.

The Jubilee Banquet

At the banquet in Ford Hall Thursday evening, 750 were present. This occasion was the glad spiritual culmination, and brought an impressive emphasis upon all the preceding historical and inspirational recitals. Mrs. Lucy W. Peabody was presented as toast-master, and she presided with all her tact and charm. It was a happy thought to have those compact salutations given to us in perfect English by the Oriental messengers. Admirably did they prepare us for the longer talks of Pres. Pendleton of Wellesley College and Pres. Faunce, of Brown. Miss Pendleton's recent tour of the mission fields enabled her to speak from the very heart of the occasion; and Pres. Faunce's long interest in women's missions moved him to set the celebration in its largest relations. Then came as a befitting illustration of the half century of achievement, screen pictures of faces and scenes that have marked the periods of progress on mission fields, interpreted by Miss Nellie G. Prescott, the foreign secretary. Certainly as a Jubilee it was "Golden"!

Some Other Events

Mrs. Lucy W. Peabody gave the Ministers' Conference a thoughtful hour on Monday. She spoke on the "significance of the Women's Jubilee." She pungently raised this pointed question: "Does the Jubilee mark the end or the beginning of the specific work of our Baptist women?" That challenge aroused tense interest and provoked the average ministerial mind to earnest cogitation. Mrs. Peabody's address, being plain-spoken and coming with unchallenged knowledge and authority just before the great gathering at Des Moines, was of the epoch-making quality for Baptists. Everything was said in the best possible spirit, and all real difficulties sympathetically treated. But the conviction uttered that was very convincing was this, that "organization" and over-head control had not helped our women up to date, but were cutting an essential nerve in our Mission organism.

It was a "call" that the men were not answering that compelled the women to organize fifty years ago. The women have answered it—how fully and efficiently the Jubilee program and enthusiasm showed. For avoiding deficits and disasters, and for competent and economical administration in missions, our Baptist women wear the palm. After Mrs. Peabody's address, and the Jubilee record of their work, every minister said, "Help those women; and hinder them in nothing!"

Bernard Clausen

Pres. Bailey hit a high mark in his first Social Union meeting. His upper sleeve will have to be pretty big to draw from it a succession of successes like the May meeting. In the music and the speaking the gratification was equal. Both the singer and the speaker were at one in their "Comments on our Modern Religion." That was the theme, and the comments were found in songs that were exquisitely and feelingly sung. Mr. Raymond Simonds is a glorious tenor who sings "with grace in his heart." Rev. Bernard Clausen, pastor of the First Church, Syracuse, N. Y., proved himself a preacher by divine right. We all heard him gladly. The glow of youth; its joy in high service; the ease of its unconscious self-expression while absorbed with gospel truth—all this goes to make up an indefinable charm. We were under the spell of it. The fear of God, the care of God, the nearness of God, the ministry of man to man, the conscious ecstasy of the helpful Christian touch, man with man, in a world of test, trouble and triumph, were made realistic beyond what we are accustomed to hear. Mr. Clausen has won us.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

Some Official Changes

Dr. D. W. Hulbert, for more than twenty-five years secretary of the Wisconsin State Convention, the oldest state secretary save one among our Northern Baptists, has resigned to take effect May 31. Dr. A. LaGrande, for the past five years pastor of the Central Church, of Kansas City, has been selected as his successor, and will begin his work June 1. Dr. LaGrande is a Wisconsin boy, a graduate of Wayland Academy and Brown University. He has held pastorates in Wisconsin, at Omro, Bangor and Appleton, three of the churches that are representative of our Baptist work outside the large cities. He was pastor at Pella, Iowa, a college town, and has been offered the presidency of two of our Baptist colleges. He has served in Quincy, Ill., and now for five years in Kansas City. Dr. LaGrande brings to his new work an experience reaching over a number of years in the active pastorate, as well as always being identified in the larger work of the denomination. He comes to a great field with many problems, but also with many opportunities.

Church Vacation Schools

During the last week in April our director of religious education, Rev. C. A. Boyd, and Dr. Thos. S. Young, conducted a school for vacation school leaders at Fond Du Lac. The enrollment was eight, and the time was spent in going over the whole field of religious education. These persons will be able to appreciate the matters of religious education—Sunday, week-day and vacation—now more than ever after having been in this school.

Last year there was but one vacation school among the Baptists of Wisconsin. This year eight are in contemplation, and others are being considered. Such intensive institutes as these are much more valuable to the minister, than the inspirational addresses so often given on the subject at our associations and conventions.

Standard Sunday Schools

Last year there were but three such schools in Wisconsin. Honey Creek has had such a school for six years, and Fond du Lac and Garfield Avenue of Milwaukee have each maintained such a school for more than one year. But this year Sheboygan Falls, South, Milwaukee, Waukesha, Wauwatosa, Delavan, Millard, Silver Lake, Appleton, Lancaster and LaCrosse have been added. This makes thirteen such schools in Wisconsin, a great gain over previous records.

The Associations

The time for the associational meetings have arrived. The first two were held the first week in May. The Dodge Association met at Portage, and the Milwaukee Association were the guests of the West Allis Baptists. These meetings have been largely attended and the inspiration has been good. Dr. D. W. Hulbert is giving his valedictory at these meetings on, "Wisconsin Baptist Progress in Twenty-five Years." It is a great story and should be in print.

Some Old Baptists

Mrs. Lyda McKenzie, a member of the Bangor Church, recently celebrated her 103rd birthday, and Miss Bashua Cornwall, of West Allis, has passed her 101st milestone. These people still maintain an unusual interest in their churches. Miss Cornwall came to Wisconsin in 1838 and has lived on the same farm ever since. She was baptized when eleven years of age.

All Aboard

A number of the pastors and others are beginning to make plans for the convention at Des Moines. Quite a delegation are planning on going. But on every hand we hear these words, "Well I do not know whether I want to go or not, because I do not fancy another ten days like we had at Buffalo." Let us pray that it may be otherwise.

missioner for Europe, to serve missionary organizations in all parts of the world in the execution of their plans for rendering assistance to their spiritual kinsmen in European countries.

Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, M. A., then the pastor of Hamstead Church, London, who possessed extraordinary qualifications for the office, was unanimously elected, and since November first has been giving himself exclusively to his new task. First of all he devoted himself to the organization of committees in various European countries, for the distribution of relief funds sent by Baptists in England, Canada, United States and Scandinavia. Since January 1 he has made three visits to the continent, giving special attention to conditions in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Roumania, Austria and Poland. He has just returned from a special visit to Roumania where he investigated the reported persecution of Protestants in that country.

Mr. Rushbrooke has come to America upon the special invitation of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist Convention and the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. He will attend the meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention at Chattanooga this week and will then proceed to Toronto, Canada, where McMaster University is to confer on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. After spending a few days in Canada he will return to the states and visit cities north and south, until the meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines, where he is to deliver one of the principal addresses. He is to speak there with the Rev. Charles A. Brooks, who, with Mr. Rushbrooke, constituted the commission which visited various sections of Europe last year and which was chiefly instrumental in securing attendance of representatives of groups of continental Baptists at the conference in London last July. These two men have rendered a service of very great value, and they will be heard at Des Moines with deepest interest. American Baptists give hearty welcome to Commissioner Rushbrooke!

M. Gross, and Mrs. Milton E. Fish. A glance at the program indicates that there will be many other privileges, such as open discussions, fellowship luncheons, stereopticon presentations, symposiums.

THE CHURCH IN OLD TOWN, desirous of measuring up to its opportunities, is planning extensive improvements to its property. It is the nearest Baptist church to the state university at Orono and is planning to extend its ministry to Baptist students there, of whom there are more than 200 now enrolled.

THE C. E. LOCAL UNION met with the Old Town Church on April 29. Speakers were Rev. Francis Bernauer of the First Church, Bangor, and Rev. Oscar Thomas of Bradley.

THE CHURCH AT EAST CORINTH is continuing to prosper under the leadership of the new pastor, Rev. E. S. Drew. The Sunday school is steadily growing. Congregations are large and the prayer meeting is deepening in interest.

MRS. VIOLET BAGLEY began her pastorate of the Kenduskeag Church on May 1. She will also supply Glenburn and West Levant on alternate Sunday afternoons.

DR. T. J. RAMSDALL has received a warm welcome at Charlestown where he began his pastorate March 1.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Columbia Street Church, Bangor, occurred on April 21. The treasurer reported all bills paid and a balance on hand. The report of the Sunday-school superintendent, Mr. Earl Herrick, showed that the average attendance for the last quarter was almost 300. In view of its growing constituency the church decided to employ a pastor's assistant, and by unanimous vote increased the salary of the pastor, Rev. John S. Pendleton, $200.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

SAN DIEGO, FIRST CHURCH, Rev. F. O. Belden pastor, held its annual meeting on April 29; over 400 persons, out of a total membership of 1099, were present. Of the 182 additions during the year forty-eight were by baptism, fourteen by experience, and 120 by letter. The debt on the building has been entirely provided for by subscriptions, $10,000 of which were paid in cash during the past year. Nearly $15,000 was raised during the year for benevolence, $12,280 of which were given to the New World Movement. This was about three times as much as was ever before raised by the church for benevolences in one year.

REV. DAVID A. PITT closed his pastorate at Berkeley First, April 24. During the eight years of his ministry there, Mr. Pitt has received nearly 1000 members, has built and paid for a new house on a better site worth $80,000; and last year the church pledged $75,000 towards the New World Movement.

Summer School of Missions May 29—June 3

This will be the thirteenth annual session. The meetings will be held at the Congregational Church, Ninth and Hope streets, Los Angeles. Two mass meetings are planned for Sunday afternoon, 2:45; one at the First Congregational Church, Mrs. Arthur W. Rider presiding; the other at the Hollywood Baptist Church, Mrs. Eva N. Dye presiding.

Some of the outstanding features of the school will be the study of the text books for the year. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery will lead in the study of "The Kingdom and the Nations" (North);

Mrs. Hallie L. Hill has "From Survey to Service" (Douglass); Mrs. Eva N. Dye teaches the young people's book, "Playing Square with Tomorrow" (Eastman). The junior text books are: "A Noble Army" (Hubbard), led by Mrs. Frank P. Fiery, and "Stay at Home Journeys" (Osborn), led by Mrs. S. E. Cobb. Dr. James A. Francis of the First Church, Los Angeles, will have the "Bible Hour" each morning at 10 o'clock. Educational Exhibits, demonstrations, and dramatics will be in charge of Mrs. E. B. Allen, Mrs. Lillie

Anniversary Week in Buffalo Association

In Buffalo Association an Anniversary Week program in the interest of the New World Movement has been carefully planned and vigorously executed by a strong committee on promotion, of which Dr. E. H. Dutton, executive secretary of the Buffalo Baptist Union, is the efficient chairman. A special feature of the program was a series of conferences in a dozen churches outside the city during the week of April 17. The conference party included Dr. E. H. Dutton, the leader; Dr. F. P. Lynch, medical missionary of the Belgian Congo; Dr. R. M. West, of the General Board of Promotion; and Dr. W. B. McNinch, associational missionary. In addition to these Mrs. Leon Harring, Mrs. Geo. A. Jackson, and Miss Cora A. Estabrook of Buffalo participated in various meetings and presented different phases of women's work.

The conferences were opened at East Aurora Sunday morning and evening and were continued at Lancaster Monday evening. Tuesday was a busy day with meetings at Eden Center in the morning and afternoon and at Hamburg in the evening. The Arcade church gave the conference party a royal welcome on Wednesday afternoon and evening. Dr. West was obliged to go to New York from this point and the remainder of the party proceeded to Springville on Thursday. They visited en route the church at Sardinia, a noble historic landmark nearly a century old and the mother of a half dozen other churches in the vicinity, but now unhappily closed for lack of support. The small church at East Concord was also visited.

Two conferences were held at Springville. The party started early Friday morning for the most strenuous day of the trip, covering Holland, Java Village, and Strykersville. Saturday morning a trio of weary speakers made their way over bad roads and through a pouring rain to meet a small audience at Marilla, after which they returned to Buffalo and parted to keep various Sunday appointments.

KEUKA COLLEGE was closed at the beginning of the war. Since then it has been included in the budget of the New World Movement and is to reopen Sept. 21, as a standard college for women. The building has been repaired and the campus and lake front improved at a cost of more than $60,000. A large class of well prepared freshmen is registering. One-third of the whole number now registered are to prepare for missionary work and the majority of the others are to enter the teaching profession. An able faculty of experienced teachers has been secured. Dr. Homer C. Lyman of the International Sunday School Association, Sunday-school efficiency department, is to be at the head of the department of Christian leadership and social service.

NEW JERSEY

VINELAND, FIRST, A. Stokes Watson, pastor, had 600 to hear Bucknell University glee club. Twenty were baptized Easter Sunday. The church has exceeded its pledge to the New World Movement and given $250 for Near East Relief. An Edison-Dick mimeograph has been added to the equipment. The pastor has been re-elected chaplain of the Roosevelt Post of the American Legion.

BAPTIST MINISTERS of North New Jersey and their wives were entertained at Scotch Plains Memorial Parish House, Monday, April 25. Guests brought their lunches and the ladies of the church served tea, coffee and ice cream. The parsonage was built in 1786 and is still occupied by Pastor J. Madison Hare. The parish house is a gift from Dr. J. McKennan Coles and his sister in honor of their father and grandfather. After the luncheon Dr. Coles invited and conveyed the guests to his "Deerhurst," one of the most beautiful country places in America. At the parish house the church is carrying on a remarkable community program.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

KEYSTONE ACADEMY is closing its fifty-second year of honorable service to the denomination with the largest graduating class in four years. The class numbers eighteen, three of whom are girls. Of the fifteen boys, thirteen definitely expect to enter college, and about half have already been accepted by the colleges of their choice. In the history of Keystone more than seventy per cent of the boys who have graduated have entered college. One of the graduates will enter Colgate and one Denison to prepare for the ministry, and two will enter Franklin-Marshall to prepare for the medical profession. There have been eleven students who have decided for the ministry enrolled this year.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

BUTLER, FIRST, Robert T. Ketcham, minister, had a great revival campaign with Evangelist F. C. Slocum of New York. More than 200 confessed Christ. At the last meeting two successive services were held to accommodate the crowds that twice filled the house. As the first audience was filling out the second filled in. Pastor Ketcham conducted the chorus choir and Miss Grace Slocum served as accompanist. This campaign made the greatest impact on this city of 30,000 of any evangelistic campaign ever held there.

IN MEETING ITS APPOINTMENT for the New World Movement, the Sewickley Church, Rev. J. S. Stone, pastor, has increased its beneficent offerings 250 per cent over last year.

BETHANY CHURCH, MONESSEN, held its annual meeting on April 7 with a high percentage of the members present. Among the reports presented, special mention should be made of the Sunday school which raised $1,000 during the year; of the Woman's Aid Society, which is helping liberally toward the payment of the parsonage debt; and of the B. Y. P. U., which has doubled its membership in the last four months. The church is not only maintaining its standard while without a pastor, but the attendance has actually increased during the past six weeks.

THE CORNER STONE of the new Park Church, of McKeesport, Rev. W. R. Hill, pastor, was laid with impressive services Sunday afternoon, April 24.

THE ANNUAL RALLY of the B. Y. P. U. of the Pittsburgh Association was held at the Sandusky Street church, Dr. A. J. Bonsall, pastor, Friday evening, April 22. The new officers for the year are: president, Mr. B. D. Cobner; vice president, Mr. C. H. Bolibaugh; recording secretary, Miss Ethel Turner; corresponding secretary, Miss Marion Clark; junior leader, Miss Pearl Leslie.

ON EASTER SUNDAY at the Linesville Church, Rev. J. F. Miller, pastor, nine persons united with the church by baptism and two by letter. Pledges to the New World Movement are paid up. Generous offerings have been made to Chinese and European relief.

REV. RICHARD M. CLOUD died at Gold on April 1, aged 64. He was graduated from Rio Grande College, Ohio, ordained

IN A CAMPAIGN under the leadership of Dr. F. H. Divine, the Highland Church, Huntington, recently pledged the sum of $80,552 for a new church building. A lot in a desirable location had already been purchased and paid for. The achievement is a remarkable one. The Highland Church was organized in 1914 with thirty-nine members; it now has 270 members, of whom 208 are resident. The Bible school has an enrollment of 305 with an average attendance of 250. Rev. Arthur Hank is the present pastor, his term of service dating from June, 1917.

SOUTH DAKOTA

REV. G. ELTON HARRIS has just completed three years of service with the First Church, Sioux Falls. During this time 226 persons have united with the church of whom 114 were baptized. The Sunday school on a recent Sunday had 384 persons present, the largest number in its history.

IOWA

CALVARY, DAVENPORT, Sunday school, during the past two and one-half years of Dr. Houser's pastorate has more than doubled. Over 240 have been received into our fellowship, the greater part by baptism, and nearly every week new members have been added. The finances have passed any preceding period in the history of the church, the total local budget last year being over $15,000. The Chapel under the care of our asst. pastor Rev. J. H. Durham is doing splendid work. Recently the pastor was drafted by the governor of the state to serve on a board of arbitration concerning a misunderstanding between the Tri City Street Railway Co., and one of its employees. We send the Pastor and wife to Des Moines and expect a number of our members to go.

INDIANA

TWENTY-EIGHT DIPLOMAS in the new Standard Teacher Training course have gone this year to classes in Indiana. Gas City had the largest class, with twelve members. The pastor, Mrs. N. B. Leslie, is teacher.

MICHIGAN

FRED B. DAVIS, pastor-elect of Saginaw, First was regularly ordained on Friday, April 22. Rev. Frederick Allen of Bay City was moderator and Rev. T. E. Hoakley of Midland, clerk.

MELVIN, with Pastor R. Place, has gotten out debt, put in electric lights, repaired the parsonage and had a great revival; and the pastor is resigning.

Washtenaw Association

With sorrow on the part of the older members of the various churches in the Washtenaw Association, yet loyalty to Baptist plans for larger things in the kingdom, the delegates from the six churches of the association met in the annual sessions at the Ypsilanti church voted to accord with the advice of the state leaders and unite with Wayne and Lenawee Associations for their next annual gatherings, thus ending the Washtenaw Association. Splendid speakers, snappy business sessions and optimistic and enthusiastic in all things discussed marked the two days, April 26-27. Moderator C. E. Patterson was retained in office until such time as the churches shall have been received into other groups. Miss Jessie Everett of Milan is clerk and treasurer. Speakers from far and near made a fine programme including Miss Fannie Northcote of Swatow, China, Prof. and Mrs. L. E. Martin of the Telugu work, India, Dr. H. L. Stetson, president of Kalamazoo College, and Mr. G. W. Lawrence of Lansing, directing the rural work for the state. Rev. F. M. Spooner of Milan preached the annual sermon. Rev. J. Mason Wells gave a fine address upon Sunday-school work and Rev. Milo S. Waller of Onstead related experiences in his successful work at Onstead. The churches reported a growth in membership by baptism far beyond any recent years while the larger churches and some of the smaller ones report benevolences as doubled and in the case of Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti nearly tripled, with an expenditure for local work nearly doubled. Altogether it was a meeting which suggests that the Baptists of Michigan are to report a banner year his summer since this is one of the first associations to meet for the year.—C. S. Burns.

THE IRON MOUNTAIN CHURCH, on May 1 received seven new members. Rev. Paul Hallin, formerly of Willmar, Minn., is at present supplying this church.

MINNESOTA

BETHEL INSTITUTE at St. Paul has thirty of its forty male students engaged regularly in preaching, and others preach occasionally. Olivia Johnson Memorial Movement is raising a memorial fund in memory of Olivia Johnson of the Philippines. The student volunteer band has 19 members. Plans are being drawn for a girls' dormitory. Enrollment in the Academy has been the largest in the history of the school. It reached 241, and sixty-two will graduate this spring.

KANSAS

REV. GEO. W. BROOME has accepted a call to the Smith Center church and is on the field.

AS A RESULT of the recent meetings held by Pastor Cochran at Parsons there have been up to date about 120 additions to the church. During the past several months nine young people have dedicated their lives to Christian service and three young men have recently been licensed to preach.

THE FIRST CHURCH OF TOPEKA held its annual meeting on April 26, with all bills for the year paid and a little money in the treasury. There was a good net increase in the membership, and the Sunday-school has had the largest enrollment and attendance in the history of the church.

REV. W. G. HOOPER of Pueblo, Col., has been called to the pastorate of the Jetmore church and will come on the field the first of June. Mr. Hooper has been doing colporteur work in Colorado for the past two years.

REV. B. L. SUNDRUM, until recently pastor at Sterling, has been asked to become stated supply for the Barnard Church, and it is more than likely he will become regular pastor later.

PASTOR E. L. WRIGHT of Quinton Heights Church, Topeka, is rejoicing in a splendid year's work. The membership has been considerably increased, and the Sunday-school has gone from a mere handful in attendance to more than eighty at present. This is a mission church at the south edge of Topeka, and is now greatly in need of enlarged quarters.

THE PHILLIPSBURG CHURCH and the denomination have suffered a great loss in the recent death of Dea. J. W. Edwards. THE FIRST CHURCH, OMAHA, reports $24,396.71 raised during the last year for all purposes. There were 115 new members reported, forty-six of whom came by baptism.

THE WORLD WIDE GUILD of the First Church, of Fairbury recently gave the missionary play, "The Pill-Bottle," to a crowded house.

THE CHURCH AT WYMORE has been rejoicing in a revival in which a large number have been added to the church and now mourns the fact that its pastor has resigned to go to Oregon. They feel, and rightly, that one year is too short a time for pastor and people to do their best work together.

EASTER SUNDAY was marked by the dedication of beautiful organs by two of our churches. The First Church, Lincoln, has placed a wonderful organ in its newly-decorated auditorium, which is crowded at nearly every service. The church at Norfolk observed the first anniversary of the dedication of its beautiful house of worship by dedicating a beautiful new organ on Easter Sunday. Dr. Fowle preached the sermon in the morning and Dr. W. H. Bowler in the evening. The following evening the church was crowded at a public recital.

THE CHURCH AT FREMONT has called Rev. Fred Young of Westport, Ind. If he comes he will find a great opportunity. During the three years R. B. Favoright was pastor, 131 new members united with the church; about $23,000 was raised, nearly half of it for missions; and the church went over the top in the New World Movement.

Fresh from the Field

Mrs. Anna W. Hakes, the mother of Mrs. M. C. Treat, of Pasadena, Cal., and of Mrs. Charles W. Gale, of Norwich, Conn., has recently celebrated her one hundred and first birthday. Numerous friends gathered at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Treat at Pasadena, where Mrs. Hakes makes her home, in celebration of the occasion. Among the friends from the East who were present were Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Strong of Rochester, N. Y., Dr. and Mrs. O. P. Gifford of Boston, and Dr. J. H. Franklin of the Foreign Mission Society. Although conscious of the weight of years on her shoulders, Mrs. Hakes enjoys excellent health, finds much pleasure in contact with her friends, and is keenly interested in the movements of the day.

Hudson Avenue Church, Detroit, Rev. Robert White, pastor, is experiencing both the discomfort and the exhilaration of crowded services, and is working hard to get funds for a new building on Grand River Avenue in a new district of 100,000 people where there is no Baptist testimony. Fifteen recently united with the church.

The men of the First Church, Melrose, Mass., led by Rev. Luther G. Barrett, put into the hands of the pastor on May 2 a liberal check to cover all expenses to the convention at Des Moines. Next!

At a farewell reception on April 27 to Rev. and Mrs. E. Carroll Condict at the Grace Church, Trenton, N. J., Mr. Condict was surprised with a gift of $150. Mr. Condict and family sailed on May 5 from New York on the "City of Sparta" for Bombay, returning to their station at Thayetmyo, Burma where they served one term as missionaries. He is the only white man who speaks the S. Chin language. He is a charter member of the Grace Church, Trenton, N. J., and was ordained there in 1911.

Dr. O. P. Gifford is the stated supply of the First Baptist Church of Pasadena, Cal., which has been pastorless since Dr. S. W. Cummings undertook the work at Ruggles Street, Boston. Dr. Gifford is reported as doing possibly the best preaching of his life, and even the Sunday-school rooms and the galleries are frequently crowded with people who wish to hear him.

Dr. Charles A. Fulton is just completing his second year of service as pastor of the First Church of Colorado Springs, Colo. This church is one of rather unusual importance in the West, and its ministry touches the ends of the earth. The delightful climate attracts tourists and health seekers from almost every section of America and from other countries as well. The church is making splendid progress under Dr. Fulton's leadership. During the first four months of the year there were fifty-seven additions to the membership.

At the funeral service of Rev. G. N. Thomsson, held in the Ninth Street Church, Cincinnati, of which he was associate pastor, Rev. John Robertson, an old friend, gave this testimony: "G. N. Thomssen was a scholar, and many are the hours we have talked together on the inspired thought and words of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures: if it be empty preachers that are to blame for empty churches, he is innocent, for he was fully furnished with the sacred Scriptures, and to the fuel there was added the fire of the Holy Ghost. Flaming indeed was his apostolic work for India. Honored by decoration from King George, he was worthy to wear the uniform of the service of the King of kings."

Obituary

Rev. Louis Agassiz Gould

In the passing of Mr. Gould our denomination lost an aforesaid useful missionary, later a faithful minister on the home field, and especially and always a Christian gentleman. He was born in Boston, Mass., the son of Dr. Augustus Addison Gould, an eminent physician in the city, and well known in the medical and scientific world. His father was a friend and collaborator with Louis Agassiz, the celebrated biologist, whence comes the honored name borne by the son, and which in conspicuous Christian service he himself honored, both in the missionary service in China, and in pastorates in the East and West in his own country.

Mr. Gould was graduated from Williams College, and from Rochester Theological Seminary. He died at Los Angeles Feb. 28, 1921, in his sixty-sixth year. The writer best remembers him as an eager and unusually interesting and engaging missionary. Rarely have we had on the platform one who, equipped with the burning missionary fervor and purpose, scholarly training, grace of speech and heart, could make mission work so compelling and so realistic as he made it. The whole atmosphere of the man seemed flawless and Christian. A lady who had entertained him on his visit to a church was once asked what her chief impression was of Mr. Gould. Her answer was: "I never entertained so perfect a gentleman." A refined kindness was in the light of his eye, in the tone of his well-modulated voice, and in the warm courtesy of his manner. Back of it all was a heart belonging to Christ, and entirely enlisted and interested in the kingdom of his Master.

Mr. Gould is survived by a wife and two daughters. Also by two sisters living in Boston, the elder of whom was Miss Lucy, who now is the wife of Judge J. B. Richardson; the younger is Miss Julia N. Gould, a member of the Clarendon Street Church, Boston.

Books Reviewed

"Luke the Historian in the Light of Research."
Prof. A. T. Robertson: Charles Scribner's Sons.

Prof. Robertson has achieved before the religious world an enviable reputation as a Biblical scholar and popular author. We have reviewed with praise other volumes from his busy pen. This volume will greatly accentuate his ability as a thinker and critical scholar. We have consulted no commentary on the gospel of Luke and Book of the Acts which gave more light on these productions than does this "Light of Research." In considering the birth of Jesus he launches into the midst of the "virgin birth" controversy and accepts the statements of the writer without reservation. Rarely have we had a more interesting book which the lay reader can appreciate and the scholar can study with his Greek Testament conveniently near.

"The Life and Letters of Hamilton W. Mabie."
By Edwin W. Morse. Dodd, Mead and Co.

A life which, in its richness of personal service and influence of high ethical and spiritual ideals, seems to have woven itself throughout the last half-century of literary effort in this country, was that of Mr. Mabie, the subject of this well-written and comprehensive biography. We are shown the growth and development of the man of letters from his college days at Williams College, his unwilling years spent in law drudgery, the release which came by way of "The Christian Union" (which was later transformed into "The Outlook," carrying the budding author along with it), the close connections with the prominent writers of his day, his influence upon them and their reaction upon his work, the multitudinous avenues of his philanthropic activities, his great achievements as a writer, as critic, as spiritual guide to many, his artistic guidance to not a few—all these sides of the man are exhibited, largely by means of his personal letters linked together so as to form a consecutive narrative.

"The Abandoned Farmers."

By Irvin S. Cobb. Published by George H. Doran Co.

If you like the robust, care-free humor of Mr. Cobb, this handsome volume holds within its pages many hearty chuckles and snorts. The humor of Irvin Cobb is of a type far removed from the cerebral wit of Stephen Leacock or the mordant brilliancy of George Bernard Shaw to specify a couple of contrasting competitors. Around the many adventures and mishaps contingent upon a migration from the status as a dweller in a "flat" to that of a more or less proud owner of a "place in the country," Cobb has woven a clever nimbus of fun and frolic that is provocative of much hilarity.

"Chand's Little Sisters."

By D. S. Bately. Published by the Central Board of Missions, and Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, London, England. Agents in New York, the Macmillan Co.

Perhaps there still exist a few specimens of that ante-diluvian type that feels that foreign missionary work is a sort of gratuitous interference with the "personal liberty" of self-respecting heathen folk, that it is a "holier-than-thou" display undertaken by a few stiff-necked Puritans who disliked to see the so-called heathen enjoy his freedom. It any of this variety are left, and have any leisure to spare after their daily "hate" at the Eighteenth Amendment, I would humbly suggest that they begin their educational uplift by carefully perusing this small volume.

WILLIAM LESTER

LARGE VERSUS SMALL ORGANS

AFTER the halt in church-building and organ installation due to war activities the "rush time" has come; five years have left a deficit in normal improvements, new interest has arisen and consequently the builder and makers are swamped with orders. This is as it should be. When the church as a whole realizes how it has neglected the musical side of the work, how disorganized and sporadic all effort for musical advancement has been, and with what tinsel and tinkly tunes we have been satisfied; when the day comes that the Christian church as a whole can frankly take stock as to its musical achievements and the value of its musical ritual, then, after indulgence in a profound sense of shame for a wonderful opportunity long left unused, we will all gird up our loins, and without prejudice or rancor, set about doing this part of "our Father's business" that has long been undone or very badly done.

Good instruments for use in divine worship will be one of the most outstanding features of this revival: there has been a wonderful improvement in the attitude of the churches to this side of the problem during the past few years. A step in advance would be made if we would all realize that an organist can sound no better than his instrument—and there are certainly more good organists than good instruments. As I mentally enumerate the fine organists that are playing in the Chicago churches, I should estimate that eight out of nine are forced to play on organs that are survivals of the flood: they do their best—but if their churches could only hear them on a good instrument! Of course finance must be considered, but there must and will be some way out.

From a recent "New Music Review" I clip the subjoined article, that has some relationship to the problem noted above—its points are of vivid significance to those of our rural churches which are considering new instruments and, limited by a small appropriation, are torn between the pull for a showy, shoddy stand of pipes, and a small modest instrument of quality.

In these days of hypertrophied church organs, when anything short of three claviers and forty registers is looked upon as being more or less insignificant, it is well to remember that a very adequate accompaniment can be played with only four good stops—three on the "great" and one on the "pedal." Organists who preside at these overgrown instruments are the just as well "off" as "on" as far as vocal support is concerned.

A few first-rate stops of the diapason family are worth a dozen of the ill-assorted kind. Small organs are getting rather scarce in this country. On the other side of the ocean builders make quite a specialty of "mission" and "chapel" organs. Just before the war a very useful instrument consisting of three stops could be bought for seventy pounds! For this small sum several reputable firms would supply an open diapason, a clarabella, a flute (all enclosed in a swell box), and a pedal board with couplers.

The cost has undoubtedly risen, but allowing for an advance it comes to about the price often paid for a "reed organ" that has no supporting power. For mission churches a four- or five-stop organ made by a reliable builder is far more economical in the end than a "harmonium" of the most exalted kind. For that matter one good open diapason is preferable. The small organ deserves more attention than it generally receives.

PATRIOTIC AND MEMORIAL MUSIC

FROM several choir-leaders has come the request for a list of anthems suitable for use on patriotic occasions and for titles adapted to such observances as Memorial Day and for funeral use. In response to this call we print below a selection of titles from which these various needs can be satisfied. Most of the titles are of anthems that have not had the wide usage of such works as the Recessional of Kipling set by Schneckler or De Koven; rather have I chosen newer, less hackneyed works. Choose for yourself.

NEW MUSIC

From Arthur P. Schmidt Co., Boston, Mass.
Child-Land Sunday School, by Florence Newell Barbour.

This well-bound and clearly printed book of simple songs for children should prove of great utility value to both the teachers and the little ones. It is a very successful attempt to give both kindergarten and Sunday-School classes a selection of interesting songs, simple enough to be easily compassed by the little folks, and of interest enough to stand translation into older voices. The melodies are individual and singable; the piano accompaniments are adequate, yet easy.

From Huntzinger and Dilworth, New York, N. Y.
When I Consider the Heavens, by John Prindle Scott.

Even Song, by John Prindle Scott.
Good sacred songs are not so plentiful that we can afford to ignore such usable, grateful devotional titles as we list above. The first-named is a broadly melodious, reverent setting of parts of the Eighth Psalm, calling for no great exercise of vocal equipment, but grateful to both the soloist and the hearers. The "Even Song" is more on the English Ballad order, with a well-written violin obligato. Both songs are issued in two keys.

From the Lorenz Publishing Co., Dayton, O.
The Good Shepherd, by Ira B. Wilson.

Easy, well written, and effective service cantatas are not so plentiful that we can afford to ignore this excellent example of such a composition. The name of the composer insures the practicability of the work, the title sufficiently indicates the subject matter, the imprint of the publishing firm sponsors its splendid mechanical get-up. The choir which performs this cantata will have a grateful task, and can rest assured that the audience will be equally pleased.

FROM Jericho the road leads upward to Jerusalem. The great cut through which Jordan flows is succeeded by barren country from the midst of which the pilgrim longingly lifts his eyes unto the hills. The end of the journey is in Zion, "city of our God."

Fresh from the Field

The church at Oberlin, Ohio, voted to send its pastor, Dr. J. W. Weddell, to the Des Moines convention with all expenses paid. Next!

Rev. Fred Young of Westport, Ind., has received a call to the First Church of Fremont, Neb. His resignation will take effect in the next few weeks.

Chicago University has created and has now in operation in connection with its Divinity school elaborate courses in missionary preparation. In addition to theological instruction, it offers general courses in problems and methods of missionary expansion, principles of religious propaganda, the technique of missions, Christianity and other agencies of world civilization, missionary expansion during the first eighteen centuries, history of missions in the nineteenth century, the Christian approach to particular types of culture, special courses on mission fields, courses in comparative religion, social approach to the study of missions, courses in philosophy and psychology, preparation for teaching, preparation for administrative work, phonetics, and preparation for medical work and sanitation.

We are receiving a great number of letters asking if we can entertain missionary pastors and various others. We have investigated the customs of the past meetings of this body, and find that only returned foreign missionaries or those in the various islands and countries outside of the United States under the Home Mission Society and a few special workers have been entertained for bed and breakfast free. The Des Moines Baptists are making arrangements to extend this courtesy within the limits established by previous conventions.

It would be a pleasure to extend this courtesy wider, but it is not practical, and we hope that church and other missionary agencies will help bear the funds of many worthy men and women who ought to attend the convention and will be unable to do so if required to bear the expense alone. H. R. Best, Chairman Committee on Arrangements.

Rev. Fred M. Preble who for almost eighteen years was pastor of the Court Street Church, Auburn, Me., until compelled a few years ago to resign on account of ill health, expects to return to Ludlow, Vt., about the middle of the present month, after having spent the winter in Riverside, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. Preble's habit now is to divide the year about equally between Vermont and California.

President Emeritus A. H. Strong, of Rochester Theological Seminary, was expected in Chicago on May 19 as the guest of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, and was to speak in the chapel at three and to be greeted at an informal reception at four in the afternoon. The public was invited to these exercises. Drs. A. S. Carman, J. Heinrichs and G. W. Taft are former students of Dr. Strong.

Rev. A. K. Scott of Perry, Ohio, has accepted the call given him by the church at Nashville, Mich., and began his work there on May 1. Mr. Scott was formerly pastor in Michigan for eleven years.

Mr. James J. Davis, the new secretary of labor in Pres. Harding's cabinet, is a Baptist.

Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Blackburn of Cambridge, Mass., were recently guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Corwin Shank, of Seattle, Wash. Dr. Blackburn spoke at the First Church of Seattle at the new members dinner on April 28.

The other day Dr. Bruce Kinney sent to home mission headquarters the quarterly report of our Rainy Mountain Indian church treasurer. It was prepared wholly by a full-blood Kiowa Indian. "I am wondering if many of our white church treasurers can prepare clearer statements than this," wrote Dr. Kinney. The report was shown to our own expert accountant who said, "That will do all right," which may be considered high praise on lower Manhattan.

On March 22 there was graduated in Puebla the first class that has completed its course in our Nurses' Training School in connection with the Latin-American Hospital. Three nurses received their diplomas on this occasion. There can be no greater work than fitting young women for this ministry of healing in the name of Christ.

Negro delegates to the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines from co-operating Baptist churches will, if they wish entertainment, address Rev. T. L. Griffith at 828 Thirteenth St., Des Moines, Iowa, instead of at the address given in a recent number of THE BAPTIST.

Mrs. Grant M. Hudson died at Lansing, Mich., Friday night, May 13.

No Hold-up in Des Moines

THERE seems to have gotten abroad a false impression that the delegates to the Des Moines Convention were to be the victims of a holdup. Here are the facts. There is an abundance of good rooms in good hotels at very reasonable rates. For from $2 to $2.50 a room may be secured to be occupied by two persons—that is the cost per person will be from $1 to $1.25. There are many rooms with bath at $3 and $4 with two persons in a room—that is the cost per person will be from $1.50 to $2. Rooms in the best hotels in the city may be secured for $5 per day with two persons in a room—that is at $2.50 per person. Of course, if you desire to room alone you must pay the full room rate. For those who wish to economize there are good rooms in the smaller hotels for $1.50 and $2 per person. The entertainment committee strongly advises that you secure accommodations in hotels. This is for the comfort and convenience of the delegates. However, for those who wish to be entertained in private homes the committee will make arrangements at from $1 to $1.50 per day. In the latter case it will be necessary to take street cars and will otherwise be less convenient. Please note that if you desire the better accommodations at the lower rates it will be necessary to send in your reservation at once. Write the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mr. F. E. Goodell, Baptist Headquarters, Des Moines.

The William Cleaver Wilkinson Lectureship

Mrs. Harriet R. Wilkinson of Chicago has established a permanent lectureship on "The Christian Religion; in Life, in Literature and in Art," in connection with the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary of Chicago. This is to be known as the "William Cleaver Wilkinson Lectureship." During each calendar year, by the terms of the contract which has been made, the seminary will appoint from one to five persons of distinguished character and culture to lecture at the seminary upon subjects vitally related to the Christian religion in life, in literature and in art, and will make such provision that the general public, so far as interested, may attend such lecture. Mrs. Wilkinson made the first payment for the lectures for the ensuing year to the seminary on April 25, 1921, which was the first anniversary of the death of Dr. Wilkinson. The committee in charge of the lectures consists of the president of the seminary, two other members of the faculty, and, during his life, Dr. Arthur L. Wilkinson of Ann Arbor, Mich., a brother of the late Dr. W. C. Wilkinson. The amount of the fund is sufficient to make this one of the outstanding lectureships of the country. Dr. Augustus H. Strong has been invited to deliver the first series of lectures, which, if he accepts, will be given in the fall.

Short Talks on Investments

BY LEE B. DOTY

American Telephone and Telegraph

WHEN the American Telephone and Telegraph Company announced an increase in its dividend rate from 8% to 9% a few weeks ago, the action caused considerable surprise. Before the increase was announced there had been no particular variation in the price of the stock on the exchange which makes it very apparent that the directors who had private information of the intended action did not use that information for their own personal advantage in dealing in the stock. In announcing the increase the company called attention to the fact that from its experience of the last ten years it will be well able to maintain the new rate, as its earnings since 1911 have always been over 9% and have averaged almost 10% for the ten year period.

The question arises why the company should have increased its dividend at a time when so many others are reducing theirs. A reason is to be found in the desire of the management to maintain a proper relation between the company's amount of capital stock outstanding and its indebtedness. At the close of 1920 the American Telephone and Telegraph Company had outstanding about $442,000,000 of capital stock, and bonds and notes aggregating $317,000,000. Rather than continue offering new bond issues and thus increase its indebtedness from time to time, the management desires to raise its new funds by selling the stock of the company to the public so that it may always have outstanding a greater amount of capital stock than of bonded indebtedness and it was in order to make the stock more attractive from an investment standpoint that the dividend rate was increased.

Very few enterprises meet with such constant demands for new capital as the telephone companies. There is continual need for the increase of their facilities and for the replacement of obsolete equipment. This is especially true of this company which is the parent company of all the Bell telephone systems in this country.

They Got the Hymnals

Some weeks ago we called attention to an heroic little mission church which without a pastor went over the top in the New World Movement, paid a large part of a heavy debt and needed for its worship some hymn books. Well, they got the books. A letter expresses their gratitude. Why says this "Kollum" is no good?

Killam's Kollum

Edison's Tests

THERE is quite a stir in the daily press on account of the series of questions submitted to college applicants for positions in the institution of the "Wizard of Menlo Park." These applicants come with sheepskins which tell of technical study and attainment. Mr. Edison does not belittle these. His questions could for the most part be answered by any thoughtful reader of newspapers, magazines and a world almanac. Correct answers simply indicate general reading, an inquiring and retentive mind. A good score shows that the man is living, not alone in the realm of theory, speculation and investigation, but in a world chock full of interesting and instructive facts. Edison wants men with their eyes, ears and minds wide open.

Need an Edison on Ordination Councils

During the next few weeks THE BAPTIST will record the ordination to the gospel ministry of a number of young men from our colleges and seminaries. They will come to their work with the technical knowledge gained in the classrooms. They will be examined as to the Christian experience, call to the ministry and views of Christian doctrine. No church can afford to belittle these. Would it not be fitting, however, for some Baptist Edison to draft a series of questions the answer to which would show clearly that these young men are living in the world of today? A knowledge of the forces at work for the social, educational and religious weal seems to us indispensable. Such questions could be answered by any careful readers of the denominational periodicals—THE BAPTIST and Missions and a good interdenominational journal. Does not service in the churches require men with eyes, ears and minds wide open to God's truth in his book and God's work in his World?

A Sorry Fact

We have today hundreds of pastors who do not have the denominational periodicals or other religious journals on their library tables. How can these men be expected to take the leadership in the great movements in the Christian world? In some cases miserable, inadequate salaries forbid even the expenditure of $3 for THE BAPTIST and Missions. In others such periodicals, to use the words of one pastor, are "confusing." A good man in the East recently sent us his check for $100 to meet the needs of some of the former group. Another subscriber in Michigan sent us $25 for the same purpose. These splendid gifts hardly make a dent in the mountain of need. Let us try to meet the needs of all the former group and convert the latter group.

Why I Shall Pay My Pledge

A YEAR ago I made a pledge to the New World Movement. I intend to pay the amount of that pledge, every cent of it.

1. Because I made it. That ought to be reason enough. No one compelled me to make it, nor did anyone unduly persuade me. I made it voluntarily, gladly, and I was about to say, hilariously. For the sake of my own integrity, to keep faith with myself, I intend to pay.

2. Because it was made to God. He is my Father. He loves me and I love him. I love him just as much today as I did a year ago, and perhaps more. I expect to see him some day face to face, and I am sure I shall not want a matter of a broken pledge to stand between us.

3. Because it was made to my brethren. Certain men have been chosen and appointed to be leaders in our world-wide denominational enterprises. These men spent many months preparing an exhaustive survey of the fields, facts, and forces concerned in these enterprises. They submitted a program which they considered to be the minimum of effort required to meet the needs revealed by the survey. I studied their survey and their program. When I signed my pledge I virtually said to them, "Go ahead with your program; I will pay my part." They accepted my pledge in good faith and planned their work upon it. If I do not pay, their plans will fail and their leadership will be weakened. They shall not fail on my account: I intend to pay.

4. Because I am just as much concerned about the world-wide interests of the Kingdom of God now as I was a year ago. I pledged because I wanted to see improvement in efficiency in fields now occupied and expansion of effort to include those fields and opportunities that by the providence of God have been allotted to Baptists for evangelizing and Christianizing in which no work has yet been done.

5. Because the need is greater now than it was a year ago. There are more open doors now, and their number is constantly increasing both at home and abroad. The Americanization of the many racial groups at home is in itself a problem of constantly growing proportions. The unsettled conditions in Europe and the Orient following the war have made it more than ever imperative that the Spirit of Christ shall be the leaven which must create and preserve the atmosphere that is essential to the welfare of civilization and of human kind. The need is greater also because of the increased cost of doing every kind of Christian work in every part of the earth. I will pay all I have pledged and more if I can.

6. Because I have a peculiar pride in and love for the denomination to which I "belong." Baptist heritages, achievements, and teachings have a stronger appeal to me than those of any other denomination. If I were not so I would not be a Baptist. I am exceedingly anxious that we Baptists shall have a place of large usefulness in the future work of the Kingdom.

7. Because a tenth of my income (no less) belongs to God. I have not pledged beyond that amount, and until I do I have no right to talk about "giving" to him. As the sole trustee of his tenth I am under solemn obligation to use my best judgment in administering it in the most effective way. I believed a year ago, and I still believe that the New World Movement will yield larger returns to God for the investment of his money than any other enterprise in which I have ever been given the privilege to share for the advancement of his Kingdom. It is God's money and God's work, and I dare not withhold. I will pay if he preserves my life. (Statement made on Sunday morning, May 1, by Rev. Harvey J. Moore, pastor of the First Church, Keokuk, Iowa.)

Des Moines Convention

FOR the Des Moines Convention, the passenger associations have agreed to a round trip rate, of fare and one-half of the regular one way fare, with a minimum of one dollar for the round trip.

This rate is applicable from all stations north of the line of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, except in New England where the railroads will maintain their present fares, but those living in that territory will participate in the reduced rate after they leave those lines, as indicated below.

Re-enforcements

At the meeting of the Board of Managers of the Foreign Mission Society, held in New York Tuesday, May 3, eight new missionaries received their appointments. Their names are as follows: Miss Phyllis H. Additon, Mr. George W. Supplee, Miss Helen R. Lamberton, Mr. Morton F. Yates, Mrs. Morton F. Yates, Mr. William G. Dunn, Mr. Charles S. Gibbs, and Miss Myrtle L. Aldrich.

This makes a total of two hundred missionaries, including those of the Woman's Society, who have received their appointment since April 1, 1919, thus concluding two years of the New World Movement. Of these two hundred, there are 135 already on the fields, and the remaining 65 expect to sail for their fields in the fall of the current year or later.

From California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, an excursion rate of one and one-third fare has been arranged from June 1 to Aug. 15 inclusive.

Excepting those who live in the states of California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, members of Baptist churches and dependent members of their families who are attending the convention, desiring to avail themselves of the reduced rates, must secure identification certificates, which may be obtained from the secretaries of state organizations, from those arranging for parties to the convention, or from the undersigned. Those living in New England should procure these certificates, so that they can purchase through tickets from their home town to Des Moines, for while the New England fare will not be reduced, they may thus be able to participate in the reduction which is made west of the New England lines.

The reduced fare tickets will be on sale at the ticket office in your home town, to holders of certificates, on June 15-21 inclusive, with return limit of midnight,

July 4, to those living in Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming. Those who live in Illinois, Iowa, Northern Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and States East of Chicago, the dates of sale will be June 16-22 and limit of final return, midnight of July 3.

Tickets must be validated at Des Moines for return, June 20-July 1 inclusive, by ticket agent at the regular ticket office of the line by which the passenger arrived; they will be good only on that line, and must be used on the day of validation.

If the above is not clear, or any further details desired, consult the ticket agent in your home town, who will be instructed therein.

State secretaries, transportation leaders, and others requiring certificates for use by those attending the convention from their localities, should apply at once for them to the undersigned.

W. G. BRIMSON,
Manager of Transportation,
Northern Baptist Convention.

Chicago, May 11, 1921.

The Close of the Fiscal Year

REPORTS received up to noon of May 12th indicate the total receipts on the $12,500,000 operating budgets of all organizations participating in the New World Movement, for the fiscal year closing as of April 30, 1921, will aggregate fully $10,500,000.

The total receipts are approximately $2,000,000 less than the amount required to take care of the operating budgets of all organizations. The income for the year represents about 84 per cent of the amount due on pledges to May 1. This amount is far in excess of the receipts of any previous year in the history of our work.

The total amount of designated gifts received in addition to the $10,500,000 on operating budgets will doubtless aggregate over $800,000.

The above figures do not include either the principal or income of large special gifts made to The American Baptist Home Mission Society, The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, and the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board during the last fiscal year.

We wish to express heartfelt appreciation to all churches and friends for the generous contributions which have been made under trying financial conditions. We have great reason to be grateful to God for the widespread response which is so clearly indicated in the financial returns for the year.

Reports of spiritual awakening in multitudes of churches give evidence of a new sense of the presence and blessing of God. Since the beginning of the New World Movement our foreign mission societies have appointed 200 new missionaries. Our home mission societies report a spirit of sacrificial giving on the part of the mission churches generally, and a deep interest on the part of foreign-speaking churches in the success of the New World Movement. Should we not thank God and take courage? May we not enter the new fiscal year with enlarged vision, renewed hope, and a determination to press forward steadily until we reach our New World Movement goals?

General Director.

Beware of Dwarfing the Soul of the Movement

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week of the resignation of Dr. E. M. Poteat and of Dr. R. M. West as executive secretaries of the departments of life work and of prayer and stewardship of the General Board of Promotion. The purpose of this action, as expressed, was to free the hands of the committee on correlation appointed at Minneapolis to study the present organization and future activity of the Board of Promotion as that committee undertakes its work.

We give quick and hearty recognition of the unselfish action of these two beloved and splendidly efficient brethren. But we await evidence as to the wisdom of their action.

The New World Movement is a spiritual movement. Too great emphasis cannot be placed on this fact. To be sure, certain financial objectives must be reached if the spiritual ends sought are to be attained. But the object of the whole movement is to enable our Baptist churches in the North to answer, in the name of Jesus Christ, the challenging appeal of world conditions as they are. How can this end be reached if such work as that designed for the two departments named is contracted?

Adjustments of various kinds may be needful. It may be that there should be a closer correlation of the work of the various societies which are seeking to enlist men and women in Christian service and to develop the spiritual life of the local churches. But the work itself should be increased and not diminished. There is such a thing as keeping one's eyes so closely fixed on matters of expense that more important things are missed. We trust that the committee of business men which is studying the matter will make no such mistake.

The question is a far larger one than that of these two men who were first called from other tasks to serve the denomination as a whole and who now express their willingness to retire if retirement is demanded. It is the question of the goals that are before us and the means of reaching them. If life service and stewardship are not pressed, we shall never raise $100,000,000. And if we did raise it, we should not know what to do with it. If these two great objectives are brought close to the heart of the churches we cannot possibly fail in the great endeavor which has so gripped our imaginations.

Women for the Convention Papers

"A JUBILEE GIFT," proposed by the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, advertised in THE BAPTIST of April 30 and again in this number on page 516, is in line with the vision and daring exhibited by the leaders of the Baptist women throughout the period celebrated by their Jubilee. They have always had faith to attempt the unusual, and their achievements have steadily justified their faith.

What they propose in this case is to present to the denomination in the name and through the agencies of their organization, 5000 new subscriptions to THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS. They are neither tinkering nor plunging in this venture. They have deliberated. They have sought an objective that would fitly crown their Jubilee. They have considered how they might best promote the interests of the denomination and of the kingdom of God by some special sacramental service.

They might have planted in some notable place a Jubilee Tree; and for a hundred years or more, visitors to the spot would have been inspired by its sacred significance. But how much more significant, how much more in harmony with the great commission and with the custom of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Mission Society, to make even their Jubilee memorial an agency for missionary enlightenment and promotion; and for this purpose to place in 5000 new Baptist homes the papers of the Northern Baptist Convention for the religious, denominational and missionary enlightenment of our people.

Having set their hearts and hands to this enterprise, they will carry it out; and no human being can calculate the value of the contribution which they will thereby make to the progress of the Kingdom of God.

Calling for the Report

SOME weeks ago in these columns appeared the suggestion that an abstract of the report of the committee on schools, which is to be presented at Des Moines, be given to the denominational press a few weeks before the convention in order that our churches generally may be informed concerning what is to be considered by that body. There has just come to us, among other communications on the subject, a letter from the pastor of one of the prominent churches of the West, who is himself a member of the General Board of Promotion, in which he says:

"Some few weeks ago I noted a suggestion in THE BAPTIST that the first draft of the report of this committee be made in THE BAPTIST and other papers before the meeting of the convention. I welcome that suggestion. I trust that such a report will be published. It is right to that great number who can never be present that they have some knowledge of the things before us. . . . It is good policy to let the people have the facts in any great question that concerns their cooperation in our work. I for one hope to see this report before the convention."

The committee itself has as yet said nothing. What about it, brethren? Shall the army of the stay-at-homes, who cannot possibly attend a national convention, be informed concerning this matter before it comes up in the convention for discussion and possible decision, and so be enabled to express themselves while either approval or protest is of value?

What Are the Prospects for the Coming Convention?

IN a few weeks the Baptists of the North will assemble at Des Moines in the annual meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention. Many thousands of them are looking forward to that meeting with some anxiety, wondering what is likely to be said and done and whether the outlook is encouraging or otherwise.

A few facts which seem to have decisive value present a hopeful prospect, and if they are here correctly estimated, they warrant the expectation of a great meeting and a happy outcome.

In the first place there has been a great spiritual quickening throughout the constituency of the Convention. Ever since last October the news from the churches has carried the revival refrain. There is no means of knowing yet how the statistical tables will stand; but there is little doubt that they will show large gains in conversions, in membership, in Sunday-school enrollment, in young people's organizations, in buildings and improvements, in financial budgets, in crowds at prayer meetings and at the preaching of the gospel and in the number of young people enlisting for life service and seeking higher education. These things point to an enriched fellowship, a strengthened denominational morale and an augmented working force.

In the second place we are beginning to fill the gaps in our depleted missionary ranks and to strengthen the organized agencies of Baptist advance, including our schools, while more and more the denomination is visualizing and validating to its deepest soul the program of the New World Movement.

Again, while nobody knows just what the report of the committee on schools will be, yet it is incredible that it will be antagonistic and damaging to the cause of Baptist education. We are expecting a constructive and forward-looking report. Flaws may be found in our educational agencies here and there and suggestions for improvement may be made; but the denomination is not going to destroy its schools.

Noteworthy also is the elimination of the controversial element in the program. During the year two quite distinct tendencies have been at work to reduce friction. Spokesmen for the extreme conservatives, or perhaps in more accurate and acceptable usage, "fundamentalists," have materially modified their lines of emphasis; and on the other hand, among those who are classed as "liberals," there has developed a pronounced evangelical note. Thus the two extremes have approached each other, and, so far as their relative attitudes are concerned, it is distinctly easier for them to speak a common language than it would have been a year ago. Besides this, the "fundamentalist" movement in its organized form has definitely dissociated itself from the Northern Baptist Convention and become pan-American. There is gain in this arrangement in two directions; the movement itself will be freer, from the suspicion that it is an effort to project division into the convention; and the convention will also be freer, because no action of the "fundamentalist" conference will have any formal relation to the program of the convention. Thus both will be entirely unembarrassed because wholly apart from each other.

The program itself will doubtless this year be largely inspirational and unifying. With a splendid group of missionaries on furlough available for addresses, and with the great body of the delegates desirous of participating in constructive rather than divisive deliberations, as they surely are, any self-seeking or factional sparring is going to find scant tolerance.

All of these indications point to the prospect of a meeting really great in constructive results and to a delightful fellowship.

Where the Gospel Is Inane

"NOT merely a revival of religion is needed and an awakening of goodwill, but such a restatement of both as shall show religion to be supremely authoritative and goodwill to be as inclusive as the farthest boundaries of human life."

So declared the Religious Education Association in its eighteenth annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., a little more than a month ago. And right well has it spoken.

We evangelical Christians take revivals and awakenings of goodwill as matters of course. But to others they are not matters of course. When we insist that our religion is divinely revealed and authoritative, we are instantly challenged to a showing. Men will no longer—if they ever did—accept its authority on our word. Its authority must be evidenced to them, and the only evidence to which they attach convincing force is the way religion works.

Instinctively they feel that a blessed hope for the future, if it is fit to be trusted, will show itself in a blessed helpfulness here and now. And unless we are prepared to state our faith in terms that commit us to the reign of right and the service of goodwill wherever humans dwell and human relations run, our gospel is to them inane.

* * *

Our brethren of the Southern Baptist Convention have been meeting in their annual session at Chattanooga, Tenn., from May 12 to 18. The sessions are of much interest because they mark the close of the second year of the Seventy-Five Million Campaign, because of the necessity of electing a successor to Pres. J. B. Gambrell who has so ably served the convention for four years and because of the subjects to be discussed. THE BAPTIST expects in its next issue to print a complete and illuminating report of these great meetings.

Seeing the East With American Eyes

The writer of the following sketch is a business man of Los Angeles, traveling abroad in the interest of the International Commerce Corporation. He will report to THE BAPTIST his observations on mission fields.

BY P. E. SNELL

AS I promised, before leaving America on this extended business trip, so I now will commence to make good that promise to give you one business man's viewpoint on our missionary efforts in foreign lands.

Through the courtesy of Dr. A. W. Halsey, of the Presbyterian F. M. Board in New York, I have had the great pleasure of meeting one of God's best workers in his vineyard. I refer to Dr. Sam Zwemer of Cairo, head of their wonderful educational missionary endeavors in Egypt, a man accepted and respected by all the heads of the twenty-five different religious faiths and creeds now represented in this great land.

All Christians of whatever creed, should become better acquainted with the great work being done in this land of Mohammedanism. Great events no doubt will take place in and around the eastern end of the Mediterranean Sea in the no distant future—events which will have much to do with Christianity, if those who study the world's history know what they are talking about. If there is to be another great war in Europe, it will probably have its inception in the Near East—as some events seem already to point out.

Men and Women Give Their Lives

These men and women who are giving their lives and all that they have or can be to the real work of preaching, and teaching the gospel of Jesus to every living creature, are most assuredly entitled to all our sympathy, our prayers, our confidence, and to a far greater portion of our easily-gotten money, none of which actually belongs to us. God is blessing this work in Egypt, because of the unselfish men and women of strong Christian character who are devoting their every-day lives to his work. Nearly 100,000 of a population of 800,000 in Cairo alone are numbered among those of Christian faith and belief. Although the topic of religion is generally considered taboo, especially among Mohammedans, who many times outnumber all other faiths in Egypt, still those who accept Christ and really try to follow him are a power for good in this land, and their every-day lives are counting for him. A man or woman who does not simply talk his religion, but lives it daily in his home and business, commands the respect of his fellows and neighbors of different faiths.

Just as at home—so it is here—one who wears his religion on Sunday, and forgets to actually live it on each of the days of the week—not only fails himself, but by his example causes others to stumble, and to doubt the truth of Him who died for us all.

Those Who do not Know Him Doubt Us

The problems of Egypt are ours. Living Christianity for today is the only thing that counts, and those whose lives are merely spent in getting ready for a life beyond, are not putting over Christ's teachings or commands.

Those who do not know him have a legitimate right to doubt both us, and him, if we cannot and do not show him in our daily lives.

One hears much criticism abroad among those of other faiths and those of no faith, that most of our preachers in Protestant pulpits spend their efforts in attempts to influence people to get ready for a life hereafter, and telling of the penalties that will befall if people do not prepare to meet their God in the hereafter—instead of telling and showing people how to live here and now, and have him in their daily life and occupation.

Another criticism from foreigners, Catholics as well as Mohammedans, and of importance and vital to the greater work by our Mohammedans is the common belief expressed that American churches actually make gifts and pay money to converts.

During the past two weeks, I have talked with a number of non-churchmen in Egypt who have openly expressed this belief—one of these a man who is well enough educated to speak and write six languages. He is an Armenian Catholic, but not a church-goer or strong in his faith. He is not prejudiced against Christianity, but actually believes and reports his relatives as believing that church converts in Egypt are paid to become such. This man's cousin had one year in the American missionary college here, and left because they say they were hearing too much about religion in their school life, and teachers tried too hard to get them to accept Christianity.

One of the strongest condemnations and criticisms of our Protestant church in America is this that there are practically no men's missionary societies in them, and that an extremely large percentage of our men members are sadly ignorant regarding any of the facts or details of foreign missionary endeavors.

We men practically stand open to strong as well as just criticism, because of our laxity in this respect. This is our business, and if we do not make it such, to know and help to the limit of our ability, then how are we to expect God to bless us in our daily lives, or make a place over there for us. If we do not know and serve him here by living his life and keeping all of his work on the foreign fields, what claim have we to his loving kindness.

Ancient and Modern Side by Side

As in the days of Joseph and Moses here in Egypt, one now sees the camel as beast of burden; the wood plough drawn by oxen; the sickle as general means of grain and alfalfa cutting; the goat skin filled with water and carried from house to house peddling water; the mud hut with its dirt floor, no windows or doors; the roof garden and dung piles spread out on roof, which afterwards is burned in fire to cook meals; all of the family living in one room with fowls, swine and other animals; the shepherd with his flocks of goats or sheep—hundreds of such flocks; the hand-power or ox-propelled irrigation system, and many other ancient customs.

Just beside or near them are modern shops; hotels of greatest comfort, with fine baths, elevators and toilet facilities; fine orchestras, electric cars, bicycles, motorcycles, automobiles, and Fords. There are silk-stockinged women and girls in the finest dresses of silk rubbing shoulders by peasants with bare or sandaled feet; the ox cart and camel beside the modern auto in same street—until one stops and ponders it all with brain awl.

Cairo, Egypt.

Shall We Restrict Immigration?

A tide of immigration is flowing from ruined Europe to America. Look for 15,000,000 in the next five years. America must save herself to save the world. What is a reasonable immigration policy? A son of Italy answers.

BY ANTONIO MANGANO

DURING the world war it was the common opinion among many students of social problems, that with coming of peace, Immigration from the various European countries would cease. Indeed, it was prophesied that hundreds of thousands of laborers would return to the land of their birth, taking with them their savings amounting to a billion dollars, for the purpose of building up the devastated regions from which they came.

Many people were thoroughly convinced that this would be the case. As a consequence the leaders in big business became alarmed. Indeed, so much concerned were they that early in 1919 a gathering was called to consider ways and means whereby the anticipated exodus and the drain upon the banks might be prevented.

The conference drew up a resolution in which it was clearly stated that the various representatives favored "A more equitable treatment for the worker of foreign birth." This declaration told its own story. Certain specific recommendations were made which would render the life of the foreigner in America more attractive.

This was fine—and big business acted right, even though it was compelled to make this move from selfish motives. This action would have had moral value had it been taken in pre-war days.

Tide Ran the Wrong Way

But the great wave of emigration did not materialize. Instead of an exodus we have been witnessing during the past year a return to pre-war immigration conditions. The exodus has been from Europe America-ward. Recently the numbers have been so great that the officials at Ellis Island have been put to it to know how to handle and care for the newcomers. There have been, at times, as many as seven ships in the harbor waiting to unload their human cargo. On a recent visit to the Island, I found that there were 2800 men and women in the building which cannot care properly for more than 1500.

Commissioner Wallis told us that he had reliable information that 300,000 Italians had already secured their passports and that 3,000,000 more were making ready to come as soon as shipping facilities were made available. He stated further that 300,000 Poles, notwithstanding their long dreamed of new republic, were awaiting with tickets in hand, to cross the ocean; that 5,000,000 Germans would gladly come if they felt that they would be welcomed. If account be taken of the Jews in Russia and Poland, the Czechs and Slavs of various names and an unnumbered host from the Balkan States who are anxious to escape the terrific burdens of taxation and the inevitable consequent poverty, the total number of those who will somehow find ways and means to come will reach, without doubt in the next five years, 15,000,000.

Restrictions do not Restrict

It is true that at the present time there are not enough ships available to bring over more than 100,000 per month. But the extravagant prices which prospective immigrants are willing to pay for the trip over, will soon spur on ship companies to build more ships—more than enough to care for those who are ready to emigrate. Already it is hinted that one company is planning to build twenty extra ships in order to reap its share of the immigrant gold. Of course ship companies are out clearly and simply for the money they can get out of the traffic.

It is well known that the restrictive measures already adopted do not restrict. It is true that several thousands who cannot read and write are kept out, but that has had no perceptible effect upon the volume of our immigration. Indeed, the effect has been on the whole unfavorable. Those who have been encouraged to come are those who are not willing or unable to do the hard and manual work which is yet to be done in America, and which workers of American birth will not do. There are too many European immigrants in our great centers who are looking for "light," "easy," "gentle," "clerical" jobs. The fact is, America is not in need of "refined Europeans." She needs European "workers." All the easy jobs and the positions that require clean hands can easily be cared for by persons of American birth. Consequently, with our present restrictive measures we have, instead of solving our problem, complicated it still further. What Congress will do with the various bills before it, is hard to forecast. If Congress were in a position to consider the question on its merits solely, we should, without doubt see the adoption of a just and equitable bill. But it is very difficult for Congress to do what it should in this matter. In the first place, many of its members are not well informed with regard to the various phases involved in the problem; and in the second place, they are exposed to influences that are sinister and deceptive. The majority of our legislators have not the time nor the desire to be informed on the question, as they should be in order to act fairly in relation to it.

As a general principle there can be no proper and just settlement of any issue, if the matter is left in the hands of those who have ulterior motives or specific ends to serve. There are certain groups who have always shown a keen interest in our restrictive immigration legislation. These groups should have the privilege of stating their arguments, but they should not be permitted to determine our national policy with reference to immigration. This should be left to a competent group of men and women who understand thoroughly the various phases of this important problem, but who are not personally, for any reason whatsoever, interested in the attainment of any specific favor for any racial group or groups.

Why the Jews Object

America has been and must continue to be an asylum for the oppressed and persecuted; our door should always swing wide for such. But in this matter, as in all matters, all must be fair to our country and true to ourselves, and admit that among myriads that are coming to us these days and that will come in the future, those who belong to that category are few and far between. It is not too much to say that those who are raising their voice against the proposed restrictive measures are thinking of something else than the interests of America.

An illustration of a case in question, is a recent meeting of Jews in New York City, 5000 of whom met in the Hippodrome to protest against the reduction of the volume of immigration coming to our country. These 5000 men and women were not thinking of America and Americans, nor were they thinking of the fate of the millions of foreign birth who are in the process of becoming Americans. On the contrary they were thinking specifically of the Jews in Russia and Poland who are now anxious to escape the poverty-stricken conditions which surround them. They were not looking at the problem from the point of view of an American, but rather through the eye of a Jew who is moved with compassion for his co-religionist in his hardships and poverty. And this is the attitude of all racial groups toward their kin. But what would happen to America if all foreign groups were to have their way?

We Love Everybody, But—

Now, all right-minded men could wish that every body in the world might be enabled to live in comfort and in plenty. But we are facing a situation in our own country, which must set sensible people to thinking. In all our great centers of population, there is a general scarcity of work. Men on every hand are concerned about their daily bread. How can we open our doors wide to all the poverty stricken people of Europe? There is here no attitude of discrimination but we must face an actual situation. It is a well known fact that seventy-five per cent of the newcomers tend to settle in our larger cities. It is perfectly natural that they should do this. Being ignorant of the language, having little or no money, anxious to find work that will at once enable them to live, the only thing for the immigrant to do is to go where there are colonies of his own race. But in so doing they create problems for us which are difficult to solve.

The fact is, the coming of immigration at the rate of a million a year, under our present industrial conditions, is not only going to aggravate our city problems, but it is going to create a state of affairs which will react unfavorably upon the newcomers.

As we have already noted, there has been the disposition on the part of big business to treat more kindly and to deal more fairly with the worker of foreign birth. But just as soon as the labor market is glutted employers will forget their good intentions of a former day, and under such conditions the laborer is always under a disadvantage, and the laborer of foreign birth in particular.

The Big Opposing Interests

It is to be noted that whenever our immigration laws are to be modified in any way there is always an alignment for and against restriction. Usually arrayed against any and all restriction are representatives of big industry, Jewish organizations and Roman Catholic ecclesiastics. Although each of these groups has its own particular reason for protesting against restriction, they all present the pathetic appeal in behalf of the "oppressed" and the "persecuted." They contend with one voice that America is becoming a traitor to her ideals and her past that has made her great and noble. The fact is, America as a nation has never pretended to be an asylum for the blind, the sick, the poverty stricken of the world. America has ever been willing to receive all those who were able and desirous of working. Our exclusion laws speak for themselves. So long as America has work to do, people can come who are willing to do it. When we have no work what right have we to invite people to come here.

It is not difficult to understand how groups of people are moved by personal economic interests; it is

They tell me thou art rich, my country; gold
In glittering flood has poured into thy chest;
Thy flocks and herds increase, thy barns are pressed
With harvest, and thy stores can hardly hold Their merchandise; unending trains are rolled Along thy network rails of east and west;
Thou art enriched in all things bought and sold!

But dost thou prosper? Better news I crave.
Oh, dearest country, is it well with thee
Indeed, and is thy soul in health? A nobler people, hearts more wisely brave,
And thoughts that lift men up and make them free,
These are prosperity and vital wealth.

Henry Van Dyke.

perfectly natural for the leaders of the Church to which seventy per cent of the immigrants who come here belong, to desire that their fellow co-religionists be free to come; it is to be expected that the Jew should wish to have the doors of our country wide open to those of his faith. But this is where the un-American sentiment becomes apparent. We must look at the prospective immigrant from the point of America and Americans. The welfare of the country as a whole, is far more important than the interests of any group in America or out of it. This is not selfish. This is common sense. The Jew who knows his own history ought to appreciate this attitude for it was an extreme exclusiveness on his part through the centuries which has made possible the existence of the Jewish race to the present time. If America is to continue to be a blessing to all the nations of the earth, she must keep her own light bright and she must not permit it to be dimmed by any consideration whatsoever. Our democratic institutions cannot continue to exist if the majority of America's population are not intelligently and unselfishly interested.

How the Dark Ages Came

It is to be hoped that common-sensed American citizens shall see the necessity of restrictive measures in order that we may be able to set our house in order and seriously and conscientiously set to work to mould the characters of the foreign born already here. If we do not do this there is great danger, to say the least, that the moral standard of American life will be lowered. We cannot afford to deceive ourselves. There are unmistakable signs that we are already directed downward. The revelations of scandals which daily fill the pages of our newspapers attest to this. When the tide of barbarism rolled over ancient Rome, the Dark Ages began. It will not do to say that the European brings with him industry, thrift, music, art and what not. These are all valuable elements of human life and we should endeavor to make use of them as we develop the life of America. But no race or nation has ever had its future guaranteed because of these qualifications. We know that it is the appreciation of the moral values which is the lasting foundation of any nation. We are not saying what cannot be defended in affirming that

"What Can We Do With Her?"

Mrs. Wu put her head in at the door and Miss H. noticed a worried look on her face—There stood a girl of about fourteen years, with her father, both of them dusty and tired.

BY VIOLA C. HILL

TOWARD the close of the winter term the principal and matron of the Righteous Example School for Girls were figuring on accounts, talking about the higher cost of rice and planning for the spring term to open after the Chinese New Year vacation.

"We can't receive more than two new boarders," said the principal, "as there will be only two vacant beds and no place to put more if we had them."

"Perhaps some of the girls now here will not be able to return since we announced that the board fee must be increased one dollar," replied Mrs. Wu.

"I am so Happy Here"

Just then Bessie Fono knocked at the door and when invited in, said, "I came to ask you to receive two of my friends in the school next term. I never was in a Christian school before and I am so happy here. Teachers in other schools never cared for us if we were sick or got bad chilblains but only scolded us if we did not have all our lessons. Please let my friends come, too."

"If we have a place for them to sleep we will be glad to receive them," said Miss H., "but don't be too disappointed if we must tell you not to bring them."

The next morning a senior girl came and said, "You know my sister has come several years as a day pupil but now she is getting bigger and it is not safe for her on the streets so will you please save a bed for her so she can be a boarder with me?"

When the term closed seven girls had applied for entrance. During the vacation of three weeks scarcely a day passed without a call or a letter from a parent or brother or uncle of some girls who wanted to come to school. The principal could learn of no girl planning not to return. What was she to do? The two school buildings are on an L-shaped piece of land with the big corner next to it occupied by low, poorly constructed houses. Already five of these rooms are rented by the school but it does not have the two thousand dollars necessary to buy that land.* Miss H. has long wanted it for the extra rooms and more playground space. Would it be possible to build another room or two out from one building or between the present two? That would cost too much and already the playground is only one narrow basket-ball court besides a slide and swing in one corner of the yard. How about putting a floor, dormer window in the attic, adding stairs and then using that for a box room? Then the present box room might accommodate seven or eight beds. That seemed a good plan so a carpenter was called who measured and figured awhile and said it could be done, but not right away as the workmen would not work during the New Year holidays. Miss H. must find some way to get the $150 for the changes and the new beds. But this just must be done for it was too hard to say "No" to the ambitious girls who wanted to come.

All Came Back—Glad

The opening day of school arrived and with it came the girls accompanied by their parents, or a country teacher, or a trusty servant to see that they arrived safely, also a carrier with a bamboo stick over his shoulder from which hung a roll of bedding on one end and a box of clothes and basket containing wash basin, brush, comb and books on the other end. How happy they were to get back! A few new ones were soon busy in various classrooms being examined in arithmetic, geography or reading by teachers, while an anxious brother or father walked up and down in the hall or yard. All the old pupils were back, three former pupils who had been out a term or two and several new girls. Each was told that all sisters and cousins must sleep together and for a couple of weeks until the new room would be fixed other small girls must double up. But not a word of complaint was heard even if the beds are only thirty-six to forty inches wide and of simple frames with board or woven grass bottoms.

[* It is interesting to note that on the twenty-second of April money was voted by the Woman's Foreign Society from New World Movement funds to buy that piece of land.]

Even after school had started applications continued to come in. One morning Miss H. received a letter asking admission for two girls and in the afternoon the father of another called. To all she replied, "No room here, try at the mission school across the river for it is a good school." She hoped there would be room in that school but was not sure.

What Worried Mrs. Wu

The next morning no applications came and her heart felt easier. That afternoon during a botany class, Mrs. Wu put her head in at the door several times and Miss H. noticed a worried look on her face. Class was soon over and Miss H. hurried out to the front hall. There stood a girl of about fourteen years with her father, both of them were dusty and tired looking. On the floor was a roll of bedding and a small box. It surely looked like a new student. Then the matron turned to Miss H. and in an appealing tone said "What can we do with her?"

"Have you told her that we have no place?"

"Yes, but listen to their story," she replied. Then turning to the man she asked him to repeat what he had already told her.

"My grown son who works in this city heard of the fine school you have here and wrote to me to bring his sister to be educated by your honorable selves. Our home is far out in the country and my daughter finished the course in the small school near our home more than a year ago. She wanted to study more but we did not know of a higher school. All this time we have been saving a little money so that when we knew of a good school she could study more. The letter from my son reached me two days ago and we hurried to leave home. My daughter and I left our home last night at midnight, travelled in a foot-boat until this noon, then have come three hours on the train. We are very tired and spent many dimes to come here. We cannot return and spend this money in vain. I am a poor preacher in a mission that has no higher school for girls and I want my daughter to learn to be a useful Christian woman. Please do not turn us away, I beg you."

"I Wish I Could Keep Her"

The story touched the hearts of the matron and principal and each turned to the other saying, "I wish we could keep her." Miss H. thought again of the school across the river but knew it must also be crowded. Mrs. Wu thought of the little girls already crowded into narrow beds. Both knew that the eight new beds could not accommodate even those already waiting. It seemed hopeless.

Many of the older school girls, free from classes, had crowded into the back hall and had seen the newcomer and heard her story. One high school senior, the older of two sisters accustomed to the comforts of a wealthy home, and both big girls, came up and said, "We sisters are not yet sleeping together but will be glad to if you will only keep this girl." Two girls spoke up quickly and said they could make beds on the floor and let the new girl have their beds. Several girls who are boarders but whose homes are in the city offered to be day pupils and give up their beds, their supervised night study and the Friday evening good times in order to receive the country girl. Mrs. Wu stepped over to a middle-sized girl whom she partly supports in school and this girl immediately offered to share her bed and took the new girl by the hand saying, "You can stay with me."

"She is Now Your Girl"

What could Miss H. do in the face of all that? Well, she received the girl, took her money and wrote the receipt, sent her to wash her face and then told her to go up and rest on the bed just offered her. Then she turned to the group of girls who had such happy faces now and said, "I'm glad you made me receive her but I dared not by myself make you more crowded and uncomfortable than you are. It almost breaks my heart to refuse ambitious girls. She is now your girl and I know you will help her and love her," and they all replied, "We surely will."

Ningpo, E. China.

Immigration

the masses of Europeans coming, and those desirous of coming bring with them a much lower moral standard than that which we believe to be essential for the perpetuation of democratic institutions.

There are two general considerations which must of necessity guide in the formulation of our immigration policy. The first and foremost is the interest of America itself. We are still in the process of carrying on the great experiment in democracy. We are well aware that intelligence, love of freedom, and interest in government are essential for the perpetuation of our democratic institutions. We cannot and we must not be blind to the fact that the vast majority of the people who have been coming to us in recent years are not a helpful factor—in their crude undeveloped state, in the establishment of our democratic ideals. It is true that there are many splendid men and women of our newer immigration who have become valuable and honored citizens. But, we have too many men and women already here, who have not been touched by the influences of America. We cannot afford to increase this number.

The second consideration must, therefore, be the welfare of those who would come to us. It should be definitely understood that the interests of America are moral as well as economic and industrial. Nations, like individuals, do not live by bread alone. We have not done all when we have sent our ships filled with goods to the ends of the earth. We are not living up to the ideals of America when we consume human lives by the tens of thousands to the end that we may secure the position of primacy in the world of industry.

The time is really at hand for us to begin at the very bottom and build up a policy of immigration which will be just to the immigrant, and to the nation from which he comes, and at the same time protect the American standard of living.

So far no bill has been drawn which so completely meets these demands in a permanent way as the Sterling Bill, which is now before Congress.

If They Want to Yell, Let Them Yell

From Colgate, Franklin, Berkeley, Des Moines, Shurtleff, Denison, Northern, the story is the same; if you want your life to count for most, go to college, university, seminary—in any case a Baptist school.

LAST week THE BAPTIST had not room for all of the material that came in for the Educational Number. What we tried to do was to present an exhibit that would inspire our young people to seek higher education. Messages from students supplied the exhibit. Those left over are so full of enthusiasm that we found it necessary to lay a paper weight on them to hold them down till this week. They follow. Some of them show a tendency to boost their particular Alma Maters, but who cares? Let them boost.

Colgate Men Recount Gains

After my college work was interrupted by war service, I attempted to struggle along in the ministry without further education. I shall never regret the decision to enter this institution. My appreciation of God's revelation of himself, in his Son, and in the life of man, has been immeasurably brightened by contact with reverent and God-fearing teachers. My vision of the world task of the Christian church has been broadened by the study of Christian problems, past and present. My realization of the opportunities and responsibilities of the ministry is deeper than it ever could have been without the Christian education which I have been privileged to enjoy.

—Paul F. Swarthout.

After four years of training I carry out with me two sets of values: First, the intellectual values—a knowledge of the fundamental problems of human life, and a knowledge of the scientific methods of approach. Second, the spiritual values—a consciousness of a positive relationship with God and man, and a consciousness of sympathetic helpfulness in the work of the kingdom of Christ.

— R. O. Tulloch.

Shurtleff in Action

An intensive Training School, promoted by The Publication Society and the department of religious education of the Illinois State Convention, was held at Alton April 18-22.

A glimpse of the school in action reveals a wide-awake student body, giving splendid attention to the addresses at the lengthened chapel services and the afternoon and evening addresses. These addresses dealt with the preservation and religious training of the child and youth, the enlarging field for religious educational directors, the aims and methods of church vacation schools and week day schools of religious education, the call of God to students to present their lives to him and to fit themselves for the service to which they may be called. A large number of the students availed themselves of the opportunity to attend the craft work classes, and the interest here, as in the main addresses, was sustained at high pitch until the end.

Vital interest in religious education on the part of the students and the natural spiritual atmosphere of the college life was evidenced by the very large percentage of the students who took a real part in the school. About sixty attended quite regularly. Perhaps the remarkably large attendance at voluntary chapel service on Thursday was most significant. Considering the fact that all the college courses and classes kept up their regular work and that three to four hours of this extra work was added daily, it is plainly evident that the students took practically all of their leisure time for attendance upon these addresses.

Christianity is Taken as a Working Fact

In defining college values, the one which stands uppermost in my mind is that of the solid, sturdy Christian faith which I have constantly admired in the lives of the professors in Franklin College and in the lives of nearly all students who hold places of leadership in campus activities. In the classroom and on the campus as well Christianity is taken as a matter of fact.

It is bound to impress one to see not only the head of the department of biblical literature but the dean of women, the coach of athletics, the dean of the college, the heads of the departments of English, sociology, chemistry, biology, history and philosophy taking an active part in religious activities, leading devotional exercises in chapel, working in the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., and taking an active stand as spiritual leaders both in the church and in the college community.

When the biology professor shows how all the great laws of the universe must be evidence of a God who directs our lives, our aims and purposes; when the sociology professor points to the church as an institution which deserves our loyal support as a socializing agency as well as a divine institution; when the history professor emphasizes the principles of Christianity as a sure foundation for international relations; when the biblical literature professor points to the fundamental principles of Christian faith and shows their practical working in the lives of men, one can not help leaving college feeling that a host of rich spiritual experiences have been added to his life.—Fern McGuire.

Want Nothing Better than Berkeley

Having received my college training at Des Moines College, Iowa, my ideals for an institution of graduate caliber were naturally high. It has meant much to me therefore to be privileged to spend my seminary years at the Berkeley (California) Baptist Divinity School. This institution abundantly measures up to the scholastic requirements of the great University center of the West. Here I have been confirmed in the truth that Christianity is a religion for the heart as well as for the mind. Our splendid new material equipment means much, but one is more impressed by the spirit of the student body and by the combination of scholarship and practicability represented in the teaching staff.—E. A. Fridell.

From a residence of two years which renders a thorough-going acquaintance with instructors and courses, I can say that the point of view of this school is at once sane, scholarly, practical, evangelical, evangelistic and orthodox. The student life is marked by harmony, sobriety and purpose. To spiritual zeal is added a thirst for knowledge which characterizes students and professors alike. Such a body of students in their beautiful new modern building, in a city of culture and privilege should be of wide and vital influence on the Pacific Coast.—Roland McLeod Miller.

Hear These Des Moines-i-acs

Des Moines University is "My University" because I have been captured by its spirit of Christian brotherhood and good will.—Carl E. Priest, '21.

I am Booster for Des Moines University from the top of Fedora hat to the soles of tennis shoes because I am getting here the best kind of an education which combines the cultural and practical, work and play, life and philosophy in a way that makes for poise, personality and progress.—Conway L. Rhyne, '22.

I came to Des Moines University with very limited financial resources; but I have had plenty of work which has not interfered with my studies and yet has provided me a sufficient income to pay my modest bills. Des Moines University is the school for a young man who has to work his way through.—Russel C. Ross, '21.

I am a resident of Eleanor Childs Hall, the dormitory for girls of Des Moines University. I am delighted with the spirit of the school and especially with the comforts and fellowship of the dormitory. The atmosphere is homelike, the government is strict without being autocratic, the girls in the hall are just one big, happy family.—Genevieve S. Miller, '21.

Tries to Define Denison Spirit

Denison spirit is hard to define, although one has spent four years in Denison as I have done. It is something which pervades the atmosphere of this little college town, and which comes to mean more to a person the longer he is here.

This spirit has a great deal to do with one's religious life. The beauty of nature about us, the inspiration gained from associates, and the example set by the instructors seem to bring to us more than ever before a realization of the bigness and power of God.

The religion of a college senior, I feel, is somewhat different from the religion of a Freshman just entering college. As Denison is a Christian institution most of its students have had good religious training at home; they have a religious belief they have never questioned. College does not weaken but rather improves and strengthens this faith. This I believe to be particularly true of Denison. College classroom work, college friends, and college experiences make us think deeply and seriously. When we finish college we have a religion we can really call our own, not one that has been handed down to us, but one that we may at times have questioned, that we have thought our way through for ourselves, and thoroughly understand, and which has become a vital part of ourselves, a religious life ripened by thought and experience.

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. play a large part in college spirit. They bring together for play, study, and religious development men and women of like ideas. This association with people of one's own age who are confronted by similar religious problems is a means of growth and of strengthening one's faith and ennobling one's purposes.

From my own experience and the observation of others I believe that the Denison college spirit and classroom work is such as to further the highest type of religious development.—Helen L. Shumaker.

What Four Years Did for Him

I entered college a Christian, but with no definite religious conceptions nor with any profound personal experience in the religious life. I am leaving Denison this June after four years spent on her campus with enlarged, strengthened, and very tangible religious conceptions, with deepened spiritual insight, and with a vital religious experience whose power is obtaining a firmer hold upon my life day by day. It is well nigh impossible to analyze the situation and to tell just how I have passed through this change. Simply this may be said. The farther I have gone in my studies in all departments, the more I have learned of the sciences, the greater has become my conception of the majestic and wondrous power of our God, the more honor and glory I have accorded him, the more I have desired his leadership in my life, the more earnest has become my desire to get out into the work of his ministry.—M. Forest Ashbrook, Denison.

Sweet Fellowship at Northern

It is my privilege as a member of the student body of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary to register my high regard for this institution.

In the first place the Word of God is accepted as final authority. Though the best text-books available are studied in the various classes, yet there is no slavish adherence to them.

Secondly, a personal interest is taken in the varied needs and problems of the students. There is in many respects a family life. The comparatively small classes, which make it possible for each student to recite frequently, and the splendid fraternity which exists between faculty and students, combine to create this helpful condition.

Thirdly, ample provision is made for spiritual and intellectual growth. This fact is evidenced by the beginning of each class period with prayer, by the frequent addresses given by faculty and prominent visitors on themes relative to Christian life and ministry, as well as by the regular fellowship meetings.—Herbert M. Griffin.

Great as is the importance of our intellectual growth—which is in no wise neglected,—yet I verily believe that the fondest memories of my student days in the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary will be of those times when we have assembled ourselves together in a student's prayer meeting. There we have had fellowship one with another and with Christ our Lord. There we have received the inspiration of one another's prayers; there we have borne one another's burdens in prayer before the Throne of Grace.—Clarence Figgatt.

The Richest Period of My Life

Franklin College has enlarged and enriched my life beyond my ability adequately to express. I think of this as the richest period of my life, my conception of God has been greatly enriched. He has become real and dynamic in my experience. I can say more meaningfully today than ever before, "O, God, Thou art My God."

My college course has been as varied as it is possible to secure. I have studied the languages, literature, history, philosophy, Bible, and the sciences and as I have been permitted to look into these vistas of knowledge, I have discovered the harmony of all truth.

That which has made in a large measure these other things possible, has been the fellowship of Franklin. I am thinking of the Faculty, everyone more than a teacher, a friend. I can never be too grateful for those friends to whom I could bring any problem, great or small, and obtain sympathetic and helpful consideration.

My years in college have made me see more clearly the responsibility which is involved in possession. I bless Franklin that I know more perfectly today that to whom much is given, much is expected in return.—Howard F. Myers.

The Devotional Life

Comprehending the Incomprehensible

By EDWIN M. POTEAT

In a familiar passage (Eph. 3:18) the apostle Paul says that the love of Christ is beyond comprehension. In breadth, length, height, depth it reaches farther than human intelligence can penetrate. Along all these radii it goes out beyond the utmost stretch of our finite capacities, overflows all our boundaries in an infinitude of glorious abundance.

The statement was the result of deep contemplation in which the apostle had tried and failed to comprehend the incomprehensible. His eagle spirit, after a rapture of far flying, returned to acknowledge in happy bafflement that he had attempted too much. In a rush of blissful tears he says a man can never know what passes knowing:

O Love of Christ, so deep, so high,
So boundless in infinity,
Beneath the glory dazed I lie
And pant for more capacity.

Yet in the same breath the apostle implies that we may comprehend the incomprehensible. Indeed, he is here praying that we may know what passes knowing. Is he contradicting himself? No.

The point is here; No man in his single nature can furnish a sensorium large enough to register an infinite love. But when his little self is merged in the great corporate soul of all the saints in all the ages, on earth and in heaven, finite limitations are transcended and in such a fellowship we (Not I) may know the love of Christ which passeth (individual) knowledge.

And this is sound psychology as well as great religion. For the whole ("All saints") is greater than the sum of all the parts (single souls). An organism is more than a collection of organs; a man is more than his members; a church is something more than a group of people. And the apostle sees that a fellowship of all saints, enriched by myriad personal selves, may rise to heights of comprehension literally incomprehensible to the single soul.

The principle here disclosed explains what we have all occasionally experienced, when a great assembly has been swept as by a breath from heaven, and the glory of the Lord has filled the place. This is not to deny that individuals may be caught up into the third heaven; but only to say that a multitude can see and feel more than an individual.

Another consequence of our principle in this. Every great gathering of Christ's friends, the Des Moines Convention for example, ought to yield a fuller revelation of his love. And it will do so on the one condition that they meet as his friends—all hearts centered on Him. If they meet with critic's eyes each bent on the other's faults and errors, there is no promise of opened heavens. No: it is only in a fellowship of love with all the saints that we are strong to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge.

An Evening Prayer

By LAURA E. KENDALL

*If aught I may have said or done
Hath from the wrong a wanderer won,*

I thank thee, Lord.

*If aught I may have said today,
Hath caused one soul to go astray,*

Forgive me, Lord.

*So help me live for thee, each day
That some lone traveler on life's way*

May know thee, Lord.

*And when at last I see thy face,
And come unto thee, saved by grace,*

Receive me, Lord.

Unity and Fellowship

By HARRY S. MYERS

BAPTISTS are evangelistic. They always have been. It has been interesting during the last few months to see the various types of churches with all kinds of ministers (Baptists) and every shade of community life and social ties reporting a continuous and abiding evangelistic spirit. There have been few reports of sweeping revival fervor with multitudes added to the church but the constant quiet persistent spirit has been wide-spread. Baptist ministers have been invited to address important Y. M. C. A. and other evangelistic meetings. It is a message of love that is gripping men and women.

Baptists are missionary. Some were counted as anti-missionary but where are they? The gospel that is not shared does not remain, unless we give some of it away we cannot keep any. The list of men and women who have gradually and quietly disappeared from service apparently because of their neglect, just here, is a long and appalling list. The list of those who are known and loved because of their real fervor is longer and heartening.

Our business is to preach the gospel and we accept our business and plan to make it a success. Day and night our mission work goes on. In thirteen fields outside of the United States, in Europe and in hundreds of communities in the United States the message is given and the sun never sets on our workers.

Baptists have confidence in themselves. Some of us may believe in ourselves more than in any one else but we believe we can do the things He has committed to us and we plan to do them. Some of us may be egotists and some of us may have swelled heads but the most of us believe we are free from such vices and yet possess sufficient force and personality to make the program a success. One element of success is belief in ourselves.

Baptists have an unfulfilled mission. To us God has entrusted some of the greatest of His work. It is not all, even of the most important work and only a part of the whole but it is ours given us by God and to Him at least we are bound to be faithful.

This unfulfilled mission is our greatest heritage. It is a mission of work for the Kingdom of hearts to be bound up, of eyes to be opened and lives to be illuminated, of millions to be redeemed.

As long as God leaves the mission with us we must strive to accomplish it. Every organization we have must be used for this purpose and if necessary adapted to make it more valuable for this purpose. The world must be redeemed.

Baptists carry hammers. Sometimes it seems as if every one was given a hammer when he joined the church and when he is not using it on constructive work he is trying to knock down the work of some good friend. Recently so much hammering has been done because of false statements and ignorance that heart failure and illness—physical and mental has come to many. It is a wonder that some men remain Christian when they are forced to suffer so much needless pain.

For the economic, social, national and international difficulties and perplexities of today there is only one doctor. He is Christ. We need the best brains and the deepest consecration to build Christ into the world. He can save it and all who are in it but it will be done only when all constructively work at the task.

Baptists are partly united and in fellowship. In his recent book Bishop elect Manning of New York says, "We need to recognize more clearly that it is not so much agreement which produces unity as it is unity and fellowship which produce agreement."

Whenever we get together to talk it over we come away more united. Whenever our fellowship is deepened we more fully agree. The missionary conferences just held have shown this again and again. Unity and fellowship produce agreement. Let us get together for Christ's sake and the sake of the Kingdom!

And the Call Was Still Good

Pastors in America who face the housing difficulty will appreciate the following note taken from the items relating to Baptist ministers in the British Weekly of April 7:

"Nearly two years ago Rev. F. A. Baker, of Old Buckenham, Norfolk, accepted a unanimous invitation to the pastorate of the church at Purfleet, Essex, but owing to the housing difficulty it was not possible for a settlement to take place. The necessary house has now been obtained, and Mr. Baker expects to begin his ministry at Purfleet on May 1."

Not a Social Formula but a Social Spirit

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America is constructively trying to "promote the application of the law of Christ in every relation of human life." There is no thought of setting a "social gospel" over against the gospel to the individual soul. There is but one Gospel—that of personal discipleship to our Lord Jesus Christ. But it is a discipleship that must include all the life of men—social, industrial, economic, civic, political. What that discipleship will require in any particular situation we may not be able to say, yet we must insist that the Christian ideal shall be held constantly in mind and that Christian motives shall prevail. The Council is committed to no special economic formulas; it champions the cause of no group or class. Its one purpose is to work for a social order fully permeated by the Spirit of Christ and controlled by the principles revealed to us in His life.

Scientific Management in Religion

The American Board of Applied Christianity, recently incorporated with headquarters at 70 Fifth Ave., New York City, is declared to be the first technical school of its kind in America. Its object is the scientific management of material things when used to support and advance spiritual causes—what to do with money, with land, with buildings and with organizations to promote ideals, whether these ideals be civic, social or church. Nearly twenty years ago lawyers, bankers, editors and other Christian laymen of New York started volunteer work in one religious body. They set up a training school and accomplished remarkable work. They helped to found twenty-four new churches in New York and New Jersey suburbs, the properties of which are now worth $450,000, sent sixteen of their number into the ministry, did a remarkable work in

What if They Should Win?

A crucial point in the labor war in the New York men's clothing industry developed when the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America instituted a suit against the clothing manufacturers' association and many of its members for an injunction to restrain their anti-union activities. A demand for $1,000,000 damages for alleged conspiracy on the part of the defendants to destroy the union is also made.

A Picturesque Site for Peking University

The new site selected for Peking University beyond the walls of the city is an old imperial estate only secured because of the interest and co-operation of ex-government officials who seemed rather eager to be identified with a distinctively Christian organization. The governor of Shansi reduced the price of the actual cost of the land, stipulating that a tablet be erected on the grounds, that his aegid father be given the title of Honorary Adviser, and that ten students from the province be received without tuition fees. Thus a Christian university is made practically the acknowledged head of the provincial educational system.—The Congregationalist.

Coal Consumption

It takes a steady average production of 45,000,000 tons of bituminous coal a month to supply normal consumption in the United States, of which 15 per cent is in the homes, 30 per cent by railroads, and the remainder in miscellaneous industry.

Scholarships for Armenian Students

Mr. Herant Telfeyan, of New York City, has given the University of Chicago $360 a year for three years to provide for the tuition of two Armenian students. This gift, the first installment of which has been received, is made to the University through Mr. A. A. Bedikian, an alum-

The Failure of Humanity

In an article in the New York World, General Smuts gives his impressions of the part played by President Wilson at the Paris Peace Conference. That conference, he says, lost an opportunity as unique as the great war itself. By destroying the moral idealism born of the sacrifices of the war, it did almost as much as the war itself in shattering the structure of Western civilization. The odium for this fell mainly on President Wilson, because it was on him that the hopes of the world were fixed. General Smuts thinks this unjust to Mr. Wilson. He is convinced that history will reverse the judgment of President Wilson's contemporaries. It was not Wilson who failed, but humanity itself. Nor was the failure due to the statesmen who were associated with the President. It was due to the fact that the hopes and aspirations of the world for a new order of peace and right and justice went down in the conflict with the dominant national passions which found expression at the conference. Knowing the conference as he did, he is convinced that not the greatest man born of woman in the history of the race could have saved the situation.

The temptation of a large booty to be divided proved too strong for the moral ideals for which we had fought. And so, as General Smuts said at the conference, the real peace has yet to come, but it can only come when a new spirit is born in the peoples of the world.

And Vice Versa, Shall We Say?

The Baptist "Times and Freeman," of England, makes this wise and true observation: "There are many preachers in our pulpits who are socialists—that is, they disagree entirely with the present system of production, distribution and exchange. They dislike capitalism. Their pet aversion is the rich man. Some of them have even been sufficiently unwise to attempt to enter Parliament, committed to these particular views. Well, they have a perfect right, as private individuals, to believe what they like and to vote for whom they will; but they are betraying a sacred trust when they preach economic socialism from the pulpit or extol communism above capitalism. It is not part of their commission. It is not part of the Gospel they were ordained to preach. And any capitalist in the congregation would be perfectly and honourably entitled to withdraw from a congregation where such controversial views were expounded."

But is it equally true that the preacher has no right to extol capitalism and to denounce communism? And in case he does so, is any socialist in the congregation "perfectly and honourably entitled to withdraw?"

Mexicans Invade United States

That the new Mexican immigration constitutes a national as well as a border problem is the opinion of Rev. Rodney W. Roundy, associate secretary of the Home Missions Council. "Mexicans are scattered through nearly all the states west of the Mississippi," he says in an informing article in the Missionary Review of the World for May. "They come farther East to Illinois and Michigan, even to Pennsylvania, New York and New England. They have come for work. They work on the railroads, on the highways and on construction projects. They herd sheep and tend cattle; they are in the beet sugar industry, even in the irrigated lands of Montana; they raise fruit and pick cotton; the industries of the great Imperial Valley and the Salt River Valley would be helpless without them; they cultivate and harvest crops of fruits, walnuts, beans, melons, Bermuda onions and alfalfa. Southern California could not be so rich in its output from the soil without the toil of the persevering Japanese and the industrious Mexican."

Self-support Won by a Cuban Church

The First Church of Tampico recently passed the following resolutions, which were forwarded to the Home Mission Society:

"First: That from the first day of April we shall begin self-support paying entirely our pastor.

"Second: That Brother Juan Ramos Castillo, the present pastor, shall continue as pastor of the church from this time on.

"Third: That we designate as his salary $130 per month.

"Fourth: That in the most courteous, affectionate and Christian terms we notify our missionary board of this action and that we express to it the deep gratitude of this church for the aid so efficient and constant which we have received during the past years.

"Fifth: That on Sunday, after a short sermon, there be held a special service of prayer, consecration and worship to God, giving him thanks for having granted us the privilege of seeing the realization of our desire for self-support."

Help Still Required in China

Members of the National Committee on China Famine Relief were confronted in a meeting today with a new and tragic aspect of the situation. It has been known for some time that as many as five million people must be cared for until July 1st when it was expected that the spring crops would supply them with enough food to keep them alive. This promises to prove true in a great section of the country, but a cablegram received from the American Committee in China, sent through the United States Minister Crane, states that in Chihli Province a drought threatens almost complete loss of the spring crop, and that the two million people in that area who are now being fed must continue to receive aid as late as August. Large funds of money will still be required for use in the famine-stricken areas. Funds should be forwarded immediately. The American Baptist Foreign Mission Society is prepared to receive these gifts and to see that they are transmitted promptly to the American Committee in China. Remittances may be made to George B. Huntington, Treasurer, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

The Fifth Generation

An illustration of the way in which missionary enthusiasm and spirit pass from mother to daughter is found in the case of the two young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Sweet, of Cleveland. The children are the great, great grandchildren of Eunice Lyman Strong of Southampton, Mass., who founded "The Female Cent Society" of Southampton in 1803. It is related that one of the charter members of this society—tradition says, Mrs. Strong herself—gave $12 for missions when she had twelve patches on her shoes.

The loyal society has had a continuous history from 1803. From it missionaries have gone to every land. In 1909 its thirty members gave $89 for missions.

The line runs as follows: Mrs. Eunice L. Strong, Mrs. Oliver Clark, Mrs. G. E. Stevens, Mrs. Franklin Sweet, and her two daughters, Margaret and Betty. It is no wonder that with such a background the two little girls are filled with missionary enthusiasm. Their father is pastor of The Church of the Master, Cleveland, Ohio.

Men With the Lamp and Pitcher

One who has ever had occasion to stop over night in any of the hotels of this land and Canada, must have noticed in his room a volume of the word of God with the impress on the cover "Placed in this hotel by The Gideons." There has been placed 468,324 of those Bibles in the guest rooms of hotels in the U. S. and Canada, and there is abundant evidence that they are doing a work of evangelism that would not be done by any other means. These Christian commercial traveling men are at it all the time, on the road, in the churches and in hotels, everywhere.

The Gideons have a history well worth preserving and the national convention has appointed a committee to preserve their history in a permanent form.

International Uniform Lesson for June 5

MAKING THE NATION CHRISTIAN
Ps. 33:12; Prov. 14:34; Rom. 13:1-7.
Golden Text: Prov. 14:34.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The Old Testament is largely the history of a nation in its individual development and in its relations with other nations. The passage from the Psalms is a poetic expression of patriotism by a loyal son of Israel who appreciates the difference between a nation whose God is Jehovah and other nations. The quotation from Proverbs is the statement of a general principle which applies to all nations alike. Paul's exhortation to believers at Rome is an acknowledgment of government as a divine institution. The government in his day happened to be the Roman government; but his exhortation holds equally well for any form of government which makes and administers law for the safety and welfare of society.

The Lesson Taught

The Christ of the Christian nation, the Character of the Christian nation, and the Citizens of the Christian nation are three of the topics suggested by the lesson.

Christ

In making a nation Christian, Christ is logically first. The text of the lesson today suggests this order. The Jehovah of the Old Testament is the Jesus of the New Testament. Therefore the passage from Psalms might well read, "Blessed is the nation whose God is Jesus." All nations have had their deities. No nation has ever existed without religion of some sort. When the Psalmist wrote the thirty third Psalm he was well aware of the nations bordering on his own and nations more remote, and he appreciated the difference between idolatrous nations and the nation whose God was Jehovah. To the nation whose God was Jehovah we are indebted for the highest moral ideals to which any nation has ever attained and for the purest religion ever expressed in life and ritual. To ancient Greece the world is debtor for the richest things in art, philosophy and literature; but their art, philosophy and literature is pagan. The Hebrews whose God was Jehovah produced Jesus of Nazareth. He was born of a Jewish mother, educated in a Jewish synagogue, and spent his entire life in a Jewish environment. And yet he was so universal in his sympathies that he regarded every worthy mother as his mother; he was so broad in his teachings that the narrow dogmatism of the synagogue could not possibly account for the wisdom with which he spake; and he was so brotherly in his spirit that no Jewish environment could limit his democracy.

Christ incarnates the two things that make a nation Christian, viz., antagonism to evil and love for men. Evil in any form,—individual or syndicated,—is abhorrent to Jesus. When Christ is enthroned evil must go. The selfishness of men which creates the drink traffic, white slavery and its kindred prostitutions, the love of money and its evil brood, hypocries in every form,—all must go. These are the things that break down nations, and they are abhorrent to Christ. But Christ also incarnates the constructive principle of love. No nation can be made Christian and kept Christian without love finding its domestic expression in the home, its patriotic expression in "my country," its religious expression in the church, and its universal expression in the spirit of human brotherhood.

Character

"Righteousness exalteth a nation." Ocean, mountains, plains, rivers, lakes, forests, farms, climate make a country beautiful; Harvests, minerals, oils, manufactures, railroads, ships, and means of communication make a country rich; but only character makes a nation great. The richer the country the more danger there is of the disintegration of the nation if character does not at least keep pace with material wealth. History is the unimpeachable witness of this statement. All the nations of the past went down to ruin when they were richest in material wealth and poorest in moral character. Nations are like men in this respect. A man may count his wealth in six figures or nine figures, but if his moral character is questioned his wealth is worthless. It is possible that great wealth may be handed down from generation to generation of one family that will maintain the character of the original founder of the estate; but it is hardly probable. The facts are against it. So it is with nations. America is still young as a nation. Its wealth is incalculable, and therefore its danger of moral decay is incalculable. Only as its wealth is safeguarded by character and service to humanity will it escape the fate of other nations which were once rich but are now only a name. Christ and character are inseparable. When the Home Mission Society takes as its motto, "North America For Christ," it is eloquent of the fact that only Christ can make North America Christian. And Christ can make North America Christian only as he is incarnated in the life and service of men and women who claim to be Christians. The character of the nation is simply the composite of the character of the citizens of the nation.

Citizens

Paul writes to the citizens of Rome and urges upon them their obligations to the state. According to Paul the obligation is two-fold, viz., the citizen must be law-abiding and tax-paying. To be sure, in Paul's time the citizen had little to say about the making of the laws and their enforcement, or the levying of taxes and their payment; nevertheless Paul recognizes the integrity of the state and the authority of government. There was much in the Roman government that needed reformation, but Paul did not discuss that side of it. He was willing to leave that to the progress of time. The two principles laid down are fundamental in all national integrity and authority. Laws must be respected and obeyed. A bad law obeyed is better than a good law violated with impunity. There should be protest against bad laws, and organized effort should be put forth to change them; but so long as they are laws they must be obeyed. Laws should also be enforced and the red tape of delay in the administration of justice should be cut short. The state must show itself worthy the respect of the citizens, and the speedy and impartial enforcement of law will greatly assist in this direction.

Taxes must be honestly paid. The government must be supported. The citizen must cheerfully pay the necessary cost of national government. No fair-minded citizen objects to his taxes if he knows that he is getting value for the money paid and if he understands that economy is the rule of national and state administrations. The nations of the world are now paying for the most costly war ever waged. It will be a long, long time before the debt is wholly paid. Taxes will be high for years to come; but as we pay our taxes cheerfully let us read in every tax receipt the necessity of making the nation Christian. The larger support of home mission work will stabilize government and accelerate Christianization.

"With Sympathy and Love"

Once more the fact that the brotherhood of Christianity is a stronger tie than any bond of race or place has been proved, by a money draft sent to the Special Gifts Department of the General Board of Promotion, by Japanese missions members in California, for the relief of the famine sufferers in China. Here is the letter that came with the hard-earned money so freely given to men and women and children of another race:

"Please find enclosed draft for twenty-one dollars raised by the members of the Japanese missions of E. San Pedro and Moneta, Cal., for the China Famine Fund, sent with sympathy and love for the suffering Chinese."

The Chimney Corner

"English as She is Spoke!"

SOME years ago on Lake Como the writer saw a sign in an Italian shop window which would surely lure any tourist to enter, by announcing:

English Spoken
American Understood Idiotisms Also

Having made many a laughable break herself in attempting to speak French and Italian, she was led to start a collection of "English as She is Spoke" (Idiotisms also!) which the Chimney Corner readers are now invited to share.

India Ink!

In his book "India Awakening," Mr. Sherwood Eddy gives three delightful examples of beginner's English.

The first is by a Bombay high school student, one of whose earliest English essays was entitled, "The Horse":

"The horse is a very noble quadruped, but when he is angry he will not do so. He is ridden on the spinal cord by the bridle, and sadly the driver places his foots on the stirrup and divides his lower limbs across the saddle, and drives his animal to the meadow. He has a long mouth, and his head is attached to the trunk by a long protuberance called the neck. He has four legs; two are in the front side, and two are afterwards. These are the weapons on which he runs and also defends himself by extending those in the rear in a parallel direction toward his foe. But this he does only when in a vexatious mood. His fooding in generally grasses and grains. He is also useful to take on his back a man or woman as well as some cargo. He has got no sleep at night-time, but always standing awoken. Also there are horses of short sizes. They do the same as the others are generally doing. There is no animal like the horse. No sooner they see their guardian or master, they always crying for fooding. They have got tail, but not so long as the cow and other such-like animals."

Mr. Eddy also quotes two letters of gratitude from the husbands of patients written to a lady doctor in western India.

Number one is cured:
"Dear She,

"My wife has returned from your hospital cured. Provided males are allowed at your bungalow, I would like to do you the honor of presenting myself there this afternoon. But I will not try to repay you; vengeance belongeth unto God.

"Yours noticeably,

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Number two, alas! died:

"Dear and Fair Madam,
"I have much pleasure to inform you that my dearly unfortunate wife will be no longer under your kind treatment, she having left this world for the other on the night of the 27th ultimo. For your help in this matter, I shall ever remain grateful.

"Yours reverently,

An Italian Chef d'Oeuvre

The following is from the proprietor of a new Italian restaurant. The phrase "house top side this paper," with its oriental flavor, refers to the printed address of the restaurant on the letterhead: "Dear Sir,

"Before I chef—one Italian noble family—now come America—start the business my own—house top side this paper.

"Everybody speak it me—my dinners worth two (2) times.

"I delighted preparation for you—very fine special Italian dishes—no extra charge—only notification me few hours behind.

"I build for clientelle intellectual—they more appreciation my art.

"Many editors, critics, authors, artists Metrop. O pera—come in my house and I ask you so much come at my table then you shall tell many.

"Yours very truly,

A Forest Hymn

By WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT

The groves were God's first temples. Ere man learned

To hew the shaft, and lay the architrave, And spread the roof above them—ere he framed

The lofty vault, to gather and roll back The sound of anthems; in the darkling wood,

Amid the cool and silence, he knelt down And offered to the mightiest solemn thanks And supplication. For his simple heart Could not resist the sacred influences

Which, from the stilly twilight of the place,

And from the gray old trunks that high in heaven

Mingled their mossy boughs, and from the sound

Of the invisible breath that swayed at once

All their green tops, stole over him, and bowed

His spirit with the thought of boundless power

And inaccessible majesty.

Japanese Prints

Here are two interesting quotations from Japanese books written in English for the benefit of tourists. The first is called "The Character of the Englishman":

"The England who occupied of the largest and greatest dominion which rarely can be. The Englishman works with a very powerful hands and the long legs and even the eminened (!) mind, his chin is so strong as decerved iron. He are not allowed it to escape if he did seized something. Being spread his dominion is dreadfully extensive, so that his countryman boastfully say, 'The sun are never sets on our dominions.'

The next quotation is from a book called "The Practical Use of Conversation for Police Authorities." Under "Misser- anious Subjects" appears this:

"Japanese Police Force consists of nice young men. But I regret that their attires are not perfectly neat. When a constable come in conduct with a people he shall be polite and tender in his manner of speaking and movement. If he will terrify or scold the people with enormous voice he will become himself objects of fear for the people. Civilized peoples is meek. But barbarous peoples is vain haughty."

It Pays to Advertise—Poetically

An advertising man who has returned recently from the Orient says the Japanese merchants are not disposed to limit themselves to dull prosaic statements concerning the excellence of their wares. Among the entertaining bits that he noticed in his study of Japanese advertising are these:

"Goods dispatched expeditiously as a cannon-ball."

"Parcels done up with such loving as a wife bestows upon her husband."

"The print of our books is clear as crystal; the matter charming as a singing girl."

"Customers are treated as politely as by rival steamship companies."

"Our silks and satins are as smooth as a lady's cheek and colored like the rainbow."

These next are signs copied from shops in China which cater to English tourists:

Over an egg shop: "Extract of Fowl. Very Young."

Over a dairy: "Pest milk."

Over a camera store: "Photographer Executed Daily. With or without son."

Over a doctor's office: "Specialist for the Decease of children."

Over a dentist's door: "Noties!

"Our tooth is a very imporgan for human life and contenance as you know; therefore when it is attack by disease or injury, artificial tooth is also very useful. I am engage to the Dentistry and I will make for your purpose."

A Polish Polish on the Good Samaritan

A certain small Polish boy in one of our missions polished up the Americanization phase of this Bible story:

"Comes walking a man,—Pole maybe, I thinks. Und comes running bad mens und joumps on him. Sooner they joumps on him they makes holes all over him und he most dies. Goes the bad mens, mit his watch und his knife und his pencil—from-silver, und he most dies some more. Then comes walking proud priest. Sooner he sees the man mit holes all over him, sooner he walks away quick. Comes walking nudder man. Goes quick, also. Comes riding good Sir American man. Sooner he sees, out he joumps. Holsts him into his auto—gently Teacher, and runs him to-er-er—Free Dispensary, perhaps, maybe I think, und gives moneys on the Doctor. 'Cure my neighbor quick, und so I pays you more moneys,' he says. Und Teacher, sooner we sees anybody in troubles, he is neighbors on us, says Jesus, und we must be good Sir Americans on him quick."

The Young Reserves

Results of the Truth Contest

IT has been worth more than "a penny for your thoughts" to find out what thirty-seven of you think about Truth; and I imagine the wise judges have had many a dispute about the best of those thirty-seven thoughts, for aside from Joseph Franklin (Philadelphia, Pa.) and Celia Caldwell (Cincinnati, Ohio) who won the two prizes and whose essays are given here, the following are listed as deserving "honorable mention" in the order named: Esther Caroline Brown, Los Angeles, Cal.; Margaret E. Fowle, Grand Island, Neb.; Virginia Mallonie, Denver, Colo.; Emerson Smith, Portland, Me.; Milree Huff, Fremont, Iowa.

Personally, your editor was delighted with a letter from Dorcas Dixon of North Rochester, N. H., who is only six years old and printed the neatest little "Thought" for us; and with another from Philip Ranlet of Chicago, who is not quite six yet.

And what do you think? Real grown-ups sent thoughts, too, which should be exceedingly flattering to all of us, for who would ever have supposed that they read our own page? But one gentleman, who signs himself "An Interested Bachelor," sent us a list of very deep and learned quotations about truth; while Mrs. G. B. Hopkins of Freeport, Illinois, sent in a true story of her girlhood days called, "Caught." You can read it on this page. Altogether the contest has been a great success, and Mrs. Montgomery is so interested in us that she has given the Editor a fine idea for another contest which will appear soon. Here are the prize-winners:

TRUTH

By JOSEPH FRANKLIN
(First Prize)

This is what I think about truth. There is an old blind man near us and when I see him he sometimes says: "Does it look like rain today?" "No," I say, "the sun is shining." "That's good," he says; and because he is blind he must take my word about the weather and other things too. I like it and I think other people have to trust my word too.

Once our minister preached in a sermon how truth is the backbone of business, how the buyer must believe what the merchant claims for his goods or else no one would ever dare buy anything. And so, firms that advertise untruthfully soon get out of favor; for suppose "all wool and a yard wide" is not wool and not a yard wide, then people soon find out and tell others and nobody goes to that store again.

Our minister said we were all like stores, with our goods in the show window, but were our goods what we claimed? Otherwise we were not honest merchants. So that is how I mean that more than blind people must trust me.

My family are quakers, and this is a true story grandpa often tells us about once in England, when a great many famous Quakers were put in prison because they were very unpopular with the government just then, not because of any wrong-doing. Well, months went by and these prisoners were ordered to be transferred to another prison; and the part I like about the story is that the jailors actually trusted those Quakers to keep their promise to go alone unguarded across all London from the old prison to the new one; for one of the Quaker principles is found in a Bible verse, "Our word is our keeper." I hope I have enough Quaker in me to be trustworthy like that.

MY THOUGHT ABOUT TRUTH

By CELIA CALDWELL
(Second Prize)

It is not easy to tell the truth, but I laughed at what you wrote in the Chimney Corner suppose people only told the truth on Wednesdays, what would the other days be like? I asked my father and he said everyone would soon wait for

TRUTH
BEAUTIFUL THING.

IT IS BEAUTIFUL BECAUSE IT IS

—DORCAS A. DIXON

NORTH ROCHESTER, N. H.
APRIL 23, 1921

(Philip Ranlet's letter was sent to the engraver's office to be mounted for this column, and lost there.)

Wednesday before asking any questions, or buying anything, or getting married, or going on a journey. I think your thought has helped me lots to see that truth matters every day of the week.

Of all the people I know I believe most of them, but there is a girl in our school who boasts. I guess she is poor but she wants us to think she is rich, only we don't because she boasts so. When I say foolish things now I know nobody believes me any more than I believe her.

Another easy way to tell lies is to get out of trouble by denying, all because I am afraid of being punished. But when I was very little mother told me how cowardly this was, and made me write down the names of great people one day, like Jesus and John and Lincoln and Washington, who all told the truth. She made me learn a verse about John, it said, "John did no miracle but all things that John said of this man (Jesus) were true", and so he was great. Of course I shall never be great, but I would like to be the kind of girl you can depend on. I looked up a Bible verse on truth to send you and here is the best one I found: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things."

[That splendid Bible motto reminds me of this acrostic:

Think Right
U
Think Honestly.

A teacher once wrote this on the black-board, as above, then she said: "Now, do you want to know who ought always to be in the midst of thinking right and thinking honestly? U, of course! And you! And you! And you!" M. T. A.]

CAUGHT

By MRS. G. B. HOPKINS

Two little pear trees were planted in the back yard. Ben and his sister thought the time long till the trees were large enough to bear. Then one spring there were a few blossoms, and then two little pears appeared where two blossoms had been. Father, Mother, Ben and "Curls" all watched with interest as the pears grew, and the children could scarcely wait for the time when they would be ripe.

One day only one pear hung where two had been. What had happened? No one knew. The ground was searched but no pear was found. The children were questioned, but they knew nothing of the missing pear. Finally Ben asked, "Curls, what color were the seeds?" "Green," she quickly answered—and then realized that she had been trapped.

What Bible verse does this illustrate?

THY KINGDOM COME IN THE WORLD

Matt. 6:7-15

(Consecration Meeting)

"Let Thy kingdom come; let Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth."

For the first Sunday in each month we have been discussing the coming of the kingdom: 1, In My Heart; 2, In My Home; 3, In My Church; 4, In My Community; 5, In My Country. For this week we have the coming of the kingdom in the whole world.

1. The Great Commission. In addition to the prayer for the coming of the kingdom as presented in the Scripture passage, the Great Commission as recorded in the closing chapters of Matthew and Mark, should be studied. "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations." With our about seventeen "varieties of Baptists," some anti-mission, some anti-board, some no mission, a large number do nothing, we have been a long time realizing the all-inclusive meaning of this commission of our Lord.

2. World Conquest One Task. Our new conception of the commission is that Jesus meant for us to go out for world conquest, whether that be around the corner from us, or to Africa. But, for convenience we have divided missions into state, district, home, foreign, etc. many times to the detriment of the program of Jesus. For in all too many instances, Baptists have become partisans of this society or that instead of facing squarely the whole task. But, that is changed now. It is no longer the "Society Loyalty" that holds us. It is loyalty to Christ and his world-wide program of redemption.

3. The Needs of the World. Send at once to the General Board of Promotion, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. for a copy of the "Survey." This little booklet will give in brief and definite form some of the outstanding needs of the world, and needs which must be met by Baptists—general education, religious education, negro activities, missions at home and abroad.

4. The Way Out. It certainly does not lie in the direction of the calamity howler who expects every now and then for this old world to go down in one grand "smash-up" in the near future. Certainly the "expert" is not going to solve the problem. Baptist people have got to plant their feet squarely on the program as included in the Great Commission, and get busy. If there ever was a time when Baptists need to pull together, that time is now.

5. Baptist and a World Program. How we were thrilled at the launching of the One Hundred Million Campaign at Denver convention. Of course, some have bucked the program because it did not quite fit their scheme of things; others objected quite conscientiously, we believe, but meantime the program is on. Around $60,000,000 have been raised to finance this program. Under the leadership of the General Board of Promotion we are going to carry it out.

Our Young People

By S. L. ROBERTS

From the young people of our churches must come the future leadership of our church work. If we are to make the advance we should and can in the next generation in winning the world to Christ, large numbers of these young people must not only be enlisted for service but be trained to do good work in whatever field of church work they may be most needed.

The agencies which contribute most to the making of a successful Christian worker are: life,—what we do every day and how we do it; the spirit of God,—who quickens and empowers when we yield ourselves to him; general education,—secured in the schools, the home, the vocation and in general reading; special study and practice—which is followed for the express purpose of fitting one's self for doing Christian work.

What are the needs of a young Christian, who desires to do his best, that may be met by the study and guided practice found in a good training course?

One must understand people if he is to work helpfully with them. To meet this need a unit of work which makes one somewhat familiar with the more important facts of human nature and with methods of studying people, is provided.

One must know how to sell his religious goods, how to help the other person think and act as he should. This important part of our training is provided for in the unit on teaching, "The Teacher."

One must, in order to be of most service, know how to work in an organized way with others in a school. The need is met by a study of "The Coming School of the Church."

One must not only know his Bible for himself that he may feed his own soul, he must also know his Bible in such a way as to be able best to help others. Not every good eater is a good cook or knows how to serve the table well. To help those who are to teach not only to know their Bible but to know better how to use the Bible, three units of work in "Bible Study" for teachers are planned.

One should know something of how the program of the church today came to be, through the thinking and teaching of Prophets, of Jesus and his Apostles and something of what the present tendencies, plans and purposes of Christian people and churches are; this need is met by a study of the "Program of Christianity," a unit of work which while it has the forward look must also be studied with Bible in hand.

Then one should know how to worship, how to teach others to worship and how most helpfully to plan for worshipping together, this we study in the last unit of the second year.

Then one should have some special training for the particular task he is to take up in church work and opportunity to observe and practice under the direction of an experienced worker, this is provided in the specialized studies of the third year.

The material thus described is presented in the New Standard Training Course, Keystone Edition. While much of it is presented in other courses of study, it is in no other one course so fully given or so well organized.

Four units of the first eight units of the New Standard Training Course are also included in the Trained Leader's Course offered by the B. Y. P. U. of America and most, if not all the special young people's work of that course can be counted on the third year specialization work of the New Standard Course.

A credit card is issued for the completion of each unit of ten lessons when an examination is submitted thereon. A certificate for completing each year of work and a diploma granted jointly by the American Baptist Publication Society and the International Sunday School Association is issued on completing the course.

The promotion of this work is shared by the directors of religious education in the various states in the Northern Baptist Convention and in several of the larger cities and Rev. Seldon L. Roberts, director of teacher training for the American Baptist Publication Society, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Write for information leaflets or suggestions.

Our Broad Home Mission Program

Among the wonders in the winning of the West is the missionary advance from a frontier in the longitude of Chicago in 1832 to that of Alaska in 1921. The missionary program now is that of building a nation.

BY CHARLES L. WHITE

1. The first task of the Society, which began its work in the Mississippi Valley in 1832, was to lay broad and enduring Christian foundations through its devoted missionaries, who toiled in the face of unbelievable privations and under conditions that cannot now be pictured. One of these missionaries is known to have preached the gospel while suffering excruciating pain from sciatica rheumatism, conducting services as he sat in a log school house with his right leg propped up on a table. Descriptions of conditions that prevailed even forty to fifty years ago in the middle West, are reflected in letters which are quoted in my address on the fiftieth anniversary of the Nebraska State Convention which has been published under the title "The Wise Men of the West."

During these early days the Society paid the full salary of the missionary, but encouraged the organization of western conventions: It provided also the full salaries of general missionaries, who supervised the work. This process continued until the old frontier was filled and the lines of present conventions were made. Churches were organized and Sunday schools were established through the agency of our missionaries and the workers of the Publication Society, and later through the co-operation of the Woman's Home Mission Society. The commissions given to the missionaries of the Society required that the churches whose ministry was made possible by the gifts of the denomination to the Home Mission Society should make contributions, not only for the Society itself and for the state conventions, but for the foreign mission societies and the several other denominational missionary agencies.

2. As the work progressed and the churches became stronger, a pro rata arrangement in the payment of salaries gradually grew up between the Home Mission Society, the State Convention and the churches. Very soon some of the conventions became strong and in the course of time both the Iowa and Wisconsin Conventions reported that they needed no more financial aid from the Society, but would continue their gifts to its work throughout the nation. In time other state conventions gained in financial ability and as this process continued, they assumed a larger pro rata share of the salaries of local missionaries and the general missionaries of conventions.

3. About eleven years ago our Board of Managers voted that the Associate Corresponding Secretary and the Finance Committee should make a complete study of the various operations of the Society, and in the report that was unanimously adopted by the Board, a new financial arrangement with the State Conventions was approved and accepted by them.

Up to that time for more than seventy-five years the money given by churches in western conventions, even in the strongest ones, was sent to New York. In the year in which the change was made, approximately eighty thousand dollars ($80,000) was given by the churches themselves for their own state mission work. There were generally no treasurers of the western conventions. The entire salaries of all missionaries, including the general missionaries, were paid from New York by checks of the Society, instead of by checks of the Convention. I remember distinctly having to sign several hundred checks each quarter for the payment of missionary salaries.

The Society up to that time had also acted as the banker for the Woman's Home Mission Society of the East and the Woman's Home Mission Society of Michigan, paying the salaries of their teachers in Southern schools with money collected by these organizations and forwarded to New York for this purpose.

When their receipts were not sufficient to meet the quarterly payments of salaries of the missionaries of State Conventions and of the Women's Societies, the Home Mission Society advanced sufficient to meet the need. The Women's Societies always made payment by the first of April and usually the State Conventions did so, but occasionally failure of crops and other troubles made it necessary for the settlement with the conventions to be postponed till the fall. When the conventions could not settle, interest bearing notes were given. The Home Mission Society thus served as banker for certain societies and conventions.

The proposal then made was that each western state convention should set up a treasurership of its own, appoint missionaries jointly with the Home Mission Society, receive into its own treasury the gifts for state mission work, retain them, and send quarterly, or monthly, as the case might be, requests for the Home Mission Society's share of each salary, based on earlier appointments and on reports of service. The Home Mission Society agreed to send in a single check to the State Convention the amount called for as its share of the approved pay-roll after it was verified from the votes of the Board.

This plan has worked well. The state conventions have taken on new life and have felt more keenly their responsibility and the possibility of opportunities for growth, all of which has been encouraged and stimulated by this Society. At the same time this change was introduced with the conventions, the Women's Societies began to pay their missionaries direct.

The Society had counted the receipts for which it had acted as banking agent as a part of its income. Its next annual report showed that its income had decreased about $110,000. The loss was not an actual one.

4. About eight years ago the Southern California Convention, finding its financial condition was strong, frankly proposed to the Society that thereafter it should confine its gifts to foreign-speaking work in that Convention and to church edifice appropriations, but that the English-speaking work should be carried forward entirely by the Convention. After conference between representatives of the Convention and the Society, a different arrangement was made from that which was proposed. The Society at that time in its pro rata work with conventions east of the Mississippi was confining its appropriations to foreign-speaking work and for the erection of foreign-speaking meeting houses. With one slight exception, this is the type of work which the Society is doing in conventions and city mission societies east of the Mississippi at the present time.

5. The Board believes that it is time now to take another step, easily made possible by the relations of the Society and the Conventions in the making and apportioning of their budgets through the General Board of Promotion. The following is the plan:

(a) To determine the amounts spent in each Convention by the Home Mission Society during the year ending April 30, 1921, for English-speaking and older foreign-speaking work, by which is meant that carried on among Scandinavian peoples. (The Society's appropriations for German-speaking work ended on March 31, 1920, after more than sixty years of co-operation.)

(b) To deduct this amount from the budget of the Home Mission Society for the year beginning May 1, 1921, and to add it to the budget of a state convention.

(c) To apportion this amount to the churches of a state and for the state convention to collect the same for its work, just as it apportions and collects its present moneys.

(d) The Home Mission Society permanently transfers this work to the State Conventions.

6. The Home Mission Society continues to co-operate in other forms of missionary work within the state. These are of such a definite and clear-cut type that it can make a graphic and attractive appeal throughout its constituency for gifts. The more intense and concrete the national appeal of the Home Mission Society can be made, the larger will be the receipts for the conventions through the Society's treasury. The psychology of this is unquestioned. The Home Mission Society's attitude and privilege, as in the past, will be to obtain the largest possible contributions coming from the living and special gifts made available, through legacies and lapsed annuities, for its co-operative work with the conventions which are its own children, nurtured by its gifts, and in whose growing strength and prosperity it rejoices.

The forms of this co-operative missionary work within a state are numerous, and other types will doubtless be discovered as we make an intensive study of the fields to be developed and increase the missionary resources available for such tasks.

They are the following:

a. Work among the newer groups of foreign-speaking peoples. This will increase with the years and is already considerable in every state, including twenty racial groups.

b. Evangelism along the special lines now in vogue.

c. Colporter work in neglected areas, to be distinctly different from any other type of missionary endeavor.

d. Gospel cruisers, in inland or coastal waters.

e. Chapel car work.

(The last three items of work were carried on co-operatively with the American Baptist Publication Society.)

f. Rural demonstration centers, a few of which at first will be established after a special study of the most promising fields by the Society's secretary. Based upon experience gained in these places, as the resources of the Society may allow, it is expected the work will be enlarged.

g. A few Christian community centers will be established in several carefully chosen cities. Based upon experience gained in these places, as the resources of the Society may allow it is expected the work will be enlarged.

h. Church edifice work showing special opportunities. In making the budget of the state conventions a sufficient amount should be introduced by it into its own budget to assist English and foreign speaking churches where relatively small amounts are required. The Home Mission Society up to its ability will make grants to supplement those made by the conventions in the erection of foreign-speaking meeting houses and church buildings provided with suitable equipment in strategic places in educational centers and in special cases for parsonages.

i. An intensive study will be made throughout one or more states of the extent to which preaching stations may be increased by the use of automobiles. The title of such cars shall be in the Convention, for which the Home Mission Society up to its ability will make appropriations to supplement other gifts.

j. Extension of work among the colored people in strategic centers whose types of work are approved.

k. Other special opportunities which cannot now be foreseen, but which may be discovered as each year unrolls the plan of God's providential guidance.

l. Sailors and Soldiers.

m. Specialists in rural and urban areas.

(Note: All the above forms of work will be done co-operatively from appropriations made by the conventions and the Home Mission Society in pro rata to be agreed on.)

7. This leaves for the state conventions the following basic tasks; for which they make full provision:

a. Development of denominational consciousness.

b. The administration of its own work.

c. The employment of general workers.

d. Mission work with English-speaking and older Foreign-speaking groups.

e. Regular forms of Evangelism which have always been stimulated by the Conventions.

f. Church erection, where the amounts given are small.

g. The supervision of all missionary work.

8. The Home Mission Society has certain fixed types of work which go on from year to year, for which it alone provides.

a. Its Latin American work in Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras, which is sub-divided into Missionary, Church Edifices and Educational.

b. Negro Education, now confined to the South but which may be brought into the North.

c. Indian Education.

d. Indian Missions. (Northern California makes contribution toward the work of the Mono).

e. Training of foreign-speaking missionaries in our International Baptist Seminary.

f. The support of certain specialists.

g. The establishment of a demonstration summer camp for boys, in co-operation with the Publication Society, on the Plattsburg system, as announced to the denomination.

h. The extension of Brotherhood work.

i. Architectural Service jointly with the Publication Society.

9. This plan of adjustments of work and budgets was received with favor by the State Convention Secretaries at Minneapolis and the Finance Committee of the Northern Baptist Convention approved the adjustments of the budget to make it workable.

It is desirable for the Home Mission Society to keep its entire income as fluid as possible for the work of all departments along the lines above indicated, in order that we may be ready to assist in the possible hour of disaster or distress, and in special emergencies that may arise in these days of world anxiety and national unrest. Its appropriations, however, must not produce known indebtedness.

What the Home Mission Society may hope to do along the lines indicated above in each convention will be discovered in correspondence and personal conference in the next few weeks.

10. The Nature and Magnitude of the Tasks of The American Baptist Home Mission Society:

a. It assists through state conventions and city mission societies in co-operative mission work till it can be made self-supporting. This process toward self-support it hastens by special advice and plans.

b. It assists in improving great opportunities in all its departments.

c. It aids in the day of storm, of stress and of disaster.

d. It stabilizes work which otherwise would be sporadic and insecure.

e. It has an intercommunity and interstate outreach.

f. Its work is interstate with conventions, interracial with city mission societies, intertribal with Indians, and interlocking with the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society.

g. Its outreach is international in Cuba, Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras.

h. Its contacts in missionary education are intercontinental.

The Society plans beyond the temporary needs of a year. Its plans and policies are shaped both for the near and the long future as a fellow-worker with God.

New Year Conference at Nellore

Co-operation in union institutions an established policy in India

—Panchayat did nothing, Praise the Lord!

BY KATE W. FAILING

EVERY convention is "the finest ever held" but we feel that the annual Conference of the Telugu Mission just held in Nellore deserve high praise. There was a good attendance, eighty-two adults and twenty seven children sitting down to the tables at one time.

The program committee had taken for the motto of the Conference, "Pressing Forward," Philippians 3:14. This was well carried out in the devotional talks and Scripture expositions, which were of a high order. Perhaps the most spoken of was that of Mr. Unruh, from the Deccan, though all were helpful and worth the trip to Nellore. Dr. Downie's sermon Sunday evening was a treat, showing the fruits of his long experience.

Co-operation in union institutions, such as the Madanapalle tuberculosis sanatorium, Sunday school courses and supplies, Telugu magazines and language work, was reported on, and our own work as well. The publicity committee, the industrial committee, the mission panchayat, and others reported more or less work. When the panchayat reported that they had done no work because there was no work to do, there was clapping of hands, for that committee settles troubles brought to it.

New Year's day was the usual reception to new and returning missionaries, always a good time. Dr. Downie was the master of ceremonies and called on all who had not been in the country at the last conference in Ongole to speak. Mrs. Rockwood was not attending but all the others were. The new recruits are Misses Dorrie, Keans and Wolcott, and Mr. and Mrs. Fishman. Mr. and Mrs. Woodburne are new under our mission but have had experience before. Miss Hollis was the only single lady who returned in time for this meeting although Miss Rorer reached Nellore before the end of the session. Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Stenger and Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Stenger arrived almost a year ago. Mr. Boggess and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Boggs and Mr. and Mrs. Rockwood in the early fall, while Mr. and Mrs. Witter had just time to get settled in Podili before the holidays and Mr. and Mrs. Brock came right from the steamer without even seeing their station. Our net gain in personnel from last New Year's Day to this, as nearly as your correspondent can figure it, is exactly four. This for a mission in which there are seven stations with no station missionary, and with a Christian population according to the last reports, of 75,000!

One of the best sessions for earnestness of purpose was the meeting held on Sunday afternoon to pray for re-inforcements. We believe that the Lord has the men and women waiting for us, if we can only find them before it is too late. A particularly good paper on one phase of our work was that of Mr. Bawden on "The Criminal Settlement as a Kingdom Enterprise." If he is not too tired when he reaches home he ought to be kept busy speaking at our various state conventions, but don't overwork him, please as we want him back when furlough is over.

Ongole, S. India.

Golden Jubilee of the Northwest District

The program sessions will be held at the First Baptist church beginning at 3 p. m. Wednesday, May 24, and continuing until Thursday evening. Speakers include Mmes. G. E. Young, A. F. Gale, A. F. Cartlore, W. T. Ehnore, W. H. Montgomery, and Misses Evalyn Camp, Grace Kan and others.

Distinguished visitors from abroad will be present, including Mme. Frances Kolarova of Czecho-Slovakia, Dr. Ma San Sa of Burma, Grace Kan of China, Martha Wenske of Poland, Louise Tschireh and Violetta Peterson of India.

The program includes addresses, choruses, pageants, exhibits, receptions and banquets.

Two banquets will be held at Curtis hotel 4th Ave. and Grant St.

The banquet of decades on Wednesday, May 25, at 1 o'clock at which those women of the district whose records of service entitle them to a place at the First Decade Table will be guests of honor.

Those who were actively engaged in some woman's missionary society from 1871 to 1881 are these honored few and the committee is desirous of learning the names of those who will find it possible to attend.

The cost of plates is $1.00 and it is suggested that the churches from which the honor guests come bear this expense.

Churches are requested to send names of those eligible to the Decade Banquet to Mrs. Erle D. Luce, 2104 James Avenue, South Minneapolis.

The W. W. G. banquet will be held also at the Curtis hotel, May 26, at 6:15 p. m. Tickets, 75 cents. Mrs. Luce is in charge of tickets for both banquets.

The District has exceeded its quota of $20,400. Minnesota's share of $13,000 will be used for a Christian community center building at Osaka. Our quota of Jubilee subscriptions to "Missions" magazine is 500.

It is earnestly hoped that a large number of delegates will attend these unusually interesting meetings. Please have this notice and information given to all the women of your church.

Railroad Fares. If 350 delegates attend from the four states of the District from points where the fare is 67 cents or more a return ticket will be issued for half fare on the following conditions: Tickets must be bought on May 20-26 inclusive. Be sure when buying your ticket to get a certificate receipt properly signed and dated. If this is impossible, get a receipt. Sign your certificate in ink. Present it at once for the proper signature in Minneapolis.

Free entertainment for three nights with breakfast will be provided for a limited number. Rooms may be obtained for 75 cents and up.

For entertainment write Mrs. Frank Ashcroft, 3320 Aldrich Avenue South, Minneapolis. For banquet tickets, write Mrs. Erle D. Luce, 2104 James Avenue South, Minneapolis.

Obtain your program when you register.

Mrs. J. A. MANSFIELD, President Women's Baptist Union of Minneapolis.

Illinois-Missouri School of Missions

Programs for the Illinois-Missouri interdenominational school of missions are now out and may be secured from Mrs. D. S. Magill, Alton, Ill.

The school will be held on the campus of the McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill. Lebanon is 25 miles out of St. Louis and easily reached on the interurban or B. & O. R. R.

The school will be held June 14-18. It affords a wonderful opportunity for officers of missionary societies and leaders of Mission Study Classes to get the best and most efficient methods.

The faculty is strong, Mrs. Hallie L. Hill, New York City, a woman of international and interdenominational fame will teach both the home and foreign text books for the coming year.

Mrs. S. I. Lindsay of St. Louis will conduct the Bible study class.

Mrs. J. M. Dadds will have a method hour.

Mrs. N. P. Zimmer will teach parliamentary law as applied to missionary societies.

Miss Evelyn Currier will demonstrate story telling in Bible schools and children's bands.

Board and lodging will be in McKendree College at $1.25 per day.

Lake Geneva Missionary Conference

Baptists will be in evidence again this year at the Lake Geneva conference of the Missionary Education Movement, Aug. 2-12. The chairman of the conference committee is Rev. Francis C. Stifler of Wilmette, Ill., who will also be dean of the open parliaments. Other members of the conference committee are Dr. A. E. Peterson, state promotion director of Illinois, Prof. A. G. Baker of the department of missions at the University of Chicago and Mrs. W. P. Topping of Elgin Ill. Dr. Howland Hanson of the Morgan Park church, Chicago, will conduct the pastors' discussion group and leaders' classes, and Miss Frances Greenough of the National Education Board will teach one of the study groups. Besides these there will be one of our outstanding missionaries present throughout the entire conference.

This is the eighteenth year of the Lake Geneva Conference and it promises to be the strongest. Special emphasis is to be placed on training methods for missionary education in all branches of the local church. Classes in all the new mission study books will be conducted and there will be life work meetings for the Servants of the King group, composed of young people from fifteen to nineteen years of age.

The ten days of companionship with the choicest people, combined with the intensive study of the most worth-while things in the world and plenty of the outing and recreation afforded by a real camp has always made the conference a success. The total expense of these ten wonderful days is only $25, plus carfare to camp. Many churches and woman's societies, Sunday schools and B. Y. P. U. groups are planning to send a delegate or two. The conference has opened a temporary office in room 1324, 19 So. La Salle St., Chicago, where additional information can be obtained.

Registration fee should be sent Mrs. J. A. Wilken, Lebanon, Ill., and will be $1.50 for representatives of Women's Societies and 50 cents for Young People.

The new study books will be on sale throughout the sessions.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

ISLAND FALLS has changed its name from "Free" to "United" Baptist. All departments of the church work are flourishing and the new pastor, W. P. Richardson is reaping excellent results from this excellent union.

THE CONVENTION BOARD met in Waterville, May 4. The work of the convention is unusually prosperous. Four pastor-evangelists, Evans, Miller, Roberts and Beatty are at work. Evangelists Harvey and Ruth Taylor and E. A. Davis have been specially successful. Rev. Wm. Fletcher, Rev. H. J. Tetraut and Miss M. T. White at Stroudwater, in whose support the Home Mission Society and the Publication Society co-operate with the convention, have been a great blessing to the state.

THE NEW MISSIONARY to the Russians at Waterville and Winslow is doing street preaching with good results.

FOURTEEN STUDENTS for the ministry, seven in Colby and seven in Bates, are receiving aid from the board of education. Two of these are Chinese students who will return to their native land for work.

BY THE WILL OF GEO. C. FRYE of Portland, Coburn Institute at Waterville receives $25,000 and $5,000 to Colby College for Coburn graduates who are working their way through college.

THE STATE RAISED for the purposes of the board of promotion $185,000 last year, which is four times as much as in any previous year for the same objects. Spiritual interests have shown a corresponding increase.

EASTER BAPTISMS this year numbered more than 450.

MAINE HAS A SPECIAL COMMITTEE working with the convention to provide adequate salaries for pastors in the smaller fields.

THE SUNDAY FOLLOWING the close of the successful pastorate of F. Allison Currier in Millinockett, the church called Raymond W. Cooper, of Washburn. Mr. Cooper responded to the call.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

THE CHURCH at BRENTWOOD was organized in 1771 and it was fitting that they celebrate their 150th anniversary in 1921. This anniversary was held on May 4 and occupied the entire day. There were pastoral addresses, a review of the church history, and the anniversary sermon by Rev. A. E. Hylan of Springfield, Mass.

HUDSON held its annual roll call Sunday, May 1. The sermon was preached by Rev. D. S. Jenks, convention secretary. This was followed by roll call and observance of the Lord's Supper. Under the pastorate of Rev. D. van der Voet the church work here is progressing well.

A FEDERATION of churches has been formed at Sugar Hill by the Advent and Free Baptist churches. They have called Rev. Edward A. Tuck as pastor.

NEW HAMPTON LITERARY INSTITUTION will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary June 12-16. The sermon will be preached by Rev. E. M. Vittum of Muscatine, Iowa. Ex-Governor Samuel W. McCall of Boston, Mass. will give an address. The New Hampton Institution was formerly affiliated with the Free Baptist denomination but is now independent.

REV. W. C. GOODWIN recently pastor at Wallingford, Vt., has accepted a call to the church at Northwood. Mr. Goodwin's father, Rev. E. C. Goodwin pastor at Goffstown, has been serving Baptist churches in New Hampshire for many years. It is hoped that the son may serve New Hampshire churches for as long a period.

VERMONT

FIRST, RICHFORD, Rev. George Pomfrey, pastor, recently received seven by baptism and three by letter; and the outlook from every standpoint is very encouraging. The church recently voted to increase the pastor's salary $200.

LUDLOW, Rev. W. B. Chase, Pastor, has extended an invitation to Vermont Baptist State Convention to meet with it in 1922. Pastor Chase recently baptized thirteen on three different Sabbath evenings and has a class in training so that others will be coming right along.

VERGENNES has extended a very hearty and unanimous call to Rev. B. H. Eddy of Canton, N. Y., which he has accepted, beginning his work May 8.

MAIN STREET, Newport recently held its annual roll call and business meeting. Rev. J. H. Blackburn, the pastor, presided. Supper was served in the vestry to about two hundred people. The reports from the different departments were encouraging. The Sunday School showed an average attendance through the year of 143. This church is to have a daily vacation Bible school this summer, in charge of Miss Beulah B. Bates, director of religious and missionary education for the state convention.

HARDWICK AND EAST HARDWICK, Rev. Isaac M. Thompson, pastor, are greatly encouraged in their work, eight having been received into the church at Hardwick by baptism and five into the East Hardwick church. The financial condition in both churches is also encouraging. Recently the mortgage on the parsonage at Hardwick has been reduced.

REV. E. B. CORNELL, pastor at West Brattleboro, is greatly encouraged in the work. On Sunday, May 8, he had the privilege of extending the hand of fellowship to forty-six new members, thirty-four of them coming recently by baptism. This is a great increase for a church with only eighty-eight resident members. This church is planning to make extensive repairs and improvements.

REV. C. D. PIER, pastor at Montpelier for the past three years, has seen much good work accomplished. The church edifice has been repaired and painted, contributions for current expenses and benevolences materially increased, fifty-three members have been added to the church, forty of them by baptism. This church, with 109 resident members, has 62 titheers.

VERMONT ANNIVERSARIES will be held at Bellows Falls from Monday night, May 23, through Wednesday night, 25. A good program has been arranged, and it is honestly and earnestly expected that this will be one of the largest and best conventions ever held in the state.

FIRST, MONTGOMERY CENTER, W. F. Rawlins, pastor, found April one of the best months it has seen in several years. Twenty-one confessed faith in Christ, ten were baptized, and the prayer meetings are largely attended.

MASSACHUSETTS

THE DUDLEY STREET CHURCH, Boston has just given a week to its centennial anniversary. Every part of the work was reviewed, and every advance celebrated with the accompaniment of great throngs to the inspiring services. Dr. J. M. English, a former pastor, preached the anniversary sermon, Pastor Arthur T. Brooks reviewed the hundred years, Rev. C. L. Page, who was associate pastor and teacher of the large "Page Class" twenty-nine years, with neighboring pastors brought greetings, and addresses were made by Dr. W. Quay Rosselle, Joe Mitchell Chappell, Dr. S. M. Cummings, Dr. Walter W. Deckhard, Dr. Herbert S. Johnson, and Dr. William W. Bustard, a former pastor, now of Cleveland. The whole feast of days culminated in a noteworthy old folks concert, and an old home night and centennial supper.

REV. JAMES HOLMES, pastor of First Church, Brockton, had resigned May 1, but at a large church meeting held on May 8, by a 90 per cent vote he was strongly urged to remain. It is a strong church, and Mr. Holmes is a strong leader and preacher.

DR. R. S. MACARTHUR drew a large attendance at the Ministers' Conference May 9 by an address of great value on "The Conduct of Public Worship." It abounded with practically helpful suggestions regarding features in public ministerial service that often get neglected, and which a more careful preparation and correct habit would add to the common comfort and edification of people in the pews. The address was well received, and appreciatively supported by many brethren.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the board of trustees of Newton came on May 10 and was largely attended. It was one of the "glory days" of May time; and the "old hill" never excelled in its beauty or its magnificent prospect.

NORTH ADAMS, DANIEL H. CLARE, PASTOR—The work of the various departments has been carried on with enthusiasm. Twenty-seven have united with the church by baptism. The present membership is 1,169. The church treasurer reported receipts of $35,548. Of this amount $22,930 has been paid to the New World Movement. For work outside the local church the expenditures show an advance of $20,000 over the previous year. The church has one of the finest chorus choirs in the state. The church school in all its departments has an enrollment of 970; 123 of these are on the cradle roll.

CLARENDON STREET, BOSTON, is having a wonderful period of prosperity under the leadership of Rev. Harry Freda. This church is famous throughout the world as the church in which the late Dr. A. J. Gordon had such a wonderful ministry; but never in its history has it done a greater work than is being done today. The largest social gathering held in the church for twenty years occurred last Tuesday evening. This was purely an informal and spontaneous affair; but took upon itself the form of a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Freda. This was the last social gathering in Mr. Freda's second year of service, as next Sunday marks the opening of his third year in the pastorate. This church has proved that the so-called "impossible" can be done in church work, that a down town church has a constituency to which it can minister. The South End is feeling the influence of this church in a remarkable manner. The Community Forum which is held weekly for five months of the year is an interesting part of the church's work, hundreds gather week after week to discuss social questions, and through this form of service they are drawn to the church. Nearly one hundred members have been added to its membership in the last two years, most of whom come from the community. The missionary offerings of the church have increased from six hundred to eight thousand dollars, and the current expense budget for this year is about twelve thousand dollars. Congregations have more than doubled, and one of the largest prayer meetings in Greater Boston is held.

CONNECTICUT

THE MINISTERS' MEETING for New London and Stonington Union associations was held in the Huntington Street church, Rev. J. A. Elder pastor, New London on Monday, May 2. There was an unusually good attendance. A paper was read by Rev. Henry D. Coe, pastor of the First church, Bristol.

REV. F. S. ROBBINS, missionary in the Stonington Union association, has been greatly blessed in his work during the past year. On April 24, at a largely attended meeting in the Union church, Mystic, he baptized seven converts; one into the fellowship of the Second North Stonington church, and six into the fellowship of the Third North Stonington church. Mr. Robbins has been engaged to continue his work for another year. The director of promotion spent a week recently with Mr. Robbins on the field in the interests of the New World Movement program.

REV. WM. T. THAYER, assisted by Dr. A. B. Coats and Miss Edith M. Town, held a successful Sunday school institute in the Mystic Union church April 24-26, which was attended by representatives from neighboring churches.

REV. E. E. GATES, pastor-at-large and, also, secretary of the state evangelistic committee, has been in great demand among the churches participating in the evangelistic mission during the past four months.

DR. A. W. RIDER, representative-at-large for the General Board of Promotion, spent the month of April in Connecticut. He spoke in nineteen churches in the state, addressed three ministers' meetings, spoke at the semi-annual meeting of the convention board, and met five special groups. The people heard him gladly because his message was crammed full of information attractively presented and abounding in inspiration.

REV. HERBERT JUDSON WHITE, pastor of First, Hartford, has rounded out twelve years in his present pastorate. During the month of April he was granted a leave of absence to engage in an evangelistic campaign with the Second church, Germantown, Pa. Dr. White resumed his own charge May first. On Monday evening, May ninth, the church tendered the pastor and Mrs. White a reception. Mr. Dwight Chapman, on behalf of the Church, presented Dr. White with a purse of gold. Mrs. White was the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of roses. The twelfth year of Dr. White's pastorate was without doubt the greatest in the history of the church.

ELEVEN WERE BAPTIZED at Poquonock Bridge Sunday, May 8, by Rev. G. O. Buddington, the pastor. This makes a total of twenty-one recently baptized, and the end is not yet. A number of these baptized were young men and high school lads. The work has stirred the church to renewed activity, and in a marked manner has touched the life of the community. The work for about three months has been conducted under the direction of the pastor only, without extra meetings, making the Wednesday night prayer meeting the occasion for public decision and confession. The pastor connects the work with the raising of the quota by the church on the $100,000,000 fund.

NEW YORK

EAST AVENUE, ROCHESTER, has called to its pastorate Rev. Clinton Wunder. He is only twenty-nine years old, has wide experience in active social work, specialized in social science in the University of Cincinnati, was ordained in 1917, and has one year of seminary work ahead of him before he graduates from Rochester Theological Seminary.

TABERNACLE, SYRACUSE—Sunday, May 8, was a memorable day in the history of Tabernacle church. When the Board of Promotion asked $16,995 for the New World Movement, some of the people almost gasped, but accepting the program and suggestions of the officers proceeded step by step. Interest developed, enthusiasm increased, confidence spread, and the canvass was made with joyous assurance, resulting in pledges of $18,555.00. At the annual meeting in October the pastor's salary was increased $300. The board of trustees seeing the need for a new site for a new building quietly secured an option on a fine piece of property, strategically located, 100 ft. by 317 ft., just off the car line, that will make the church more central and enable it to minister to the entire community. A quiet campaign was conducted terminating Mother's Day. The treasurer reported nearly $1,000 more than the amount required for the purchase. Testimonies from the older members were that they had never seen a sweeter spirit of unity, and heartier spirit of co-operation.

LAKE AVENUE CHURCH of Rochester contributed $107,000 during the last year. The amount contributed for the running expenses of the church and its organizations was $31,797.24; for the various benevolences, $50,054.92; for the building fund, $25,303.77; making a total of $107,155.93. This is $25,000 more than was contributed for the year ending April 30, 1920. Over $151,500 has been paid in on the building fund of the church. During the past year fourteen have died, forty-five been dismissed by letter, seventy-seven received by baptism, 132 by letter and one by experience, leaving a net gain of 160 and a present membership of 2073.

THE EMMANUEL CHURCH, BROOKLYN, Rev. A. A. Shaw, pastor, observed its fortieth anniversary April 29-May 1. On Sunday morning there was a historical sermon by Dr. Humpstone and in the evening a prophetic sermon by Dr. Shaw. Of the 194 constituent members, thirty-five are still with the church. During the forty years, 2,042 persons have been in fellowship. The present membership is 944. The total amount of money raised for all purposes in forty years is $1,850,000. For the New World Movement, $183,000 was subscribed and of this $73,200 has been paid.

Summer Conference

The question of a summer conference for pastors at Keuka Park, came up in the state pastor's conference at Cortland last October and was referred to the executive committee with power to act. Later in the session, the executive committee suggested that such a conference be held at Keuka Park, Aug. 8-13, 1921, under the joint auspices of the state convention, the state pastor's conference, state and metropolitan boards of promotion and the commission on religious education. The perplexing question had always been how to finance such a conference. Early in the year, the representatives of these various departments of the convention met in Albany and assumed the responsibility for securing the funds needed. Pres. Norton of Keuka College and Rev. C. W. Briggs, director of religious education in this state, were authorized to secure speakers, issue the call and look after publicity. The plans have been nearly perfected, circulars giving full information as to date, room, board and expense have been sent to every Baptist pastor in the state. The man who reads his mail knows about all he needs to know about this summer conference. A goodly number of the pastors have already responded, engaging rooms for themselves and wives. Every pastor interested should report at once so as to be sure of accommodations. On four days, Dr. Granger will speak on "Pastoral Work", Rev. A. A. Forshee on the "New World Movement", Mr. S. L. Roberts of the Pub. Society on "The Pastor and Religious Education," Dr. A. E. Alden of Colgate, on "Evangelism", while some well-known pastor will emphasize "Bible Study." One evening, Rev. H. C. Colebrook will give a humorous lecture. Mrs. Martin, for years dean of Sage College for Women in Cornell, and Mrs. Tomlinson will speak on other evenings to the pastors' wives. Some of the laymen, with autos should see to it that these pastors with their wives enjoy the fellowship and inspiration of this conference. Notify Dr. Norton or C. W. Briggs.—W. A. Granger.

NEW JERSEY

REV. A. T. FOWLER, president of the pastors conference of the Northern Baptist Convention and pastor at North Orange, has been asked to become pastor of the Hampstead Baptist church at Hampstead Garden, London, England. Perhaps few churches in England or America present such a rare opportunity for a man of Dr. Fowler's ability and training as the Hampstead church, situated as it is in the north center of the English capital and known as the garden spot of the city. This section of London ten years ago was a 3,000-acre estate, since then under the direction of a single architect it has been turned into a beautiful suburb which stretches out like two great gardens with the Anglican church at one end and the Free Baptist church at the other. The Hampstead church was organized ten years ago and has had but one minister, Dr. Rushbrooke. It claims among its members some of the strongest Baptist laymen in London. Dr. Shakespear is connected with this church. It has open membership. Dr. Hughes writes that "this is one of the most catholic and important pulpits in London." The church is to spend $100,000 for further equipment in the Sunday school and parish house.

CHELSEA, ATLANTIC CITY—Since January 1, forty new members have been received, thirty-four of them by baptism. Pastor Thomas J. Cross spent some time recently at Oneida Baptist Institute in Kentucky. Miss Martha B. Loud has been engaged for assistant and visitor.

PEDDIE MEMORIAL, NEWARK, under the leadership of Rev. M. Joseph Towney at its annual meeting reported 173 additions of which 119 were by baptism and sixteen by experience. The church raised over $40,000 for all purposes, all bills were paid, a balance was in the treasury and $21,000 was given to the New World Movement.

LINDEN, CAMDEN—On Sunday, March 20, the Sunday school service was given over to a message by Rev. J. Francis Behrens who told in his simple, yet most effective manner, the "Story of the Rose." There was no great emotional exhibition, yet at the close of his address boys and girls and grown-ups flocked to the front of the church to acknowledge by this stand that they were ready to accept Jesus Christ as their Master. There were more than 100 conversions at that Sunday afternoon meeting.

EMANUEL, RIDGEWOOD, Dr. Thomas H. Sprague, pastor. The church is glad to report that the amount reported pledged to the New World Movement for the period ending April 30, amounting to $12,528.88 has been paid in full. This combined with other credits of the church makes the total amount paid to the movement for the period named $15,045.73. A reception was held recently in the Church House for the new members, over eighty in number received since the pastor began his work on Oct. 15 last.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

OLIVET, WEST CHESTER—Pastor Chas. A. Walker, D. D. is just completing eight years of his pastorate, and enters upon his ninth year June 1. At the annual meeting of the church in April, the last of the mortgage indebtedness on the church property was burned, the match being applied by Geo. F. Townsend, the senior deacon. In the course of his ministry Dr. Walker has baptized about two hundred members into the fellowship of the Church, which now numbers 318.

THE FORTY-SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY of the Reading Association was held with the Bethel church, Freeland, April 25-27. Rev. Max C. Wiant, pastor of the First church, Reading, was elected moderator. The reports from the churches were encouraging. There were 48 per cent more baptisms than in the previous year, while the contributions for denominational benevolences increased 227 per cent.

REV. T. C. HARWOOD has resigned the church at Birchardville after a pleasant pastorate of three years.

REV. M. M. SMITH of Warrensville has accepted a call to the First church Bethlehem.

PLANS FOR THE SUMMER ASSEMBLY at Keystone Academy, July 4-11 and Collegeville, August 22-29, are rapidly being completed. Now is the time for the young people to arrange to spend part of their vacation at one of these assemblies, where helpful study courses, enjoyable entertainment, healthful recreation are provided at reasonable cost. Address Principal Curtis P. Coe, Factoryville, for the Keystone Academy, and Rittenhouse Neisser, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, for the one at Collegeville.

MEMORIAL, PHILADELPHIA, William Holloway Main, pastor, paid, on its pledge to the New World Movement last year $11,000, more than was paid the previous year. On May 8 subscriptions amounting to $15,000 were taken to provide for the budget of the coming year. During the last two years offerings aside from the budget have amounted to $3,000 and the church has purchased a fine parsonage.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

REV. E. W. RUMSEY, pastor of the Beth Eden church, baptized ten candidates May 1, among whom were three members of one family, the father and mother and son. These are the first-fruits of a campaign of personal evangelism which, it is hoped, will add many more to the Kingdom and to the church.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Midway church was held Wednesday, March 30th, the pastor, J. R. Routledge, presiding. All branches of church activities showed increased enthusiasm. Every department showed a balance on the right side. Special items of interest for the year were: the installation of electric lights in the church and parsonage, cost defrayed by the choir under the direction of Mr. W. Massey; the renovation of the auditorium and vestry; new hymn books for the church besides $1,000 repaid on parsonage mortgage. Officers were elected for the year.

BUTLER CHURCH, Rev. R. T. Ketcham, pastor, has carried through an unusually full and fine program for the children during the year. Junior union has been held on Sunday afternoons. During the autumn and winter months, the pastor conducted children's church, Fridays at 4:00 P. M. The children greatly enjoyed the Bible truths, learned through object lessons given each week. The first of each month, the meeting with the children was held Saturday afternoon, with Miss Olive Roberts in charge. At these sessions, a different program was followed each time. In the autumn, Bible drill, a hike, nature study and gymnasium work, were enjoyed. In the last four sessions which have been held, industrial work was carried on, the boys working in wood, the girls doing sewing and weaving, while the tiny tots did illustrative Bible work in construction in paper.

PRAYER MEETING ATTENDANCE of the Knoxville church, Rev. F. W. Stanton, pastor, during the year just closed averaged 21 per cent of the membership. The greatest number present at any one meeting was 116, the least, thirty-six.

DR. A. J. MEEK began the tenth year of his pastorate with the New Kensington church Sunday, May 1. Eight were baptized that day and six received by letter and experience. The Sunday school now numbers 300.

FIRST, MCKEESPORT, Dr. Jas. S. Braker, pastor, reports that seventeen of their young people have indicated their purpose to attend the summer assembly at Ridgeview Park; the objective is "Thirty for Ridgeview." An increased attendance of 300 per cent with an added membership of over 100 per cent are two outstanding features of the B. Y. P. U. Seven of the young people purpose entering religious work as their vocation. A church vacation school will be held under the auspices of the church school.

AT THE AGE OF EIGHTY, after forty years of continuous service, Rev. W. H. McKelveen has retired from the pastorate. His last charge was at Dunbar, where he labored seven years. During April, his last month of service, he baptized fifteen. He is to reside in Pittsburgh.

Pacific Coast

OREGON

FIRST, CORVALLIS, held, on May 5, the annual business meeting, elected its officers for the ensuing year and adopted an extensive program for its work among the students of the Oregon Agricultural College, which has a student body of nearly 4,000. It has received 107 new members during the year. It has not only gone over the top with its pledges to the New World Movement, but is likewise going over the top in the payment of same. Pastor Dr. William A. Waldo has got a firm grip on the student life of the College.

McMINNVILLE commencement exercises will be held June 3 to 5. Dr. Ambrose M. Bailey, pastor of the First church of Seattle, Wash. will preach the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class. Rev. W. E. Henry, pastor of the First church of Everett, Wash., and Dr. W. T. Milliken, pastor at Salem, Ore., will also deliver messages. In 1912-13 only 26 per cent of the student body were registered in college courses, while during the current year 66 per cent are doing collegiate work. The present freshman class numbers seventy-four.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

MR. GID HIGGINBOTHAM was ordained at Red Bluff, May 5.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

FOWLER has just closed a very successful year. The membership has increased seventy-two, and the finances were never in better shape, $2,175.00 having been raised for missions. During the past three years of the pastorate of the Rev. D. Catchpole, the membership has doubled in number.

OAKLAND FIRST announces with pride that according to the national standard of excellence, all of its four young people's organizations have a credit of 100 per cent. The Woman's auxiliary had 204 present at its annual meeting Apr. 5, and reports showed an extraordinary record of work carried on.

PASTORS E. G. HANSELL of Rose Hill and E. G. Boughtin of Redondo were recently ordained: the former Apr. 29, the latter May 2.

REV. J. A. V. PIETERS, pastor of Bethany church, Long Beach, celebrated his fourth anniversary as pastor of that church on Sunday morning May 1. During the past four years 180 new members have been received. On May 10 a reception was given to the new members received since May 1, 1920, also to the pastor and wife.

LOS ANGELES, FIRST, James A Francis pastor, received 588 additions between Oct. 1, 1919 and Apr. 30, 1921 and has 1,496 members. The total receipts for all items on the church budget during the same period were more than $96,000. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 850 and an average attendance of more than 500.

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

BETHANY, COLORADO SPRINGS, F. T. Butler, pastor has a remarkable revival. Superintendent G. G. Laughlin of the Denver Baptist Union led a recent evangelistic campaign, with forty-one additions to the church. The church has increased the pastor's salary and raised a fine purse to assist in the care of his sick wife.

ON THE FIRST SUNDAY IN MAY, in the First Church in Denver, the pastor, Dr. A. H. C. Morse baptized seven, and at the communion service gave the hand of welcome to fifty-five. Never in the history of the church have the accessions been so many as during the present year.

Mississippi Valley

MINNESOTA

PARK RAPIDS held its annual meeting May 4. Its total expenses for the year past were $3,500, of which $1,226 went to benevolences. The pastor's salary was increased by $300. The average attendance in Sunday school is 130, with a balance in its treasury of $81. There have been twenty additions, half of this number coming by baptism.

FIRST, MINNEAPOLIS, held its annual meeting April 25: The reports were the most gratifying in the history of the church. Accessions during the year 282, present membership 2393. Moneys raised for the church and the conduct of the Northwestern Bible Training School, $138,408.72. An interesting fact is that the gifts show $27,588.72 expended on current expense, and the balance on missions and education.

INDIANA

MANY NEW PASTORS have recently come to the state, among whom are William Everson, Muncie; B. F. Martin, Fort Wayne; W. H. Zimmerman, Waynetown;

The Berkeley Baptist Divinity School

The outstanding feature of the year at the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School has been the construction and completion of the fine new building. All who have seen the building pronounce it a beautiful structure. The architecture is Tudor Gothic. The building is practically fire-proof, the frame and floors being of reinforced concrete and the exterior red brick and tile. There are more than forty rooms in the building: five lecture rooms, three library and reading rooms, a recreation hall, a reception room, and dormitory facilities for twenty-four students. The cost of the building and furnishings, including also the landscape gardening, will be a little over $105,000. The building was dedicated on Sunday, May 8th. This fine plant was made possible by the Board of Education, the New World Movement, the generous gifts of many Coast people and of Dr. D. J. Harris and John Low of Evanston, Ill., and Dr. W. A. Crouch of Turney, Mo.

We have had a good student body this year, considerably in excess of any previous year, the total enrollment being thirty. The graduating class consists of three men, all of them full college and seminary men.

The permanent resources of the institution have grown steadily year by year. When the institution was opened its total resources amounted to $15,000. The permanent assets, endowment, building and equipment is now $200,000.

During the past year the coast state conventions have aided in supporting the institution by making generous remittances in lieu of the apportionments to the churches, these apportionments having been absorbed in the New World Movement. During the past year the faculty has consisted of two professors giving their whole time to the work; one giving about half of his time; another about a quarter of his time; while five others have conducted standard courses during the year. All the friends of the school feel that with our new equipment and the growing interest in theological education the institution is on the threshold of a new era.

—Claiborne M. Hill, President.

IOWA

CHAPLAIN ALVA J. BRASTED is now with the 4th Artillery at Camp Stanley, near San Antonio, Tex. He is with the regular army and holds the rank of Captain. His work has won the wide approval of army men.

At SHEFFIELD, T. L. Roberts pastor, additions are frequent and the various departments are all growing. Mr. Roberts does a great deal of work not directly connected with his church, but with which the church is in hearty accord. He is teaching a class of foreigners English.

SWALEDALE, G. W. Fogg, pastor, is in the midst of a great agricultural district. His is the only evangelical church, and they are heroically trying to meet the N. J. Peterson, Huntington; J. W. Strachn, South Wayne; J. H. Sskwor, Montpelier; D. L. Woodward, Marion; and M. L. Banister, Seymour.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN D. MOCK of Muncie celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, Monday, May 2.

DURING THE PAST SIX WEEKS approximately $100,000 has come into the state offices for the New World Movement.

INDIANAPOLIS SUNDAY SCHOOLS have gained 48 per cent in attendance in the last three months, and now have an average of about 6,000.

FIRST, INDIANAPOLIS, received forty-two, May 1; Woodruff Place, forty-one; Calvary, six; Emmanuel, eight; Emerson Avenue, twenty-five.

situation. Since he went there two years ago last fall there have been many activities.

NORTHWOOD church and community prosper under the guiding hand of Pastor Alex. Robertson.

HAMPTON, WM. WELSH pastor has a constant revival, and every time word comes from there they have been having conversions.

MASON CITY and Pastor A. W. Tandy are in the last lap of the fifth year of their service together. The years have been fruitful years and the last the best of them all. Additions are coming all the time. The Bible school is taxing the capacity of the building and one class has gone to the Y. M. C. A. to find room. More will have to follow soon. In the five years the church has doubled the pastor's salary and added much to the value of the church property.

MISSOURI

MR. AND MRS. JOHN IMRIE singing evangelists have been giving their time to singing the gospel in Kansas this past winter and report very successful meetings. Rev. J. J. Griffin of Garden City did the preaching in most of the meetings held.

OHIO

URBANA, FIRST, J. A. Moe, pastor—At the communion service in May, twenty were received into fellowship, seventeen by baptism and three by letter. B. Y. P. U. has an attendance of ninety-five. The Bible school has had a splendid growth this year. Congregations were never better. Pledges to the N. W. M. have been paid very promptly.

DENISON UNIVERSITY student enrollment has reached a total of 933, breaking all records. The total would have been much larger but for lack of dormitory space for women, and if the scholarship requirements had not been made increasingly rigid. In all probability, admissions to Shepardson College for Women will be closed in June, because of early applications and the limited dormitory and dining space. Better quality of work appears in the class-room and better tone in college life than in any year since the war began. The building committee of the board of trustees announces the beginning during the coming summer of some of the new buildings for "Greater Denison." The new varsity field, the gift of Colonel E. A. Deeds, will be ready for use at the football events next fall.

AT FIRST, WARREN, A. A. Nellis, pastor, 128 have been received into the membership. Evangelist A. W. Littrell and Mr. D. L. Moody, singer, were engaged from March 13 to 27. As a result of these special services ninety-one were added, fifty-seven by baptism. During Mr. Nellis' pastorate of slightly less than six years, 368 have been added to the membership, the current expenses have been doubled and the missionary offerings the last year were 800 per cent more than the first year.

RLV. B. A. SHERWIN has decided to take up pastoral work again. He has had city and country experience, was district evangelist of Ohio and has built several churches. His address is 10110 Quebec Ave., Cleveland.

REV. WILLIAM CODVILLE died April 7 at the home of his son in Cincinnati, being at that time a little more than eighty years old. He was educated for the law, but changed his direction to the ministry at twenty years of age. Woodstock Institute, in Canada provided his theological training. He served in Canada, Pennsylvania and Ohio in a series of long and successful pastorates. His funeral was held in McKeesport, Pa., Drs. Nellis, Hall and Braker participating; and there also he was buried. He leaves his wife, two sons and two daughters.

Dr. Chas. J. Baldwin

Dr. Charles J. Baldwin, whose death occurred April 13, was a preacher of unusual power. For more than a quarter of a century he was the active pastor of the Granville Church, which is the religious center of Denison University. His ministry was especially acceptable to the congregation composed in a large part of college professors and students. He identified himself closely with the college as a trustee and a loyal supporter. Both he and Mrs. Baldwin, who passed away a year ago, took active parts in the life of the church and community as long as their strength permitted. Their passing is a distinct loss, which will be felt in many hearts. Dr. Baldwin's bearing was dignified and reserved. But when this wall was broken down, he showed a kindly heart and a geniality that was surprising. He remembered with peculiar sympathy those who were in sorrow. His most conspicuous service, however, was rendered as a preacher of Christian truth. He loved to preach, and so long as strength remained he continued to proclaim the riches of the gospel. He was an example of the scholar-preacher, who belonged to that earlier time when the minister was the intellectual leader of the community. He was a real seer, specially gifted with the ability of perceiving and revealing spiritual truth. His mind was saturated with scriptural passages, which he used with convincing force in his discourses. His interpretations of spiritual symbolism showed a rare poetic instinct. Many will never forget his interpretation of the "city that lieth foursquare," of "the new name" written on a white stone, and of "the sea of glass mingled with fire." His sermons were characterized by clearness and by choice and accurate language. It was a liberal education to sit under his teaching.—W. A. Chamberlin.

NEBRASKA

SUPERIOR CHURCH is receiving additions regularly. On April 24 four were baptized and two received upon their Christian experience. The Sunday school has become so large that some classes are compelled to go to the parsonage for the study time. Under the leadership of Dr. F. H. Divine and pastor B. H. Ward this church recently raised $26,000 for a new church home.

THE GRAND ISLAND ASSEMBLY, held the first week of April, was a great source of inspiration to all who attended. Drs. Rolvix Harlan, and W. A. Hill of New York, Pres. Bailey of Colorado Woman's College, Dr. Axling of Japan, Mr. Carman of Shendoah, Iowa, Miss Boyd, Iowa's elementary worker, and Mr. Collins, Nebraska's own religious education director, made the excellent faculty. Two hundred thirty-eight pastors and delegates were enrolled. Loup City carried away the Sunday school library and Grand Island young people the B. Y. P. U. library.

THE COLLEGE has a fine faculty, a good student body and the outlook was never better. It is hoped a new president may soon be selected to lead the work. Dr. B. B. Braden is in the field at present seeking to enlarge the student body. Everywhere he receives a hearty welcome.

DR. W. H. BOWLER and the state secretary held a series of promotion conferences during April, visiting David City, Mead, Wellfleet, Oxford, and Wayne. Everywhere the churches showed deep interest in the missionary program. Dr. Bowler also visited Lincoln, Omaha, Broken Bow, Polk and Mason City. He is a wonderful man of faith and creates new enthusiasm for the New Movement wherever he goes.

DR. WILSON MILLS has recently held splendid meetings at Octavia and Falls City. Both churches rejoice in a deepened spiritual life and enlarged membership. Dr. Mills is greatly beloved in Nebraska and the churches rejoice when he is able to be with them.

ILLINOIS

REV. ARNOLD H. KEHRL, a student of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, has accepted a call to the First Church of Downers Grove and began his work May 1.

REV. R. W. BARBER, a graduate of this year of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary has accepted a call to the First Church, La Moille, and will begin his pastorate on June 1.

THE WOMEN'S MISSION UNION of the Chicago Association met May 10 with the Ravenswood Church with 450 women present. Among the speakers were Mrs. W. P. Topping, state president, Edgar L. Killam, of THE BAPTIST, Mrs. Smith T. Ford, Mrs. William Ayer McKinney who spoke on the union Christian colleges for women of the Orient, and Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, president of the Chicago Church Federation. The women of the Mission Union are to be the hostesses for the annual meeting of the Central District and the Golden Jubilee of the Foreign Society to be held at the Emanuel Church, May 18-20.

REV. J. J. ROSS is concluding three years at Second, Chicago. The last year is the best in the history of the church. Of 114 received fifty-two came by baptism. The total budget for the last year was nearly $50,000, about one-half of which went to missions. Two extra workers are employed to carry on community missionary work. Substantial increases were made to the salaries of the pastor and other workers.

ARCOLA observed Mothers' Day with a program specially prepared by the pastor. Audiences were unusually large, and the attendance double that of last year at Sunday school. Pastor Bruggink has revived the organization of the B. Y. P. U. and the attendance has exceeded thirty.

BRADFORD, FIRST, Frank Metcalf pastor, started out a few weeks ago to build up the membership of its men's class, then very small. It has succeeded so well that on May 1 the attendance was 207.

HYDE PARK, CHICAGO, held its annual meeting and dinner May 11, with nearly five hundred present. Dr. Shailer Mathews presided, Dr. T. W. Goodspeed presented an interesting survey of the last thirty years of the church's history, Mr. Frank Parker entertained the assembly with song, and Dr. L. A. Crandall reviewed some plans and prospects for the future. Mr. F. H. Burt is the new superintendent of the Sunday school, having in view a greater educational program. A regular budget of $77,437 has been adopted for the coming year.

IT WAS THE RECENT PRIVILEGE of Rev. Raymond S. Carman of the State Street church, Rockford, to give the right hand of fellowship to twenty-four new members, nineteen of whom were received by baptism. This was only a part of the harvest gathered from a well-planned campaign continuing for about two months and culminating in a series of delightfully refreshing and spiritual meetings in which the pastor was assisted by his father, Dr. A. S. Carman, of Chicago.

BARRY—Sunday, May 8 was a great day. The thought of "Mother's Day" predominated throughout the day. There were 214 in Sunday school. In the evening the junior orchestra gave a concert. Before the orchestra took their seats the auditorium was filled both above and below. The evening attendance was near the 400 mark.

FREEMPORT—It was good to see Pastor Sayers give the hand of fellowship to thirty-five May 1. In the evening he baptized eight. Nearly the entire resident membership turned out to the annual meeting the evening of May 5. A cafeteria supper was served, reports given, and the work of the coming year considered. There has been a net increase in membership of forty. Over $2,800 has been given to benevolences, nearly $1,600 for an evangelist campaign, over $1,400 spent on improvements of parsonage and church, and about $3,100 for current expenses.

Notable Achievements of Negro Baptists

Rev. S. E. J. Watson came to the pastorate of Pilgrim Baptist church, Chicago, May 12, 1920. At that time the church had 643 members and worshiped in an old, inadequate, and rented building. During the year the membership has reached 3,106 and, by the aid of the Baptist Executive Council and other denominational societies, the large synagogue at Thirty-third and Indiana Avenue has been purchased at a cost of $75,000. The church itself has provided about $12,000 for the same within the last six months.

Although the auditorium seats 2,000 people, it is packed every Sunday morning and an overflow service of several hundred is held in the lower vestry.

In order to complete payment for this property, pay interest charges, and provide for current expenses for three years, Rev. F. H. Divine was asked to lead a campaign, May 4 to 8, for $100,000, of which $70,000 is to cover the debt and interest and $30,000 is for an operating budget. The people responded heartily and when the pledges were all in Sunday evening, May 8, they amounted to $157,780.

KANSAS

EDGERTON PLACE, Kansas City, under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Powell has had a prosperous year. The finances have been greatly increased, so that the usual obligations have been met with ease, the debt on the church was reduced several hundred dollars and the contributions to the New World Movement, while not meeting our quota amounted to more than three times the usual offerings for benevolent and missionary work. A great revival was led by Rev. W. O. Shank of Atchison, who preached eighteen days. Nearly one hundred persons were persuaded to confess Christ, or consecrate themselves anew to his church. There were thirty-seven from the Sunday school above the primary and twelve others from the B. Y. P. U.

AT A RECENT MEETING of the Swedish church in Concordia eight new converts were baptized and ten were welcomed into fellowship.

EVANGELIST SCHEUSSLER and party have just closed a very fine meeting with the Mt. Zion church, a few miles out from Winfield, with twenty-four baptisms.

PROF. FRANK HERRIOTT, a teacher in the high school of Winfield, and superintendent of our Baptist Sunday school there, has been asked to supply the Winfield church during the summer.

SOUTHEAST ASSOCIATION met with the Cherryvale church May 3 and 4. Attendance was large and the interest was quite unusual. Twenty-three churches were represented in the meeting with a total registration outside of the city of 181. Baptisms were 623, more than twice as many as last year. There was a net gain of 1307 in the membership of the churches and a net gain of 1299 in the enrollment of the Sunday-schools. Rev. E. F. Hallock of Pittsburgh was elected as Moderator, and Rev. E. F. Shank of Cherryvale, as Clerk.

REV. E. O. COOK of West Side, Wichita, has resigned and is accepting a call to the Chanute church.

EVANGELIST T. T. MARTIN has just closed a very fine meeting with Pastor M. O. Wolfe at Ft. Scott. There have been forty baptisms.

STEPS ARE BEING TAKEN to put on again the church vacation schools at Northside, Pittsburgh, Frontenac and Ringo. The Pittsburgh church, under the leadership of Pastor Hallock, will handle the North Side and Frontenac schools, and the Girard church, under the leadership of Pastor J. P. Henson will conduct the Ringo school.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS conducted by Pastor J. E. Woods of Alta Vista, assisting Pastor F. F. Bock, was very successful. There were more than fifty conversions.

FT. SCOTT ASSOCIATION met with the LaCygne church May 4 and 5. Rev. B. W. Wiseman of Iola was elected moderator and Mr. Laurence Moore of Bronson was re-elected clerk.

REV. ARTHUR D. KELLY of Bolivar, Mo., is the new pastor at Cato, one of our village churches a short distance from Ft. Scott.

REV. H. D. MORRIS of Xenia has accepted the call of the Dry Ridge Church. This is a rural church a short distance from Bronson.

REV. A. C. POPP, a student at Ottawa, is the new pastor of the Devon church, a short distance from Ft. Scott.

REV. C. A. STEPHENS of the Kansas City Seminary has just accepted the call of the LaCygne Church.

The Missouri River Association

This association has thirty-six churches; many are small and weak with only part time services, and some of them scarcely any services at all. This year a strong evangelistic committee was appointed at the annual meeting of the association, and this committee planned special meetings in every church; most of them have been held already with the result that by the middle of the year there were twice as many conversions reported as there were throughout the whole of last year. Many of the churches have been awakened and several pastors settled so that the outlook for the future is more hopeful in this association than for years past.

Kansas City Theological Seminary

The attendance this year has far outstripped all previous years, the total enrollment being seventy-six. Commencement exercises will be held May 24-25 the first evening being devoted to the Women's Training School and the second to the Seminary. Eleven women and eight men will be graduated. The recent Conference on Baptist Fundamentals called together an enrollment of 140. There were visitors from Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, and Iowa. The first year of the "Four Years Course for Non-College-Graduates," which the seminary added to its regular courses for college graduates, is proving helpful. Eleven states and twelve colleges are represented in the student body this year. Present and former students now constitute one-fourth of the Kansas working force, besides a much larger number in Missouri, and many in the adjoining states.

The clerk reported ninety-one baptisms during the year, ninety-one received by letter, twenty-three by experience, and six by restoration. The total of 211 additions makes this the most fruitful year in the history of the church. The net gain for the year was 178, which brings the membership of the church on Apr. 1 to 813. The treasurer's report showed the best financial year in the history of Grand River church. For current expenses, $14-513.92 was paid in and for missions, $10-686.22 was raised. The Sunday-school has an enrollment of over 1,000. The largest attendance for the year was 641. The average attendance for the past six months was 540.

REV. C. J. McLEAN has resigned as pastor of the First church, Jackson, to accept the call of the First church, Akron, Ohio. During his brief stay in Jackson, the work has been significantly blessed. Mr. McLean graduated from McMaster University in 1902, and after having several pastorates in Ontario, went to the church at Niagara Falls, N. Y., going from there to Jackson.

SCOTTEN AVE., Detroit, B. Y. P. U. surprised everyone at the May city union rally, by carrying off the attendance banner. The new president is Miss Davina Wilson.

FOREST W. DEAN was ordained by a council at Bethany church, Pontiac, May 4; Rev. H. Grimwood being moderator of the council and Rev. F. A. Burnett clerk.

CRYSTAL has been inspired by messages from many outside speakers. Director C. H. Berry delivered an address to the young people, and Rev. Frank B. Bachelor of Kalamazoo College brought a message to both young people and the church. Of special interest and pleasure was the visit of Rev. B. E. Robison who was a classmate of Pastor Charles E. Ehle at Kalamazoo College, and who was seven years in missionary service in China.

MICHIGAN BAPTIST SUMMER ASSEMBLY will be held in Kalamazoo, July 21-29 inclusive. This will be a general Baptist assembly in which will be merged the pastors' summer school. Among the speakers and directors of classes are the following prominent men: Dr. Conrad Moehlman of Rochester Theological Seminary for Bible study and church history; Dr. Raymond M. West of New York will conduct a series of studies on life work; Dr. Emory W. Hunt, Bucknell University, Dr. Norcross of New York, and General Director Hudson.

CALVARY, PORT HURON, is now paying its pastor, Rev. L. A. Townsend, $800 more than it has ever paid a pastor. And this church went "over the top" by a good bit. Forty-six new members have been received into the church, and all departments are in a joyous and working spirit—the Sunday school has doubled its enrollment.

REV. E. R. ALLEN, missionary in the Upper Peninsula, held special evangelistic services in many of the churches, and more than seventy conversions have been reported, the majority of whom have been baptized.

LESLIE, S. J. Hall, pastor, has received thirty-four members during the present pastorate, eighteen of them by baptism.

PASTOR R. S. SPROUT of Dansville was ordained Apr. 26. Rev. A. D. Werden of Eaton Rapids was moderator of the council and Rev. S. J. Hall of Leslie, clerk.

THE FIRST AND BETHANY CHURCHES of Pontiac are bringing forth fruits worthy of their Lord. Dr. C. S. Knight, is preaching the gospel of healing for sick bodies as well as souls at the First church, stressing especially clean living and urging his hearers to take their Savior into their partnership for every-day living. Pastor Marsh has a band of thirty-one young people who are doing personal work to bring their chums into the church. Baptisms are frequent here.

REV. HIRAM A. PEGG finds that stressing Bible study in his prayer meetings and Sunday school at Reed City is bringing a rich spiritual blessing to his people. The attendance at Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. has nearly doubled.

Book Notices

"A New Mind for the New Age."

Henry Churchill King, President Oberlin College. Fleming H. Revell Company.

It would be an impossible task for Pres. King to write a poor book; but his philosophical style of thinking, and the faithfulness of his expressions to his thought, usually make his writings "heavy reading," to be studied rather than curiously read. This volume is the least so of any we have reviewed of his works. As the title indicated the trend of the volume reminds us of a popular book twenty years ago: "The Gospel for an Age of Doubt;" except that this volume takes a wider scale. The author has a vision of occidental civilization as reverting into the class of barbarism and savagery, politically, economically and morally, as the result of the world war for which he bitterly assails Germany as its guilty cause. A new mind is demanded to inspire new energies and new departures in politics, in society, in education, and in religion. For the preacher there is material here for burning appeals and solemn warnings. The teacher, the lecturer and the reformer can replenish their thinking with enriching "stuff" out of this little volume.

"Theology as Empirical Science."

Douglas Clyde Macintosh, Professor of Systematic Theology in Yale. The Macmillan Company. $2.00.

An exhaustive volume of over 250 pages. Contents are well prepared in the thoughts of the writer and attractively presented as a religious literature. It goes over the whole garment of religious subject from a definition of theology to theodicy and eschatology. A cold, critical spirit is evinced. How the "modern mind" looks at things is the test-proof of every position. If the author's intention was to undermine all faith in supernaturalism, the sacredness of the holy scriptures, in the divine personality of Jesus Christ, the atoning virtue of his life and death, in his resurrection from the dead and in Christianity as a revealed, divinely founded religion, we felicitate him on making a brilliant attempt.

"The Jew and American Ideal."

By John Spargo. Harper and Brothers. Fifteen cents.

Mr. Spargo sets himself the task of refuting Henry Ford's attack upon the Jews. He argues from the point of view of Americanism and succeeds so well that one is almost led to wonder why he thought the task worth doing. Who believes in anti-Semitism anyhow?

"With Our Children"

The American Baptist Publication Society has a new Children's Day program build on the church vacation school idea. Address any of its book houses for copies, at two cents each.

"Life of St. Malachy of Armagh"

By St. Bernard of Clairvaux. Prepared by H. J. Lawlor in "Translations of Christian Literature." New York: The Macmillan Co.

An interesting view of the Irish church from the eighth to the eleventh century. Malachy was a reformer of Catholic polity in Ireland and brought the government of the church in that country into accord with the Roman system from which it had departed. To those interested in such subjects an instructive panorama is uncovered manifesting the lives, activities and character of the princes of the church in mediaval times and especially in Ireland.

THE CHOIR-LIBRARY

From Mr. Philip Sack, Jr., director of the choir of the First Baptist Church of Polk, Neb., and from several other choir-masters, has come the request that they be supplied with a list of usable, effective short anthems for their use. So, in the hope that a published list will meet the like needs of the directors who have not written in for assistance we will list below a varied assortment of such titles. So far as possible the older works, standard to the choir-repertoire, and largely available in collections, have not been listed. An effort has been made to enumerate only anthems of a non-liturgical character, adapted to the use of our communion in the underlying spiritual thought, and effective for amateur choirs, but still valid musically. The works are not untried "novelties," thrown out upon a callous world by the aspiring publishers. All numbers are staple listings in reputable catalogues—all will be of interest to the wide-awake church-musicians. Church music composers of this country preponderate.

NEWS NOTES

From the First Baptist Church of Norfolk, Neb., comes the news that a fine new organ has been installed and is adding greatly to the beauty and efficiency of the services. On Easter Sunday evening, the dedication recital was given by Orwin Alison Morse, of Sioux City, Iowa. Mrs. W. O. Eichelberger is the regular organist of the church.

Clayton F. Summy Co., the well-known music publishing and supply house of Chicago announces the removal of their place of business from 64 E. Van Buren Street to 429 South Wabash Ave. Besides the varied and high-class material contained in their own catalogue, this company handles the publications of all the publishers at home and abroad. Mr. Roy Murphy, the active head of the octavo and church-music department is a man all choir-masters and organists should keep in touch with—he is a genuine fount of knowledge and suggestion in his field.

William Lester played an organ recital at the First Baptist Church of Evanston, Ill., Tuesday afternoon, April 12th, introductory to the afternoon session of the meeting of the Woman's Baptist Mission Union held that day.

A Sacred Concert was held in the Baptist Temple of Warsaw, Ind., Sunday evening, May 1st, under the direction of Dr. F. C. Oids. Miss Theodosia Breneman is the organist and Mrs. L. A. Wegner, the regular pianist. The interesting program consisted of anthems such as "Unfold, Ye Portals," of Gounod, "The Heavens are Telling" from "The Creation," and Hallelujah Chorus from "The Messiah," quartets, solos and a choice series of instrumental numbers. A quartet of women's voices and a male quartet also gave selections.

SOME PRACTICAL MUSIC

Fillmore Music House, Cincinnati, Ohio

Going Down the Valley—J. H. Fillmore.
There is a Green Hill—J. B. Herbert.
Jesus, My All—J. H. Fillmore.
Love for Me—Henry Fillmore.
My Mother, O my Mother—J. H. Fillmore.
The Beautiful Garden of Prayer—J. H. Fillmore.

The above enumerated series of sacred songs, published for medium voice only, should be of great practical use to the singers desiring pleasing numbers for church or revival use. Without exception they are easy, marked by absence of technical difficulties, and markedly devotional in spirit. They are of the "sacred-ballad" type, with very easy accompaniments. The great artist will find many opportunities for effective points in these songs, and the tyro can be at ease in them. Most of the ranges do not exceed one octave, and are usable for all types of voices. A special word of praise should be given the printing and paper used.

Lorenz Publishing Co., Dayton, Ohio

Lorenz Selected Anthems No. 2.

This volume of nine easy anthems should find a welcome response from the many directors of chorus-choirs who want an inexpensive collection of effective anthems, under one cover, for a moderate price. The anthems included in this set are by such well-known composers as Ashford, Schnecker, Williams, and Pinsuti, to specify only four; the music is devotional, or no serious technical difficulty, and melodious. Bound in stiff paper covers, printed on a good quality of paper, clearly engraved, the set is a bargain at the list price—sixty cents. If the five choir directors who have written to me within the past few weeks asking for a collection of practical anthems for service use will get this volume I am certain they will not regret the choice.

"Our Baby is Died, Please, Mr. Porter, Would You Come?"

Henry Kirke Porter died April 10, 1921 in Washington, D. C. Funeral services were conducted there by President Clarence A. Barbour of the Rochester Seminary and Lemuel Call Barnes, D.D., of the American Baptist Home Mission Society.

The body was then brought to Pittsburgh where there was a service in Mr. Porter's home church, the First Baptist, conducted by his pastor, the Rev. Fred-eric Tower Galpin, and his former pastor, the Rev. L. C. Barnes. The burial was in Pittsburgh.

His birth was in Concord, New Hampshire. When the Civil War began he was a recent alumnus of Brown University and a theological student in the Newton Theological Institute. He there enlisted in the 45th Massachusetts Regiment, serving as a soldier during 1862 and "63." He continued until the end of the war to serve in the United States Christian Commission. Then he entered the Rochester Theological Seminary and was graduated with the Class of 1866. Two men were in that class, among them were those who became well known leaders in our Denomination; the names of J. W. B. Clark, Samuel W. Duncan, Thomas W. Goodspeed, David Porter Leas, Samuel Hartwell Pratt, and A. J. Rowland mean much to Northern Baptists. The only survivor of that goodly company is Dr. T. W. Goodspeed of Chicago. Since 1902 Mr. Porter has been the honored president of the New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education, the controlling legal body of the Seminary.

He never was ordained by men as a pastor, but God ordained him to a ministry that he nobly fulfilled in the extension and betterment of the Church and the Kingdom of God.

As a large manufacturer, by the treatment of his employees and the use of his wealth; as a philanthropist, publicist, congressman, church member, and officer; as a pioneer and continuous servitor in the local and national Y. M. C. A.; as a friend and supporter of local and world-wide missions; as a personal benefactor of the poor and needy, Mr. Porter was a minister known near and far.

He gave liberally during his stay on earth and willed $136,000 of his estate to be given when he had passed to other spheres of service for his Lord and Master.

He drew no fine lines between universities and theological schools; between home and foreign missions; between denominational and Kingdom concerns; all were recipients of his love and bounty.

Old Fashioned Religion

The so-called "old-fashioned" religion is the only religion worth while, for it is the genuine kind. It is the religion we need today. We need that wholesome spirit of the old-fashioned brotherly love for our fellow men that was taught by the Man of Galilee. We need the self-sacrificing spirit which He showed in His love for mankind by His death on the cross.

JAMES J. DAVIS,
U. S. Secretary of Labor

Mary Clark Burns tells the following story of a tribute paid to him some years ago by the foreign-born father of a large family of little children in the Pittsburgh Sunday school of which Mr. Porter was superintendent:

It was after our return from a summer vacation spent in the Adirondacks that this father came in tears to his pastor telling him of the bereavement which had come to him in the death of his youngest child in our vacation absence.

"I didn't know what to do, when the baby died, because you had gone so far away," he said. "My wife, she didn't know what to do, too. Then the children, they said, Mr. Porter from the Sunday school, he can make the baby's funeral. So I found where was Mr. Porter's office and I went there, and I said, 'Our baby is died, and Mr. Barnes, the minister, you know he is away, and we don't know what to do. And, please, Mr. Porter, would you come and make the baby's funeral?' And then he did. He came and he spoke to my wife and me and the children and he read some in the Bible and he prayed and it was a help to us."

The home blessed by this ministry was a down-town tenement reached through a court opening from an alley in one of the most densely crowded parts of the city.

The ministers of Pittsburgh in view of such facts and of their Christian as well as denominational fellowship with him recorded in their Minutes an expression of "appreciation and our gratitude to God for the long and useful life given to Henry Kirke Porter in our City Association State, and in Christ's field which is our world."

What?

New subscriptions to THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS

Who wants them?

Baptist Women

Why?

They are celebrating the fiftieth birthday of their mother—the W. A. B. F. M. S.

They are giving another gift. This time the best of all—an increased intelligence among the constituency.

THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS are the most effective medium for creating this intelligence. They tell about the daughters near and far who are carrying on the work of the mother society.

Your share in this birthday gift:

1. If you are not a subscriber now, give your subscription immediately to your local Club Manager, your Association Secretary, or send to THE BAPTIST, 417 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, or MISSIONS, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York.

2. Send THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS as a gift to your friends who are interested in vital world issues.

3. Advertise THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS in your local church and among your friends until a subscription is placed in every home of your church and congregation.

The subscription rate of THE BAPTIST and MISSIONS has been made $3.00 for all who join in this Jubilee Subscription Campaign. Be sure to write "Jubilee" on the envelope to entitle you to this rate.

WAR-TORN CHURCH AT MARQUIVILLIERS VAN LA SOMME

"H. G. WELLS, after writing almost the final word of despair concerning the future says there may be one last hope of saving the world, 'if the Christian churches can be aroused unitedly to take up the problems of world peace.' . . . Perhaps the greatest single contribution the United States can make to the period of reconstruction is to pour out her best life by any and every means to bring into one great unit the Christian sentiment of the world against military force as a remedy for international differences in the future."—FRED B. SMITH.

Fresh from the Field

The United Baptist Convention of Maine is to meet with the church at Camden June 7-9. One of the brethren in the church writes: "Quite an honor for a small town to entertain so large a gathering and quite an honor for a small church to grasp so large a purpose, and that with good cheer." Right!

Pursuant to a call of the Lawton, Mich., church Mr. Chas. W. Blastock was on May 17 ordained to the gospel ministry. Rev. H. P. Klyver was moderator and Rev. W. F. Dissette, clerk. The sermon in the evening was by Rev. F. L. Currey. The council urged upon the candidate that, in accordance with his own expressed desire, he secure at the earliest possible date a collegiate training.

A good many beautiful things in the way of church papers come to the office of THE BAPTIST; but nothing more beautiful in organization, completeness and mechanism than the annual report of the Woodlawn Church, Chicago, Dr. Melbourne P. Boynton, pastor.

At the urgent and repeated request of Des Moines University, the Morgan Park church, Chicago, has very reluctantly released its pastor, Dr. Howland Hanson, in order that he may become the head of the new department of religious education which is to be established in that institution. Dr. Hanson is the fourth successive pastor whom the Morgan Park church has released for general denominational work.

The American Bible Society announces the appointment of Rev. J. Oscar Boyd, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Paterson, N. J., as agency secretary for the Arabic-speaking portion of the Levant, as the successor of the late Dr. Hoskins. Dr. Boyd's work for many years has peculiarly qualified him for this position.

A group of about twenty soldiers, under the direction of Prof. Alleman of the army Y. M. C. A. at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, furnished the musical program for a delightful Mother's Day celebration at the William Small Memorial Home for Aged Women in Leavenworth on May 8.

Dr. Howard Agnew Johnson, president of the Chicago Church Federation, estimates that at least 25,000 new members were received into the Chicago churches during the Easter season. So far as reports at hand go, 1,710 of these were received into Baptist churches.

The First Church of Syracuse, N. Y., by a unanimous vote at its annual meeting on May 11, declined to accept the proffered resignation of Rev. Bernard C. Clausen. Coupled with this expression was a pledge to the pastor of loyal and undivided support and congratulations on the achievements during the eight months he has served the church. During this period 259 have joined the church, 142 of them by baptism.

Rev. Wm. J. Geen, after spending several weeks in northeastern Pennsylvania as pulpit supply has returned to his home in Chicago at 11346 Indiana Avenue, where he may be secured for similar service or for the pastorate. He has been a pastor in Illinois for the last fourteen years.

Rev. A. N. Nettleman of Bordentown, N. J., has been called to the pastorate of the First Church, Aurora, Ill. This important church has been without a pastor since Rev. R. H. Claxon closed his work some months ago.

The First Church, Lima, Ohio, last week entertained the Ohio Convention. The church has called Rev. Warren L. Steeves of Carbondale, Pa. Mr. Steeves was present during the convention and plans to begin his work soon.

Mr. E. H. Rhoades, of Toledo, president of the Ohio Convention, speaking at the recent meeting in Lima said: "Tell the Baptists that Ohio Baptists met the Lord Jesus in the sessions this year. I have rarely been so conscious of His presence." We shall hope for a further report of this meeting.

The commencement exercises of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary are to be held as follows: Baccalaureate sermon by Prof. Jakob Heinrichs, at the Second Baptist Church, Sunday, May 29, at 11 a.m.; missionary sermon by Rev. Charles L. White at the Austin church, at 8 p.m.; theological conference, "Three Aspects of the Ministry—Evangelist, Teacher, and Missionary." Speakers, Dr. J. W. Hoyt, Prof. George R. Wood, and Dr. C. L. White, Monday, 7:45 p.m., at the seminary. Guests, The Chicago Baptist Ministers' Conference, with a special invitation to the wives of the members; alumni exercises, Tuesday, 12:30 p.m. Place to be announced; commencement exercises, including the presentation of diplomas, the conferring of degrees, and the commencement address by Rev. Judson B. Thomas at the seminary, Tuesday, May 31, 7:45 p.m. All friends of the seminary are cordially invited to attend any or all of the exercises.

Wyoming Goes Over the Top

A telegram from W. H. Bowler, under date of May 22, reads: "Wyoming has today completed its New World Movement quota and goes over the top with good momentum. Full expectation that churches not yet reported will subscribe sufficient excess above state allotment to give Wyoming first rank among states. Great rejoicing among Baptists throughout state."

Last Call to Columbia River District Baptists

Trains going West! Trains going North! Trains going South! For SEATTLE! C. R. GOLDEN JUBILEE! All A-Board! Board!

Men, women, girls and boys from all directions are ready to start for the GOLDEN JUBILEE CELEBRATION which is to be held in SEATTLE May 31 June 1-2 at the First Baptist Church, and Seattle Baptists will be at the train to meet them when they arrive. The whole family will want to come and it is hoped that every church in the district will send its pastor and a full delegation of women and a large number of World Wide Guild girls. The meetings will be brimful of interest, inspiration and joy. Never before have we, of the Northwest, been privileged to entertain and listen to so many results of the labors of our representatives across the waters. Here we will get a glimpse of what our investments in missions has brought about and what the $365,000 in gold which is the special Golden Jubilee Thank Offering will make possible.

We are to have seven young women from the Orient and Europe with us who have made a special trip to the U. S. to be present at these meetings. We will see and hear Dr. Ma Saw Sa, the very first Burmese girl to get a college education; Khanto Bala Rai, a converted Brahmin who is now doing educational work in India; Dr. Namdamah, a young woman physician from Nellore, So. India; Kan En Vong, a Chinese Kindergarten; Nakaji Chicksa San, Dean of the Osaka Bible Training School; Martha Wensche who is in charge of a Girls' School in Poland; and Mrs. Francis Kolator, daughter of our oldest Bohemian Baptist Missionary and prominent in Y. W. C. A. work in Prague.

Besides these foreign guests, we will be privileged to meet and hear from four of our missionaries who are home on furlough, namely, Mrs. Topping who has spent twenty-five years in Japan in Kindergarten work, Mrs. Wm. Owen who has spent twenty-five years in South India in educational work, Miss Anna V. Johnson, missionary from the Philippines, and Miss Luciele Withers, missionary from China who is bringing with her a $2,000 exhibit of Chinese embroideries, pottery, etc. A large number of W. W. G. Girls will be here for the "mixer" and banquet Tuesday evening and the W. W. G. pageant will be presented at the opening session of the Jubilee.

On Wednesday, there will be an informal reception to meet our honor guests and that evening, the women will present that wonderful pageant "The Call and the Answer" written by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery. Sixty-five people take part in this splendid pageant. We are also to be favored with a lecture by Mrs. T. E. Adams of Cleveland on "The Story of Fifty Years as Told in Pictures."

There is also to be a splendid luncheon for the women and girls on Thursday and that same afternoon, the Seattle Baptists will entertain our out of town guests with an automobile trip over the beautiful boulevards and parks of this wonder city and through the university campus, also giving our guests the privilege to view our wonderful stadium.

JUBILEE means JOY and the meetings will be full of it from start to finish. All meetings at the FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Delegates desiring entertainment kindly notify Mrs. R. C. Whittlesey, 4312 Lattona, N. E., Seattle, Wash., at once and she will arrange for same. Delegates are entitled to lodging and breakfast.

Reduced R. R. fare is promised if 250 or more people, paying 67 cents or more one way fare attend the meetings. Purchase a ticket for one way only, secure a certificate with same and on the return trip the fare will be only one-half.—Mrs. V. J. Didrickson.

Annual Meeting of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society

The fiftieth annual meeting of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society will be held in the Des Moines Coliseum in the city of Des Moines, Iowa on June 22, 1921, at 2:00 P.M., and succeeding days, to act upon any reports that shall then be presented, to elect officers and members of the board of managers, and to transact any other business that may properly come before the meeting.

By order of the Board of Managers.

Mrs. T. E. Adams,
Recording Secretary.

That Is What We're Here For

The man who really wants to do God's will in this world soon finds that he must have an interest in God's work in the world. God's work is confined to no single community or race. It is to help men do God's will by being intelligently devoted to his work that THE BAPTIST and Missions are here.

Killam's Kollum

"Two-B" Baptists

The editors of THE BAPTIST are Baptists. They all belong to some one of the fifty-seven varieties already mentioned in this Kollum. There is a fifty-eighth variety which is coming into prominence. We are surprised to find such a number in this country. We expect that they will soon want representation on our staff. They are "Two-B" Baptists. They always spell their species B-a-b-t-i-s-t. Judged by our mail their number is increasing. You must pronounce the name to get the full significance of the order. All ready! B-A-B-T-I-S-T, Bab-tist. Emphasis on first syllable.

Asking Altogether Too Much

"We were interested in what you had to say about an habitual reading of THE BAPTIST tending to make one kind to animals. The world needs more kindness. If you can assure us that your paper will make our members kind one to another we will subscribe for every family in our church." Brethren, that is going too far. We are hoping to proceed gradually from the lesser achievement to the greater but do not ask us to perform miracles. If we can first succeed in cultivating in a man kindness to brutes we shall hope eventually to produce in him goodwill toward his brothers. But let us be reasonable. We would remind our questioner that it is well to have kindness in the world even though it expends itself on dogs. Subscribe for THE BAPTIST anyway. We will do our best on a hard problem. In making progress a beginning there must be somewhere.

Prize Editorials

A subscriber, who carried off a prize for an editorial effort wants to know why we do not run these editorials every week. Some of the reasons ought not to be told in a public way. It might hurt somebody's feelings. Here is one reason we reluctantly relate. "Our pastor got a prize for an editorial published in THE BAPTIST. We were mighty proud of him, but last Sunday we lost it all. It was a union service. The house was crowded. Our pastor was to preach. He got up and read that prize editorial and almost fifty others which he fully expects THE BAPTIST to print. In the meantime the Methodist man got busy while our pastor was writing editorials and gathered in most of the converts of the recent union meetings. It's a shame for such a good paper as THE BAPTIST to place temptation in the way of men." All of which leads us to say that we shall attempt to reduce temptation to no more than a half of one per cent. Brethren, make the writing of prize editorials your avocation rather than your vocation. Fewer and better editorials are needed. If you do not take the hint we shall be forced to write them all ourselves.

Let the Churches Act

"LET THE churches act," has been the recent cry with reference to the peace movement. For it has been manifest that neither organized business, organized labor nor organized politics has sufficient vision, faith and internal unity to undertake any effective leadership towards restoring sentiments and conditions of peace and arresting the international idiocy of increasing armaments.

Idiocy it is; nobody thinks otherwise. But what to do about it is the problem for which no solution has appeared; and such representative spokesmen as Mr. Lloyd George, Sir Douglas Haig, Gen. Bliss and Roger Babson have appealed to the churches to use their moral and religious influence for the definite proposal and promotion of a program of peace.

Whether the churches would be able to find a voice had the appearance of doubt until quite recently. But prospects are brightening. Last week the Association for International Friendship Through the Churches held a notable conference in Chicago, in which some of the strongest men and women of the country presented in great addresses the chief aspects of the problem of international peace, reached conclusions and expressed themselves collectively in clear findings.

One immediate practical step agreed upon was a resolution read by Mr. Raymond Robins petitioning the President of the United States to invite the other leading nations to a conference on the limitation of armaments. The great crowd that thronged Medinah Temple at the last session rose almost in solid unanimity to express its enthusiastic support of the resolution.

To follow up this step, another recommendation was that the churches throughout the country make a moral drive on the first Sunday in June to put the religious conscience of the nation behind this program.

Thus has come again to American Christianity a morally majestic opportunity to serve humanity. If the churches will mass their forces behind the movement for international disarmament they are within reach of another such victory for righteousness as they achieved when they joined their forces to overthrow the drink traffic.

All classes and people of all nations except those whose interest lies in war are ready to welcome such a movement. They are desperately heartsick with waiting for it. Mr. Matthew Woll, speaking for organized labor on the last evening of the conference, welcomed the purposes of the conference with cordiality, and declared the readiness of the working class to co-operate.

It is to be hoped that Baptist pastors and churches throughout the land will put themselves into this movement with all of their might of faith, holy resolve, passionate goodwill, high hope and moral heroism.

Let the churches act.

Shall We Quarrel or Build?

THE TENSE atmosphere of the Buffalo convention of last year will not soon be forgotten by those who breathed it. There was a suppressed antagonism and bitterness of feeling which every now and then broke through the surface. In the months following the convention the brethren were, many of them, in a contentious mood. Their will to fight for the faith of the fathers and for the liberty into which they had come was much in evidence. The pages of THE BAPTIST during those months faithfully reflected the minds of the people in our churches. We are convinced that this paper did at that time a valuable service to our constituency.

But inevitably there arises a question which has thus been worded by Prof. F. L. Anderson, who says that we must decide "whether the denomination should concentrate its energies on age-long theological debates or on an advance in evangelistic, missionary and educational work." In other words, shall we quarrel or build? In recent months THE BAPTIST has been devoting itself whole-heartedly to a constructive policy. It has not kept its ears or its pages closed to discussion. But it has chosen to feature the work, and the Christian spirit back of the work.

As we approach the Des Moines convention, there emerge certain great matters of policy which are to be discussed and perhaps decided there. This paper has felt that reports of the committees concerned should be made early and that then there should be full discussion, by means of carefully prepared articles, in order that the delegates might go to the convention with some understanding of the points immediately at issue. The committees have not as yet decided to do this. It is inevitable therefore that in the weeks immediately ahead there shall be more or less free discussion of these points. THE BAPTIST desires to make its full contribution to this discussion and will endeavor to do so.

In the long run, a constructive policy is the only profitable policy, whether for a denomination or a paper. Discussion becomes imperative at times, but the end of the debate should be increased devotion to our Lord and renewed efforts to do our full part in making his kingdom to come. We have never seen a time when greater emphasis was needed upon our great evangelistic, missionary and educational policies, when the churches of Christ needed more emphatically to go forth in the spirit of their Master into the work before them. We believe that the great body of the denomination wishes agreement as speedily as possible upon all mooted questions and then an ever-increasing effort to do splendid constructive work all along the line. And to this effort, THE BAPTIST is glad to dedicate itself.

A Conference on Evangelism

FOLLOWING the custom of other years, there is to be held at Des Moines on the Sunday and on Monday morning and afternoon preceding the meetings of the Northern Baptist Convention a conference of state secretaries, state convention workers, evangelists and other special workers "for a fellowship of prayer and contemplation, for a sincere heart searching and a regirding for the greater tasks of the tomorrows."

The subject to be considered is "Evangelism the Supreme Task of Christianity," and there is such a group of speakers and leaders announced as is seldom gotten together at any gatherings. Men and women who are able to attend these sessions will certainly be fitted in spirit for the great business of the convention which is to follow.

The denomination is under obligations to the department of evangelism of the Home Mission Society and to the evangelistic committee of the convention for making possible for its workers so helpful and useful a conference.

Such prayer and heart searching are demanded also for each one of the men and women who may attend the Des Moines convention. Large questions are to be considered, far too large to be dealt with in haste or heat. Some of them are rather new to us and especially need consideration without passion or prejudice. A convention may easily become partisan and reach decisions which are no solutions. Hard and fast distinctions may be made and in time be shown to be false. Men may be given labels which do not at all belong to them. Radicals on either side may lead men's judgments astray. Only if men go in the spirit of prayer and of love and with a determination to be led by the Spirit can there be valid and lasting decisions. All Baptists are called upon to give themselves to the same "fellowship" which is planned for these who shall attend the conference on evangelism.

Work of Pocket Testament League

POSSIBLY the most lasting influence of Charles M. Alexander will be that in regard to the establishment of Pocket Testament Leagues.

"The record of the Pocket Testament League's success as a world-wide Bible-reading movement forms one of the most striking chapters in the history of modern evangelism. To the promotion of this work Mr. Alexander's last days were especially devoted. He had had upon his heart a vision of a great, world-wide Bible revival, and by every gift at his disposal he fostered this idea. So successful had he been that before leaving the United States on what proved to be his last voyage, plans for such a revival had been formulated and entrusted to a committee whose privilege it will be to see that the ideals of the man now called to larger service are carried forward. In great industrial establishments, where there is as never before a need for the stabilizing influence of the gospel, meetings are being held and the Bible is put into the hands of the workers. Special efforts have been made in Philadelphia to reach the street car men of the city, and this has resulted in twenty-six hundred of them signing up to read a daily chapter from the Bible. Of these, more than six hundred and fifty wrote upon their cards, "I accept Christ." Over one hundred men are enrolled as daily Bible readers in Sing Sing prison, and a group calling themselves the "Comfort Club" get together in the evening to read their Testaments. Thirty-three inmates of Oregon State Penitentiary are League members and the warden writes: "The Testaments are worth their weight in gold to the men who are trying to fit themselves for a new life."

In no more practical way can any pastor promote gospel evangelism than by organizing a Pocket-Testament League in his church.

Do Baptists Wear This Livery?

REV. LEO KALMER, O. F. M., chaplain of the Illinois penitentiary, has been making a statistical study of the prison population with a view to finding an answer to the question whether religion breeds criminals.

Naturally one is disposed to say that any system which breeds criminals is by that fact barred from the category of religion; for true religion is in its very nature and by definition a faith that produces righteousness. But Mr. Kalmer takes words in their common use and counts as religious all those who report themselves as falling under the usual church classification in the prison records.

According to his figures, of every 10,000 Catholics in Illinois, seven are in the penitentiary; of every 10,000 Methodists, ten; of every 10,000 Baptists, seventeen; of every 10,000 Presbyterians, six; of every 10,000 of all other religions taken together (Jews, Mormons and others), ten. But he explains that owing to the system of registering the religious affiliation at the prison, these figures should be reduced by half. On entering the prison every inmate is asked for his religious affiliation and if for any reason he prefers to have his name entered in one class rather than another it is so entered. Consequently at least half of the inmates registered as of any denomination are not members of it at all.

But what of the remaining half? They are supposed to have some "actual, real, personal connection with religion." But what is the nature of that contact? In the case of Catholics it is explained that one must have received first communion in childhood and gone to confession and communion at least once a year. By these tests it was ascertained that of the Catholic inmates not more than one-fifth are "practicing Catholics." By some fairly similar test it would be interesting to find how many of the Protestant inmates are "practicing" Protestants.

Comparisons however are difficult. A "practicing" Baptist, in the strict and accepted use of terms, is one who personally follows Jesus Christ in loyal obedience and faith. How many such persons, can you imagine, are in the prison at Joliet—and because of their religion?

Baptists and Publicity

If people misunderstand us the fault is ours—Have we something to sell that is worth as much as Wrigley's Chewing Gum?—Publicity will reach people in the hedges—The church bell no longer brings them in.

BY ALVIN G. HAUSE

A GOOD salesman believes in publicity, if he is selling some line of goods in which he has implicit faith. My Lord were he on earth at this time would advocate it for the propagation of his gospel. When he was here he didn't wait for the people to come to him, He went after them. He told his disciples to "go into the highways and hedges and compel men to come." There isn't a highway or a hedge anywhere, there is no corner of the country so remote, but can be reached by publicity.

Our denomination should enter widely and extensively the publicity field. Being more or less a conservative people we have timidly held back from invading the publicity world. It has been because of a false pride. I was surprised and delighted when attending the Southern Baptist Convention last May to see every night during the session whole pages of advertising matter in the large Washington dailies telling the national capital what Southern Baptists believe. Such a campaign on a large scale all over the United States, by both our conventions, invading the largest dailies in all principal cities would reap more practical results in winning adherents to the Baptist principles than any one method we could employ. Our people are misunderstood by those outside the denomination. What an enlightenment to some of our own members it would be, and certainly what illumination it would bring to those not Baptists to learn some of the fundamental things we as a people do believe.

Too Bad About Baptists

One of our pastors told in the Standard a few years ago this story: "While riding on a train in New England some three years ago in company with a distinguished Congregational preacher, pastor of one of the largest churches in Boston, our conversation fell along lines pertaining to church union. After discussing the possibility of union for some minutes my companion spoke of the Baptists and paid his respects to them in this fashion: 'It's too bad,' he said, 'that you Baptists can't get away from the old idea that baptism is essential to salvation. We can never have church union until you give that up.'"

This statement, coming from a man so prominent as he, of course gave our Baptist minister quite a shock, and led him to believe in and advocate the denomination advertising for a Baptist press agent. We certainly need to cry from the housetops our position on many things and for us to despise the agency of publicity for the doing of this means that we are refusing to accept the only means of getting before the world our great beliefs.

Why should not our denomination advertise? We claim we are the closest people on the green earth to the New Testament in many things, and if we really believe this it lays upon us a great responsibility to let the world know about it.

I wonder how much our denomination spends on advertising, counting all the individual churches that advertise each Sunday? Well, that it pays to advertise may be gathered somewhat from the amount of money some large concerns put into it each year.

John Wanamaker spends nearly $1,000,000 a year in advertising. The Chalmers Automobile Company spends $1,000,000 a year. The National Biscuit Company spends $1,000,000 a year. The Goodrich Tire Company spends $1,500,000. Swift and Company, packers, spend $1,700,000 a year. The Wrigley Chewing Gum Company spends $1,800,000 a year. The United States Rubber Company spends $5,000,000 a year in advertising. All these concerns are advertising one thing—service.

That's the one thing our denomination should advertise: what it is, what it has done, is doing, and will do.

The Church the Biggest Thing

Because the church of Jesus Christ is a bigger thing than all these other interests combined, the church should place itself as such before the indifferent masses.

The church is conservative. It does not act quickly. It is true that advertising is indeed a new industry, and when the church does undertake it in real dead earnest, the world will be assured of a vital message that is full of power.

In our father's time (eighteenth century, and beginning of nineteenth) the church was the chief forum. It is not so at the present time and probably will never be again. Newspapers, telephones and wireless telegraph have eliminated distance.

The church was formerly the chief social center. There were no such things as neighborhood clubs, lodges, teas, etc. Now social organizations are legion.

Ypsilanti B. B. B. Boys Win

Clean, snappy, well trained playing on the part of the two Baptist basketball teams competing the past winter in the Sunday School Leagues set up in the seven churches of Ypsilanti, Michigan by the Recreational Commission directed by Dr. Deyo Leland of the city won for us the $35.00 trophy for the senior team, Boys from 16-18 years old, and the splendid banner for the Juniors, Boys from 12-15 years of age.

All but three of the members of the two teams are members of the Baptist church, the pastor having baptized three of them at Easter time.

Athletics well directed have assisted splendidly in adding to the interest and attendance upon a Sunday School which has nearly doubled its attendance within the past six months.

THE TEAM THAT WON

The church bell commanded people as did the dinner bell in those days. Today, our churches have no church bells.

The greatest church in existence today is the church that serves best the men, women and children of its community. The church that serves only its own members is like the flour-mill that operates only for its employees. Serving the community presupposes that the church has a ministry for the community. It is the business of the local church to impress the minds of the unchurched with these facts. Publicity is the only way the church can properly get before the community.

The local church should advertise then, because it gets the kind of results the church desires, in the shortest time and at the least expense.

A crowd is not everything, but a crowd is something. A big Bible school is not everything, but a big Bible school is something. The church should advertise the church; not the preacher, but the work, teaching, and service of the church.

Every local church should have an advertising fund in the budget as well as pastor's salary, janitor's salary, and so on. The minimum should be one dollar per member.

How should the local church spend this money? Wisely, judiciously, of course.

How to Spend Money

The first part of my advertising money in my present pastorate, I remember spending for a bulletin board, where the sermon subjects could be announced each week. I am not ashamed of my church, and I want it to be labeled a Baptist church so everyone passing in front of it will know it as such. Some of our ministers are unwise in not placing on the bulletin board each week their sermon themes for the next Sunday.

Then, there are the hand bills, cards, and so on, announcing a series of sermons; or some unique work of the church. There are also electric signs. Letters written to your members several times a year, revealing to them the mind and goals of the pastor are good. Placards placed in the business houses and on the telephone poles of your community are good.

The best possible medium of paid advertising is the newspaper. It is the most insistent factor in our public life. It is with us at morning, noon and night, at our meals, in the street cars, at clubs, hotels, on trains, wherever we may be. The American people are becoming a newspaper-educated people. This provides a medium of communication out of which the church cannot afford and has no right to stay.

It is true that every man cannot write successfully display advertisements. But all of us can take a short advertising course from some good correspondence school; or perhaps get a few fundamental lessons from some good ad man in our city. There is no mystery, secret or science in writing advertising. It is simply an effective application of common sense. It is only good salesmanship. Of course, training and experience produce skill and skillful ad writers are almost always available.

Papers Are Friendly to Preachers

Most of our preachers think the newspapers are antagonistic to them; when as a matter of fact, every great paper realizes that the clergy are one of the biggest forces for good, for moral and spiritual life in the land. Most of our men, because the papers do not always print what they want them to print or what they think should be printed, are of the opinion that they are not in sympathy with them and their work. They never for a moment consider what the newspaper is for, and what is real news. A newspaper exists to print new news.

I remember attending a certain state convention, and all the ministers were bitterly complaining because the convention had not been noticed by the daily papers. It was in a large city, but a rather small convention. It was positively unadvertised in any way. When I went to the state secretary to see if they had appointed a publicity man he seemed surprised at my question, because to him the convention was the biggest thing in the city. Well, it wasn't, to the papers. I called up, at his request, one of the big papers, and we had a little notice of our convention in the paper that night. The city editor said he had not heard of the meeting at all. If I had the space I would go into detail as to the methods employed by the large papers in securing news, but suffice to say, that they have not men going out over the cities like detectives hunting for news, but every man is given a definite line of news to be responsible for. Meetings of such character as religious gatherings will have a man or woman assigned to cover them, if of a magnitude to warrant such action, but if not, the papers would be glad to print such news of the meeting as would be furnished them by some person, either telephoning or writing it in.

Every city pastor should cultivate the friendship of the city editors and reporters of the papers. He should be well known by them in his own sphere as the most successful business man is in his. He should not hesitate to give his mind on important matters pertaining to the welfare of the city, the state, or the nation. Every reporter will tell you that the average minister is the hardest man in the city to get news out of when he should be the easiest.

Should you announce your sermon themes in a short, attractive, and interesting way in the "Go To Church Column" you will find a reporter in your congregation occasionally. Especially is this true if it treats on some phase of a bad local condition, and so on. The trouble with so many preachers is, they think they have to be sensational and ridiculous and preach on some jazzy theme before they can command the notice of the press. This might be true with some papers, but not with a conservative, serious paper. Never for a moment should we seek publicity for our own aggrandizement, but only for our Lord's. Such subjects as, "When You Were a Tad-pole and I was a Fish," "What Put the Ham in Abraham?" "The Scolding Wife," "The Husband Who Stays Out Late at Night," "Tan Shoes and Negligee Shirts," "The Two-Headed Woman," etc., only prove that the men preaching them seek publicity. All such sensationalism in the pulpit is worse than sawdust. It is born of the secular and smacks of the street, and is a burning shame and an insult to the Christian ministry.

There Are Simple Ways to Get Men

But we can announce our themes in simple and expressive ways that will command the attention of the papers and the populace. But if we seek to do it just for the publicity to ourselves, the newspaper men will immediately know our brand and pay little attention to us.

There is another simple way we can get our messages in the papers. When you intend preaching a sermon that at all touches on some local condition, or national problem—and we should often do this, giving the interpretation of Scripture to the problems of today—write out about 500 words from the meat of it, send it to the city desk of any daily paper, telling the editor when you are going to preach it, and you will perhaps find part of your message that only reached a few scores of people reaching thousands, and if our messages are worth preaching to scores they are worth preaching to thousands.

With a Prince on Heaven's Frontier

Dr. A. H. Strong lays on the tomb of his friend Dr. L. A. Gould, lately deceased, the following tribute—Princes in the Kingdom of God, they walked together up to the very borderland of Canaan

BY AUGUSTUS HOPKINS STRONG

Louis Agassiz Gould

A GENTLEMAN, a scholar, and a Christian; a man of great gifts, of whom the world was not worthy. He came of a good stock, for his father was a noted botanist and named him after his bosom friend, Louis Agassiz. He was an only son. Brought up by an admiring mother and elder sisters, he became a meticulous and indefatigable student, with occasional overplus of confidence in his own plans and conclusions. But at heart he was a consecrated man; devoted to Christ; a great believer in the Bible; and, from his early years, determined to lead the life of a missionary. After graduating from Williams College in 1875, he became my pupil in the Rochester Theological Seminary, in the class of 1879, of which William Ashmore, Arthur B. Chaffee, and Frank L. Wilkins were members. I never had under me a more faithful student. I followed his after course, through short pastorates in Holley, N. Y., and in Fall River, Mass., until he seemed to reach the summit of his ambition in a five years' missionary career in China, Ningpo and Shaohing still remember him, though family illnesses compelled him sadly to return to America. Then came other short pastorates in Racine, Wis., Highland Park, Ill., Shelbyville, Ind., Santa Monica, Cal., and finally fifteen years of service, without charge, in Los Angeles, Cal., part of the time as assistant to Dr. James Whitcomb Brougner. In all these different relations he was ever ready as lecturer on missions, as Bible class teacher, as visitor of the sick, as helper of the poor, to do any humble work that might be called for; and his deep Christian experience, his wide knowledge of Scripture, and his abounding cheerfulness, made him a most useful member, even though he was not pastor, of the church.

Forty-two years have passed since he left us at Rochester, but hardly one of them has not furnished me with some letter of his which showed the minuteness of his scholarly attainments and the depth of his insight into the meanings of Scripture. He was a great reader. He knew the ins and outs of the higher criticism, and the contentions of the advanced theology. But his faith was unshaken in the divine inspiration of the Bible and in the deity and atonement of Jesus Christ. The omnipresence of his Lord was a commonplace of his life, and his prayers were often seraphic and compelling. We had full opportunity to test his Christian quality in that Oriental journey which I have described in my book, "A Tour of the Missions"; for, in that tour he was our courier, private secretary, and compagnon du voyage. The book could not have been written without him, for his broad knowledge of missions, his business capacity, and his social nature, made him indispensable as a helper. He could lay out a scheme of travel that required nights in sleeping cars and days in sight seeing, such as only angels could endure; but his care for every detail and his mastery of each difficult situation won our respect and affection. He had no thought of his own comfort, but only of the success of our tour. He would have made a wonderful leader for a large personally conducted party of tourists through the mission lands of the Orient, which so many of our rich people visit without ever seeing the only lights which there illuminate the darkness.

Two Valued Letters

I have two letters from Mr. Gould which I value highly because they are his last, and because they illustrate the cheery and even humorous way in which the Christian may combine learning and gladness in his approach to death. The first of these letters was written just before he went to the hospital for the operation which he knew might cost him his life. The second was written with pencil after the operation was over, but when he still retained some use of his powers. When we visited him at his bedside, however, consciousness had departed, and the next day we learned of his death. The physicians said that he might have recovered, if he had only tried to live. But he thought, with Paul, that to depart and to be with Christ was far better, and he fell back gladly into the arms of his Lord. In spite of many sorrows and unfulfilled ambitions, he had fought a good fight and had finished his course, and I doubt not that today he has a crown of righteousness, which more than rewards him for all his troubles. Omitting merely personal allusions, I append the last letter written before his operation, and precisely as he wrote it.

A Letter from the Frontier

Hospital, February 2, 1921.

Dear Dr. Strong:

I am perfectly "well," and in no pain. I am in the hands of my medical friends and of the Lord. What happens, happens. What doesn't happen; doesn't happen.

Although the doctor has intimated that there are no complications, and no reason to believe that the operation will not be successful, I have made all my preparations for fatality. I have settled all outstanding accounts known to me. I have made a brief will and I have left directions "in case of death."

I am ready to depart and be with Christ which is far better, or to abide in the flesh and fight the devil. I love the contrasts brought out in the Revised Version between

AT HOME	NOT AT HOME
in the body	(absent) as concerns the Lord and

NOT AT HOME	AT HOME
(i. e. absent), as	WITH concerns the body	THE LORD

There is no epitome of heaven consonant with that: AT HOME WITH THE LORD. You know how I love to be "at home" with you and Mrs. Strong. You know how much you love to be "at home" in Rochester, especially with your loved ones. You know what it is to give an "At Home," and give joy to others. You know how you are "at home" with certain persons, and decidedly "not at home" with others.

So AT HOME WITH THE LORD in this life and the life to come is my idea of The Presence, and of Heaven, where I can engage in ceaseless activity without getting tired, and where I can enjoy the company and fellowship of the good and the best in all ages.

I hope to be librarian up there and soak myself for eternity in "the best that has been said and done in the world"—with references to original sources and authors.

Come and see me. I expect to reside at the corner of Jerusalem and Jericho streets. I wish you and Mrs. Strong might be in the next block.

Let us make the rounds together. We will call on Moses, and ask him how he wrote the first chapter of Genesis, although I know he wrote it as a moving picture in six reels. We will ask him about the composite character of the Pentateuch and how he was able to write the account of his own death.

We will ask Joshua how he made the sun and the moon stand still; and Samson how he worked that Temple of Dagon stunt.

And Saul, how he was a man of God, and then wasn't.

And David, why he didn't let Bathsheba alone, and how much he knew of the meaning of the Messianic Psalms.

And Isaiah how he happened to be two.

And Jonah, if he was the first submarine navigator.

And Daniel, how he felt, when he first saw the lions.

And Shadrach Meshach and Abednego, if they had an asbestos suit.

And the evangelists, to tell us about the conflicting inscriptions on the cross; and to give us a consecutive account of the events succeeding the resurrection (counts 5 in the examination).

And Paul, to tell us what his thorn in the flesh was (very important); and what he meant when he said, "Now a Mediator is not a Mediator of one, but God is one"; and how he felt when he rebuked Peter to the face; and what he meant when he was translated to the third heaven; and whether he was a Pre-millenarian or a Post-millenarian, and why he did not make it plainer to Dr. Torrey and Dr. Strong.

And the authors of the epistle to the Hebrews, "Who was the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews?"

And the Revelator, what he meant by 666; and was he Proterist, Presentist or Futurist; and will he give me an autograph analysis of the Thousand Year chapter.

What a gathering that will be! especially when the theologians of the ages have a summer conference—"to which you are all invited"; and the Rochester students and their wives have a reunion.

With the kindest regards to Mrs. Strong, and deepest affection for yourself, I remain,

Yours dutifully,

LOUIS AGASSIZ GOULD.

"My Four Childrens—My Poor Childrens"

Tragedies in the lives of the lowly in our industrial communities break homes and hearts and lives—The wheels grind on—This is the story of thousands.

BY LUELLA ADAMS

THE DAY I returned to my work last fall I found that one of our women was in the hospital and very ill with tuberculosis. I went to her at once carrying a few flowers. Mrs. Simica, for that was the woman's name, surely had a sad story to tell, yet one that is told over and over again. She was so weak that she could talk only in fragments, and in broken English, yet it was not hard to understand because sympathy and love can interpret.

Her family were strong and healthy when they left Europe years ago. They came to this land of promise and settled in the dirty, crowded, mill district. To keep ahead it was necessary to take in boarders. "But I was strong," she said. "Ten boarders, make much a work, but for my children I want education."

They lived through days of strikes and no income; they knew what it was to see their savings decrease to nothing. Then sickness came. "Oh a bad sickness, Miss; such a sickness never we had by Europe." It was as you may know, the great white plague of our cities.

"Mea man, he geta that sickness and he die." She stopped in her narrative and closed her eyes as if to blot out from memory the thoughts of those days of four years ago.

"Then mea girl, shea geta that sickness, and oh so long, then she go." I saw a picture of that dark Croatian maid as she lay on her bed of suffering for many long weeks. "And now," continued Mrs. Simica, "I gota the same sickness and I die."

She lay back weakly on her pillow, her thin white hand was pressed against mine, and her dark eyes had a pleading look. "But Miss, I no care for myself, but my four childrens, my poor childrens—" Mike the oldest, about 18, had now become the man of the house, and its support, Barbara fifteen, was the housekeeper. Then came Mary, a thin, pale child of 11, followed by Joe, aged 9. "Poor children," my own thoughts re-echoed.

The woman on the bed had grown very weak and I feared each breath might be her last. Her lips moved

"The greatest unchecked crime which our capitalistic system permits at present is the excessive accumulation of wealth, by a few, while another relatively small class is unable to acquire enough wealth to enable it to live comfortably. It is more important to establish a maximum income than a minimum wage, and it will be necessary to bring it about before such evils as unemployment can be cured."—A Capitalist.

and I leaned closer lest I miss a word. "But, Miss, you good, you lika me, you lika my children, you watch for them?"

It was as solemn a promise as I ever made.

"You pray God to keepa them well and strong?" Again I nodded, and the feeble hands took mine in a grateful pressure.

"Shall we pray now, Mrs. Simica?" I asked. Quickly she assented and a prayer was sent up to the Father who knows and understands, that he would guard and keep those lives so dear to this mother.

She suffered only a few hours longer. In the days which have followed many hours have already been spent in helping Barbara become a better little housekeeper. Mary's needs have been looked after; the child is far from strong and her eyes in a very bad condition. Glasses have been secured and she is improving slowly.

The conviction of the doctor is that they all should leave the city and seek the pure fresh air of the country. This is impossible for the present for they must have bread and Mike must work in the mill for it. So they live on amidst the smoke of the city and its noise, living in one room which serves as sleeping-room, parlor and kitchen.

The Old and the New

Real Americanism looks to both the past and the future; so does real religion—A man of culture drinks from Greek vases, Jewish water jars and modern faucets—Social inheritance plus personal experience is the Christian religion

BY CHARLES W. GILKEY

HERE is a host entertaining guests. What does he set before them? Some things that are old: the grains and the vegetables, the nuts and the fruits of some previous harvest, that have been saved against just such a time as this, and are now brought out of his store-house for the present occasion. Nor is it the ancient host in the Orient only who offers his guests the treasured products of the past. We moderns, with our wheat bread and white potatoes, our olives and nuts and preserved fruits, our coffee and tea or rare old wines, do likewise. But with these things that are old, go always also some new things, the whole value of which indeed depends upon their newness—fresh eggs, fresh milk, fresh meat. Woe to the dinner party where these things are not "new." Every host, ancient or modern, provides for his guests "things new and old"—"both . . . and."

Relics, Curios and Fresh Wit

So too when he entertains them after dinner, he brings out of his treasure some things that are old: the relics and curios of the past to be exhibited; the memories of other days to be recalled; the stories that, to some of the company at least, have a strangely familiar and even antique sound. The past has its large and indispensable contribution to make to every social gathering. But so has the future no less: and in the changing conversation of this present occasion past and future are constantly linked together. The host will not want his guests to think for a moment that he lives in a museum rather than in a home, or that the brains of this company are fossils instead of living minds. Along with his mementoes of other days he is likely to display the drawings which his younger children have just made, or talk of the college plans or professional prospects of the older. And the whole company will discuss with frequent flashes of fresh insight and wit, the questions of today and the probabilities of tomorrow as well as the memories of yesterday—"things new and old."

How significant is all this of the very nature of life itself. Everything living is in some sense a constantly changing link between a fixed past and a plastic future; and in its present treasure there are always things both new and old. Our bodies are on the one side a heritage from the past, with certain habits and traits and features that are old—older than ourselves perhaps; so that a look in our eyes or a cadence in our voices will startle our older friends with its vivid reminder of some ancestor long since dead. On the other hand, they are continually assimilating from food and air and exercise that must be ever fresh, the power for their own renewal and reproduction, and the strength to manipulate and even in part to create the future. If at any time our bodies lose this capacity for readjustment to the changing present and the impending future, and become survivals of the past alone—they are dead, and we speedily bury them. So is it with our minds as well: on the one hand the treasures of memory are repositories of scenes and experiences far distant and long since past; on the other, they seek constantly by the fresh processes of reason to anticipate and influence an otherwise unknown future. Minds that have lost their memories of the past, are thin and unsteady; minds that have only memories of the past, are outworn and helpless. Our social institutions likewise are on the one hand heritages of habit and organization from the past; on the other, co-operative agencies for meeting the present and moulding the future. Lacking the foundation of things old, they are unstable; lacking the creative capacity for things new, they are impotent survivals.

What is Americanism?

All this has much light to shed on some of our contemporary problems. We are at present loudly proclaiming that "Americanism" is the answer to all our national problems; and suddenly discussing "Americanization" as the most urgent of our national tasks. But as to what Americanism really is, nobody takes the time or trouble very seriously to inquire. The plain implication that underlies the "one hundred per cent Americanism" of many vociferous patriots is that its essence consists in the preservation of perfect social and political institutions and a verbally inspired Constitution bequeathed to us by the infallible wisdom of the fathers; so that the full duty of our newer fellow-citizens, and indeed of all Americans, is familiarity with this document as the sum of political wisdom, and the unquestioning maintenance of these institutions as the final form of social organization. It implies not the slightest lack of reverence or gratitude for the Constitution or the Bible, to point out that here in the field of patriotism appears the same type of literalistic traditionalism that for long centuries has been so serious a problem in the realm of religion, repressing and sometimes quenching altogether its living spirit. It was at a crisis in this long conflict between rigid traditional forms and new creative forces in religion, that Paul, the champion of the latter, wrote his famous words, "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

The Fathers Looked Forward

In patriotism as in religion, real Americanism is the constructive attitude which, looking backward to see how the fathers met the problems of their day, faces forward then to meet the different questions and changing conditions of our new time in the same spirit of courageous loyalty and democratic faith.

And it is the fathers themselves who bid us take this attitude. In a section of his Farewell Address that has a special message both for the radicals and the reactionaries of our own day, George Washington said:

"This government, the offspring of your own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty.

The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government. But the constitution which at any time exists, till changed by the explicit and authentic act of the people, is sacredly obligatory upon all."

In that striking combination of reverence for the old with readiness for the new, speaks the true spirit of Americanism in every generation. That spirit is the living link between our great past, and our inevitably changing future. Its attitude toward our social and economic institutions, thus stated in Washington's exposition of the Constitution, was exemplified two generations later in Lincoln's policy toward slavery.

Lincoln's Way the Only Way

Here was an institution of immense antiquity, hallowed by all our social traditions and conventions, bound up with all our economic processes and business prosperity, expressly provided for in the Constitution and protected alike by legislation, precedent, and court decision—whose sharp contradiction with the spirit both of Americanism and Christianity was appearing more and more clearly to the minds and consciences of progressive men. The radical abolitionists were for overthrowing this great wrong by any means and at any cost; the southern reactionaries were for maintaining and extending it in order to establish their own economic and political ascendancy; conservative men north and south were for letting it alone, because it was legal, or because agitation about it threatened great financial interests and ominously divided national sentiment. In this complicated and difficult situation, it was Lincoln's statesmanship that found the only real way through and out. As against the reactionaries and conservatives, he insisted that slavery was a great wrong, on the moral principle of which he pressed the conscience of the country for an immediate decision; as against the radical abolitionists, he declared for gradual reform by the methods and within the limitations imposed by the Constitution and the Union; and he laid great stress on the fact that this was to put slavery back where the best thought of the fathers themselves desired to place it, "in the course of ultimate extinction." Thus out of the treasures of his statesmanship Lincoln brought "things new and old"; and exemplified under the conditions of his own time the attitude of mind and conscience and will which is Americanism at its best, and which offers the only hopeful prospect for the solution of the social and industrial questions which perplex and confuse our own day.

But it was to the realm of religion that Jesus made his characteristic application of the parable of the householder: and it is there that we are especially interested in following him. The kingdom of heaven, he said, likewise contains within its treasure "things new and old," which all those who truly understand its mysteries will know how to bring forth. His own two-sided teaching as to the nature and progress of the kingdom perfectly illustrates his comprehensive point of view. Sometimes, as in the parable of the leaven gradually permeating the three measures of meal, or the seed steadily growing night and day from small beginnings to conspicuous fruition, he directs our attention to those slow and dependable processes of life which give large place and influence to things that are familiar and even old. And again, as in his parable of the lightning, and his repeated warnings of inexorable judgment to come, he emphasizes the sudden crises of life which take men unawares and change the whole level and circumstance of living to something radically new. Both aspects of the progress of the kingdom are continually illustrated alike in the experience of the individual and the history of society; and he who possesses the secret of the kingdom will have large place in his teaching and his practice for both alike.

Heirs of the Ages

It is the Christian religion itself in which this principle of Jesus receives perhaps its most impressive illustration. Christianity has a great past; and among Christian people there will always be those whose eyes and hearts are fixed largely or even wholly on the preservation and appreciation of these things that are old. In religion as in politics we call them conservatives. Remembering the wise remark of Sir Oliver Lodge that men are usually much more to be trusted in their assertions than in their negations, we do well to give careful heed to the positive emphasis of the conservative, so long as they do not pass over into the dogmatic denials of the reactionary. The conservative will help us realize that we are the heirs of a Christian inheritance that makes us spiritually rich in our own right. That has been true of Christianity from its beginning. In the person of its Founder and the experience of its first adherents, it was the heir of the moral and spiritual wealth of Judaism. But it is if possible even more true of us who are the heirs "of all the ages, in the foremost files of time."

What We Have Lost and Kept

Early Christians had no Bible like ours, that has proved its spiritual power and value through almost a score of centuries; they had the Old Testament to be sure—but beyond that only a circulating assortment of contemporary writings of the most unequal value, from which the New Testament as we know it was gradually sifted and selected. Where we celebrate Christian rites and ceremonies that have become solemn with the dignity of the slow centuries, their ritual was inevitably more or less experimental. Parts of it, like baptism and the Lord's Supper, have proved their permanent significance and value the world around: other rites of theirs, like feet-washing, have had their day and ceased to be. We have behind us, as they could not, the stream of a continuous church life flowing down through the centuries; deep and clear sometimes, and again muddy and shallow, but with all its faults a bringer of blessing to mankind. Their heroes and martyrs were all contemporary: but we have a continuous and accumulating heritage of faith and of sacrifice to steady and inspire us—and how incalculable is its worth!

On my first visit to Oberlin College I stood beneath the Memorial Arch on the campus, and read the names of the Oberlin men and women who laid down their lives as martyr missionaries in China during the Boxer Rebellion of 1900. That same day in the Y. M. C. A. rooms I was talking with an undergraduate about his choice of a lifework, and he told me that he was ready to sign the Student Volunteer Declaration: "It is my purpose, if God permit, to become a foreign missionary." When I asked him if this was a recent decision, he said, "Oh, no. Every day for three years I have walked under that Memorial Arch and thought about what it stands for—and now I am ready to go in their place."

Above all, let the conservative in religion teach us to value at its true worth the demonstration that twenty centuries of Christian history have given us of the power and Lordship of Christ over all races and generations, all sorts and conditions of men. We envy the early Christians their close contact with Jesus, and with those who knew him in the flesh: but let us remember that what they gained in immediacy, we have in perspective. His cause has been gaining in volume, variety and momentum from their day to ours. He has made good the world around his own promise: "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." And though we cannot but wish we might have seen and felt the irresistible winsomeness of his visible presence, we have otherwise more reason to obey him in the historic evidence of his authority and power over men, than did those Galilean fishermen who at his mere word took the great venture of leaving their all to follow him.

At Home in All Ages

It is this sense for the old which the conservative emphasizes, that will help to safeguard us against the shallowness characteristic of modern life at so many points, and not least in its religious thinking.

In his inaugural address at Union Theological Seminary, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick utters a warning, which we Christians of the younger generation do well to heed, against our tendency to forget the value of the things that are old:

"A man of catholic culture knows how to be at home in all ages; to appreciate the wisdom and spiritual quality in all forms of thought; he drinks the water of life from Greek vases and Jewish water-jars as well as from modern faucets; and whoever lacks such culture robs himself of the racial inheritance of experience and truth."

Hold the Old And Seize the New

But though we thus welcome the emphasis of the conservative on the things in our religion that are old, we must be no less ready to follow the lead of the liberal as he points us to the things that are new. For the very life of religion in every age is the actual presence of God in His world, guiding His children into new truth and releasing through them new power. The reactionary, keenly alive to the value of earlier revelation, is too often found denying the validity of God's fresh disclosures of His truth and purpose; and the radical, keenly alive to the latter, too often overlooks the permanent value of the older truth. Here again we must reject the dogmatic denials of both reactionary and radical, while we seek to unite in our religious life and thought the positive emphasis of both the conservative and the liberal, which are the complementary aspects of the full-orbed truth.

This was the attitude of Jesus himself toward the new and the old. Deeply conscious of his own indebtedness to the great past of his race and religion, as it appears on almost every page of his recorded life and teachings, he was at the same time vigorously impatient of the reactionary scribes and Pharisees of his day, who would limit religion to the tradition of the elders. "Ye have heard that it was said to them of old time * * * but I say unto you." There spoke the authoritative voice of first-hand religious experience uttering new truth: and it is significant of men's instinctive recognition of its validity, that one of the first general comments on Jesus' teaching by a generation accustomed to think of the dead past as its authentic religious guide was, "And they were astonished at his teaching: for he taught them as having authority, and not as the scribes."

This was Paul's perspective no less—and that of other great leaders of the early church. In his letters to the Roman and the Galatian churches Paul shows his deep sense of the great religious past of his race, and the rich inheritance it has bequeathed. "I had not known sin, except through the law" (Rom. 7:7). "The law is become our tutor to bring us unto Christ" (Gal. 3:24). It is the same insight that the letter to the Hebrews puts into a different figure: the old law is a "shadow of the good things to come" (Heb. 10:1). But when the reactionary ritualists of Paul's day would convert this old law into a chain, and bind his thinking and acting with its heavy limitation, he asserted with ringing authority, as had his Master before him, the validity and freedom of his new Christian experience. "For freedom did Christ set us free: stand fast therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage" (Gal. 5:1).

The Contemporaneous Spirit

This same insistence of Jesus and Paul on the validity of new elements in Christian life and faith, has had its witness all down through the history of Christian thought and experience alike. The constant emphasis of the evangelical and devotional schools on the presence and work of the Holy Spirit in the heart of the believer and the life of the church, has kept the consciousness of the contemporary presence and guidance of God alive in the experience of the church; and the orthodox Protestant doctrine of the "witness of the Spirit" in the heart of the reader as essential to the true interpretation of the Bible, has been its theological expression.

"The Spirit shines upon the Word And brings the truth to light."

Even in the Catholic theology, with all its overwhelming emphasis on the dominance of the past in religion, the same witness to the living present appears in the valuable, even if distorted, doctrine of the continuing authority of the voice of the contemporary church—a recognition which would be useful in Protestantism whenever, as so often in its history and not least today, it is beset by a one-sided traditionalism in theology and an extreme literalism in its interpretation of Scripture.

Not "Either—Or", but "Both—And"

If then we would truly understand and enter into this union of a great historic and social inheritance with a present and personal experience—which union is the Christian religion in its fullness—we must be able to rise above the false dilemma of an "either * * * or" between the new and the old in Christianity, and to say "both * * * and." Only so can we truly appreciate and enter into what Paul calls "the riches of our inheritance": only so can we truly believe in or show ourselves fellow-workers with the God who declares to every generation, "Behold, I make all things new."

A great rabbi of Jesus' time had described the ideal religious teacher as like a well-lined cistern, that preserves without losing a drop all the water it receives from without. Jesus' familiar figure is far truer to the freshness and creative spontaneity of vital religion in his own and every other prophetic soul. "The water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life." And what Jesus thus knew as his own inner experience of fresh disclosures of the truth and new pulses of the life of God within himself, he promised explicitly to his followers after him. "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all the truth." The living Spirit of God in the hearts of his followers would not only remind them of truth that is old, but reveal to them truth that is new.

Forgiveness

By R. E. NEIGHBOR

WHETHER we practice it or not, we all recognize the duty of forgiveness—we do at least if we acknowledge the authority of the New Testament. It is not an easy thing to forgive, and accordingly the temptation is to ease off our responsibility by making the duty depend on the fulfillment of a condition by him to whom the forgiveness is due, viz., his repentance. We demand that he must seek forgiveness before we come under obligation to grant it. But this makes our duty turn on his doing his, whereas nowhere does the Lord (as I interpret his teaching) make the repentance of the wrongdoer the prior condition of my forgiving him. I am to forgive him whether or not. It seems to me that Christ's requirement is imperative; it is also absolute in the sense that it is independent of the offender's refusal to meet me halfway by himself seeking reconciliation. Whatever his attitude may be, my attitude toward him is to be expressed by a free and generous forgiveness. I am not to let his wrong-doing toward me change the kindness of my demeanor toward him.

I recall as I write but one sentence in the gospels that seems to conflict with this. It is that in which the Lord says, "And if he repent, forgive him," as though one need not forgive him otherwise. But it is only in apparent conflict with all else that Jesus taught as to the duty of forgiveness. He insists that an unforgiving spirit blocks up the channels of God's grace to ourselves and to the offender—our attitude stands in the way of God's own graciousness reaching him, for how is he to know anything of God's infinite lovingkindness except as it is reflected practically in our own gracious attitude? He teaches, too, that what is of highest moment to ourselves, even our salvation, is conditioned on our readiness to forgive and our actually forgiving. So long as we are unforgiving we prove that we ourselves lack something of being saved men. We who constantly need to be forgiven cannot afford to be unforgiving. And furthermore, the occasional sin of my brother man against me does not equal my own many sins against God; who then am I, that I should be exacting in my attitude toward him when God has so freely and fully forgiven me?

It is urged, however, that God does not forgive us unless we repent and seek his forgiveness. But is that really true? I do not myself think it is. Christian men and women say, "So many years ago when God forgave my sins," etc.—ten, fifteen, twenty years ago it may be; but Paul says that God has reconciled Himself to the world, and is not imputing to men their trespasses and is beseeching them to be reconciled to him (2 Cor. v:18-20). What we mean in all such expressions as I have referred to is that at such and such a time we became conscious of God's forgiveness and in that consciousness our souls were flooded with a joyous and wonderful peace. For there was never a time when God's regard and love for me hinged on my love for him; on the contrary, I love him because he first loved me (1 John iv:9-11, and 19). It is always he who is the aggressor, i. e., who of the etymology of that I am ignorant. But the Greek word occurring everywhere in the New Testament ("aphesis" as the noun, "aphiemi" as the verb), means to dismiss, release, send away, and is the equivalent of our other common word "remit," which is from the Latin "re" and "mitto"—to send away. Forgiveness then means that we dismiss, send away, put out of sight, as it were, the offense of our brother, so that his offense becomes with us as though it did not exist. It does not in the least affect our attitude toward him; our relation toward him and our personal feeling continue unchanged in spite of his wrong toward us. It is this, precisely this, that Christ so strenuously insists on. Easy? Nay verily; but it is God-like and Christ-like.

It is only as we thus interpret the teaching of Jesus and so practice it that we really forgive at all. I mean that as long as we hold back our forgiveness until the offender repents we in fact have not forgiven at all; and so far as that is the case with us we cannot be sure that when he does repent we will then any more than now be in the forgiving mood. A conditioned forgiveness defers forgiveness until the condition is met, and a deferred forgiveness is not forgiveness. How do I know that I will forgive until I do actually forgive? The situation between the two of us remains problematical—on his part whether he will repent, and on mine whether I will forgive even though I now think I will.

And what finally, since we are all transgressors in one way or another, is the hope and outlook for the world's ultimate harmony unless we are possessed and controlled by that Christly spirit that underlies all genuine forgiveness? The unity of mankind, the brotherhood of men are mere idle sentimentalities, and all social bonds an empty dream, the reconstruction of the world an impossibility, unless we are as ready to forgive as we ever were ourselves to be forgiven. And the readiness will find its own method of making itself known. It is really the unforgiving spirit (if I may speak with frankness) that shelters itself under the plea that he who has done me wrong must seek it at my hands and in so far forth humble himself before me. But observe, that I do not say that he ought not to do that very thing; neither do I say that it is required of me to ostentatiously proclaim my readiness to forgive before he ask it. Nevertheless the readiness is to be always present as an actuality that can be counted on, and my personal feeling toward him always such that forgiveness is assured, being as certain as God's forgiveness both of him and me—and also as gracious. ## Journeying Home

(Suggested by the journey eastward of John Burroughs)

By LAURA B. SMITH

HOW near home are we now?"
Can you see any friendly faces?
They are watching for me, you know,
All along in the dear old places.

"How near home are we now?"
The journey seems unusually long,
Do you see any furry rascals—
Can you hear a meadow-lark's song?

"How near home are we now?"
The trees and the hills look dim,
The journey is almost ended,
But I'm going Home to Him.
Minneapolis.

takes the initiative in the matter of our salvation, our forgiveness, our reconciliation. Whether we love him or not, he certainly loves us; whether we are reconciled to him or not, he is reconciled to us. When Paul was converted there was no stipulation that if Paul did so and so, he would come to know Jesus as a Saviour; the act of Christ on that occasion was sovereign in its graciousness. And when I look back on my own conversion it was equally sovereign then, though of course incidentally different. Christ did not bargain with me that if I would do thus and so, i. e., repent, etc., he would then step in and do the rest. Not at all. He just broke in on me in the splendid sovereignty of his love and settled things with me forever. I came to know him for what he was and as I did not know him before. And as he was with me, so he wants me to be with my brother. Real forgiveness is never conditioned. The initiative is to be taken by ourselves. Forgiveness (may I coin a word?) tends to produce repentance.

A consideration of the word may be helpful to our right understanding of the teaching of Jesus. I refer to the Greek word rather than to the English one, for

The Bulletin Board

Daily Vacation Bible Schools

The following facts apply to the daily vacation Bible schools of Chicago for the season of 1920, showing a most significant development since 1911 when the movement began.

Total enrollment .....	21,400
Number of schools conducted.	164
Number of churches co-operating .....	200
Average enrollment per school	134
Average attendance per school	70
Average cost per school.....	$122.07
Number of workers.....	1,716
Protestant enrollment .....	60%
Roman Catholic enrollment...	26%
Other preference or no preference .....	14%
Number of nationalities reported .....	35

The above figures are for last summer. Can it be done again this coming summer? It is a Herculean task. All of the machinery will have to be set up again. All of the old schools will have to be reorganized and the new ones planned for. This involves a strong local church committee if it is a church school and a joint committee if it is a union school. It requires funds anywhere from $100 to $300 depending upon the amount of service that has to be paid for. From five to ten workers must be secured to act as teachers, directors and assistants in the various departments. Even in taking the first steps a church should seek help and advice from its representatives in the Daily Vacation Bible School Federation. For Baptists they are: Rev. A. H. Gage, 125 N. Wabash Ave., and Rev. Chas. T. Holman, 7029 Eggleston Ave.

After Harry's Scalp

Strong opposition to the bulletin issued by the Methodist Federation of Social Service, Prof. Harry F. Ward, secretary and editor, was expressed in formal resolutions adopted by the Laymen's Association of the New York Conference after full discussion. Bishop Francis J. McConnell, as president of the federation, is petitioned to take action which will relieve the Methodist Episcopal Church from giving its name and apparent sanction to the opinions expressed in that folder.—Western Christian Advocate.

How the Crow Indians Picture It

Miss Alice E. Steer, of St. Xavier, Mont., in a letter written to the Woman's American Mission Society, gives an interesting sidelight on how the Crow Indians regard missions—a sidelight that might well make some of us more niggardly givers ashamed. "The Upper Big Horn Church was organized with a charter membership of fifty-seven members, all Crow Indian people," she writes. "This organization has filled our people with a new inspiration, and they have begun to talk about a new building which they themselves must build. We have now $321.81 toward this building, having just deducted one-fifth of it for missions."

The "Moody of Japan" Gets Cordial Reception

Paul Kanamori, who has been described as the "Moody of Japan," has, during the past eighteen months, been delivering his famous "Three Hour Sermon" in various parts of the United States. Since commencing his itinerary, Mr. Kanamori has visited thirty-eight states of the Union, travelled 40,000 miles and delivered 452 addresses to English-speaking audiences. He has spoken in more than 200 universities, colleges and seminaries. While carrying out this latter part of his program, Mr. Kanamori usually stayed in the dormitories with the students, thus getting in as close touch, as was possible with the student life of North America.

Mr. Kanamori came to this country first in 1915, but confined his activities to the Western States. On this present occasion, however, he has covered all sections of the country. Mr. Kanamori is not supported by any organization; nor does he undertake engagements for any stipulated salary.

"I have always found the American people generously willing to give without solicitation all that is necessary for my simple needs," Mr. Kanamori said in a recent interview. "Money, or the pursuit of it, are among the very least of my concerns. I am starting West again, and have arranged to leave Seattle for my native land on June 24 to take up my work again there.

"This visit has been one of great joy and satisfaction to me. At first I was fearful of encountering some show of racial feeling. I have met none of it anywhere. The newspapers have been universally friendly, and the great crowds who gathered to hear me preach have everywhere listened with rapt attention as I have made known to them what God is doing in Japan in bringing men and women to a knowledge of himself."

Report, if You Are in the Game

During the past year, 515 classes numbering 4,406 pupils have been regularly enrolled in the division of teacher training of the American Baptist Publication Society. In addition to these 180 other classes numbering approximately 2,000 pupils have been reported as doing regular work, but have not yet passed their first examination and so are not regularly enrolled. This is more than double the number reported last year. About 85 per cent of the classes are taking the new standard training course, Keystone edition. Many other classes are without doubt doing work of which no report has reached the department of religious education of the American Baptist Publication Society.

"Golden Streams"—"Golden Streams"!

It is needless to cite the familiar fact that instead of our paying Europe $500,000,000 a year on our debts to her, she must now pay us $500,000,000 a year on her debts to us. That is not a tenth of the story. By its new-born power of production, the United States is building up similar advantages throughout the nations. Every thoughtful observer of conditions abroad tells of American money in new fields of investment. In England, France, Spain, Austria, Hungary, Italy and Scandinavia the seed of American dollars is being planted to bring forth fruit in greater wealth for American trade, labor, industry and investment. The list of American industrial investments in Europe since the war has not been compiled or even guessed, but the amount is enormous.

In this hemisphere the industrial invasion from the United States is hardly less remarkable. Last year Canada alone took nearly $1,000,000,000 worth of our products. Six hundred American factories, with 87,000 employees, now operate in the Dominion, all contributing their golden streams to the national capital of the United States. The loans of American money to Canada have increased from $54,000,000 in 1914 to $223,000,000 in 1920, so that in interest alone, on the money debt, Canada has to send across the border $25,000,000 a year; and the debt and interests are still growing. The American investments of all sorts in Canada total $2,000,000,000.

In Mexico the United States probably has a billion invested, ever after the ravages of the long revolution, and is building up a trade that not only must beget more trade, but more investment and more golden streams of interest flowing from the south, as Canada's flow from the north.—Hinman, in Herald and Examiner, Chicago.

Tithing Tools for Preachers

The best time for educating people in the principles and practice of tithing is when there is no drive on for money. Send to the Layman Company, 35 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., for a free copy of the lately published book, "Adventures in Tithing." It is a book of convincing as well as an interesting evidence on the How, the Why, and the Results of Tithing. With this book the Layman Company will send two tithing pamphlets which are recommended for first distribution. These pamphlets may be ordered in quantity from the Baptist Young People's Union of America, 125 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

Six Great Baptist Fundamentals

The Rhode Island Baptist Convention has published a pamphlet of "Short Talks on Baptist Fundamentals," by Rev. Frank L. Wilkins. It develops the ecclesiastical, theological, spiritual, social, civic and missionary principles of the Baptist movement in a fresh, clear and thoroughly interesting treatment that will be appreciated by the young people of the churches. Three cents sent to Baptist Headquarters, Lauderdale Building, Providence, R. I., will bring a copy.

Give Her the Prize

At Fern Hill Baptist church, Tacoma, Wash., on Mothers' Day a mother was present at Sunday school and preaching with ten children, ranging in age from one to nineteen years of age.

Composition on Tigers

Tiger is the most cruel animal of all the wild beast. We may say lion is the most cruel animal but certainly not, because the lion kills any animal or a man when it feels hunger but this tiger is not such kind of animal. It kills everything whenever it found it even if it feels hunger or not. A well grown tiger may be represent a young cow except in its marks in its skin. It is nearly one and a half yard in height and two yard long and also it is a quadruped animal. Generally it lives in woods and hot countries. It lives in big bushes with its little ones. In our country we may find tigers in much number. In daytime they wander all over the wood for their food and go to their abodes at night to sleep comfortably. There are not many uses for tigers. They are useful for hunting and some people when they were little ones bring them and tame them. Some people get money by showing them to people. In this way they live.—An Indian School Girl.

Must Have Aid Till August

The drought in Chihli, covering about twenty per cent of the entire famine area, threatens almost total loss of the spring crop, says the latest cabled report received by the American Committee for China Famine Fund, through the State Department, from Peking. This means that aid must continue until summer crops (about August) to about two million people in Chihli now receiving aid. This situation makes more urgent the request for additional funds from America. Situation in other respects is promising.

American Children Know no God

It is 145 years since we became a nation. We are now in the seventh generation in this passing period. Seventy years ago, the average of but two years of education was received by each of our youth. Now, each boy and girl secures about seven years of secular education. In Lincoln's time, one out of three became a minister of the Gospel from the body of college-bred men. Now, out of 106,000,000 persons, only 44 per cent are church members of any kind, Romanists, Protestant or Hebrew. Of our present-day youth, 20 per cent have not an atom of religious education. Only 21 per cent of all children attend any Sunday school whatever. In our next body of the ruling class that weigh the destiny of our nation 40 per cent will have had no religion, no Bible, no church whatever. About 58 per cent of all inhabitants of America today are of no church and pay regard to no religion. In New York City, over 500,000 out of 1,000,000 children receive no religious instruction whatsoever.—W. G. Shepherd.

What General Pershing Thinks of the Y. M. C. A.

It was a rare tribute that General Pershing paid to the Young Men's Christian Association at the thirty-fourth annual dinner of the international committee, at the Waldorf in New York City. The scene was notable, with 800 men at the tables, and 400 women in the galleries. After six departments of work had reported in snappy short speeches, Dr. John R. Mott gave a remarkably comprehensive retrospect and outlook, an inspiring vision of great possibilities.

Then General Pershing, who received an ovation, told of his personal acquaintance with the association, covering many years and lands. After speaking of its helpful work in the Philippine Islands, in China and Japan, with the army in days when the soldier was seldom in people's minds, on the border and in Mexico, he said:

"We all had our hands very full in those trying days. The army had to be organized and a great general staff had to be built up to handle the multitude of details as to plans of operations, supply and transportation. It was in the midst of these preparations that I called up Mr. Carter and asked the Y. M. C. A. to take charge of the army canteens to follow our troops. He responded promptly and entered upon the work as a duty.

"This placed the Y. M. C. A. on a business basis, involving direct responsibility to the A. E. F. for an immense undertaking. They had to buy and sell without profit just as the army would have done. At first, Mr. Carter's request for a certain allowance of tonnage was granted, but as time went on and our limited shipping became less and less able to carry our actual needs in war material, his quota of monthly tonnage was very much reduced even in the face of increasing demands. So, through lack of transportation facilities, he was unable to provide the canteens with all they required. Furthermore, the personnel of the Y. M. C. A. had to be expanded in almost the same proportion as the army, and had to be organized to conduct this large business, which was only one of its numerous activities, with such untrained personnel as could be hastily mustered here at home.

"All these things were a tremendous handicap, and when its work came to be compared with that of other welfare organizations operating with far less responsibility and covering only special areas, there arose some unjust criticism of which other organizations too often took advantage. But as a matter of fact this feature of the work of the Y. M. C. A. deserves great praise, and I should like to express here in this presence my deep appreciation of the results obtained."

—Rev. H. B. Grose.

Hopi Indians on Slides

Mrs. H. E. Ransler (Anna Nelson) has written a new stereopticon lecture on the Hopi Indians among whom she spent several years as a missionary. This lecture of sixty colored slides and a manuscript will be ready for rental on July 1. Bookings are now being made in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Granville, Indianapolis, Chicago, Des Moines, Minneapolis and Grand Island. The lecture was privately given at the Buffalo convention last year and since then has been revised, and the slides have been made and colored under her direction.

A Man of Tomorrow

A new moving picture film entitled "Men of Tomorrow" has been prepared by the stereopticon division of the General Board of Promotion and is now ready for rental to Baptist churches. It is prepared on standard size film and contains five reels. This story represents the attempt of David Stone to enter a Baptist college that was already full, of the struggles of the college, the success of its graduates, and the final success of the college. It shows many activities in our colleges.

Now it is Magna Charta Day

Mr. J. W. Hamilton, representing a committee with headquarters at St. Paul, Minn., proposes to make June 15 annual Magna Charta Day for the seven English-speaking nations: the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, Newfoundland, Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand. By such commemoration it is hoped to emphasize "their unity of spirit, for these nations are the founders and representatives of democracy, the political expression of Christianity, with all which that word implies in freedom, civil and religious. It is a unity in the opportunity which they offer to men everywhere of like mind; men who believe in this freedom and who gladly accept the responsibility which is at once its outcome and its protection. It is a unity in their example to other nations of social and political development; a very definite expression of the hope of international good-will and world betterment; something infinitely greater than their wealth, their power and their industry; something almost intangible; something that was long in growing; something that was bought at a great price and which must be cherished at almost a greater price if it is to endure; something which has become inherent in the race; certain ethics for which it stands, the absence of which it scorns; certain great ideals which have their most perfect expression in the vision of the inhabitants thereof, a vision which is the world's best hope, something which is the political, social and religious light of the world."

International Uniform Lesson for June 12

MAKING THE WORLD CHRISTIAN
Isa. 11:1-10, Acts 1:6-9. Golden Text: Isa. 11:9.
By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The question of the disciples in Acts 1:6 points back to the Messianic hope of Israel which had been fed for generations by such visions as Isaiah sees and writes in his prophecy, a sample of which we have in this lesson. Israel was to become a blessing to the whole world through the Messiah who would establish the kingdom of God. The restoration of the kingdom to Israel and the establishment of the kingdom of God came to be synonymous terms with the devout Jews of the time of Jesus. This attitude of mind and conviction accounts for the question; "Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Jesus does not correct this conviction directly but turns their thoughts to the long-ago process of missionary endeavor which must precede the restoration of the Kingdom to Israel and prepare the world for the final establishment of the kingdom of God among all nations.

The Lesson Taught

Cherishing the vision, counting the cost, and carrying out the program of making the world Christian are suggestions which may assist in the teaching of this important lesson.

Cherishing the Vision

No less a vision than a world Christianized is equal to the revelation of God the Father made known to us in Jesus Christ. It is impossible to think of a world judaized in the light of the New Testament, or in the light of the Old Testament when it is properly interpreted. It is true the God of the Bible will not hesitate to destroy a world as he did by the flood in order to show his unmitigated antagonism to evil. But even then he mixed judgment with mercy and destruction with hope in saving one family to make a new beginning, to afford the human race another chance and to show that God himself cherishes the vision of a redeemed humanity. After the flood God tried no more judgment on a wholesale plan, but chose rather to give his only begotten Son that men believing on him should not perish but have eternal life. Rising from the dead, the only begotten Son of God, with visions unimpaired of a world Christianized, sent his disciples out to make disciples of all nations. Paul caught this vision and became the great apostle to the Gentiles, or the heathen, as we call them.

Cherishing the vision of making the world Christian, forward-looking men and women have kept the church of Christ missionary. When the vision failed the people perished. This was the situation through what is known as the dark ages. And even after the dark ages were broken by the light of the Reformation the vision of Christianizing the world still lagged behind and Calvinistic theologians were not ashamed to preach against any attempt to take the gospel to the non-Christian nations. But Carey in England and Judson in America caught the vision and the era of modern foreign missions began. Progress in the realization of the vision has been slow but substantial, and foreign missions today no longer need to apologize.

Counting the Cost

It is easier to ask questions about a possible kingdom than to make the kingdom possible by sustained, sacrificial service. It is easier to ask the Lord to restore the kingdom to Israel by a miracle than to get the Lord's will done on earth as it is done in heaven by living among the heathen and sharing their burdens. But there is no other way of making the world Christian than by the missionary method, and the missionary method is costly in home ties severed, in isolation from native land, in all the sacrifices of a missionary's life. The cost of making the world Christian is so appalling when the full significance of the task is honestly faced that we are tempted to look for an alibi or find some easier way or adopt a quicker method than that now employed. It is claimed that more heathen are being born than are being born again. Heathenism is therefore on the increase in spite of all missionary endeavor. If this be true, then it is a terrific indictment of the church of Christ which will not pay the cost of maintaining in non-Christian lands an adequate force of missionaries with enough equipment to Christianize the heathen by regeneration faster than the heathen can paganize themselves by natural generation. No money spent, no service rendered bring greater returns than money and service spent in promoting foreign missions.

'Carrying Out the Program

The program of Jesus for making the world Christian is simple and effective. It is the program of the personal Christian life and testimony. No unwieldy organization is necessary, no intricate methods are required, no intensive business management will work. The world can be made industrial and commercial by modern business methods. Oil can be piped to the sea coast in China without missionaries; factories in Japan outrival competitors in Great Britain without Christianity; a railroad can be built from the Cape to Cairo while Africa is left in darkness. But the old-fashioned program of Jesus for converting the nations to Christianity cannot be improved. It is the program of the personal touch of sympathy, the soul-passion for human redemption, the enthusiastic spirit of common brotherhood, the unflinching faith in the salvability of mankind through the gospel of Christ incarnated in flesh and blood missionaries who love the ignorant and the erring enough to live among them, suffer with them, and become like them in all things that do not involve the sacrifice of truth and morals. Money piled as high as the tower of Babel will not suffice for the evangelization of the world. Money is necessary but not primary. Organization will not suffice even if patterned after the most successful big business corporations. Organization is necessary but not primary. What is vital in making the world Christian is the vision of a Christian world, the conviction that the world can be made Christian, and the consecration of life to the accomplishment of the task.

Church Vacation Schools

By THOMAS S. YOUNG

What may we hope for from church vacation schools beyond taking neglected children from the streets? Much, every way:

The boys and girls from our best churches, under most favorable conditions need the work, will attend and thoroughly enjoy it. The First Church of Utica, N. Y., Pastor C. J. Oxley, enrolled 222 in their first school held in 1920. Rev. E. G. Lane, Grand Junction, Colo., enrolled 241 in his second school held in 1920. Rev. U. S. Clutton, Indianapolis, enrolled 100 the fifth year of his school. The accumulation of Biblical and religious knowledge acquired by the children is vouched for on every hand. The presence of children from non-religious homes is an ever-present surprise. The Americanization opportunity and work done is testified to in every city where schools, and these children are present. One such school indicates twenty-two different nationalities. From six to twelve nationalities is a common condition.

Christian social reaction becomes the usual thing, even frequently providing outstanding examples. Rev. W. G. Towart tells this experience:

"Near the location of a church vacation school, an accident happened, resulting in the cutting of an artery in a man's limb. The crowd stood helplessly watching while life ebbed away. A young lad on roller skates dashed up to the crowd, and thrusting his way through, saw the situation and at once took the strap from a roller skate and made a tourniquet, staunching the flow of blood. When the ambulance surgeon arrived and examined the man's condition, he turned to the lad and said, "You saved this man's life."

The boy had been instructed as a member of a vacation school.

Faith of Our Mothers—Living Still!

POSSIBLY not still. "In spite of dungeon, fire and sword," but most certainly "in spite of poverty, criticism and indifference."

For at first there were just a few of them. In that day of hoop-skirts and poke-bonnets they were often the plain unadorned sort of women,—and indeed one imagines it was quite in order for their quizzical families to poke a little bit of quiet fun at these "godly females" who must needs go organizing a society of their own to learn about the state of the "poor heathen," to sing hymns pitched alas! a trifle too high, and to pray with all their hearts for the spread of the kingdom of God on earth.

You have always had them in your church. We have always had them in ours. From time to time their slim purses have poured money into the Lord's treasury—money scraped together self-sacrificingly from meagre incomes, yet eventually sufficient to build schools and hospitals and orphanages and equip them with trained workers. And today we see with surprise in our Baptist survey where those faithful women of yesterday have brought us denominationally. Those faithful women who started out in 1871 with nine missionaries working in four fields, spreading their efforts among twelve scattered stations. "In spite of poverty, criticism and indifference"—ah, yes, for there has always been someone to laugh at "those dear visionary women in our church who send perfectly good money off, goodness only knows where."

Goodness only knows where? Let Burma tell you where! Burma, where our Baptist women have planted schools unexcelled in the entire Orient. Let China tell you by pointing out its hospitals and schools and colleges and its unique mother-craft school, the only place of its kind in the Orient, where mothers may come to learn domestic science together with the three R's, bringing their children along with them and gaining timely instruction in nutrition, and Christian nurture, too. Or let the little girls of India tell you what those visionary Baptist women of yesterday have done for them; for they have schools, also, and hospitals and colleges. Moreover, from the visionings of yesterday's women have sprung eight great union institutions: the women of other denominations uniting with ours to maintain adequate colleges and medical schools for the girls of China, Japan and India; so that we present to the Orient convincing evidence of the solidarity of real Christianity.

Like Mary of old, these Mothers-to-All-Mankind kept all these things and pondered them in their hearts. One doubts whether any one "mother" ever fully grasped the beautiful significance of her seemingly small share; but in this year of Golden Jubilee, behold! there are 252 missionaries on eleven fields in 112 stations. That faith which was like an insignificant grain of mustard seed has become as a great tree,—

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

"Now thank we all our God,
With hearts and hands and voices,
Who wondrous things hath done,
In whom His world rejoices;
Who, from our Mother's faith,
Hath caused this rich increase
Of countless gifts of love—
"Oh, may these never cease!"

What Have We Done Today

By NIXON WATERMAN

WE shall do so much in the years to come,

But what have we done today?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the afterwhile,
But what have we been today?
We shall bring each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
We shall feed the hungering souls of earth,
But whom have we fed today?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown today?
We shall build us mansions in the sky,
But what have we built today?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But here and now do we our task?
Yes, this is the thing our souls must ask,
"What have we done today?"

Everybody's Minute.

BEHOLD, what a fearful and wonderful thing is a little knowledge of arithmetic! For during the Golden Jubilee celebrations, which are sweeping across our country, you doubtless wondered: what is fifty years, anyhow?

Fifty years? Well, to begin with, since 365 days equal one year, then 365 days multiplied by fifty years equal 18,250 days. And that is "some" days, as you will admit! Moreover, one day is made up of twenty-four hours, so 18,250 days multiplied by twenty-four hours equal 438,000 hours; which is also a good-sized answer. But one hour equals 60 minutes, and 438,000 hours multiplied by sixty minutes equals 26,280,000 minutes.

So now you know what fifty years is! Every woman who is half a century old is a minute millionaire many times over, and yet one fancies she may have been guilty of saying now and again, with a worried smile: "No, I've never had time to get really interested in missions," or "to read the study books," or do a hundred and one other things which she instinctively knows a Baptist woman should. And she, mind you! a millionaire in her own right, as far as minutes are concerned; yet what a thriftless squanderer!—twenty-six million minutes buried in the sands of time—hopelessly lost.

How does fifty years of Jubilee come? A minute at a time; a minute of prayer for the missionaries; a minute of practical planning to save money for the missionary offering; a minute of concentrated reading about the work of the gospel around the world; a minute for writing for literature to give someone who is uninterested; a minute of handing this literature with the proper mixture of casual humor and earnest thought; a minute of prayer that the leaflet may do its perfect work; a minute of interruption in teaching the Sunday-school lessons to give a relevant incident from mission fields, thus bringing the Acts of the Apostles up-to-date; a minute to relate similar pithy telling incidents over the back fence to Mrs. Can't-seetheuseofmissionsanyhow; a minute for planning how dry-as-dust facts can be presented fascinatingly at the next missionary meeting (somebody must have spent many a minute doing this, or we would all have yawned our heads off ere this!); a minute for selecting suitable hymns for this meeting; a minute beforehand for suggesting that the soloist sing something more appropriate than "It Is Not Raining Rain to Me, It's Raining—Violets"; a minute for finding a missionary bed-time story for the little child in the house; a minute for selecting a missionary novel for the daughter of the house; a minute for interesting the man in the house in the missionary magazine; a minute for reminding the pastor that a missionary sermon is long overdue, but oh! so tactfully done that he goes home rejoicing in the interest shown; a minute for packing glasses of jelly to send to the home for missionaries' children; a minute for selecting a Japanese doll for your little daughter's birthday; a minute for finding a beguiling Japanese leaflet to accompany the doll; a minute for writing a birthday card to the missionary whose date coincides with yours. . . . Ah! if everybody's minute had been so filled during the 26,280,000 minutes of the last fifty years what a glory would now cover the earth!

If? But the next fifty years lies ahead, and we minute millionaires may spend them as we choose.

"I have no time!"

Oh! but I have 1,440 minutes a day;

10,080 minutes a week; 302,400 minutes a month. And the next Jubilee is already on its way. Every clock and watch in Christendom is ticking out the minutes:—"Take my moments and my days, Let them flow in ceaseless praise."

The Young Reserves

Vegetarians

OF course a plumber dotes on plums. The mason loves a lime. Musicians think much of the beet When they are killing time.

The lawyer lives by raisins good, And bread-fruit needs the baker, But currants suit the sailor-man, And pears the old shoemaker.

Historians fill up with dates And let none go to waste, While soldiers do not care for peas—The grape is to their taste.

The palate of an artist-man Is touched by many a hue,— All radish shades and oranges, And greens and olives, too.

The farmer thrives on plaitain fruit, Nuts suit the wheelwright's trade, For Chinamen with almond eyes Rich mandarins were made.

All jokers live on chestnuts stale, Oh, you should see them cram! Now, though you may not care a fig— Which do you think I yam?— Lettuce Guess!

A Bean for Africa

By "PEGEY"

SOME years ago somebody gave Bill a leaflet called "A Bean for Africa," by a missionary named Mr. McDiarmid. We simply loved the story of that bean, which was just one single solitary ordinary bean, which had not even been to Boston—where all distinguished (ahem! such a word) beans are supposed to be born! This one was born in Canada beside the Ottawa river, and the only reason it is famous is because somebody took it and planted it, promising God that all the beans that grew from this bean during the next six years should be given to missions in Africa. Now surely that was a simple promise!

But the first year there were 93 beans from that one bean plant; the second year there were 1,535 beans and the third year two bushels. The fourth year there actually was not room in that little plot of ground to plant the beans of the third generation, so a neighbor was asked to plant some of them.

Now it just happened that this person had to be away the fifth and six years, and so could not plant the fourth year beans, but the truth of the matter is that there were so many of them by that time that there would not have been room enough on the nearby farms to plant them all; so they were sold for over ten dollars!

And Mr. McDiarmid writes: "Wouldn't you like to be the person that owned the land, that planted the bean, that sent the ten-dollar check to the foreign mission society, that the Congo missionaries received?" Whereupon Bill said decidedly, "I would!" And I echoed: "I would!" So we put our heads together and decided to form a club of some kind for planting things and raising money. We wanted some special name for ourselves, when along came our Uncletim and suggested the very name:

"HOME GUARDENERS"

"But it isn't spelled right!" Bill said, pointing at the letter "U."

"Well," answered Uncletim, his eyes twinkling, "I rather imagine there won't be a garden without you (u) to guard it, will there?"

"Fine Uncletim one cent for making a pun," said father.

"All right, sir," laughed Uncletim, "here's the cent. Buy a bean with it and see how much you can raise this year."

So on Memorial Day this year Bill and I are going to launch this little club in our own back yard, and Peter and Polly are going to be Home Gardeners in their back yard. We all got to wondering whether some of you wouldn't like to be Home Gardeners, too—plant vegetables or flowers and sell them for missions. We asked our Young Reserve Editor about this, and she was so delighted that she is going to print all the names of boys and girls who volunteer to do this. I think it will be very good fun, for one thing, since we will have all summer to work in, when there's nothing else to do; and for another thing it is going to mean so much to little heathen boys and girls somewhere across the sea or here in our own land.

THIS is a bright new idea which promises lots of fun! In September we will print in the "Chimney Corner" letters from any of you who have tried the plan, telling us what you did; but meanwhile we will print your names as fast as you send them to us. Mother Nature and Father Time are ready to help you, and seeds are cheap,—so do start a garden.

Won't you join us? There isn't a single difficult rule! Just send in your name to Miss Applegarth that you'll start a garden and sell what you raise for missions.

Jack Horner's Pie Up-to-date

By M. B. BANKS

LITTLE Jack Horner Sat in a corner Eating a very queer pie; He saw in a trice It held everything nice From the lands where the mission fields lie.

From Ceylon came the spice, And from China the rice, And bananas from Africa highlands; There were nutmegs and cloves Sent from Borneo's groves, And yams from the South Sea Islands.

There were nuts from Brazil All the corners to fill, And sugar and sago from Siam; And from Turkey a fig That was really so big Jack's mouth thought, "It's larger than I am!"

There were pomegranates fair Grown in Persia's soft air, And tortillas from Mexico found there. And there did appear Grapes and grain from Korea And all of the things that abound there.

A Syrian date Did not turn up too late; He need not for tea to Japan go; Tamarinds were not few; There were oranges, too, And from India many a mango.

"Now," thought little Jack, "What shall I send back To these lands for their presents to me? The Bible, indeed, Is what they all need, So that shall go over the sea!"

Can Any Young Reserve Grow Vegetables Like These? ? ?

A TEXAN and a New Yorker were one day discussing the relative merits of their respective climates.

"Down where I live," said the Texan, "we grew a pumpkin so big that when we cut it my wife used one half of it as a cradle to rock the baby in."

The New Yorker smiled. "Why, my dear fellow," he said, "that's nothing at all. A few days ago, right in New York City, three full-grown policemen were found asleep on one beat!"

Young People's Work

Topic for June 12

OUT AND OUT FOR CHRIST
1 Cor. 2:1-5

"For I determined to be utterly ignorant, when among you, of everything except Jesus Christ, and of Him as having been crucified."

1. A worthy example. The great Apostle Paul knew the Christian secret of a happy life. The great experience with his risen Lord on the Damascus road had transformed his life. He was changed from an enemy of the early Christians to an ardent supporter of the Christian cause. So great was his accomplishment that writers have spoken of him as the founder of Christianity.

2. Paul was a man of deep religious experience. Such an experience is absolutely necessary in the life of the young person who would be out and out for Christ. Paul's experience was in fact a great spiritual revolution in which his blinded eyes were made to see. He was in fact a changed man after meeting his Lord. From his writing we gather that his experience grew richer with the years. At or near the close of his great career he writes: "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith." He was true to his experience.

3. Paul was a man of great religious convictions. Such is the need of our day. Post-war days have witnessed the cutting loose from a great many of the moral standards of the past. Morally many are far adrift. It is not an easy thing for young people to be good. The crowd is constantly saying: "Come on! Let's go!" Armed with a deep religious experience and great religious convictions, the young people of our churches will be able to say "No" to the subtle temptations of the times.

4. A look ahead. Turn to the reports of our great societies. There one will find listed the needs for advance work. There is an insistent call for young people who will give themselves to the great task of extending the Master's kingdom in every part of the earth. To the half-hearted, namby-pamby sort of a Christian, these appeals fall on deaf ears. The appeals are being answered by the young people who are out and out for Christ. They are the young people of vision. They are the young people who will lift this old world toward God. They are the young people who will be our trusted leaders at home and abroad.

5. Begin now. Perhaps you are saying: "When I have had a good time for a while, I too will do my share." The young person who makes such a statement has given himself over to a false conception of the meaning of a good time. The young Christian will always have a "good time" who gives himself up to the very highest ideals of life. True it may not be an easy time, but it will be a good time.

6. The hope of the world. The young people of our churches are truly the hope of the world. The eyes of the world are upon them. The question is being asked: "Can you make good now?" Young men and young women from all parts of the country are responding in no uncertain terms, but these young people are the folks, who, back home, are out and out for Christ.

Progress in Ohio

L. S. CAINES

I am glad to give you somewhat of a statistical report of what has actually been done this year by our gospel teams:

Churches visited, 21; meetings conducted, 129; personal interviews, 161; home visitations, 171; decisions for Christ, 67; reconsecrations, 147; life service league recruits, 44 (this does not include W. W. G. recruits); tithers leaguers, 166; quiet half-hour leaguers, 240.

While some of these figures do not seem to be large, we can assure you that every report that was returned was unpadded and genuine. From every church visited various men on the teams have received encouraging letters from young people telling of the wonderful awakening of interest and the real spiritual uplift manifest as results of the work of the team. During our season we gave over forty Denison men the opportunity to serve on our five teams and every man is today an enthusiastic B. Y. P. U. supporter. Most of these men are going to be leaders in our Baptist work, and it means a great deal for the future to know that they are filled with an appreciation of the importance of the highest type of training in the local church for our Baptist young people.

Our gospel team season is not over yet, —this week-end we have out two teams, one at Hebron, Ohio and the other at Zanesville, Ohio.

Michigan Baptist young people are getting interested in gospel team work as a means of extension in the local churches and they could center their gospel team activity around Hillsdale College very nicely I believe. At any rate I am in communication with the Michigan leaders and they are asking me all sorts of questions about our work in Ohio.

Our gospel teams have been made up of five men each and each man has made himself a specialist along one departmental line, e. g., one man speaks upon quiet-half-hour, another upon life service. Each man carries literature and pledge cards and makes it his business to be an "authority" upon his department and its working. In this way we have put on very intensive programs in the various churches visited. Always at the conference program, where every phase of B. Y. P. U. work has been discussed we have asked the local church visited to extend invitations to all surrounding Baptist churches to send representatives, and in this way we have vitally touched a very great number of our local unions. The departmental organization of each team is as follows: quiet-half-hour; tithing; life service; religious education (Baptist trained leaders course); and standard of excellence. The team captain outlines the programs, making all necessary arrangements concerning transportation, entertainment,—in fact, he captains the team in all of its maneuverings.

New York's Guild House Party

The first New York World Wide Guild house party is to be held at Keuka College, Keuka Park, New York, from August 1 to 8. Keuka College is ideally located on Lake Keuka where Indian legend and romance of a day that is past lurk in the forest and on the deeply wooded shores. Keuka Park is connected by trolley with Penn Yan, which is reached via the Northern Central Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Any Baptist girl who longs for a week of real fun and genuine Northfield inspiration is eligible to attend. Secure your reservation at once by sending the registration fee of $2 to Mrs. Ralph W. Kirby, Bainbridge, New York, who is to be hostess.

Prices for board and room vary as follows: $8. for 4 in a room; $9. for 3 in a room; $10 for 2 in a room; $14. for 1 in a room. The house party by means of a well balanced program under trained leaders promises inspiration, recreation and good fellowship.

Our house party will have as distinguished guests, women whose very presence commands our best endeavors—Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, Miss Alma J. Noble, Miss Naomi Fletcher, Dr. Ann Degenring and Mrs. James M. Pratt.

The morning hours will be devoted to mission study classes, while the afternoons will be given up to swimming, hiking, volley ball, tennis and "stunts." Special attractions will be a tennis tournament, a mock debate and community singing.—M. K. St. John, World Wide Guild District Secretary-Director, New York.

Southern Baptists Record Great Advance

More members, more converts, more money raised, more in Sunday school, more building, more missionaries than ever before—Pres. E. Y. Mullins elected President at Chattanooga—Will plant new theological seminary and two standard universities—Soul-winning campaign coming

BY FRANK E. BURKHALTER

SEVERAL outstanding features of the session of the Southern Baptist Convention that has just adjourned at Chattanooga will be of interest to our Baptist brethren of other sections of the country, and to other religious bodies generally. These are the excellent showing, under difficulties, in the redemption in cash of the subscriptions to the 75 Million Campaign; the resolute spirit of the people that they will carry the movement forward to a successful conclusion; their determination to go after lost souls in the local communities at the same time they raise funds for the extension of kingdom interests in all parts of the world; the realization of their opportunity and responsibility for the evangelization of Europe; and the decision to make the necessary adjustments and enlargements for caring for the growing work in the homeland.

Despite the financial and industrial depression that has been peculiarly keen in the larger part of the territory of the convention, our churches came forward with larger sums in cash for campaign causes than they did during the first year of the movement when economic conditions were the best ever known in this section. Dr. L. R. Scarborough, who was general director of the campaign and now chairman of the conservation commission, was able to report the collection during the past year of $12,924,943.60 to campaign objects, which, with last year's collections, brings the total collections since the beginning of the movement to $25,103,424.68. With such a showing under great difficulties this year the messengers to the convention were convinced that the successful completion of the campaign during the remainder of the period is not only possible but already assured, so determined and enthusiastic is the spirit of the people. The hardships through which they have gone to attain this year's record appears to have quickened the determination to see the whole matter through.

Baptized 173,595 Persons

But the material side of the campaign was not only the only phase that was considered. The necessity of conserving the spiritual possibilities of the campaign was also emphasized and without a single dissenting voice the convention resolved to launch the most intensive soul-winning campaign for the next twelve months that Southern Baptists have ever known. A new mark in baptisms was reached the past year when a total of 173,595 persons were baptized into membership in the local churches co-operating with the convention, but this has served only to indicate that still larger things are possible and the goal for the new year is to enlist all the local churches in an effort at inducing all members to win at least one new soul to Christ during the twelve months immediately ahead. The conservation commission was asked to take the leadership in this soul-winning campaign, with the request that the state and associational organizations co-operate in pressing the matter upon the attention of the local churches and enlisting them as fully as possible. It is believed that such co-operation can be had as will result in at least 250,000 new converts being won to Christ through the personal efforts of individual Baptists during the coming year.

And the call of the spiritual need and opportunity in Europe was answered with an enthusiasm by the more than 5,000 messengers who attended the sessions of the convention. In no previous session has the question of foreign missions occupied so large a place in the deliberations of the body, and men who have had intimate touch with the situation in Europe were at hand to bring the needed information about the needs of the Continent and the plans that have been put into execution for meeting those needs.

Baptists in Europe

Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke of London, Baptist Commissioner for Europe, brought a close-up picture of the physical relief work that has been made possible through the generosity of American Baptists in Central and Eastern Europe and how the supplying of this relief had opened wide the doors of missionary opportunity there. He also told how one of the blessings of the war was the larger liberty granted the people as a result of which they are now able to worship God, for the most part, after the dictates of their own conscience. Religious liberty has come very slowly in Rumania, Dr. Rushbrooke explained, but as a result of special efforts with the administrative authorities of that country it now seems that the persecution of Baptists at the hand of the officials in that country is at an end.

The vision of Europe, as it was presented to the London conference, was graphically described by Dr. George W. Truett in his matchless eloquence, while the drifting of the people of Europe from the various state churches and their search for a new religion of power as a substitute for their former religion of formalism, was eloquently described by Dr. E. Y. Mullins, the new president of the convention, who recently returned from a six-months' tour of Europe as a special commissioner from Southern Baptists to the Baptist groups of Europe. All these messages were received with the greatest interest and enthusiasm by all the messengers and the body approved most heartily the action of the Foreign Mission Board in entering the new European fields of Spain, Jugo-Slavia, Hungary, Rumania, and the Ukraine, though of course the last-named country will not be actually entered until conditions there are more settled.

More baptisms than have ever been reported before were noted in all the older fields occupied by the Foreign Mission Board and the status of the work was never quite so gratifying before, just as the opportunity and the need were never greater.

Plans were projected for taking care of the growing needs of Southern Baptists, especially in the realm of education. The establishment of another theological seminary was authorized and the committee on this subject was instructed to receive during the year proposals from states desiring the location of the institution. Tentative proposals have been received already from Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia, and the indications are the institution will be located in one of the Atlantic Coast states.

Likewise, the convention approved the suggestion of one or more Southwide Baptist universities and the committee that has made preliminary investigation of the general educational interests of the convention was authorized to receive proposals for their location also.

In this same general connection Columbia association, Washington, D. C., was urged to take steps looking to the reclamation of George Washington University of that city, formerly Columbian University, to the Baptists, with the hope of using it as the basis of a great Baptist institution of learning, while the committee that is to secure new charters for the convention and its several boards, looking toward more firmly securing to the convention the title to all the property held by the boards, was instructed to look into the charters of the various seminaries and try and bring all of them into a closer co-ordination under the general control of the convention.

Never Such Figures Before

As was the case with the foreign mission board, the home mission board, the Sunday school board, relief and annuity board, education board, woman's missionary union, and the laymen's missionary movement reported the largest year's achievements in their history. The home board reported more than 77,000 accessions to the local churches through its instrumentalities the past year, with more than 44,000 of these members coming in through baptism. For the first time in its thirty years history the Sunday school board reported receipts of more than $1,000,000 this year's figures being $1,147,721, with more than $180,000 turned back into other channels of the denomination for general work.

The unanimity of sentiment among so many messengers was remarkable. On no important question was there any division and the decision to grant women representation on the executive committee and the general boards of the body was reached with only three negative votes. However, representation of the women was deferred for a year, due to the necessity of making certain adjustments in the by-laws by reason of the new departure. The woman's missionary union contributed more than $3,000,000 in cash to the general denominational causes during the year, and voted to remove its general headquarters from Baltimore to Birmingham.

The convention is facing serious problems presented by its numerous size. Committees have been working for a year on various phases of these problems but only partial progress was made this year. It is readily recognized that a body of 5,000 or more messengers, all of them having equal rights and privileges, is difficult to handle as a purely deliberative body and serious thought is being given as to how best to remedy the situation. Reduction of representation in the convention, division of the territory of the convention, the holding of three sectional meetings each year, with messengers from all sections coming together every second or third year for a general convention, are some of the suggestions that have been offered, but so far none of these appears to have met with any general acceptance. Considerable progress was made, however, in the decision to investigate in advance and secure written guarantees from cities asking for the convention as to their ability to handle the enormous crowds, leaving the final selection to the executive committee; instructions to the executive committee to make many additional provisions whereby the vast audiences can hear the proceedings and be provided with daily printed resumes of the previous day's transactions; and the continuation of the special committee on the consideration of questions looking to a more efficient convention.

Unity and Growth

Southern Baptists are doubtless one of the most unified large religious bodies in the world. They are conscious of their numbers and their strength. There was no boasting of numbers this year, however, but rather a serious realization of their responsibility and their appreciation of the fact that God had opened wide the doors of opportunity in all the world.

A few details as to the number of Southern Baptists might be interesting to our brethren in the North and other sections where THE BAPTIST is read. Their rapid growth can best be indicated in a contrast between the general reports to the previous session of the body which met at Chattanooga in 1906 and those submitted this year. During that period of fifteen years the number of local churches affiliating with the Southern Baptist convention grew from 20,129 to 27,444, the number of members of those churches from 1,855,784 to 3,199,005, the number of Sunday schools from 11,332 to 20,420, the number of pupils from 857,244 to 1,966,610; value of local church property from $4,851,122 to $97,732,990, and total contributions, to all causes in a year from $5,941,283 to $34,881,032.

This growth is even more marked in the work of the general boards. During that period of fifteen years the receipts of the foreign mission board have grown from $315,248 to $2,404,988, the number of foreign missionaries employed from 189 to 405, baptisms on the foreign field from 2,445 to 6,998, churches on the foreign field from 214 to 611, membership of those churches from 12,894 to 59,348, and contributions of the native churches from $26,104 to $295,000. The home board receipts have mounted from $167,899 to $1,376,990, the number of baptisms from 15,436 to 44,214, and the number of missionaries employed from 880 to 1,384.

Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, was elected president of the convention on the first ballot, thus defeating a field of four other very strong men. Chattanooga made exceptional provisions for the entertainment of the visitors and the session was one of the most satisfying from every standpoint in all the long history of the convention.

Our Southern Baptist forces believe they are now entering upon the greatest year they have yet known and they are setting themselves to their task of enlistment, stewardship and evangelism at home and abroad with a fixed determination.

South China Annual Conference

By E. S. BURKETT

The sixty-year Jubilee celebrations, marking a "cycle of Cathay" in our South China work, had gone into history hardly a month, before our missionary hosts of this part of the Orient, again assembled, this time in annual conference.

The fact of it being Jubilee year, gave added impetus to the meetings, judging by the enthusiasm manifested throughout the sessions. New recruits and old went on record as delighted with the spirit manifested. Words that come to mind in attempting to characterize the conference this year, are, dead earnestness, humble reliance upon the unseen Master, hearty good fellowship.

This sixtieth anniversary year of the mission, also marks the completion by our veteran missionary, Dr. Ashmore, of his laborious task on the translation of the Bible into Swatow colloquial. This monumental work will result in opening the Scriptures to a large class who hitherto have had no chance to read of the Good News for themselves. Much in need of a furlough, Dr. and Mrs. Ashmore left during conference, for the homeland.

It was decided that for the near future, the two central academies, one at Swatow and one at Kaying, be hastened in their development. This seems imperative in view of the wonderful opportunities before us in these educational centres of the Hoklo and Hakka peoples. These schools are already doing a notable work. But they sadly lack the equipment and personnel necessary to meet the fast-growing demands of the respective fields. Special effort in the enlarging of the two above schools will help greatly in solving the problem of education of leaders for South China.

Enlarging Medical Missions

One of the special needs emphasized especially for the Hoklo and Kaying schools, is for short-term workers to teach in English. In the absence of a sufficient supply of men teachers, it was suggested that women would also help meet this demand. Thus older missionaries, who can speak the native language, would be released from routine that hinders them in administrative and evangelistic work.

This conference will ever remain notable as beginning the carrying out of a constructive medical policy, which has long been needed on the field. For the Hoklo division of the field, Kityang is to be the centre of the medical work. Dr. Henry Newman was appointed to take charge, funds for the plant, equipment and salaries, having been generously subscribed by the First church of Detroit. Dispensaries and smaller hospitals will still be effective at other main stations.

An item of particular interest in regard to medical plans which came before conference was the voluntary offer made by non-Christian leaders a days' journey from Kityang. They have made urgent request that the mission undertake the management, with a Christian doctor, of a well-equipped hospital which they will build, all financial expense involved, including cost of plant, furnishings, salaries, running expenses, being their own responsibility.

At Ho Pho the natives have long asked for a hospital. For twelve years they have pledged the land and upward of $10,000 (Mex), towards the project. It is only recently that the Mission has felt itself able to respond to this appeal. New arrivals on the field, Dr. and Mrs. Zwich, have been appointed to this important work.

To the north, over a week's journey away, Changning is also shortly to see the realization of long-deferred hopes. Dr. Bousfield is expecting to start building a new medical plant almost at once. This new project is also the splendid gift of one of our churches, Tremont Temple.

In view of the ever-pressing economic struggle in this land of unreckoned millions and the growing demands for industrial reconstruction, the mission feels that the time has come to face more squarely the problems of industrial education. It therefore seems inevitable in our grapple with this live problem in the extension of the kingdom in South China, that we look to the home constituency to send us out an industrial missionary worker.

In the Hakka regions, Kaying has for several years had no evangelist, aside from one native pastor, to push the work of spreading the Gospel. All the foreign staff of this important field have had to give their whole time in meeting the heavy demands of marvelous growth in educational work. Where five years ago the mission school at the city had less than 100 students, today there are over five times as many, with many more turned away because of lack of room. The school is proving to be an effective means of winning many sterling young Chinese to allegiance to the Lord Jesus.

"China for Christ" Movement

Owing to a too full program, the "China for Christ" movement did not receive adequate attention. But it was brought out that this great movement, started a year ago in Shanghai, is largely a native movement. When the matter was under consideration at that time, the foreigners, undertaking the leadership, could get nowhere. Then David Yui, head of the Y. M. C. A. for China, always masterful and able, together with other Chinese, stepped in and assumed control. Immediately things began to hum and this significant movement was born. Surely the future of Christianity is bright with promise, in the Orient, with such leaders as David Yui, Wong Chin Thin, Chang Po Ling and many others. Western leaders working in China are glad to follow them and acknowledge their leadership.

One of the most significant events in our whole So. China missionary effort, was the dedication of the Swatow Institutional Church, at Swatow city. This took place during and after Conference. It is the loftiest building in the city and occupies a splendid site in the heart of the best business section. Already it has become a regular bee-hive of all sorts of Christian activities. The whole enterprise is a monument to the vision and energy of the missionaries in charge, Mr. and Mrs. Speicher. It was built on the expectation that financial help would soon come from the home constituency in America. But to date the progress of our Baptist World Movement has not been such as to provide these badly needed funds.

Our Own Folks

A Year in Detroit

BY ALBERT H. FINN

The annual meeting of the Detroit Baptist Union was held Tuesday, May 10, in the Woodward Avenue church. It afforded a brief review of a wonderful year of achievement under most discouraging circumstances but gracious in the evident leadership of God.

Detroit Baptists now have twenty-six churches and missions for the white, English speaking, thirty-four for the Negroes and fifteen for the foreign-speaking peoples, which means that Detroit Baptists have in five years gone from fourth to first place among Protestant denominations in this great city. As compared with other communions our work among our foreign brethren seems quite remarkable—more than all other Protestant denominations combined—but how pitifully small when we remember that over sixty-seven per cent of a population of 1,200,000 are foreign speaking peoples.

In co-operation with the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Michigan Baptist Convention the Detroit Baptist Union last year employed twenty-two missionary pastors and workers and expended $219,000 in current expenses, salaries and church extension work. This does not measure the whole year's work as the total valuation of new properties, only partially paid for, was vastly more.

The Detroit Baptist Union is what its name implies, a union of the Baptist churches in Detroit and also the various denominational agencies whereby the many problems of the metropolitan area can be studied and met in a united way and where the best interests of each local field is the deep concern of the whole brotherhood. The past year has shown how needful and helpful such a union of effort, under wise leadership, can become. The Detroit Baptist Union at present holds title, in trust, for individual churches and the denomination to properties with a value of over $1,000,000. This affords a credit with which we are able in times of necessity, to extend to local congregations a helpful and sustaining power of vast importance. Time nor space will not permit of going into details how this is done. The board of trustees of the Detroit Baptist Union is largely made up of Baptist laymen of eminent position in the business world, who give unstintingly of their time and rich experience to the advancement of our work in this rapidly growing city. Dr. H. C. Gleiss the general superintendent has a magical way of impelling these resourceful and big hearted men to do almost anything he desires them to do.

During the year beautiful Beulah, Seven Mile Mission and Bethel churches have been dedicated and also the new Swedish church and the $100,000 Lakeview building nearly completed. Then eight of our Negro churches have been provided for either by new buildings or the purchase of properties.

The Bethel, Polish, Serbian-Croatian churches have been organized and a gracious evangelistic work done during all the year resulting in over 6,000 of accessions.

Detroit Baptists are also foremost in the vacation Bible school movement. Of the thirty-eight schools conducted in the entire city last year in all Protestant churches nineteen were in Baptist churches. This year we are planning for twenty-five. Under the leadership of Rev. Arthur V. Allen, our director of religious education, and our missionary forces, these schools and our whole religious educational movement is going forward in a most gratifying and effective manner.

Dr. C. A. Brooks of New York was with us for our annual meeting and gave the address of the evening at our big dinner, when nearly 500 enthusiastic Baptists sat down in delightful fellowship and to review the work of the year. Dr. Brooks said many interesting and cheering things but the burden of address was: "The International Reach of City and Home Missions." His recent return from a year spent in torn and devastated Europe, where he had a wonderful opportunity to note the reflex influence of our endeavors to evangelize the various nationalities that have flooded our American cities and industrial centers. He gave us a new sense of the far-reaching influence of the large work being done in Detroit. Pastor Igrisan of the Second Roumanian church went to Europe to aid Dr. Brooks in his survey of the Roumanian situation and now Rev. John Socasiu, pastor of the First Roumanian church has been selected to go to Roumania, under the Southern Baptist Convention Board, to establish a school of the prophets. Others of our foreign speaking pastors have been of great value in shaping new conditions in Europe.

The industrial depression, now passing we are thankful to say, has affected our work most seriously in Detroit especially among the Negroes and the foreign-speaking peoples. It has called out remarkable examples of sacrifice, faith and gracious endurance. The sense of brotherhood among our churches has become a new experience and the annual meeting gave an enlarged evidence of Baptist solidarity that is wonderfully cheering.

The new year opens most auspiciously. Four new houses of worship, possibly five, for our English speaking churches are almost imperative. Several of our Negro churches must be better housed this year. A Christian center for the Poles is assured by Dr. Brooks' visit and also a Christian center for the Negroes. These are greatly needed.

We all regret the loss of Miss Reid who has done such a splendid Bible and social work among the Negro Baptists. Her mother, who for years has been at the head of an important school in Jamaica, has recently died and Miss Reid feels that her first duty is to go and carry on the work her mother has providentially laid down.

The Clinton Avenue and Jefferson Avenue congregations expect to amalgamate in June in the beautiful new building on Lakeview at Jefferson. This is a wonderful, newer residential district out Jefferson Avenue. The present building which has been built at a cost of $100,000, is only the Sunday-school unit, the auditorium proper to come later. It promises to be one of our great Baptist churches. Dr. C. M. Carter, State Convention Pastor, is guiding the three congregations into a happy union.

World Conference on Christian Fundamentals

The third annual convention of the World Conference on Christian Fundamentals will be held at Denver, June 12 to 19, 1921.

Subjects to be discussed are "The Bible—the Only Basis of Christian Belief," "The Sacred Scriptures and Sunday School Instruction," "Faith and the Future of Christian Education," "The Test of Theories in Theological Education," "The Relation of Literature to Evangelical Religion," "The Menace of Modernism in Home Mission Work," "The Relation of Evangelical Faith to Evangelism," and "The Fundamentals in Our Foreign Mission Work."

Baptist speakers announced on the program are Drs. W. B. Riley, A. C. Dixon, Cortland Myers, Geo. B. Taft and J. C. Massee. Some prominent representatives from other denominations are Drs. W. H. G. Thomas, A. B. Winchester, Campbell Coyle, John E. Wishart and Otto F. Bartholomew, Rev. Gustav F. Johnson, Bishop Chas. L. Mead, and Messrs. Dan O. Shelton, John A. Davis and C. G. Trumbull.

Commencement and Women's Courses at Newton

Newton Theological Institution has adopted this year the experiment of a week-end commencement. The public examinations will occur on Friday and Saturday, June 3-4; the baccalaureate sermon by President Horr on Sunday, the fifth; Monday and Tuesday are alumni and commencement days respectively. Alumni meetings on Monday, June 6, will be held in the chapel of the Baptist church at 9:15 and 2:30; at 10:30 Dr. William W. Bustard of Cleveland, class of 1898, will deliver the annual oration, followed by the alumni dinner in Bray Hall, Newton Centre. The evening is Newton night at the Boston Social Union. Tuesday will bring an address in the church at 10:30 by Hon. Roger W. Babson, Stephen Greene lecturer on "The Christian Faith and Industrial Relations." After luncheon on the hill at 12:30, comes a trustees' meeting at 2:00, the graduating exercises of the senior class at 3:30, and the trustees' dinner in Bray Hall at 6:30, at one dollar a ticket. Professor R. M. Vaughan is in charge of entertainment.

By the sanction of the trustees Newton hereafter will admit women who have the baccalaureate degree. The special purpose is to prepare for work in the field of religious education, but women will not be confined to that specialty. In answer to an increasing demand, the faculty has outlined a two years' course, that will include adequate Biblical instruction and sociological and theological material. History and missions are not neglected. Beyond the prescribed curriculum there is ample opportunity for elective courses.

The intimate relations of the seminary with the Newton Centre church supply an opportunity for practical application of the principles studied, and Dr. Charles N. Arbuckle, pastor, and Rev. F. F. Peterson, of the state convention board will assist the regular teaching staff of the seminary. A convenient residence will be provided in the former Sanborn House near the seminary where board and room will be provided at reasonable cost. No tuition fees are charged.

St. Louis News, Notes and Comments

By W. E. DARROW

A revival effort under the lead of an organization called the Assembly of God, which emphasizes divine healing, the second blessing, the second coming of Christ and some other things, has been in progress in our city for three weeks closing May 15. Its evangelist, a Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, has attracted great crowds by the simplicity and power of her preaching and by the wonderful response each day to her appeals for conversion and better Christian living. The large crowds of people attending these meetings made necessary removal from Moodah Temple to the Coliseum, the largest auditorium in our city. Many of the ministers of St. Louis have attended the meetings. Time is needed to indicate what the permanent outcome may be, but some very wonderful cures are claimed at the hands of this divine healer. If good has been done, if physical pain and suffering have been relieved even a little we are glad, though we may not be altogether the channel through which the good has come. Of one thing we are sure, there is just now a great yearning on the part of the people for spiritual blessing. People generally are more ready to receive the gospel message, however it may come.

Ordinations

At a meeting of the St. Louis association standing committee, held at the Euclid church on Thursday, May 5, sixteen churches of the association being represented, Brother Oscar W. Goodwin of the Overland church and Brother Arthur C. Krueger of the Euclid church were examined and unanimously recommended for ordination by their respective churches. Of the meeting Dr. R. B. Whiteside of the Euclid church was chairman and the writer recording clerk. On the following Monday evening, at the Overland church, Brother Goodwin was publicly set apart to the gospel ministry. Rev. D. Earl Allen of the Fee Fee church was chairman of the meeting. The sermon was preached by Dr. S. E. Ewing from Luke 10:20. Presentation of Bible by Rev. L. M. Hale of the Delmar church. Rev. R. K. Kelly of the Lafayette Park church offered the ordaining prayer. Scripture lesson by Rev. A. Halliwell of the Tower Grove church. Hand of fellowship by the congregation. Brother Goodin has been called to the pastorate of the church at Bryant, S. Dak. He recently graduated from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Brother Krueger was ordained at the Euclid church on the evening of May 10. Dr. Whiteside presided, the writer serving as clerk. The sermon was preached by Brother

R. K. Kelly from 2 Cor. 12:12. Rev. Oliver Shank of the Fourth church delivered the charge to the candidate and the writer, the charge to the people. Rev. Albert Linder of the Ebenezer church presented the Bible and Dr. R. B. Whiteside offered the ordaining prayer. Hand of fellowship by Brother Goodin.

Arcadia Assembly

St. Louis is seeking to outdo the Kansas City folks in number of representatives at the Missouri Baptist Assembly, Arcadia Heights, Mo., Aug. 1-14. Already enthusiasm for the assembly is being quickened. A rally to boost the assembly will be held at the Grand Avenue church on the evening of May 24. The assembly this year will have a good faculty, such Baptists leaders as Dr. H. Alford Porter, Miss Jessie Burrill, Harry L. Strickland, Arthur Flake, Mrs. F. W. Armstrong, Miss Fern E. Gates, Miss Ethel Cooper, Dr. S. L. Ginsburg, Miss Aretta Beswick, Rev. C. A. Westbrook, Mrs. E. C. Henderson, Rev. G. W. Graham, Rev. O. R. Mangum, J. C. Hockett, Jr., and J. E. Davis having been already listed. Of the assembly J. S. Newell, St. Louis, is president and Rev. Geo. W. Graham, St. Louis, corresponding secretary. Rev. H. S. Rainwater of Kansas City is chairman of the program committee. Requests for information as to grounds and tents should be addressed to S. P. Ringo, Ironton, Mo.

B. Y. P. U. Activities

Our city B. Y. P. U. is actively at work for the strengthening of Baptist young people's work in and about our city. A company of young people called "The Mo-Show-Mees" is working up a big delegation for the Cincinnati convention of the B. Y. P. U. A., June 29-July 3. There will be a special train from St. Louis on Wednesday morning, June 28, for the Missouri people going to the convention. At the next general city rally, to be held at the Third church, Thursday evening, June 16, Dr. John F. Herget of Cincinnati, will speak. The annual meeting of the city union advisory council will be held on Tuesday evening, June 7, at the third church. At that meeting officers of the city union for the ensuing year beginning July 1, will be elected.

Notes and Comments

Rev. F. W. Gordon, recently ordained as pastor at St. Charles, has removed from our association. He has accepted a call to Pennsylvania. The St. Charles church has been greatly blessed in special revival meetings conducted by Varnadore and Varnadore, evangelists. Rev. Thurman A. Varnadore was formerly pastor at St. Charles. There have been twenty additions to the church. Dr. and Mrs. S. E. Ewing have transferred their membership to the Third church. Rev. L. B. Arvin, field secretary of the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium, has become a resident of Maplewood, just across our city border, and is kept quite busy supplying the churches. Interest in the Sunday afternoon meetings at the sanitarium has been greatly increased by the co-operation of the churches, together with the young people's societies of the city. Our St. Louis Baptist ministers' conference recently sent Pres. Harding a protest against the United States sending an ambassador to the Vatican at Rome and the secretary of the conference has received an emphatic disavowal of any such intention on the part of the President. There is considerable agitation in some quarters looking toward such action, and expressions of protest have their value. A number of our pastors have been sent by their churches to the Southern Baptist Convention, expenses paid.

A baptism service for the McPherson candidates was held at foot of Olive Street on Monday, May 16, the day following close of her meetings. About 3000 attended the service. Five hundred candidates were scheduled to receive baptism, only 38 were baptized. Mrs. McPherson exhorted the candidates to "come clean" and "four ministers prayed that their sins might be washed away." Among the ministers assisting at the ceremony was a Baptist pastor of our city. Some interesting questions concerning the spirit and purpose of the ordinance and its effect upon the candidates and their relation to Baptist and other churches of our city are raised by our Baptist people.

On Sunday, May 15, Rev. Earnest A. Main resigned the pastorate of the Water Tower church, the resignation to become effective June 1. Necessity for rest prompted the resignation. He expects to go to California soon after for recuperation. His people are loath to have him go. He has done a good work for the Water Tower church.

Twenty-Eight Ambassadors En Voyage for the King

Twenty-eight young women will sail as missionaries to foreign lands during the summer and fall, under the auspices of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, Miss Nellie G. Prescott, foreign secretary announced today.

Medical, evangelistic and educational missionaries will be included in the number, which is made up of women from almost every part of the United States, from California to Maine. Five of the 28 come from Massachusetts, the largest number from any one state. Among the foreign lands where they will be stationed are India, Japan, South China, Africa, South India, Burma, the Philippine Islands, Assam, East China, Bengal-Orissa and West China.

The following are the names and designations of those who will go:

Miss Harriet Barrington of St. Mary's, Ohio, to South India; Miss Evelyn Beatrice Bickel of Newton Centre, Mass., daughter of Captain Bickel of the Inland Seas, to Japan; Miss Katherine E. Bohn of St. Louis, Mo., to South China; Miss Florence Nightingale Crane of Detroit, Mich., to Africa; Miss Maud Waneta Deer of Crawfordsville, Ind., to Japan; Miss Susan Carey Ferguson, of Hilton, N. Y., daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Law Ferguson of Madras, South India, to South India; Miss Emma Geis of Boston, daughter of the Rev. C. J. Geis of Capiz, the Philippine Islands, to Burma; Miss Mayme Morton Goldenburg of Cincinnati, Ohio, to Burma; Miss Anne Ruth Harris of Council Bluffs, Iowa, to East China; Miss Grace Irma Hill of New Brunswick, N. J., to Bengal-Orissa; Mrs. Beulah Kenyon to East China; Miss Charlotte R. N. Lerner of Newark, N. J., to East China; Miss Edna Mary Mason of Iowa Falls, Iowa, to South China; Miss Mary Annette Matthew of Clarksburg, W. Va., to West China; Miss Malinda K. Miller of Stanford, Ky., to Burma.

BRUCE EVANS closed a union meeting with Lents M. E. and the Lents Baptist church. This was one of the most far reaching meetings ever held in these parts. More than two hundred expressed a desire to live a new life with Christ. The Baptist church at Lents has lately baptized forty-one and more than twenty await baptism. Pastor E. A. Smith is in his fourth year's work and is greatly encouraged for the future.

BRUCE EVANS recently conducted an evangelistic campaign for the First church, Eugene. Pastor Charles E. Dunham reports a great blessing and a large ingathering from this campaign. The meetings were well attended and full of interest from the start. Seventy-three came forward, sixty-five of these have been received by the church. Thirty-two baptized.

HEBIMSTON—On Sunday, May 1, Rev. Earle D. Sims closed a campaign of three weeks. Sixteen new members were added to the church. Improvements on the church property amounting to over $200 were made. A living salary for a pastor was raised in pledges, and Rev. R. V. Ashmun, graduate of the Rochester Theological Seminary, was called as pastor in May.

Cove reports the death of Mrs. Rebecca Julia Loree, wife of Rev. D. Loree.

Berkeley Commencement

Commencement week at the Berkeley Baptist Divinity School marked a new epoch in the life of that institution.

Friday, May sixth, a large number of people were in attendance at the reception given by Pres. and Mrs. C. M. Hill with Pres. and Mrs. E. B. Bryan. Saturday was Berkeley Day. The students were kept busy showing the new building to the public. In the afternoon greetings were brought from the city of Berkeley by Mayor Louis Bartlett, from the University of California by President David Prescott Barrows, from other theological schools by Dean W. F. Bade, from the Berkeley churches by Rev. L. A. McAfee, and prayer was offered by President W. H. Landon, of the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Sunday at the First church, the educational sermon was delivered by Rev. Frank W. Padelford, on "The Christian Ministry and Art." On the afternoon of that day occurred the dedication of the new building. Rev. J. N. Garst, Prof. John W. Johnson, Pres. C. M. Hill, Rev. Charles H. Hobart, Rev. Frank W. Padelford, Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, and Rev. James A. Sunderland participated in the exercises. Sunday evening at the First church the annual missionary sermon was given by Rev. Raymond M. West.

Monday morning at the Divinity School building was held a conference on "The Minister and Higher Education," in which the speakers were Rev. E. R. Bennett, Rev. J. F. Mills, Mr. Gale Seaman, Rev. John Snape, Rev. Frank W. Padelford, and Prof. Herbert Francis Evans.

Monday evening the graduating exercises were held. The commencement address was delivered by Pres. Elmer Burritt Bryan, of Colgate University, on "Some Ultimate Conceptions." President Hill then conferred the degree of B.D. on Hurschel Lyle Caldwell, John Thomas James and Linus Ernest Petree. The degree of D.D. was conferred on David Alexander Pitt and Rev. C. W. Brinstad.

Among the gifts that may be mentioned here is that of Dr. D. J. Harris of Evanston, Ill., which amounts to $12,500; that of Rev. William A. Crouch of Turney, Mo., in the sum of $20,000.00; Dr. James M. Pruett of $13,500.00; Mrs. Kate M. Vesper (deceased) $2500.00.

State Convention

Western Washington Convention held its thirty-fourth annual meeting with the First church of Bellingham, May 10-13. The attendance was large, over 250 being present outside of Bellingham.

The convention opened on Tuesday afternoon with a session of the pastors' conference, Rev. F. W. Carstens presiding. The general topic for discussion was—"The Minister's Qualifications and Work." Various phases of this topic were discussed by Rev. W. H. Eaton, Rev. E. H. Hicks, Rev. J. E. Nofstinger, Rev. Edker Burton and Rev. F. E. Dark.

Rev. C. O. Johnson, of Tacoma, was elected President for the coming year and Rev. F. G. West of Seattle, Secretary.

The first session of the Convention was held Tuesday evening, Mr. Fred A. Ernst, president.

Addresses of welcome were given by Rev. D. M. McPhail, pastor of the entertaining church, and Dr. R. A. Mathis, mayor of the city. The annual sermon was preached by Dr. A. M. Bailey. He took as his theme—"Christ's Words Concerning the Church," basing his discussion on Matthew 16:18.

The reports showed the past year to have marked real progress, both in the state mission work and in the churches' offerings for New World Movement fund and in the number of baptisms. The amount of money contributed by the churches to the New World Movement fund during the year was $83,834.73 as compared with $27,716.78 for the previous year.

The average giving per church increased from $277.00 for the previous year to $834.00 for this year and the average giving per member increased from $2.44 to $7.28. This has been the more gratifying when we consider the financial depression that has prevailed all over Western Washington, due to the closing of mills, logging camps, low prices of farm products, the large number of men out of employment and the losses sustained by merchants through falling prices. It can indicate nothing less than a deeper interest in and a greater sense of responsibility for our missionary task. When we consider that in the increase of pastors' salaries; the amount expended for current expenses; the securing of new parsonages; taking subscriptions and planning for new church buildings; the payment of debts; revival spirit and the number of baptisms this has been the banner year of the Convention's history, then we realize that the increased emphasis on our missionary task and increased giving for it has stimulated all departments of church work, and that the spiritual value of the New World Movement is greater than the financial.

The department of evangelism reported 982 baptisms during the year with a net increase in membership of 790, making the present membership 12,215. This is by far the largest number of baptisms ever reported in a single year.

Among the speakers from outside the state were Rev. E. M. Poteat, Dr. Peter C. Wright, of New York, Rev. J. T. Latta, of Burma; Miss Lucile Withers, of China; Mrs. Henry Topping, of Japan and Dr. Gabriel R. Maguire, of Vancouver, B. C.

Miss Meme Brockway, of Los Angeles, gave an address on "The Prophet and the Child"; Prof. G. R. Schlauch, of McMinnville College, on "Christian Education"; Rev. W. E. Henry, on "Our Missionary Task" and Rev. F. B. Matthews, on "Our Evangelistic Task."

The closing message was brought by Rev. C. O. Johnson, of Tacoma.

The entire convention was characterized by an unusually fine spirit. The progress made during the year and the harmony that prevailed produced a spirit of praise and prayer and made the Convention an occasion of spiritual power.

By unanimous and hearty vote the convention put itself on record as purposing to go forward until we reach our New World Movement goal.

The convention voted unanimously to join with the Baptist Ministers' Conference of Seattle and the Baptist churches of Seattle in extending an invitation to the Northern Baptist Convention to hold its next session in Seattle.

Rev. W. E. Henry, of Everett, was elected a member of the General Board of Promotion from Washington.

The following officers were elected: pres., Fred A. Ernst, Seattle; first vice-pres., Rev. W. P. Osgood, Puyallup; second vice-pres., Prof. E. J. Miller, Bellingham; third vice-pres., Mrs. J. H. Burch, Tukwila; treasurer, B. W. Pettit, Seattle, and recording clerk, Philip Graff, Seattle.

The next session of the convention will be held with the First church of Everett; Rev. F. W. Wightman, of Tacoma, to preach the annual sermon.

MASSACHUSETTS

COMMENCEMENT WEEK at Newton offers a program beginning with final examinations Friday and Saturday, June 3 and 4. Pres. George E. Horr will preach the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday. Monday will bring the alumni meeting, the alumni oration by Rev. Wm. W. Bustard, the alumni dinner, the alumni business meeting, and in the evening "Newton Night" of the Boston Baptist Social Union. On Tuesday morning Roger Babson will speak, and at 2:30 will occur the graduating exercises. Both men and women are invited to a trustees' dinner Tuesday evening at one dollar each. Those who desire entertainment over Monday night are invited to communicate with Prof. Richard Vaughan, 115 Parker St., Newton Center, Mass.

MARKET STREET, AMESBURY—May first ends the first year of Rev. C. A. S. Howe's work as pastor of this church. He came from Mattapan, Mass., church and at once began an energetic work, and as a result eighteen have united with the church by baptism and seventeen by letter. The mid-week prayer meeting has greatly increased in attendance and interest.

MILFORD treasurer has forwarded a check to the State headquarters in full payment of the quota pledged for the first year in the New World Movement. This puts the church in the 100 per cent rank. In 1915 the benevolent offerings to the regular missionary objects totaled about $60. This past year it amounted to about $800, an increase of over 1300 per cent.

THE HOME BASKET MEETING of the Woman's Missionary Union of Taunton association, was held in the First church of New Bedford, May 11. This was the annual meeting and reports were received from the treasurer, home director, and White Cross secretary, all of which were most encouraging. During the morning session the election of officers was held. The speakers of the day were Mrs. F. Thomas, president of the New England district; Mrs. F. B. Campbell, of the West End community house of Boston; and Mrs. A. B. Upham, of Boston, who spoke of her work in Mexico.

NEW JERSEY

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH, of Newark, Rev. Sidney W. Powell, pastor, records splendid services, well attended, especially in the evening, when the service of song is participated in most heartily by all. Several received the hand of fellowship at the May communion, and more are ready for the June service. A class for instruction of the new converts is in charge of the pastor. A new troop of Boy Scouts has been formed. The young men's club is growing; and the baseball team starts in fine manner, having two or three games to its credit thus early in the season.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

FIRST, WILLIAMSPORT, Edwin Simpson pastor, held its annual meeting May 9. Reports show sixty-eight added to the membership during the year, forty-three by confession of faith and baptism, eighteen by letter, and seven by experience. Amount raised for New World Movement $11,712.12. Of this amount $605 was given for European famine relief.

In addition to these amounts $503 were raised for Chinese famine fund. Total benevolences for the year $12,215.12. The current expense fund received $7,672.66. This amount met all bills for the year and left a small balance to apply on a deficit carried over from previous years. All organizations of the church have shown an increased attendance, especially the Bible School. The church is sending its pastor to Des Moines.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA In and Around Pittsburgh

MISS ADAMS and the volunteer workers at Rankin were given a fine banquet by the women of the Wilkinsburg church, Monday evening, May 9.

REV. JAMES S. JEWELL, Carnegie, extended the hand of fellowship to four. The Brotherhood and Baraca classes presented carnations to each mother present on Mother's Day. One mother who is ninety-two years of age attended the service.

SALTSBURG, Rev. W. P. Wheeler, pastor, has reported Bible school records broken several times since the beginning of the year. The attendance Sunday, May 8, surpassed all previous records.

THE B. Y. P. U. of the Oakmont church has voted to send the pastor, Rev. L. D. Dunning, to Des Moines.

LORENZ AVENUE, Rev. L. J. Ramsey, pastor, reports an increase in Bible School attendance of 25 per cent since January first. A Bible School orchestra has recently been organized.

AT SWEDISH CHURCH, McKeesport, Rev. J. O. Hammarberg, pastor, four were received into the church by baptism Sunday, May 1 and four baptized Sunday, May 15.

AT WOODLAWN, Rev. L. B. Ford, pastor, extended the right hand of fellowship to seven, and baptized three with at least five more to follow. The Bible School has increased in number until "there is no room to dwell."

BUTLER CHURCH has recognized the splendid service of Rev. R. T. Ketcham by voting an addition to his salary of $500.

NEW YORK

TABERNACLE, UTICA, Lincoln Class men gave an interesting class play, Monday, May 9. Pastor Perry J. Stackhouse is making special efforts to keep the summer attendance up to the winter standard.

FIRST, NORWICH, baptized twelve young people from the Sunday school May 8. Pastor Hugh R. MacMillan has accepted a call to the First church at Franklin, Ind., to begin June 1.

THE NEW PASTOR of the new North Park church, Buffalo, Mr. McCoy, was ordained Thursday afternoon, March 3. Dr. A. W. Bourne presided at the ordination council and Dr. E. H. Dutton preached the ordination sermon. North Park church is occupying a temporary building erected upon a lot owned by the Buffalo Baptist Union in that rapidly growing section of the city.

AT FIRST, LEROY, Pastor I. C. Taylor gave the hand of fellowship to thirty-five new members, twenty-seven of whom were recently baptized.

LYELL AVENUE, Rochester, William E. La Rue, pastor, reports show that the church has raised for all objects over $9,000, which is far in excess of any previous year's record. Seventy-nine names have been erased from the roll, reducing the membership to 265. The Christian Endeavor Society has had an average attendance of sixty and the Sunday school an average of 236. A daily vacation Bible school will be conducted from July 5 to August 5. Fourteen have been baptized during the year.

A RECEPTION in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Straton, celebrating the third anniversary of their coming to Calvary church, New York City, was held Wednesday evening, May 4, after the prayer service. There were two hundred people present, despite the downpour of rain, to show their love and appreciation of the pastor and the work he has accomplished here. It was a very happy occasion, and during the evening, Mr. Estey, on behalf of the church, presented Dr. Straton with a very handsome gold watch, and Mrs. Straton with a lovely bouquet of flowers.

New York Delegates' Trains

The Northern Baptist Convention will be held at Des Moines, Iowa, from June 22 to 28.

Ministers and delegates wishing hotel reservations should get in touch with Frank E. Goodell, 3620 Adams Street, Des Moines, Iowa, immediately.

Those wishing to travel in the party from New York should get in touch with Neil Mooney, Grand Central Terminal New York City—New York Central Railroad—before June 15. The party will leave New York on the New York Central train leaving Grand Central Station Monday morning, June 20, at 8:45 (9:45 A.M., daylight saving time), arriving in Chicago Tuesday morning at 7:45. The train for Des Moines on the Rock Island Railroad leaves the same station (La Salle Street) at 10:00 A.M., and arrives in Des Moines at 7:00 Tuesday evening in time for the closing session of the Women's Golden Jubilee and a night's rest before the convention opens. The regular oneway fare from New York to Des Moines is $49.50; the reduced fare will make the return trip $24.60—a total of $73.80. The reservations are $13.77 for lower berths and $11.02 for upper berths. There is an extra fare of $5.18 on this train.

Those wishing to travel in the party from Buffalo (at a saving of $12.47) should get in touch with Alexander S. Dunbar, 149 Broadway, Room 1037, New York City—Wabash Railroad—before June 15. The party will leave New York on the New York Central train leaving Grand Central Station Monday evening, June 20, at 6:00 (7:00 P.M., daylight saving time), arriving in Buffalo Tuesday morning at 6:45. The train for Chicago on the Wabash Railroad leaves the same station at 7:45 A.M., and arrives at Englewood (just outside Chicago) at 9:35 P.M., where sleepers for Des Moines will be waiting for the party. These leave at 10:30 P.M. and arrive in Des Moines Wednesday morning at 8:20, in time for the opening session of the convention. Mr. Dunbar will attend to all clerical fares between New York and Des Moines on this route.

Clerical fare is $24.74 each way. Clerical certificates for railroads west of Chicago can be secured from Stanley B. Hazard, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

COLGATE CONFERENCE and Commencement
A conference on plans for Week-Day Religious Instruction and vacation Bible school methods was held at Colgate University, May 2-6. Dr. T. S. Young, Rev. W. G. Towart and Rev. Charles W. Briggs were the conference leaders.

There was a good attendance of Sunday school leaders from nearby cities and of university students.

In connection with the conference there was a joint meeting of the Syracuse and Vicinity Ministers' Association and the Utica and Vicinity Ministers' Association held on the University campus. At a luncheon given the visiting ministers, Dean J. F. Vichert, of the Colgate Theological Seminary, presided, and addresses were made by Rev. D. W. Lyman, representing the Utica organization, and Rev. J. C. Hendrickson, of the Syracuse association.

Recent speakers in the Colgate University chapel have been Dr. L. C. Barnes, who had as his topic, "Intensive Power of the Western Slope"; Rev. W. A. Davidson, superintendent of the Vermont Baptist Convention, who spoke on "The Man Needed in the Ministry," and Rev. C. W. Briggs, director of religious education for New York State, who spoke on "Present Conditions in the Philippine Islands."

The program arranged for the commencement exercises of the college and theological seminary of Colgate University is as follows:

Saturday, June 18, Lewis oratorical contest in the chapel, and senior reception in the gymnasium. Sunday, June 19, baccalaureate address by Acting President M. S. Read, and annual sermon before the Theological Seminary and the Baptist Education Society of the State of New York, by Rev. B. C. Clausen, '15, Syracuse, N. Y.

Monday, June 20, will occur senior chapel service, class day exercises, meeting of the university corporation, annual meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa society, seminary day exercises, class reunions, alumni games, annual meeting of the Baptist Education Society of the State of New York, alumni lawn fete, annual meeting of the alumni corporation, address before the Phi Beta Kappa society by William Lyon Phelps, of Yale University, and fraternity reunions.

Tuesday, June 21, will come the University Commencement, with an address by Nathan L. Miller, governor of the State of New York, followed by the alumni dinner and a reception at the home of the acting president.

All who are planning to attend the Commencement exercises and who wish entertainment will please communicate immediately with Professor Alfred E. Alton, Hamilton, N. Y.

INDIANA Indianapolis

Reports in the ministers' meeting, May 16, released the following church facts for the week:

Tuxedo Park had 517 in the church school and graduated fifty from its day Bible school. Woodruff Place is crowded and must rent additional room for its church school. Broadway received seven by baptism and is working out plans for a new building. First German received nine by letter and has ten ready for baptism. Westview received two, making thirty since February. Lynhurst received four by letter and seven for baptism. Tabernacle is pushing a new building. Emmanuel Sunday school was so crowded that about forty could find no seats, baptized five and increased the salary of the pastor. College Avenue had a day of enthusiasm. Calvary received three and is painting its house. Northwestern is entering an evangelistic campaign. Beech Grove burned its mortgage, had a crowded Sunday school and is repairing its house. Roumanian mission house will be improved. First has received seventy new members during the last month, forty-five of them by baptism.

Baptist Missionary Recruits at Indiana University

Sunday, May 15, a student volunteer service was held at the First church of Bloomington in which a number of prospective ministers, missionaries and teachers told of their life purposes and plans.

O. R. Chambers, student secretary to the pastor, now to receive his bachelor's degree, plans to enter the field of religious education. Albert F. Stanley, of Mishawaka, Ind., will go to India as educational missionary. He is also of the senior class in the university. Another senior, James L. Goff, plans to enter the ministry.

The latest recruit to the Baptist student volunteers was William Binkley, a high-school senior. He recently made his first declaration to become a missionary at a Sunday evening service. He expects to go as a missionary abroad.

A young woman who could not be present has very recently decided to enter the work of the Christian centers as day nursery and kindergarten worker.

On the program was Miss Anna Turner, for some time missionary in South America and now stationed in San Diego, Cal. She was formerly a member of the Bloomington church. She portrayed the needs of the fields of Latin America and appealed for young women to give themselves to this work.

The pastor, Rev. R. C. Speer, closed with some references to his former work among the immigrant peoples of the Calumet region and urged young people to give God first chance at their lives. At the close of the service three young men were received as candidates for baptism.

OHIO

CLEVELAND HEIGHTS—The first annual service was held May 12. Dinner was served at 6:30 to 112. The pastor is Rev. Howard A. Vernon who came to the work a little over a year ago. Since his coming to the work the church has more than doubled its membership, and the Sunday school has grown even more remarkably. On the first of March his salary was substantially increased, and at the annual meeting the church presented him with a check for the purchase of an automobile.

EVANGELIST JOHN M. LINDEN, Madison, Wis., is now in a union campaign at New Richmond, Ohio, in which the five churches of the city are in hearty co-operation. He closes May 22 and after a few weeks' rest at home, he will enter upon summer tent campaigns.

REV. HORACE T. HOUF has completed his first year with the First church of Granville. It has been the best year in the history of the church. Forty have been baptized and the non-resident list has been reduced from 33 per cent to 27 per cent of the membership. The church has contributed to its local expenses $8,000 and to benevolences $16,000. This is 250 per cent more than it has ever done in one year before. It more than met its pledges to the New World Movement. It is represented by missionaries and Christian workers in seven oriental lands, Assam, Burma, China, India, Japan, Syria and Turkey. It also has representatives in Cuba, in Benedict College and in Americanization work, twenty-three in all. One young man has been ordained during the year. Eight are studying for the Gospel Ministry. Seven of the youth of both sexes have received certificates of the approval of the Church of their intention to engage in distinctively Christian work. Thirty-one are enrolled in Denison University Student Volunteer Band and ten in the Ohio Life Service League. The total of those who are pledged to Christian work of some kind is forty-one. The Baptist Student Associate Membership shows a gratifying increase and now lists eighty-three. The Church has under its care a very successful Mission in Newark, the adjoining city, which is conducted by the young life that has dedicated itself to Christian work. It mourns deeply the death of Rev. C. J. Baldwin, D. D., its pastor for twenty-seven years and its pastor emeritus for eight years.

The Jubilee in Cleveland

Celebrating birthdays is much in vogue these days. If the Pilgrim Centenary could go on a year with more lagging interest, surely the Jubilee celebration of the W. A. B. F. M. S. will hold the Baptist stage of action this month and next, until the curtain is rung down on their beautiful pageant at Des Moines, June 20.

The Boston and Rochester Jubilees doubtless left nothing to be desired, but the East Central District meeting in Cleveland May 5 and 6 will linger long in many memories as a signal event.

There were several unusual features at Cleveland. Mrs. Geo. H. Olmsted gave a luncheon to the women missionaries on furlough in attendance at the Jubilee. These were Miss Seagraves of Rangoon, Miss Hay of Nowgong, Dr. Degenring of Nellore, Miss Zimmermann of Ningpo, Miss Northcott of Swatow, Miss Allen of Sendai, Miss Acoc of Morioka.

At the same hour Mrs. Geo. Cleveland, long a member of the home mission board, was hostess to the women of the home board convening here on Thursday; while Mrs. Cyrus S. Eaton arranged a luncheon at the Union Club for the overseas guests, and the district and national officers.

At the Church of the Master where the events of Thursday occurred, Mrs. J. B. Austin, local chairman, planned a delightful musicale, the artists being Edwin L. Battle, choir director and organist of the entertaining church, and Claude Selby, a Cleveland tenor.

Thursday evening the W. W. G. girls had right of way with a banquet of 600 covers and a play, "Such Stuff as Dreams Are Made Of," given by themselves and well received. But the climax came with the introduction of the foreign guests and their brief responses.

The stage of action on Friday was Hotel Winton, in whatever portion of that elastic inn the Convention on Foreign Trade Relations or the Cleveland Federation of Churches did not happen to be using. The luncheon served to 662 missionary women was a great success.

Mrs. T. E. Adams, national publicity chairman for all ten Jubilees made an admirable toast-mistress. Mrs. Montgomery as cheer-leader put lots of enthusiasm into the ballroom gathering by proposing toasts in song to "The Winton," "the waiters," local individuals who had helped, and those national officers especially charged with Jubilee responsibilities. As for the clever speeches—words utterly fail!

The great outstanding event of Friday was hearing the addresses of the foreign guests. Each one of whom made her own clear-cut and profound appeal. Madame Frances Kolatarova, whose father has done valiant service as a Baptist missionary in Bohemia, made us see the needs of the infant republic of Czecho-Slovakia. Kahn En Vong's story proved that Froebel's methods in China are as captivating as at home. The two medical women, Dr. Ma Saw Sa and Dr. Manda Mah, one from Burma's Lady Dufferin Hospital and the other from Nellore, South India, thrilled us all with their devotion and the story of their wonderful work with totally inadequate equipment. Khauta Bela Rai, every inch a Brahmin—and now a democratic Christian—visualized the great possibilities of an adequate educational program for the Orient which would produce her kind a thousand fold.

Last but by no means least, came Miss Prescott's graphic lecture with wonderful slides sketching the fifty years of achievement of these wonderful Baptist sisters. The Pageant, "The Call and the Answer," deserving a chapter all its own, made a splendid grand finale with its great number of participants, effective costumes and dramatic setting. The music in connection with this presentation is of high order and was adapted by Mrs. C. H. Prescott of Cleveland.

To close the Cleveland Jubilee story without mentioning the resignation of East Central's faithful president Mrs. F. P. Beaver of Dayton, would be most unfortunate. After seven outstanding years of service her mantle has fallen upon her sister Mrs. B. F. McCann.

Let every city expecting the Jubilee party prepare to witness an event the like of which our churches have never seen before. The program should put the cause of missions ahead several decades. —Mrs. Franklin W. Sweet.

IOWA

FOR MORE THAN nineteen years, Dr. S. E. Wilcox has been the secretary of the Iowa Baptist Convention, first as general secretary for several years, and later as budget secretary for many years, and when he retired from such services on May 1 the board of managers of the Iowa Baptist Convention expressed by a series of resolutions its deep and sincere appreciation of the energetic, faithful, Christian service rendered by Dr. Wilcox on behalf of the Baptists of Iowa and for the great cause of Christianity.

NEBRASKA

MISS LAURA BANCROFT, representing Grand Island college, won first place in the state extemporaneous speaking contest held at Kearney Normal, Friday, May 13. Prizes of $75, $50 and $25, respectively were awarded. All colleges and normals in Nebraska had the privilege of sending representatives. The subject, chosen three hours before the contest, was "Americanization and training for citizenship." Miss Bancroft presented a definite plan to secure Americanization through the public schools.

ILLINOIS

WORK AT ORION, under the leadership of the new pastor, Rev. F. F. Shields is moving forward with exceptional rapidity. Although no special evangelistic meetings have been held thirty-two new members have been received since the first of the year, nineteen of them being by baptism. On Mother's Day Mr. Shields had the rare privilege of baptizing five brothers, the youngest of whom was eighteen years of age. This church co-operates heartily in the New World Movement and has its current expense budget fully subscribed.

PLAINFIELD has called Rev. O. C. Bedford of Dunbarton, Wis., to be pastor and he has already entered upon his work. He was a Congregational minister for many years, but having held Baptist views of Bible doctrine he accepted the opportunity of publicly professing them and entering the work. The Plainfield Baptist church called a council comprising the churches of the Aurora association for May 9. Dr. E. W. Lounsbury of Aurora was chosen moderator and the Rev. R. T. Gasaway of Joliet clerk. Prof. J. N. Moncrief of Aurora was appointed to examine the candidate, after which the council expressed itself pleased with his Christian experience; his call to the ministry and his views of Bible doctrine. By unanimous vote of the church it was decided to proceed with ordination services.

WOODLAWN CHURCH, Chicago, at its annual meeting, May 11, adopted an expected budget for the coming year amounting to more than $33,000.

REV. CHAS. R. DRUSSEL, pastor Elliot Ave., Springfield, assisted Rev. Geo. W. Stoddard, pastor of East Park, Decatur, in a two weeks' meeting, resulting in about forty additions to the church. The meetings closed on Friday night, May 13. Twenty converts were baptized on Sunday afternoon, May 15. On Sunday, May 8, the Sunday school numbered 239, with $20 collection.

THE CHURCH at ROADHOUSE has shown good growth under the leadership of Rev. R. A. Rapson. The pastor recently assisted Rev. W. L. Harms of the Forest Avenue Church, Kansas City, in special meetings and about fifty were received into the fellowship of the church.

THE CHURCH at WINCHESTER has not had a Sunday since Easter without baptisms. During this time thirty-five have been baptized and five received otherwise. All this has been accomplished without special meetings. The Sunday school has more than three times as many in attendance as formerly and a prosperous prayer meeting has been built up. The pastor, Rev. W. R. Johnson, was formerly in the life insurance business and now speaks of himself as selling soul insurance and using many of the same methods. On May 4, the church gave a reception to all new members.

THE UNIVERSITY CHURCH. One of the most successful things in the work with the Baptist students at the University of Illinois during the present school year has been a course in teacher training. Betts' course in religious pedagogy, "How to Teach Religion," was used. The class met at 5.30 Sunday nights and was led by the pastor. Seventy students were enrolled in the course, the average attendance for the eight weeks being sixty-five. The course was a revelation of the unlimited possibilities of work with our state university Baptist students in preparing them to become efficient and consecrated leaders for the churches.

WISCONSIN

JANESVILLE welcomed thirty-six new members May 1. Among these were Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Giffen, and Harold and Louise. These are the church's representatives at Kaying, South China. Four families were included in the above number. The benevolences for the year were more than five times that reported a year ago: $1814 in 1920, and $9685 in 1921. This is due to the New World Movement program. Pastor Pierson and a number of his members expect to attend the convention at Des Moines.

DR. W. T. DORWARD, of Tabernacle, Milwaukee, is giving a series of sermons on "The Ideal Christian Home." These treat not only with the usual subjects, but also with children, the family Bible, the family pew, the family purse, and the family altar. Doctor Dorward has been here eleven years, and has a wide ministry outside his pulpit.

REV. E. G. HAMLEY is the minister at Omro and Winneconne. Many things encourage him in the work on these fields. Recently the Winneconne brethren began the remodeling and repairing of their church property. Recently the two churches had a union service, at which six were baptized. Special music was rendered by a men's orchestra, and a ladies' quartet. At Omro recently a fellowship meeting was held with good attendance and splendid results.

SOUTH, MILWAUKEE, reports indicate progress. There was more than 150 per cent of an increase in denominational benevolences over the year previous. Forty-six were received into the membership during the year, twenty-nine coming by baptism. Several are waiting baptism. It is expected that additional workers will be appointed to this field to begin their work this fall. A woman missionary has already been appointed. The church voted to send the minister to the Convention with all expenses paid. A recent feature is the organization of a young people's society with an average attendance of over fifty.

PASTOR G. C. ALBORN, of Wauwatosa, finds much to keep him busy. The church is contemplating the erection of Sunday school building. Recently the church voted to send him and his good wife to Des Moines.

MILWAUKEE is one of the large cities which does not have an executive secretary for its federation of churches. For some months a movement has been on to employ such a worker. The final disposition of the matter will be taken up next week at a great get-together meeting at which representatives of all the churches will be present. It is hoped that Milwaukee will take its place alongside other cities in this matter.

ASSOCIATION GATHERINGS are now on. Dr. D. W. Hulbert, Rev. C. A. Boyd, and several others are making the rounds in behalf of the work of the denomination. Rev. J. F. Ingram, of Burma, is telling a wonderful story of his work among the Kachins, and illustrating it with views which he has taken on his field. This is a great message and should be heard by many of our people.

KANSAS

ABILENE had seven additions last two Sundays. Sunday school taxes the building. The church roll has increased 90 per cent. Pastor T. J. Dewall will preach the memorial sermon in our church, for the G. A. R., May 29.

PARSONS—Pastor Fred Cochran has just undergone a very serious operation which may confine him for several weeks. The doctors say that he should not preach any for several months, and advises that he go immediately to a higher altitude for recuperation. The city is now in the midst of a union revival campaign.

PASTOR J. M. POWELL of the Edgerton Place Church, Kansas City, was assisted recently in special meetings by Rev. W. O. Shank of Atchison. There were seventy conversions and additions to the church by the end of the first week.

THE WORK AT ERIE is prospering under the leadership of Pastor J. O. Harvey. He conducted a meeting in the church some time back, lasting nearly five weeks, with forty-five conversions and thirty additions to the church.

CHAPLAIN FRANK C. RIDEOUT, who is on duty at Fort Leavenworth, enjoys the distinction of being pastor-chaplain to the largest constituency of officer-families in the entire army, as the army war college is located there. His six years in the pastorate of one of our New England Baptist churches, at Bridgeport, Conn., fitted him for the important work to which the war department has assigned him. In the first six months of Chaplain Rideout's oversight of the work at Fort Leavenworth something over $3700 has been raised by him for charitable and benevolent purposes. It is a record unheard of before in an army congregation. His Sunday-school has grown from a mere handful to over 200 pupils.

MICHIGAN

REV. C. B. MILBERRY has resigned the pastorate of the church at Harbor Beach and moved to Clare to take up the work on the Clare and Sheridan field, recently re-opened by Rev. J. C. Rooney, after being closed for several years. During Mr. Milberry's two years' labor at Harbor Beach twenty-six members were added by baptism, nine by experience and one by letter. The offerings for missions were increased from $145.00 to $975.00 per year, and the salary from $1000 to $1500.

THE BAPTISTS AT BIG RAPIDS have remodeled and repaired their building, making it adequate to meet the needs of their rapidly growing work. At the re-opening exercises Rev. J. Herman Burns, convention pastor, delivered a rousing address, and the orchestra from Ferris Institute furnished excellent music.

EVERY BRANCH of the church work at Hale shows a marked increase during the past year under the aggressive leadership of Rev. E. W. McGirr. New members are being received week by week and many young people are being developed into spiritual leaders.

LYONS, at the close of the first six months of the fiscal year, is rejoicing. Nineteen have been received by baptism, four upon reaffirmation of faith. A new seating plant has been installed at a cost of about $650. Pledges have been taken for the entire amount with about half of the pledges already paid in.

Obituary

Mrs. Grant M. Hudson

Mildred Gilchrist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Gilchrist was born in Prairie Ronde, September 7, 1873, where she resided with her parents until her marriage to Rev. Grant M. Hudson, former pastor of the Baptist church of Schoolcraft, of which she was a member.

Mrs. Hudson was a graduate of Schoolcraft high school and also of Mt. Holyoke Seminary of Kalamazoo.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Hudson made their home in Dowagiac, Mich., where Mr. Hudson had accepted the pastorate of the Baptist church. His health failing, they returned to Schoolcraft.

During their residence here, the sterling qualities and beautiful character of Mrs. Hudson endeared her to all. Her cheery voice and genuine kindness will long linger in the memory of her associates. While in Schoolcraft she became a member of the local chapter of the order of the Eastern Star and for two years held the office of Worthy Matron. After living in this village about sixteen years Mr. Hudson's business called him to Grand Rapids and later to Lansing where they have recently built a home.

Mrs. Hudson had a host of friends locally and throughout the state. She had recently been elected president of the Ingham County League of Women Voters. She was also very active in church work at the local First Baptist church and took a prominent part in the work of a number of other organizations, among them being the local chapter of the D. A. R., and the Women's Historical club. She is survived by her husband, six children, Richard G., of East Lansing, Helen M., of New York City, Ruth M., a senior at Kalamazoo college, Duncan, Grant M., Jr., and Winthrop, of East Lansing, her mother, Mrs. Helen Gilchrist of Schoolcraft, a brother Frank D. Gilchrist of Watervliet, and a sister, Miss Lena Gilchrist, of Schoolcraft.

Mrs. Hudson's funeral was held at the family residence, Monday at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Kemper of the First Baptist Church of Lansing, assisted by Dr. H. L. Stetson of Kalamazoo College, officiating.

Get Your Credentials Ready

The next meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, June 22-28, 1921. It will be necessary for all delegates to present written credentials. A standard form has been prepared, and may be secured on application to the secretaries of state conventions. These standard forms are not essential, but are desirable. They read as follows:

DELEGATE FROM CHURCH CREDENTIALS TO NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

Date.....19..

This is to certify that

Rev.

(Name) Mrs.....
Miss.....

Erase all but proper title has been appointed a delegate to the Northern Baptist Convention meeting in Des Moines, Iowa, June 22-28, 1921, by the.....Church of (Location).....

Clerk.
Pastor.

In case a delegate appointed by a church has not obtained a standard form it will be perfectly proper to present a written credential, preferably typewritten. In all cases these should be signed by the pastor or clerk of the church appointing the delegate. It is manifestly improper for any delegate to sign his own credentials.

Delegates to the convention are from churches only, and ex-officio delegates who are serving on convention committees, and officers and members of boards of managers of co-operating organizations. No person will be received as a delegate from state conventions, district associations, state boards of promotion, or societies connected with churches.

The enrollment fee to be presented with the credentials and properly filled enrollment card will be two dollars. Each delegate will receive a copy of the Annual.

Those who seek hotel accommodations in Des Moines should write immediately to Mr. F. E. Goodell, Valley National Bank Building, Des Moines, Iowa, stating the accommodations desired, and the price the person is willing to pay.—W. C. BITTING, Corresponding Secretary.

Some Big Books You Ought to Know

BY HELEN B. MONTGOMERY

Can We Believe in Immortality?

THE great war has brought the question of immortality up out of the deeps where it is always dormant and made it one of the live issues of the hour. Millions of people have come suddenly face to face with Death capitalized. They must question profoundly beliefs long held in suspension. The new interest in immortality is reflected in a crop of new books on the subject. Among all these none is more thoughtful or more satisfying than James H. Snowden's "Can We Believe in Immortality?" (Macmillan, $1.50). With a charm of style that makes it a pleasure to follow the argument, Mr. Snowden leads us fearlessly into the depths. We emerge with our faith quickened and steadied. The very titles of the chapters are thrilling: The Attitude of Science; The Vastness of the Universe; Place and Purpose of Death in the World; The Permanence of Personality; The Instinct of the Heart; The Incompleteness of the Soul; Two Worlds at a Time; The Swan Song of a Great Singer; Discipline and Immortality; Visions of a World Without God; Setting Sail; The Beatitudes of Death.

It is impossible in this brief account to even outline the argument. Suffice it to say that the subject is discussed from many angles; difficulties are frankly faced; all the new scientific knowledge of psychology is drawn upon; and yet a clear and positive conclusion is reached. We covet for many congregations the thoughtful interpretation of such a book by the pulpit.

The Bible as a Community Book

The size of a book is no criterion of its value. Into a slim little volume put out by the Woman's Press, Arthur E. Holt has packed volumes of suggestions and of wisdom. In "The Bible as a Community Book" ($1.35), the author brings us face to face with a fresh interpretation of the Bible in terms of the common life. It need not surprise those of us whose confidence in the universality of the Bible is well established to find a new program for the building of a just and rewarding community life built up on the teaching and examples of the Old and New Testament. One of the most surprising things about the Old Testament is its unflinching contemporaneity. The messages of the prophets might have been within yesterday. What we have failed to discern is that in the Old Testament we have the story of the upbuilding of an ideal. In Egypt Moses laid the foundation of Hebrew freedom and law. He had to build in the people the will to freedom; he had further to build the great laws of human morality. He had out of enslaved and antagonistic units to create a nation. Step by step Mr. Holt traces the progress by which under wonderful God-filled leaders the people were led forward. Then comes the disintegration of luxury and social injustice, the fight for justice and social faith, the first attempts at building the community of justice.

In the study of the New Testament attention is concentrated on the community implications of the teaching and life of Jesus, and on the growth of the community which he founded. The book closes with a fearless facing of facts in the life of today—the conviction is expressed that Jesus has laid the foundation for a social order which rises above the bounds of race and nation, in which there is neither Jew nor Greek, slave nor master; this calls for the building up of a corporate conscience within the church as the only adequate authority for a world in chaos. Illustrations of the beginnings of this corporate conscience are given in the code of standard, set forth by the International Association of Rotary Clubs, in the industrial creed put forth by the British Labor Party, and in the statement of the Social Service Commission of the Congregational Churches of America.

Life of Hudson Taylor

There are some biographies that are seed plots of new personalities. Reading them opens up whole new worlds of experience. Such a book is the life of Hudson Taylor, put out by his son and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Taylor. In this simple moving story of the life of the founder of the China Inland Mission there are laid bare secrets that would transform the life of the church could they once become the common possession and the common passion. The very sub-title indicates the spirit of the book, "The Growth of a Work of God." That is it—a work of God done through Hudson Taylor. The book is divided in seven parts: The Backside of the Desert, Launching Out Into the Deep, Treasures of Darkness, The God of the Impossible, Buried Lives, Much Fruit, The Rising Tide, Wider Ministry, Worn-out With Loving. Step by step the man's life and ministry is traced; letters are drawn on freely, the man is allowed to speak for himself, a wealth of illustrative matter illumines almost every page, yet over all and through all runs one overwhelming conviction—the nearness, the presence, the power of God. Poignantly one feels that if only we dared launch out with the deep of God's purposes for good a transformed world would be the result.

The temptation to quote is almost overpowering. One incident must suffice. Hudson Taylor in his young manhood had been given a few moments to speak for China. He told how on his way down to the coast a man had fallen overboard, how he had frantically urged the fishermen to help, had offered them money, had bargained with them while the man was drowning, how finally a net had been passed through the water but all too late. When a burning sense of indignation swept the great audience of such callousness, the quiet voice went on:

"Is the body then of so much more value than the soul." We condemn these heathen fishermen. We say they were guilty of the man's death because they could easily have saved him and did not. But what of the millions whom we leave to perish and that eternally? What of the plain command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature?"

Let every one get a copy of this book and read it with prayer, for that is the way it was composed. Let it be given to pastors, sent out to missionaries, put into circulating libraries. It is the stuff out of which new life is made. To be ordered through the China Inland Mission, Philadelphia, Pa.

Books

"The Old Testament in the Life of Today."

John A. Rice, Professor of Old Testament Interpretation in the Southern Methodist University. The Macmillan Company. $3.00.

A comprehensive study of the Old Testament, it embraces the historical, critical and explanatory phases of such a work. The "Introduction" might well have gone under another more inviting caption. It is well worth reading for its estimate of the Old Testament as a whole. A section is given to the history, contents and analysis of every book. He writes from the viewpoint of no extremist. The ultra-conservative as well as the "liberal" critic will be equally dissatisfied with the sane and scholarly conclusions of the author.

"Persian Pictures"

By Mary F. Larabee. New York: F. H. Revell Co.

A booklet of pastorals and lyric descriptions of localities and life in Persia by one who spent eleven years in that country. There is a Kipling flavor about some of them. The ballads picturing experiences during the war are laden with references and suggestions which fill the reader with horror.

NEWS FROM TURKEY

Word of achievement along musical lines is contained in the following article clipped from "The Diapason." Friends of Roberts College, and they are legion, will be interested in this survey of a little known feature of its missionary enterprise:

"How the organ recital is carried to the uttermost parts of the earth never was called to our attention better than in a recent letter from Charles E. Estes of Robert College at Constantinople. Mr. Estes, a pupil of Widor and of Raphael Joseffy, is the musical director of this noted institution, established in Turkey to spread Christian education in the Near East. The good work this school has done for many years is known to church people generally, but we doubt if many realize that with his recitals, now in their eleventh season, Mr. Estes is doing a great deal of good which preaching and teaching alone could not accomplish.

"The programs which have been given contain only the best in organ music and resemble in every way the offerings contributed by our best American organists. Prof. Fisher, Mrs. Middleton Edwards, the Robert Male Chorus, and a mixed intercollegiate chorus assist in the services, which are held on Sunday afternoons once a month.

"As we feel convinced that our readers will be as much interested in the Constantinople news as we were when we read Mr. Estes' letter, we hereby quote it for their benefit, letting him show in his own words that organ recitals are successful in Turkey perhaps even more than in some much darker places in this country.

"It occurred to me that some of your readers might be interested in some of the programs which we give here in Robert College. We are, as you doubtless know, an American institution situated in Constantinople. Our music department has been very active during the last ten years and in spite of the war we have secured rather praiseworthy results.

Our new organ, erected in 1913, to replace a small two-manual, is a superb instrument, electro-pneumatic, built by Norman & Beard, London. It is the gift of Mr. Cleveland H. Dodge of New York and has no equal in the Near East.

These organ recitals are free except for a small reserved section and were planned from the beginning to be of educational value to our community and students. They are attended by from 400 to 700 people each time and on special occasions, as at the annual Yuletide and Easter recitals the attendance is limited by invitation, as the hall will seat only 600."

NEW MUSIC

from H. W. Gray Co., New York.

"The Vision," a choral tone-poem for solo, chorus and organ or orchestra, published by the H. W. Gray Co., New York.

This new publication is a wide departure from the conventional church cantata as set by such stand-bys as Stainer, Saul, and Maunder. It is an attempt—and a very interesting one—to portray the vivid vision of the prophet Isaiah here he foretells with such decorative and powerful imagery the coming of a Messiah to a sin-swept world. There is the trace of the usual set air or strophic chorus; instead we are given a variegated stream of choral and instrumental ne-pictures, broken by brief solo interludes. It will not be a particularly easy or even grateful number for the average church choir; but its difficulty is not at all insurmountable; certainly it is to be hoped that some of our larger, more routinized choirs will give the work a hearing. Church music in this country needs infusions of new ideas and sincere experiments, such as this musical work. At the hands of a competent choir and director, presented with imagination and feeling, there are many spots—evident even upon a cursory examination—which should be of power effect when performed. A modern organ of extensive color-range will be necessary if the suggested instrumental effects are to be attained.

From the Boston Music Co., Boston, Mass.
School of Organ Playing—Edward Shippen Barnes.

Bach-Book of Airs—Compiled and edited by Edward Shippen Barnes.

For the first time the present reviewer finds a volume in English that is a usable equivalent to the many excellent piano graded courses now available to the active piano teacher. The poor organ teacher has had to evolve his own method and his own system of study; and while this is desirable to a large extent, still many of us have felt the need of a sane, competent guide-book dealing with the early steps of the organ-pupil, a system giving the teacher ample latitude to allow for individual needs, but yet concrete enough to supply a firm skeleton to the course. The Barnes volume, seems to me to meet both these requirements; the musical material is drawn from material as widely divergent as Bach, Rheinberger and Vierne, but is (as it should be), mostly the tried and proven older men, Bach in the majority. The textual material is excellent, neither too pedantic nor indecisive. As is always the case with the Boston Music Co., the mechanical format of the volume is first class. It is a volume to be in the hands of every organist and teacher.

In issuing the "Bach Book of Airs," the house has done good music in this country a great service. All too often the only Bach known to pianists is the dry Bach of the Inventions—surprisingly few ever peep beneath the veil and get familiar with the delightful dance movements of the Suites and Partitas, or the majestic nobility of some of the larger works for piano. We organists are a little more fortunate. Bach is such a staple food with the reputable organ-masters that, willy-nilly, the embryonic Bonnet or Eddy is fed with the music of the master-musician until the taste is established. But all too often the laymen of the congregations get the larger polyphonic works of Bach before the ground of interest and appreciation has been tilled with the smaller, more-understandable pieces. The Bach Book of Airs noted above should provide for this deficiency. Under one cover the organist is given fifteen of the choicest melodic productions of J. S. Bach, carefully edited for the modern organ by such erudite editors as Edward Shippen Barnes, Gigout, Guilmant, W. T. Best, Westbrook, etc. This music is ideal for church service use, quality of the highest, melodic in nature, music of noble appeal. And the technical difficulty is not such as to limit it only to the few—the material is within the reach of any average organist.

Following Up a Money Campaign

BY FREDERICK A. AGAR

IT is one thing to secure a "pledge from a member during the progress of an every member canvass or a New World Movement drive. It is quite a different thing to keep the individual pledger properly related to Christ and his church so that with cheerfulness and regularity the payment of the pledge is made every week. The responsibility for doing adequately the last part of this financial ministry falls upon the leadership of the local church, the household of faith.

Here are the steps which need to be taken:

1. The treasurer of the funds must be a lay minister to the giving stewards of God rather than a mere handler of gold and silver. If the financial officers of the church are more concerned about dollars than about men and women, they will fail financially and the church will lose the people as well as much money. A proper viewpoint of the relation between people and money is of the utmost importance. Keep the people in right relations with the Lord and his church and they will give their money as long as they have any to give. This can be done by a loving personal ministry for all givers, planned under the direction of the treasurer.

To illustrate the right and wrong method let me cite two cases.

A woman earning $125 a month made a pledge of $4 a week to the New World Movement which she paid with great regularity until she lost her position on Dec. 31 last through the closing down of the factory. When the third Sunday in January came she was owing $12. As usual the treasurer noticed this and sought her out. He was a real lay minister of the gospel and she told him that she had been supporting her mother and paying hospital bills, and hence had saved nothing. With a spirit of heroism she declined to cancel or alter her pledge saying she would pay it sooner or later. The treasurer saw to it that no statement of indebtedness was sent to her and made her feel that the church wanted her more than her money. Consequently the church had both, for on April first she went back to work and generous payments began at once to come in.

In large churches the treasurer must have assistance if people are to be promptly and personally followed up where payments are missing for two consecutive weeks.

The wrong way to handle a case is shown by another recent happening.

A young man in the uplift of the drive made a pledge of $3 a week. He did not pay anything week by week because he was not attending church. Nothing was said to him for nine months then he received a statement with a form letter curtly asking him to pay up. Of course disagreeable results followed for all concerned. Statements should go to every normal subscriber at least once a quarter and if adjustments have to be made it should be promptly done in order to start a new quarter in right relationship with your pledge. Financial secretaries should be appointed by the church to care for the mechanical details of all pledges, but the treasurer personally attends to all needed adjustments made with individual pledgers. An adjustment is always better than a debt.

2. All givers must be kept closely related to the worship-life of the church. The treasurer therefore must be, ex officio, a member of the board of deacons and it is the deacons' task through a group or unit system, to see that the members regularly attend church. People who worship regularly pay their pledges promptly as a rule.

3. Information must constantly be furnished every giver concerning the work accomplished by the money given. In many churches today the women's union is assigned the task of educating the whole church about the missionary work of the denomination and through four-minute speakers, dramatic presentations study classes, discussion groups, lantern pictures and other methods the whole worshipping church is kept informed about the work.

4. Maintaining a spirit of intercession is a vital factor if a church is to help the membership to pay their pledges. Pray for those who have lost their prosperity and are unable to pay. Pray for those who have lost their love and will not pay. Pray for the financial officers of the church that they may be wise and true in their ministry to the subscribers. After prayer has been made, a personal fellowship visitation will doubtless follow with real pleasure. Form an intercessor band in your church.

5. Every member joining the church will at once be confronted by his obligation to help the denomination do its world task as well as by the privilege of supporting the local church, so before being received into membership he will sign a pledge for current expenses and one for the New World Movement.

6. Members dismissed by letter to unite with some other Baptist church will have their pledges attached to the letter form which will then be sent direct to the pastor of the church they intend to unite with in their new living place.

After all has been said this must be repeated, "Of greatest importance is the proper viewpoint concerning people and money. Keep the people in right relations with the Lord and his church and they will give their money as long as they have any to give."

The Temperance Situation

BY SAMUEL Z. BATTEN

THE triumph of prohibition in our country is one of the significant events of our time. For generations a small thin line of volunteers had given forth their testimony against alcohol and had sought to deliver the people from the evil of the saloon. At last the nation awoke to the seriousness of the drink traffic and wrote out its decree in a constitutional amendment. The success of this temperance fight encourages us to believe that no good cause can ultimately fail; in time, right prevails and justice is done.

But the adoption of the eighteenth amendment is not by any means the end of the fight. Now comes the struggle to secure a fair and adequate enforcement of the law. Now comes also the task of consolidating our gains and establishing prohibition in the custom of the people. In some states, mainly in the west, this is comparatively easy, for they have had experience in law enforcement, and a generation has grown up without a knowledge of the open saloon. But in many states the adoption of the amendment found the people unprepared to enforce its provisions. In some sections the enforcement of prohibition has been unpopular and has been half-hearted. There is a vast amount of alcoholic liquor yet in bond, and this creates some difficulties. There are some weak points in the federal law; and in many states there are few officials who will give full concurrent support. There are some unsolved problems in this prohibition question.

At present the country is passing through a period of reaction. Action and reaction are equal, we are told. It was to be expected that there would be some reaction against prohibition. Perhaps there is no more than might have been expected; but none the less there is a strong and organized and growing opposition to prohibition in many parts of the land. It is needless to give in detail the arguments that are used. But some maintain that prohibition was a war measure; with the passing of war there should be an end of unusual restrictions. Some argue that the enforcement laws are too rigid and sweeping and drive men into revolt. Others say that prohibition is a failure; that it cannot be adequately enforced. The result is that there is a strong and well-organized effort to modify the enforcement laws and even to secure the repeal of the amendment itself. We may believe that their efforts are destined to fail; and yet there is grave danger in over-confidence.

History we are told forever repeats itself. In our land there have been some interesting changes with reference to prohibition. At one time, beginning with Maine in 1854, state after state adopted prohibition. But in state after state it was repealed until only one remained. We must not be surprised if there is some reaction against prohibition. We must, however, learn the lesson of history and beware of a false security. Prohibition has been gained only after years of education, agitation and effort. Prohibition can be retained only by vigilance, by agitation and education for many years.

There is danger in false security. There is danger lest we rest in the mere fact of a written law and relax our work in education and agitation. There is danger lest a lax enforcement of the law cause people to lose faith in the possibility and practicability of prohibition. There is danger lest men effect a practical nullification of the amendment by allowing a large proportion of alcohol. In fact there is cause for watchfulness lest the amendment be resubmitted and repealed. The unfinished task is a real one and calls for united effort along several lines.

There must be systematic and persistent education of the people in the evils of alcohol.

There must be a continuous process of publicity showing the beneficial results of prohibition in society, business, civic morality and public peace.

There must be the selection, by election and appointment, of the right kind of men for public officials; they must be men who are in sympathy with prohibition and have the courage to enforce the laws.

There must be such an amendment to the enforcement codes, both federal and state, as will make the enforcement of the laws possible and easy.

There must be united effort in all communities to uphold the laws and to prevent any nullification of the amendment.

We must not accept any excuses for the failure to obey the laws on the part of any. Men who violate the prohibition law are law-breakers and nullifiers.

We must be on our guard against any efforts to secure the weakening of the law and the repeal of the amendment.

Fresh from the Field

The First Church, Middletown, Ohio. Dr. Franklin W. Stiles, pastor, has built up within a period of a few months a men's class in the Bible school enrolling nearly 250. The goal is an enrollment of 300 before June 1. A new addition to the building is being planned to meet the needs of the growing school.

Rev. J. J. Hobbins, well-known as a pastor in Michigan and Iowa, is now engaged in the extension department of the Moody Bible Institute. His headquarters are at Granville, Ohio.

Peregrine White, the famous boy born on the Mayflower, is immortalized, not only in Pilgrim history, but by the fact that his name has been passed on from generation to generation. One in the ninth generation has just died at Marshfield at the age of eighty-eight. He happened to be a Methodist, but that little circumstance does not disqualify him from his proper place of honor in the Pilgrim descent.

Miss Florence E. Grant, home state director of the Woman's Mission Society of Michigan, has recently visited our mission stations in Porto Rico in company with Mrs. Westfall. She speaks in the highest terms of the work being done by the missionaries.

Rev. Edwin C. Dinwiddie, noted temperance leader, who has been so seriously ill that his life was despaired of, is now reported to be out of danger. He hopes to be able to have part in the hearings on the supplemental amendments to the Volstead act.

Dr. A. Augustus Hobson, for nine years pastor of the First Church Waltham, resigned on the 22nd of May, to accept the call of the First Church, Milwaukee, Wis., where he expects to begin his service the last of June. Dr. Hobson has been a prominent figure in our state work and is considered one of our strongest and best equipped ministers. On the 13th of June the pastors will give him a farewell banquet at the City Club, Boston.

The brotherhood of the First Church, La Crosse, Wis., is sending the pastor, Rev. W. S. Stewart, to Des Moines with all expenses paid. During the last three months forty-eight have been baptized into the fellowship of the church.

Dr. A. H. Strong has accepted the invitation to deliver the lectures on the William Cleaver Wilkinson Lectureship Foundation and will deliver them at the Northern Baptist Seminary in Chicago some time in November.

Rev. Frank E. Eden, of the First Church, Pueblo, has accepted the unanimous call of the Broadway Church, Denver, Colo., and will begin his pastorate June 19. On June 16 he delivers the commencement address for the Colorado Woman's College at the First Church, Denver.

Dr. J. H. Shakespeare announces that he will retire from his post of secretary in the Baptist Union of Great Britain next year when he will be sixty-five years of age and will have served the union for twenty-five years. During these years he has done remarkable work for the Baptist churches of England.

Dr. Geo. H. Young, formerly director of religious education, has entered upon the pastorate of the large church at Twin Falls, Idaho.

Dr. Cornelius Wolefin of the Fifth Avenue Church, New York City, was the university preacher at the University of Chicago on May 15 and 22. The convocation preacher on June 12 will be Pres. Clarence A. Barbour, president of Rochester Theological Seminary.

In the passing of Rev. Josiah N. Kidd, a member of Temple Church, Los Angeles, Cal., our denomination is reminded of the large place which our pioneer ministers have filled in the work of the kingdom. Forty-one years among the newer churches and wherever there was a difficult situation to meet, or a worthy enterprise to be pushed to a successful conclusion—this tells the story of Bro. Kidd. A man of broad learning, intense convictions and of a brotherly spirit, he has been a great influence among the churches of Kansas where he spent the larger part of his ministry. He was born in Ohio in 1854, and moved to Kansas in 1878. For the past two years he and Mrs. Kidd have made their home in Los Angeles. His home-going was on May 12.

Annual Meeting of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society

The forty-fourth annual meeting of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, in the Des Moines Coliseum on June 23, 1921, at two o'clock—and on succeeding days, to receive such reports as may be presented, to elect officers and members of the board of managers, and to transact all business that properly comes out before the annual meeting.—Katherine S. Westfall, Executive Secretary.

Another Great Decision

CHARLES L. WHITE

The following statement is intimately related to the recent action of our Board concerning the transfer of certain forms of mission work previously done by our Society, to Baptist state conventions for the fiscal year beginning May 1, 1921; and the recommendations contained therein have been voted by our Board of Managers for presentation to such conventions as may wish to accept the plan.

Since about the year 1850 The American Baptist Home Mission Society has aided newly formed churches in building meeting houses. Much of this aid was rendered in the form of gifts, latterly called contingent loans, which were secured to the denomination in perpetuity by contingent mortgages, and other written agreements, providing for the return of the principal with interest upon the happening of certain contingencies that amount to church extinction or defection from the Baptist faith.

During the period in which the Society has administered a fund for church edifice work, aid has been rendered in securing suitable houses of worship to approximately 3000 churches; and more recently assistance has been given in securing parsonages.

At first the Society alone furnished aid to churches, taking therefor mortgages as above. Later, the state conventions and the city mission societies, participated in some of these grants; but the mortgages for the full amount of aid rendered continued to be executed only to The American Baptist Home Mission Society.

In cases where the mortgages have been foreclosed, or have been voluntarily paid off by the churches, it has been the custom of the Society to make equitable settlements with the participating organizations.

Owing to the multiplicity of the Society's interests, the complexity of its work, and the growing efficiency of state conventions and other missionary organizations, it seems now appropriate that the Society should transfer these contingent mortgages, representing several hundred thousand dollars, to these local organizations, under certain necessary conditions and trusts.

Therefore, The American Baptist Home Mission Society proposes:

1. To assign to state conventions, having at least fifteen self-supporting churches, and to standard city mission societies class A, all the contingent or gift mortgages or other evidence of gifts or continent loans made to the churches, except where special trusts are involved.

On conditions, however, that the convention or other missionary organization receiving such assignments shall first enter into an assignment with the Society, binding itself,

(a) To maintain a fund made up of collections or receipts arising from forfeitures by churches under these contingent mortgages, or refunds of principal and interest to be called, for purpose of identification, "The Home Mission Edifice Fund," to be used exclusively for church edifice purposes within the state or states, city or cities in which said convention or other missionary organization operates.

(b) That all appropriations from this fund made by such convention or missionary organization, shall be secured by mortgages or other agreements in conformity with the laws of the state in which the transaction is had, to the end that this fund with all accretions thereto shall be perpetually used for Baptist church edifice work.

(c) That in the event the state convention, or other missionary organization, receiving such assignments, should withdraw from affiliation with The American Baptist Home Mission Society in financing its general work, the said convention or other missionary organization shall forthwith return to The American Baptist Home Mission Society, by proper assignment, all mortgages received by said convention or other missionary organization under this agreement, together with all renewals of such mortgages, and all money realized from said mortgages, and all mortgages taken for re-investment made from this fund.

2. The American Baptist Home Mission Society further proposes to render such aid in erecting or procuring Baptist meeting houses and parsonages in future as it may deem wise and its funds may permit.

3. The Society will further undertake, so far as possible and when desirable, to send its representatives to assist the representatives of local missionary organizations in stimulating churches to put forth their best efforts to procure such church houses, parsonages and other equipment as may be necessary for adequate and efficient Christian work.

A False Rumor

We are almost daily dazed by the revelations made by our readers. We were shocked to receive the suggestion that "Bill Bryan has now undertaken to boss the Baptists. He will probably this year run for the presidency of the Northern Baptist Convention." He may run but he will not be elected. This is our prediction based upon his past experiences. We have heard nothing from Mr. Bryan on the subject and are inclined to believe the rumor false.

Killam's Kollum

O, that Wishes Were new Subs

"I have no 'Pet Peeve' but I find myself unable to continue my subscription. . . . Hoping that for every lapse there may be ten or more renewals and new subscriptions and that THE BAPTIST may continue its present exalted standard, I remain———" Let's make it an even hundred instead of ten. It is just as easy and it looks bigger. We venture to suggest that while we greatly appreciate the good wishes of our friend we have little hopes of 100,000 subscribers from mere good wishes. It takes conviction, loyalty, and a mint of hard work to place THE BAPTIST in every family in any church. It is worth the while though. Have you put it over?

How can one Spoil That Which is Spoiled?

A brother minister, and he is a good scout, and we love him, writes: "I notice that you are printing numerous statements all seeming to imply that THE BAPTIST is a great paper. For fear that you will be spoiled please accept a little chastening from the Lord. I think the paper has lately become trashy." And this Kollum started "lately." Now we see why the other editors named the department. It was to fix responsibility for all the "trash." We accept the chastening and trust it comes from the Lord.

Easily Confused

In a mid-western city a caller visited a certain Baptist home. In the evening the little five-year-old girl reporting the event to her father said: "She belong to the Board of Commotion." As a matter of fact she belonged to the woman's society. THE BAPTIST believes that the child meant no offense. She was simply confused. All of which leads us to say that instruction in Baptist organization and terminology should begin in the kindergarten. Miss Applegarth, here is a tip. THE BAPTIST can serve even the children.

To Be "Hired" and "Fired"

"Our church is without a pastor. We want to hire one pretty soon. Do you know of a good man for us." This is the gist of a letter which recently came to our desk. THE BAPTIST may be wrong but we confess that the thought of "hiring" a minister grates upon our sensitive nerves. Of course there is a business side to the transaction and it should not be overlooked. On the other hand the relation of pastor and people is too intimate and sacred to be set forth in the conception of a hired man. The church which talks of "hiring" the minister will talk glibly of "firing" him. Get your hard-headed business men to subscribe for THE BAPTIST. They mean well. We will help them to a higher appreciation of the relationship of a church and its pastor.

A Day With the Board of Managers

By WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

Tuesday, May 24, sixteen men gathered in front of the big table in the Board Room on the tenth floor of 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, while behind the table sat the Chairman and the Administrative Secretaries. It was the occasion of the regular monthly meeting of the Foreign Mission Board. The sixteen members present comprised two bankers, two lawyers, four business men, one educator and seven preachers—a representative group as well as a substantial majority out of the total membership of the Board scattered throughout the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention.

On the table were huge piles of reports, documents and correspondence. The docket of business for the meeting showed by actual count that there were more than 150 separate items to be considered. They included all kinds of matters, ranging from appropriations for church buildings and school dormitories on various fields to appointments of new missionaries; from designations of missionaries returning from furlough to approval of medical expenditures; from ratification of communications to be sent to other boards to the appointment of special committees for important tasks on which to present reports at later Board meetings. Even a paper like THE BAPTIST, owned by the denomination, could hardly be expected to furnish the necessary space merely to mention the numerous items considered, yet all were of importance and all had their proper place in this great foreign mission enterprise. To call attention to their number shows that it means hard work, much time and careful attention in serving as a member of such a Board.

Chairman Frederick L. Anderson presided and called the meeting to order at 11:00 o'clock. After an inspiring devotional service conducted by Dr. S. W. Cummings, the Board proceeded immediately with the consideration of its business. Many of the items involved only brief consideration or the approval of a definite recommendation, since they had previously been considered in detail at meetings of subcommittees during the earlier morning hours. Others of more importance, like the report of a special committee which had been appointed to re-study the whole question of Government grants in India, precipitated considerable discussion.

Only thirty minutes were allowed for luncheon as other committee meetings had been scheduled before the afternoon session. A newspaper photographer might have secured an unusual photograph had he been in the vicinity of a popular priced New York cafeteria at 1:10 P. M. and had seen the lineup of those dignified members of the Board, each with his tray and paper napkin, receiving his allotted noon ration for his physical sustenance.

The Board reconvened promptly at 2:30 P. M. and after another devotional service led by Mr. T. Otto of Syracuse, proceeded with the order of business for the afternoon session. This included matters of unusual importance. The Candidate Department first introduced three new missionaries—namely, Miss Myra Lloyd, fiancée of Mr. Stewart Clark; Mr. Henry Richards Leslie, son of our own Dr. W. H. Leslie of Belgian Congo and named after Henry Richards, one of our pioneer missionaries in Africa; and Mr. Raymond H. Ewing—who requested appointment as missionaries. Each had been carefully examined by the Committee on Candidates and each made a statement before the Board concerning his or her call to missionary service. It is always a solemn and inspiring occasion when new missionaries receive their appointment and this occasion proved to be no exception. After the Board had formally voted, the Chairman addressed the newly appointed missionaries, congratulating them on joining the finest body of men and women in the world, reminding them that they were living answers to the prayers of those who throughout the years had been voicing supplications for re-enforcements and calling their attention to the honor which had been conferred upon them as successors to the noble men and women who had preceded them. This address of welcome into the fellowship of the Society was followed by a season of prayer.

Secretary Franklin then introduced Dr. W. E. Chalmers of the Publication Society who had recently returned from a visit to the Far East in connection with his attendance at the World's Sunday-school Convention in Tokyo, Japan. He presented a report of his observations concerning our missionary work in Japan and China and called attention to certain proposals which were under consideration and whereby the Publication Society and the Foreign Mission Society might cooperate in Sunday-school activity on the foreign field. Following his presentation, Mr. Mornay Williams, senior member of the Board, delivered an illustrated address concerning his visit to Jamaica where he had gone as a member of a special commission of the Home Mission Society in order to consider the need and the opportunities of mission work in Jamaica. Incidentally, these two addresses showed again how inter-related is the missionary work of the denomination and what fine spirit of co-operation is now in evidence among the great Baptist national societies.

The event of the day was the address of Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, Baptist Commissioner for Europe. Announcement has already appeared in the denominational press concerning the appointment of Dr. Rushbrooke at the remarkable Baptist Conference in London last summer and the marvelous work which he has been able to do on the continent of Europe during the past year, as the representative of the Baptists of the World. With vivid word pictures he described the abject poverty, the unspeakable distress and the almost indescribable suffering which he witnessed during his visits to Poland, Hungary and other sections of Central Europe. He told of the relief and assistance which had been made possible by the contributions of American and English Baptists and which at various times during the year had been forwarded to Europe by the Foreign Mission Society. He described the heroic service of Baptists on the continent and the plans they were making for aggressive evangelistic effort. Possibly the most interesting phase of his report was his account of experiences in Roumania and his story of the granting of religious liberty to Baptists who, only a few months previous had been suffering persecution and had been denied the privilege of worship. It is a matter of rejoicing that Dr. Rushbrooke is to be in America for several weeks and will speak at The Northern Baptist Convention, at the Sunday evening session. He has had a magnificent reception in the South where he attended the Southern Baptist Convention and has also been accorded a really royal welcome by the churches of the Canadian Baptists.

It can readily be surmised that by this time the hour was late and the ordinary man would be looking forward to an adjournment. There was still considerable business to be considered and so the Chairman asked whether the Board would prefer to adjourn for supper and re-assemble for an evening session or whether it would be best to proceed regardless of supper. The latter course was unanimously adopted and accordingly the Board sat in session until eight o'clock, disposing of the accumulated business relating to the manifold phases of missionary activity as conducted by Northern Baptists through their Foreign Mission Society.

It was in many respects a great meeting of the Board. It is to be regretted that our entire constituency cannot have the privilege of attending these meetings and thus observing personally the method by which the Board does its work and the painstaking care with which the Board discharges the responsibility committed to it by the denomination. These meetings, with the exception of such occasional executive sessions when matters of a personal or confidential nature need to be considered, are always open to the public, and visitors who have attended such sessions have invariably expressed their surprise as well as their gratification over the efficiency, the devotional atmosphere and the spiritual enthusiasm in which the business of the Board is considered and dispatched.

Luxuries for Missionaries

One of the greatest factors in building up the native Christian community on the mission field, is the clean, Christian home of the missionary. A clean house, wife and children, happy in comfortable surroundings is a living proof of the power and results of Christianity.

A reasonably comfortable home is essential for the health of the mission family, for efficiency in service depends in large part on the conditions under which work must be done, and upon the equipment with which it is undertaken.

Some things which are essentials in this country are counted luxuries out on the field, but for the work's sake we desire if possible to take a few of them with us this autumn when we return to India. The board does not provide missionaries with furniture or household equipment, excepting the small portion that may be bought with what remains of the outfit allowance; but this does not include the luxuries that must be added to the bare necessities to have home comfort.

We would like some of these even second hand. It may be that in your attics there are some of these which we need.

A violin or two. They should be good; the use we have for them is to help in bazaar preaching. The native workers sometimes play native tunes also.

Baptists and Fundamentalists

AT the present juncture it is important to distinguish clearly the principles and program of the Baptist movement in comparison with those of the Fundamentalist movement. Otherwise we invite a vast deal of confused and profitless, if not damaging, discussion.

This inquiry is not concerned with the issue which has always existed between "strict" and "liberal" Baptists, and in which both parties find their common center of fellowship within the Baptist denomination; it is concerned rather with the comparatively recent federated movement known as "Fundamentalism," whose nexus of fellowship and program of action are inter-denominational.

Perhaps the latest commanding statement of Baptist principles is that presented in the Christian Index of May 19 by Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president at once of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and of the Southern Baptist Convention. It enumerates as Baptist points of emphasis, the individual versus the closed ecclesiastical corporation; the direct relation of the soul to God versus the indirect; the authority of Christ versus the authority of priest or pope; free grace versus sacramental grace; believers' baptism versus infant baptism; personal faith versus proxy faith; priesthood of all believers versus a priesthood of a class; democracy in the church versus autocracy in the church; the authority of the Bible versus the authority of tradition; the New Testament in its spiritual simplicity versus the New Testament modified to suit convenience; a program which keeps the gospel pure versus a program which relies upon combinations and outward elements of power.

Dr. Mullins, as he indicated by the contents, caption and context of his syllabus, was trying to set forth the ultimate basis of Baptist fellowship and standard of Baptist orthodoxy. He was pointing out where Baptists now stand, always have stood and always must and will stand unless they cease to be Baptists.

So far as we know there is no dissent from the essentials of his statement among Baptists anywhere, unless it be among those who are interested in Fundamentalism in some of its phases. His statement is in harmony with that issued by the Denominational Day committee of the Northern Baptist Convention in the year 1919; with that of Dr. Frederick L. Anderson in his keynote address at the conference on fundamentals at Buffalo in 1920, and never called in question by any accredited spokesman of the denomination; with the reply of the British Baptists to the Lambeth proposals a few weeks ago.

There is at hand no equally recent, comprehensive and authoritative statement of the Fundamentalist position; but its chief affirmations and negations have been thoroughly advertised and are well known. The points usually emphasized are the verbal inspiration, inerrancy and literal interpretation of the Bible; God, three distinct, equal persons in one; the virgin birth of Jesus; his substitutionary death; immediate regeneration by the Holy Spirit; physical resurrection of the dead; the physical return of Jesus; his millennial reign; and a gospel addressed to the individual only. Fundamentalists especially, regard as anti-Christian heresy any attempt to explain creation, revelation, salvation or socialization on the principle of evolution.

Neither this outline nor that of Dr. Mullins is to be regarded as a rigid formula requiring verbatim acceptance. Not all Baptists would choose precisely the form in which Dr. Mullins has expressed himself, nor does he always use the same formula. Not all Fundamentalists would accept the precise form of statement herein given. They do not all use, nor does any of them always use, the same formula. But the foregoing outlines in both cases will serve to sketch clearly for purposes of comparison the most familiar features of the two systems.

Both of them are evangelical in spirit and yet one is struck by the lack of identity between them. The syllabus of Dr. Mullins omits every one of the items of the Fundamentalist syllabus, and it in turn omits every one of his. These omissions are not casual nor accidental. The two systems are radically different. Neither can be defined in terms of the other. There is also this profound difference that the Baptist system, as a whole and item by item, is a system of spiritual and experimental realities; while the Fundamentalist system, as a whole and in most if not all of its parts, is composed of theological inferences.

These differences though deep and radical, do not necessarily imply contrariety in all parts of the two systems. Conceivably, one who has experienced the spiritual realities of the Baptist system might give to those realities an interpretation in general harmony with the theological terms of Fundamentalism, as some do; or in different terms as some also do. That is, a Baptist may or may not be a Fundamentalist, and the latter may or may not be a Baptist.

But Baptist fellowship must be based upon, and Baptist orthodoxy tested by, Baptist principles and not Fundamentalist principles. Baptists as such are not at all concerned about Fundamentalism favorably or unfavorably. Individual Baptists are perfectly free to accept and advocate, or to reject and oppose any of its theological conceptions, and to discuss any part of its theology pro and con, so long as they do so in Baptist loyalty, liberty and comity. But whenever any person exceeds those limits and attempts to make Fundamentalism, pro or con, a test of Baptist orthodoxy, fellowship and co-operation, he becomes by that fact a heretic, a factious person.

If Baptists wish to avoid schism with its disastrous consequences, and to achieve the union of their forces in an adequate program of co-operation on a world-wide scale, their only safe and right method of procedure in the present period of controversy is that of a patient, tolerant and fraternal discussion of their differences of opinion on the basis of their common Baptist agreements. So proceeding, as the Baptist Observer points out in an admirable editorial in its issue of May 19, their common judgment will at last come to rest in a clearer common discovery of God's truth.

The Tone of the Program

WE GLADLY express our delight in the tone of the program which has been made for the meetings of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines.

One cannot read this without hearing the exhortation, "This is the Lord's business: let us be diligent in it!"

It is a program which features missionary achievement. The Jubilee of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society alone would bring to it distinction.

It is a program which is packed full of missionary incentive. There is to be heard in every session the call to service in Christ's name.

It is a program calculated to lead the churches to stress the evangelistic appeal, to call for the enlistment of men and women in Christian service, to realize themselves stewards of all they possess for Christ's cause.

"Fellowship in Christ!" A great convention should be possible under such a watchword.

Hundreds of churches are making plans so that their pastors can attend. Churches which do not take such action will miss a golden opportunity. And besides the pastors, there should be present a host of laymen. Is anything of more importance than the great tasks which the Lord has committed to his servants?

No Advance Without More Men

THE most crying need of all of our work is for men. When we get our one hundred million we can provide much needed new equipment on fields both old and new, but equipment alone will not do the work. Dollars must be translated into lives of devoted service before they can work regeneratively. Many fields are vacant or poorly manned. In the springs of 1920 and 1921 our dependent states, which, of course, are the weakest numerically in the Northern Baptist Convention, could have used every graduate of every seminary in the Northern Baptist Convention who was not already committed to some other field on April first of those years. Gratifying enlistments are being reported, but it will take many years to get most of them into service. What shall we do meantime? Ninety per cent. of all of our recruits for denominational service come from our church schools, but 70 per cent. of such recruits made their decision to enter Christian work before they went to college. We have few secondary schools in which we can officially reach the students at the decision-forming period. We must do two things:

First, obey the commandment of Jesus, "Pray the Lord of the harvest." How many churches are observing this? On the other hand we see churches with hundreds of members which have not sent out a minister or missionary in a score of years. Yet they are demanding the best for themselves. Churches which are not making possible a reciprocal exchange in this regard are parasites on the denominational life,

Second, we must carry our campaign for enlistment in Christian service back of the colleges into the churches and Sunday schools, and in some way change the very attitude of our Christian homes toward Christian service. The basic and deplorable fact is that many of our most active Christian people do not want their children to enter into definite Christian service either at home or abroad.

What Reply Has the Ministry to Give?

DO ministers as a class "know where the sharp edge of Christianity is?" inquires Prof. George A. Coe in the Journal of Religion. And for a specific test among a number of others, but considered by him as a key test at the present time, he sets forth this challenge:

"Is a system in which one works for wages and another for profits fundamentally Christian, anti-Christian or neutral? Are its motives Christian? What is the effect upon character of the repeated exercise of its motives? What is the actual outcome as respects the relation of man to man? Here we are concerned with the meaning and value of life. Our question leads straight back to Jesus and straight forward to any vision that we dare indulge concerning the coming of the kingdom of God. It is the great parting of the ways for the Christian ethics of society. The ministry must take upon this question an open stand that is definitely Christian or lose its soul. We have needed guidance on this point—O how sorely!—for years . . . . And the Christian ministry is looking on."

Now there are just two possible ways in which the Christian ministry can meet that challenge and save its soul. One is to deny that it has any concern with the fundamental ethics of the existing industrial system and to justify that denial on the deepest religious and ethical grounds. The other is to accept the moral responsibility for a decision on the issue as stated, and to say openly what that decision is.

Slowly the way seems to be opening over which the nations can find relief from the burden of vast armaments. An international agreement by which armies and navies should be greatly lessened would not only lift the tax-payer's load, but remove a portion of the temptation to fight which occasionally besets the best of nations. No issue can more properly be espoused by the churches. There is in sight no more practical move in the direction of peace. The churches led in the successful move for prohibition. Shall they not also lead in the campaign against war as a method of settling international disputes? The method of the brute has had its day; now set the stage for something else.

* * *

On an annual memorial day, the nation remembers the men who in its behalf have fought a good fight. Might not the churches profitably observe an annual day of remembrance for the men and the women whom they have sent forth into Christian work, whether into the pastorate or into some form of home or foreign mission work? Morale is built up by such methods. Honor the men and the women who have enlisted and fought and new recruits will be forthcoming.

Seeing India Through a Missionary's Eyes

The gentleman who kindly consented at the request of the editors of THE BAPTIST to give for the benefit of its readers the following written interview, is a Baptist missionary at Thongze, Burma, at home on furlough.

BY J. T. LATTA

QUESTION.—What evangelistic opportunity does educational work afford?

ANSWER.—It is hard to overestimate the effect of an hour a day with the Bible on boys and girls say from the Kindergarten or the first grade on up through the high school and college and perhaps a year or two in the normal school after that. They have a knowledge and command of the Bible such as few of us here in this Christian land of ours ever get. This teaching is done by teachers who have had this very training themselves, for our mission schools have always laid great emphasis on Bible study. Whatever other course may be dropped or left out, there is always the Bible period. The training thus afforded is better than that afforded our own children here in America. The Bible course is graded. A great deal of study has been given by our missionaries to outlining the course taught. Similar courses are taught in all our schools.

Each morning at Chapel a short helpful service is held and of course attendance is compulsory. A portion of Scripture is read or quite as often repeated by the whole school in concert, for it is wonderful how much of the Scriptures they have stored away in their minds. Then after prayer, led by one of the teachers or the missionary, there is usually a short, pointed address or sermonette.

Our schools give us a double advantage in the homes. The children of the East are just like the children of the West by nature. All that they learn or hear at school is repeated in the home. The Christian hymns that they learn at school they sing at home, and they repeat the Scripture verses. Scores of Sunday-school picture cards adorn the walls of the non-Christian homes and the little boys and girls can tell the stories of the pictures on them. Then the child makes a point of contact and we are welcome in these homes because one or more of the children are in our school. I have never yet been refused the privilege of holding an evangelistic meeting in front of the home of any of our school children. The privilege of the house is ours of course, and we generally avail ourselves of the front veranda to sit upon, but after we sing the first song the house would not hold the crowd. When we ask this privilege it generally means that the householder will sweep his yard and get mats from his neighbors and be prepared to receive us with a hospitality that would put to shame our reception under similar circumstances in most homes in the U. S. A.

Then our schools are training evangelists for the direct evangelistic work. An hour a day with the Bible while in school gives them a body of Christian truth that makes them very acceptable preachers. It is very easy for the pastors to get away to the jungle churches for a Sunday. Nearly any one of the teachers in the school will gladly fill the pulpit and do it acceptably, sometimes more so than the pastor himself. The recent evangelistic meetings in our mission schools in Burma were carried on largely by the head masters of the different schools helping each other using the period usually devoted to Bible study. Choirs from the schools and brass bands where we have them make large contributions to the evangelistic work. At the recent shake-up in Mandalay when we had the All-Burma Convention there, the school boys' choirs and the brass band did their part and did it well in making the street meetings a success. Sixty schools boys who had walked three hundred miles from the hills of the Kentung region had their part in attacking this great stronghold of Buddhism. Some of our best evangelists have come directly from our mission schools. Mr. Young could never have done the work that he did among the wild tribes of the northern part of Burma without the men trained in our mission schools of Lower Burma.

QUESTION.—Do medical missions have any significance for the United States?

ANSWER.—"Flu" started over in Asia, perhaps in the Bramapootra valley and encircled the globe in three years, killing more people than fell in the world war. Perhaps ten physicians over yonder where it started would have been worth as many thousand in the U. S. A. in stamping it out. Means of rapid transit the world over have made travel so easy and extensive that to have a breeding place of disease anywhere in the world is like living in a house in which there is a disinfected room in which smallpox has been. The Ministry of Health in its report in London for the years 1918 and 1919 said, "Until a universal improvement in the standard of comfort and the conditions of life is secured there will be no prospect of actively mitigating the incidence of the deadly disease ('Flu.')." The medical problem of the East is a religious problem. Diseases are caused by evil spirits, according to their beliefs, and houses, ships, etc. are "disinfected" by beating "tom-toms" in them and by firing off fire crackers inside them and in their vicinity. Generation after generation live in one- or two-roomed houses. Germs are unknown to them, of course, but they use the same name to designate them, (after they are told about them,) that they do for vermin, a thing with which they are very well acquainted. Mud walls, mud floors, thatch or tile roofed, and all of them germ infested.

Asiatic cholera is a filth disease and will be a menace till the world is cleaned up. If you could see some of the filthy puddles from which the water supply of some of the villages is taken you would not wonder at the prevalence of the disease. When Rangoon put in a city water system with clear, sparkling water from Hlaga Lake, some of the Indian coolies said it was "No good! It doesn't have any taste."

Bubonic plague, a disease caused by the bite of the rat flea, has to be tackled both as a religious as well as a medical problem. When the religious leaders of a community petition government to cease killing rats because it conflicts with their religious beliefs in spite of the fact that the very existence of rodents jeopardize human life, you can easily see the religious significance.

Medical missions have a financial significance to the United States, too. Health makes wealth. In the last ten years 5,000,000 people have died of plague and the producers and consumers of the world have been reduced to a state about as large as Ohio.

QUESTION:—What proportion of the students become Christians?

*ANSWER:—*That is difficult to answer in any but an approximate way, since there are no statistics gathered on the subject. Practically all of the pupils from Christian homes become Christians before they leave the high schools. Many from other homes want to make a profession of belief in Christ and some do so in spite of parental opposition, preferring to suffer persecution for the Master's sake. However, I think it is getting to be easier to get parental consent now than formerly. When they get out of school and have homes of their own they sometimes come out strong for the Lord. Considering the amount of effort, I think there is no line of effort that bears so rich a result.

QUESTION:—Do the students who become Christian remain steadfast when back in their own environment?

*ANSWER:—*For the most part, they do. Those that do are not the exceptions that prove the rule. I have never yet been in a village in which there was a Christian that his neighbors did not know it. Some of our most fervent workers have been those persecuted by their kinsfolks when they came out as Christians. That, of course, is to be expected. In all Eastern lands being a Christian is a worth while job and folks know when they believe. "Rice Christians" are as scarce there as they are here, only more so perhaps. Generally when a pupil is converted in our school he goes back to his village and starts something. They are real Christians and act like it.

QUESTION:—What are the results of Christian education on the ancient beliefs of the East?

*ANSWER:—*With reference to Buddhism and animism, I may speak with first-hand observation. What is true of them is true in general with reference to other religions. Of course I emphasize the word "Christian," for the Christian teaching is a very vital part of our mission educational system.

Of course, animism succumbs at once. There is no place in the mind of an educated man for the simplest forms of animism. They want to be rid of it. It consists of devil worship and they worship them only to appease them. So when they get a chance, they would be glad to give it all up when they have hopes of something better. That is the reason that Christianity has spread so rapidly among animists and has met with more resistance from more developed religions.

So far as Buddhism is concerned, the Biblical and scientific story of the creation upsets their own theory that the world came of itself just like grass comes up of itself in the jungle after cultivation stops. Their story of the world just happening to be is a pretty big story for a man to swallow after he begins to think. In the material world as they know it, the science of geology knocks the bottom out of it; and the science of astronomy knocks the top off, and modern geography knocks the sides out. So there is not much left. If in the study of geography we should find no such places as Palestine, Jerusalem or Egypt it would have some effect on us. In the Buddhist world Mount Myinmyo is at the center of the universe and is hundreds of miles high. When no such place is found and other places quite as important are not on the map, Buddhist geography has had a setback to say the least.

Young Men's Buddhist Associations are organized patterned after our Y. M. C. A. Mission societies are organized to distribute tracts, and mission methods are being copied. While Buddhism teaches that it is wrong to teach girls, yet the Y. M. B. A. is going in strong for organizing girls' schools, thus going the opposite direction from their own teaching.

QUESTION:—What are the causes of the social and political unrest of India?

*ANSWER:—*One cannot be very dogmatic here, for a good many things have happened in the East within the last twenty-five years that have contributed. However, there are three outstanding causes:

First—for more than a hundred years a beneficent government has been teaching the people the rudiments of self-government and have shown them some of the helpful things that a government can do. They have established free hospitals in a few centres, a work which the government is extending as fast as possible. Government has established schools, colleges and universities, and has built roads, canals and railways. Of course, the people have seen that these things are good and naturally want them faster than they can be given them. It takes money to do this and you can't tax people very much when they only get from eight to sixteen cents per day for labor. The people want immediate free schools, but that is impossible. There are not enough teachers to teach the teachers that will be needed even for next generation to say nothing of those who need to be educated for merchants, clerks, doctors, lawyers, etc. If every one who can read were turned into a teacher overnight there would be only enough teachers, and many of these classified as literate can only spell out words. All the presses in India running day and night could not turn out books enough. Remember India has three times the population of the U. S. A.

Second—For more than a hundred years missionaries have been preaching the Gospel in India with its "truth that makes men free." The Gospel places the same value on every soul, a thing which naturally makes India with her grades of caste from the Brahmins down to the outcasts sit up and think things over. The demonstration to the higher castes of what Christianity will do for outcasts or "untouchables" makes them wonder at the power of such a religion. Our churches have demonstrated that Eastern folks take to democracy as well as westerners. Missionaries have shown to them their possibilities, and like peoples in other lands besides India they want to reach these possibilities through political reform rather than through the transforming power of Jesus.

Third—The great world war had a great effect on the people. The villages of India receive no daily papers, no weekly paper, no monthly papers, no papers at all, and if they did few if any could read them. The news they get is from mouth to mouth and most of the villagers live and die without knowing anything of the great outside world. They live on village gossip so far as news is concerned. But about a million and a quarter of the young men largely from the villages volunteered and went to the front and saw something of the outside world. Now they are back home in those villages and are telling the villagers night after night as they sit around talking together about the things they saw and heard. When several of them get together it makes interesting listening to those who stayed at home. These young men want In-

MONO INDIAN CHRISTIANS AT LUNCH

COUNCIL OF MONO CHRISTIAN LEADERS

Monos in the Movies

RECENTLY a moving picture in four reels was made of Baptist work among the Mono Indians. Here is what Drs. C. L. White and L. C. Barnes have to say about it:

Dr. C. L. White Tells How it Was Done

"Secretary Barnes has made special studies of our Indian work in Northern California, and after examination of the allotments made to our Society by the Home Missions Council of three counties in that Convention, in addition to the two where our Society has been at work for some time, recommended the enlargement of our work among the Mono tribe to cover two additional counties. In his judgment the other county allotted to us by the Home Missions Council would best be taken care of by another denomination which is already at work there. Mr. Coe Hayne accompanied him in these studies and assembled the Indians for the preparation of the first moving-picture production, the expense of which is borne by the General Board of Promotion, which will by this means stimulate interest in Home Mission work. The scenario depicts the missionary history of the Mono Indians and portrays its beginnings and rapid growth, showing the spiritual fruitage of the work, while visualizing the steps by which the educational, industrial and community life of the Indians has been transformed by the gospel."

Dr. L. C. Barnes

"In California a prolonged glimpse of the wonderful evangelizing and social work of Mr. Brendel and the missionaries of the Woman's Society, has been caught on moving films, through the genius, energy and tact of our literary artist in missions, Mr. Coe Hayne. No actors were employed. The actual missionaries with their converts were caught on the wing, so to speak. It is probably the only extended Indian mission picture story of the sort in existence. The beauty of it is that the reality far transcends in romantic elements anything that can be portrayed by mere films."

This picture is owned and will be distributed by the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention. It has been viewed by the various boards and passed. The initial exhibition of the picture was in the Baptist Temple, Dr. Russell Conwell, pastor. It is now available to pastors and others who desire to use it.

dia to become like other countries. They thought that India was one of the leading countries in the world but they have found out that she is one of the most backward.

Then of course, there has been a great deal of propaganda. Some of it was informing and some was not. Some of it was mis-informing, but most of it was mal-informing.

QUESTION:—In your opinion, do the masses of the people favor the British government?

ANSWER:—Yes! Decidedly so. I have never yet heard of any complaints from the masses about any injustice put upon them by the British government, but the complaints have been against the petty native officers, and their hope of redress is to take the complaint to the British officer who will see that they get relief and justice. The most ignorant man in the jungle thinks if he can just get his case up to the "white face," the British officer, he will get justice without having to buy it. The voice of the politician in India is decidedly not the voice of the masses. They are mostly propagandists. Some are backed by Russia, some by Germany, some by Irish Republicans, and some are just Indian dreamers that will not look all the facts in the face. None of them have the good of the masses at heart. Their caste system will not allow them to care for the outcasts or "untouchables." Justice would be a thing of the past if the British government should step out. It is a matter of history that the 30,000 Mohammedans of the northwestern part of India who were persuaded by the agitation of Ghandi and the Ali brothers to sell their property and move en masse to the Mohammedan land of Afganistan "as a protest against the treatment of Turkey at the Peace Conference," were robbed, cheated and in some cases murdered by their Mohammedan brethren, and some of the more stalwart were forced into the Amir's army. Some of them were fortunate to get back into India, and now the British government, not the followers of Ghandi and the Ali brothers, is trying to settle them back in their old homes. If they so treat their co-religionists what would they not do to those of other religions? If the British government should go, there would be war between the Hindus and Mohammedans within a year, to say nothing of the other internecine wars that would arise, and the masses know it.

Ministerial Student Aid—Inter-State

Tragedies undreamed haunt college halls and the hungry souls of our young people.—Lives of our best are thwarted and dwarfed.—Endow human spirits.

BY F. G. BOUGHTON

DURING our recent years of improved organization and efficiency in Baptist work the item of financial assistance to missionary and other ministerial students has seldom been mentioned. No reference was made to it in The Survey, and it was apparently forgotten in the original apportionment of the $100,000,000 fund, so that the few existing state education societies faced the loss of all new income for student aid for four years unless they should violate the New World Movement budget plan forbidding separate appeals for beneficence. This crisis was met in certain instances by a gracious readjustment of state convention budgets; but even so the provision remained inadequate and the situation precarious.

There is no National Provision

Thus far no national provision has been made for this increasingly important object except by certain mission boards for their "training schools"; only five state groups (receiving offerings from eleven states) support education societies to assist college men and women; two other states aid theological students; and, so far as the writer can ascertain, about twenty states in the Northern Baptist Convention area make no provision whatever. Yet in every section of this territory Baptist institutions are endeavoring to train our future leaders, most of whom experience financial difficulties of a very serious nature. A record of these struggles would fill many volumes of unusual interest, and would include more tragedies than the average Baptist layman ever dreams of. Hundreds of consecrated men and women have seen their life purposes thwarted by lack of funds; and the story would point out serious losses in the work of the kingdom, because of the totally inadequate preparation of many men who have been coaxed into church leadership and prematurely ordained by the denomination.

I am conscious of the objections raised by some against "pauperizing" and "killing the self-respect" of such students, and in many specific instances I agree cordially with such protests, but the limits of this article forbid a general discussion of the point. Permit me to assume the correctness of the principle of carefully administered aid for missionary and ministerial students. No American citizen questions the policy in connection with public school pupils or with men at West Point and Annapolis. And nobody seems to consider that students in engineering or law or agriculture are "pauperized" by the university endowments which always pay from two-thirds to three-fourths of the entire cost of higher education. Surely the church of Christ is a loser when it does not provide financial encouragement for the worthy training of its leaders. And when the cause is properly presented it easily secures a good hearing and a cordial response; the idea contains a popular appeal.

The life service leagues of the B. Y. P. U. A. are presenting us an increasing number of boys and girls to be trained for Baptist leadership. What methods of support shall we encourage for them? Gifts of individual friends and home churches or associations of churches already figure more largely in this sort of enterprise than is generally known, and probably never ought to be discarded, largely because of the advantage secured by the close personal touch between the student and the interested donor. But hundreds of unknown, but exceedingly worthy, cases would never be cared for by this method. A young man might willingly appeal to a public fund who would hesitate to request or even accept aid from personal friends.

Presbyterians far Ahead of Us

Would it be well for us to supplement such individual gifts by the multiplication of state societies until the territory of each Baptist institution is cared for? This also has some of the power of the distinctively local appeal, and even the most experienced givers never become entirely independent of this influence. So far as I know (and I shall welcome any corrections needed) there is only one such state society west of the Ohio in all our Northern Baptist territory, and one state further east has none. But to complicate the denominational machinery by adding other state organizations is a serious proposal; and I doubt whether the colleges most concerned would endorse such a move, however much their student bodies need the help that would be thus afforded.

The Presbyterian church of the U. S. A. has for many years rendered such assistance through the work of its general board of education, with headquarters in New York. Indeed, in recent years this board helps any Presbyterian young person who may be recommended by a church session, whether he is preparing for the ministry or not, last year assisting 548 ministerial students and 302 others, making a grand total of 850. Perhaps our denomination is not ready to "go all the way" in such a plan, although we have found it to our great advantage in the last decade to follow several features of the longer established educational enterprise of the Presbyterians. Certainly in the face of the tremendous demand for an adequate leadership, we Baptists are compelled to have a denominational conscience regarding the aid of students in dozens of institutions not now cared for. The territory concerned is so extended that the situation would seem to demand a national solution.

Seventy from Many States

The same query is raised by the congested condition in some sections where state societies are operating. Let me illustrate by reference to the Ohio Baptist Education Society with which I am most familiar. Of course all the funds are contributed by Ohio Baptists, but the seventy beneficiaries now on our appropriation list come from Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New York, Michigan, Indiana, Massachusetts, Canada, Colorado, New Hampshire, Illinois, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Washington, California and Japan.

Two considerations are presented in a state containing a college student body from so extended an area. One arises from the abnormally heavy pressure now imposed upon the Baptists of the one state. The Ohio society has a happy working arrangement with similar societies in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey, and New England for the assistance of students from their respective sections; but even in those cases the other state does not pay the entire amount guaranteed to each Denison student, the balance being made up by the Ohio society. Moreover, from the list of seventy beneficiaries more than twenty men and cases the other state does not pay woman come from states with no such society, and these receive our full appropriations. Should not such an unequal load be more widely distributed? And with the improved division of the load and the extension of the appropriations to our colleges, academies, and seminaries in every state, will there not be a better distribution of students? Other things being equal, such a balancing of student attendance would eventually have a wholesome effect upon all the institutions.

Another factor involved, but which would seem at first to bear against the proposal, is that a national society might hesitate to award to one college as large an apportionment as had been possible under the former system; and this might be true even though the Baptists of that state were still giving as generously to Christian education as before. My own impression is, however, that the necessary mental adjustment to meet such a contingency would come as speedily as has already come our bolder attitude toward large figures in all other missionary enterprises.

The present lack of uniformity in practice among the few state societies also suggests the eventual need of a national plan. Two states assist theological students only; two or more do not help college freshmen or academy students; there is no uniformity as to the aid of women students; one state helps pastoral and medical missionaries but not those training for educational missions; and no two states are alike in the amounts offered in similar conditions, notwithstanding the conference which was held in New York City in June, 1919.

What Plan Will Work

Once we have agreed upon a national policy there remains the question of the most effective mode of operation. Shall the Northern Baptist Education Board conduct a special department for student aid, or shall a new society be established correlative with our great missionary societies with some such name as the Northern Baptist Student Aid Society? The Presbyterians greatly prefer the first mentioned plan. Whichever should be adopted, the board or the society could operate from a central office, possibly in New York, having each application for aid endorsed by both the home church of the student and a local committee in his college or academy after personal investigation and conference. Each semester, reports of the conduct and life purpose and class-room work could be secured by the central office from the local committee in cooperation with the administrative officers of the school. The latter could conduct their field work as at present for a continuous stream of selected men and women consecrated to the Lord's work. Many readjustments would of course be needed along the way, but none of the necessary changes appear to the writer to be formidable. The "overhead expense" would be immensely less than with separate state organizations, and would be many times counterbalanced by the increased offerings for student aid from the entire country and by the great service rendered to the present seriously neglected sections of our field. The writer hopes that the topic is of enough interest to call forth a thorough discussion of the general proposal, together with recommendations as to the most adequate method.

Arrested for Preaching the Gospel

Songs of the King created a stir in a Mohammedan court.—Guns, police, arrest, give place to preaching from an enemy's palace.—The king invites a return date.

BY G. M. BOGGS

ONE night while on a preaching tour in the villages of central Southern India, we entered the capital city of one of the numerous kings of India. It was about eight o'clock and already dark. We carried lanterns and as we walked through the main street of the town attended by half a dozen Telugu evangelists, we were singing in Telugu, "We are soldiers fighting for Christ the King."

We were near the middle of the town, suddenly two policemen carrying rifles, with bayonets fixed, appeared out of the darkness and calling us to halt, said, "Come along with us." We had no alternative and therefore went, knowing that we were under arrest.

We were taken immediately into the presence of the king who was a Mohammedan. He was very angry and he wanted us to know it. He asked us our names, and about our business, our tents, our headquarters, and the proposed length of our stay in his dominions. His secretary, sitting alongside of him, hurriedly wrote down all the questions that the king asked and our answers to them. The king evidently took us for rebels and hence his resentment at our claim to be soldiers of another King.

When he had finished catechising us, I saw that the king's face was changed. Amusement and scorn had supplanted his anger as he began to realize how harmless we really were. So I asked him if we might go ahead on the business for which we had come, and preach to the people. He gave his permission but with the reservation that only I would be allowed to preach.

Instantly there flashed across my mind the thought that I was not there to entertain this king but that I must preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ to him and to the great crowds that had gathered in front of the king's palace when the word got out that two white men were under arrest. I must set his sins and theirs before them all and show them their need of a Saviour. Yet, if possible, he must not be angered. I had no time to think out a sermon adapted to the occasion but had to begin speaking immediately. As I proceeded there came to me new methods of showing this Mohammedan king and his people their sins and need of Jesus Christ.

After talking for about half an hour, I told the king that we had among our evangelists a pensioned captain, who after spending over thirty years in the Indian army had now spent about ten years in the employ of our mission as an evangelist. The king, forgetting his former word prohibiting the Telugu evangelists to preach, gave his permission for the captain to preach. The crowds remained for all the preaching.

When the captain finished, I told the king that we also had among our evangelists a pensioned sergeant from the Indian army. Real interest had now taken the place of the king's former animosity. Consequently the sergeant was given permission to take his place in the pulpit which was the front verandah of the king's palace. The crowds were down below. Other evangelists followed the sergeant. No one made any disturbance.

At the end of this long meeting the king personally invited us to visit him again, at which time we were to talk together about Mohammedanism and Christianity. He was very friendly and cordial.

Since that night we have often thought that that most remarkable transformation of the Mohammedan king's mind from anger to friendliness and interest, even while he was being convicted of his own sins and those of his people, was a fulfillment of our Lord's own words when he said, "Before governors and kings shall ye be brought for My sake, for a testimony to them and to the Gentiles. But when they deliver you up be not anxious how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you."

The Holy Spirit did for us on the spur of the moment what would have been impossible for us to do with hours in which to prepare.

Personal Testimonies of Stewardship

COLLECTED BY E. M. POTEAT

THERE is a Chinese widow in the capital of an interior province who has within the last twelve months come out of darkness into a marvelous light, out of the fetid atmosphere of her bed room where she lay smoking opium all day, into the clear atmosphere of heaven. She is rich. She has family connections in China that touch the famous figures of the last decade. Everybody knows of her. The story of her conversion will some day be told to the inspiration of thousands, but that is not the point of these paragraphs. She has a new attitude toward a fortune of perhaps two millions of dollars.

Sitting in the humble home of a missionary the other evening she said, "I know what it is to be rich, and to be miserable. I thought once that money bought freedom; it has made me its slave. I rise early and retire late in the discharge of the duties that my money demands of me. I thought I would be 'on top'—to use a quaint Chinese phrase, 'but I am on the bottom' (using another). I found a verse in the psalms recently which fits my case exactly". And here is what she quoted from Psalm 39:6-7. "Surely every man walketh in a vain shew: surely they are disquieted in vain: he heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them." (She is without heirs) "And now Lord what do I wait for? My hope is in Thee." Imagine that from such a woman! And then she quoted a passage which she had committed with the enthusiasm of a child: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus (Phil. 2:5)."

More than once she has said: "I shall not rest until my last cent is given away. Until then I can never feel that my heart is swept clean. And when it is all gone, I shall be happy to wear the coarse clothing of the poor, and to eat the simple fare of the humble.

She isn't stopping at the tenth. Probably she has never heard of giving a tenth. She is proposing to make God her Steward for a large fortune. All the interest she asks is plain clothing and simple food from her executor. And are not the ravens fed, and the lilies clothed?

* * *

My father made it a rule to give 10 per cent of his income for charitable purposes and kept an account on his ledger to carry it out. In my early business life I endeavored to live up to that standard, not always succeeding. With more success in later life, that percentage has been increased and for the last fifteen or more years my wife and I have seen that the amount of money that we gave away exceeded the amount of money that we spent on ourselves, including taxes. It is needless to say that our income has exceeded both these items during this period.

* * *

The kind of stewardship I try to practice I learned from my father and mother. Their idea of stewardship was to consecrate everything they had to the use of others. My father was a Baptist preacher and my mother a preacher's wife with all that means of devotion and sacrifice. They gave time and all the means they had, sympathy, advice and affection to their community and friends. I used to wonder whether they had not given too much.

But I keep hearing from men and women whose lives they touched and ennobled and I realize that the legacy which they bequeathed is far greater than any money could possibly be.

I realized early that my father and mother could have done much more in some ways had they had money and I resolved a good many years ago that if the Lord prospered me I would tithe my income. He did prosper me beyond any hopes of my young manhood and I have increased the percentage of my income given to Him from year to year. And always the Lord has blessed me, always—and far beyond my deserts, and beyond, I believe, the fair reward for my business ability.

And, finally, it is fun to give, the best fun I have, and I plan to develop the habit more as the years go by.

* * *

Stewardship is extended to all else I possess as well as money. What I withheld became loss. What I relinquished He restored or gave me better (Prov. 11:24).

After what I supposed a life-long separation from friends and native land, these were given back to me. When the Lord called me, He knew where best I could serve the cause of the benighted, and the preparation necessary therefor. The place was in my own country. But instead of one country, He has given me all lands—for my prayer parish; and there has been verified to me the "hundredfold" of Mark 10:29,30.

For years, a number of these in mission work among strangers with no visible means of support. His supply not only met my needs but was sufficient to sustain a little work abroad.

Later there came a day when out of the heart of the earth poured forth a product of skilled labor that, in the hands of some of the Lord's own, near and dear to me and ever generous, has added many thousands of dollars to the Lord's treasury for the cause I love; and ties of human kinship have not been forgotten.

I do not set up my experience as a criterion for others. My Father knew my needs, and thus He led me.

Gospel-Bearers to Mexico

The commencement exercises of the Baptist Seminary at Saltillo, Mexico were held April 29-30. The sermon for the students was delivered by Rev. A. B. Rudd, general missionary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society in Mexico. Of the nine students who graduated, six receive their appointments under the Northern board. Only words of the high-

What the Wage Cut in Steel Means

The United States Steel Corporation has finally settled the question of wage reduction. A cut of approximately 20 per cent all along the line among the day workers will go into effect on May 16. The compensation of these men has averaged at the rate of $5.06 a day for ten hours of work. Since all work beyond eight hours is called "overtime," this revenge lay in the fact that owing to his great power he had safely encroached on some government land to pasture his cattle. The poor Christians had just received from the government possession of that land at the time we happened to camp at their village. The Ryot was going to teach all the Christians and their missionary a good lesson but God surrounded us with a wall of his own making. This second plan for attack was carried out not in the village but out on these disputed distant fields. The Christians resisted and about half a dozen were badly treated. There were some broken bones and two of them we thought would die. They all came in thirty miles to our new hospital for treatment. Dr. Stenger gave them, as a registered physician, a certificate describing their injuries. They filed a case for assault before the township magistrate. A counter case was filed before the sub-magistrate by the big Ryot, who managed to complicate the evidence to such a degree that the township magistrate fined him $1,500 and the Christians $1,000. The Christians immediately appealed to the district court and the fine on the big Ryot was confirmed but the fine on the Christians was repealed.

Quakers Endorse Their College.

Earlham College, a Quaker institution in Indiana was formally charged with "teaching doctrines that contravene the authorized standards of the denomination, with denying the Biblical theory of creation, and with questioning some of the fundamentals of the Christian religion." A committee appointed by the Indiana and Western yearly meetings investigated and reported as follows:

"Earlham college, as a standard educational institution, cannot be rightly expected to suppress the facts of science, or the theories of science, commonly held by Christian educators. Neither can it reply satisfactorily to the honest questionings of the masses of young men and women who come to the institution for instruction, by saying that the scientific course is not a course in theology and does not have to account for theological interpretation. Both the theology and the science must be taught in agreement, or the teachings are bound to produce doubt and infidelity, and no church can afford to adhere to interpretations of theological doctrines that are plainly inconsistent with the known facts of science. Real science and real Christianity do not disagree, for God is the author of both of them. Our interpretations of both have to be revised sometimes in the face of the actual experiences of human life."

Nothing's New to China

Young women who insist upon tacking their maiden name over that of their husband's on the front door bell, are not as modern as they think. For centuries in China a woman has had the choice of keeping her maiden name after marriage. Even her husband often adopts the habit. "Only friends made after marriage usually call a woman by her new name," writes Miss Elizabeth Durfee, Y. W. C. A. Secretary in Nanking, China. "Her maiden name is used by her friends who knew her before marriage. Our Chinese teacher always calls his wife Miss Chang."

wage reduced to the basis of an eight-hour day would be but $3.68. The cut leaves the average at $4.05 a day, or, on an eight-hour basis, $2.95 a day. That is to say, at the new wage rate the day workers are actually paid $4.05 a day when they work ten hours, but if they worked but eight hours at the same rate of pay they would get only $2.95. On the latter basis their weekly earning would be $17.70.—Fed. Council Bulletin.

How the "Massacre" Came Out.

Rev. J. M. Baker, Baptist missionary at Ongole, India, writes in relation to our bulletin Feb. 19 headed "A Thwarted Plan of Massacre":

Later in the year there was an actual attack on those village Christians by the big Ryot or landlord and his hired followers. This big landlord simply had to get it out of his system. The reason this landlord was angry and sought

The Secret of Christian Living and Christian Giving

By A. H. C. MORSE

"But first they gave their own selves to the Lord."—II Cor. 8:5.

REFERENCE is made to the Macedonian Christians. They had done a beautiful thing in their gifts to the suffering saints in Jerusalem, and this is how the apostle accounts for it. They were bounteous in their gifts to the poor at Jerusalem, but there was something back of that. That was only a fruit, but the root was in this,—that they had first given their own selves to the Lord. And that is the proper order in Christian experience. It is the secret both of Christian living and Christian giving.

It is the secret of Christian living. It accounts also for the difference between two people who both profess to be Christians; and even for the differences of experience in the same person at two separate periods in his own life. There was John Wesley for instance. In 1724 he came to this country as a missionary. He was fresh from Oxford University; but notwithstanding his brilliant gifts and liberal education he was unable to stir a single village, and his mission was an utter failure. But in 1739 everything had changed, and when he spoke he was heard on two continents. And the reason for this change is found in the fact that, in the interval, he had encountered a new experience; he had come under the influence of some Moravian brethren, and had learned the secret of Christian living; that is to say, he had started all over again, by first giving himself to the Lord.

The same thing took place in the life of the late J. Wilbur Chapman. He was always a charming spirit, and upon graduation from college his natural gifts secured him a delightful pastorate in Albany, N. Y.; but nothing special took place in his work. But one day Dwight L. Moody sat in his congregation, and heard him preach. And at the close of the service he spoke with the preacher, and said, "Mr. Chapman you haven't got it. Your preaching is empty and wrong." And Dr. Chapman did not like it. He was a university man, and Mr. Moody had never had such privileges. But he took it to heart, and talked it over with the Lord, and made a new consecration, and started aright: and few men have ever been more greatly used in the kingdom. He went through this land with a great gospel; and then he went round the world, everywhere telling about Jesus; and everywhere the people were moved.

And this experience is not for preachers alone, but for all Christian people. It is the gateway to usefulness and power. And the Christian life that doesn't attain to this is only another illustration of "arrested development," as the scientific man would say. It is a matter of consecration.

And in the first place, this consecration must be voluntary; that is, uninfluenced by extraneous conditions. It is taken, not because others are doing so, but because one feels that his life is not what it ought to be; that in his home he is impatient; in his business, overgreedy; and in his friendship, insincere; that none of these things can he overcome of himself, and so he turns to the Lord. That is the beginning of Christian living. It is like a new birth.

And, in the next place, this action of the soul must be entirely unselfish; that is to say, it must be from no ulterior purpose. I think I can illustrate what I mean. Some years ago a great meeting was in progress in an Eastern city, and to it there came a preacher from a distant part of the state. He seemed very eager. He said "I have come to these meetings, for I need them. I have lost my power. I used to be a soul-winner, and in those days my church was crowded, and the people were moved, and when I gave the invitation they came forward in confession of Christ. But now it is different, and I'm here seeking for power." And when he said these things every one felt he was on the road to victory. But he spoke too much. He proceeded to say, "My people have detected that my power is gone; and it is a matter of recovering it, or leaving that pulpit and I just must have it." His desire was not unselfish, and he went back without the coveted power.

And Christian people may all have this power, but they may not all have the same circumstances. And that's where we sometimes make our mistakes. Experience is internal, while circumstances are external. One can give himself to the Lord; and then he must take the appointment of such circumstances as the Lord may choose. There are two men mentioned in the Bible as equally filled with the Spirit, but their circumstances were entirely different. The one was Peter. He was unlettered and uncultured, and at one time also profane. But he gave himself to the Lord, and then came to a place where he stood before the multitudes and flung out the invitation, and three thousand came crowding into the kingdom. The other was Stephen. He was a man of good repute from the start, and was also filled with the spirit. But when he stood up to preach, he was set upon by the people, and stoned to death. So I say that one's consecration to the Lord must be so unselfish that it will accept either place,—the circumstances of Peter or of Stephen, as the Lord may appoint. He must say to the Lord, "Fill me with the Spirit, and then do with me as thou wilt." That's what I mean by a consecration that is unselfish.

In the third place this consecration must be irrevocable; that is to say, when one has given himself to the Lord he must not try to take it back. That's what we often attempt. We are like little children. I've seen them toddle across the room and place their most precious toys in the lap of their parents and say, "These are for you," and then in a little time return and take them all back. And I've seen Christian people do that: have seen them enter the service of the Lord, and then give it up; enter the ministry, and then lay it aside; go to the missionary fields, and then abandon their calling. But consecration, to be of any worth, must be irrevocable. The promises of the Lord to us are without repentance; and so must be our promises to him.

And, in the fourth place, when one yields himself to the Lord, the consecration must be complete; nothing at all must be withheld. Maybe I can illustrate this. I heard of a doctor one time who was called to a home where scarlet fever prevailed. One child succumbed, and before he would be buried, the second died, and also the third. Only one child remained. The parents were heart-broken, but they lavished their love on the child that remained; and when the fever subsided, they had the house fumigated, all but one room, which was only a store room, and they thought that unnecessary. And the mother took her child to the White Mountains for the summer, and forgot about the fever, except for the leaden heart she continued to carry. In the au-

Our Prayer

By ALICE PARMELEE CURTISS

OUR Yesterdays, dear Lord, forgive,
And blot them out, we pray.
How could we fail so utterly
To live a worthy day
When Thou wast standing by, in love,
To show us just the way?

New courage comes with morning light,
And so, we ask for grace
To make Today, in thought and deed,
Fit for Thy dwelling place,
And may the night bring joy and rest,
Content in Thine embrace.

For each Tomorrow as it comes
We know Thou wilt provide,
And so we leave them all with Thee
And pray, whate'er betide,
Thy power may make our faith more bright
And keep us near Thy side.

International Uniform Lesson for June 19

MAKING THE SOCIAL ORDER CHRISTIAN

Luke 4:16-21, Matt. 23:34-40

Golden Text: Matt. 23:40.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The lesson text introduces us to the opening and closing of the ministry of Jesus. The program of Jesus announced in Nazareth when he began his public service remained unchanged when he stood on the threshold of his sacrificial death. His program was social rather than ecclesiastical in the sense in which the word ecclesiastical has come to be used. It had to do with physical health, not with priestly ordination; with the liberty of human souls, not the legal requirements of an ecclesiastical system; with what has come to be known as charities, not ritual. Jesus came according to his own statement to salvage society, and the test of the final judgment according to Jesus is the continuation of the ministry of Jesus by his followers.

The Lesson Taught

What is the social order? What would the social order be if it were made Christian? How can the social order be made Christian? These three questions are worthy of serious thought and investigation.

The Social Order

The social order is a modern term coined to make current the idea usually conveyed by the word, society. Society may mean several things; but the term, social order, is unambiguous. It stands for the manner in which people live and love, work and worship. All that we have been studying by means of the Sunday school lessons for the past three months is included in the social order: health, work, poverty, wealth, education, recreation, cooperation, family life and national government. There has always been a social order since men began to live together. To be sure, the social order has made progress with the progress of civilization until today social relationships are closely articulated. What Paul the Apostle claimed for the church in its unity when he called it a body may now be claimed for society. Society is not yet the body of Christ, but it is as much of an organism as the human body. There are many people still so belated as to regard society merely as an organization which may be tinkered with at will as one would tinker with an automobile. Out of this error have grown some grievous mistakes in the handling of reforms. Industrial reformation, for example, can never proceed successfully on the proposition that the social order is a machine. The social order is simply the human organism multiplied, classified and articulated. Society when it functions with any appreciable integrity is only a composite personality. Of course the social order has to do with things like transportation, communication, manufacturing, selling, the machinery of government, etc., but the social order is not primarily these things. It is the interaction of the persons by whom and for whom these things were created and maintained.

A Christian Social Order

The present social order is only Christian in spots, because all the persons who constitute the social order are not yet Christians. We cannot have Christian commerce until at least a majority of the men who give character to commerce are Christians in the real sense of the word. This rule applies to all the activities of the social order whether they be secular or religious. A religious institution of the social order is not Christian because it happens to use a Christian terminology or to practice Christian symbolism revealed by our Lord in the Gospels. According to the principals of the lesson text a Christian social order cannot dodge the question of bread and butter. All economic problems can be reduced to the simple question of bread and butter. Call it the "full dinner pail" as was the fashion years ago, or a "living wage" as is the custom today, it all comes back to the eternal question of making an honest and adequate living. "I was hungry and ye gave me a chance to earn a living for myself and family," is the modern free translation of the words found in our lesson. "I was a stranger and ye took me in," has been lifted from the domestic hospitality of an individualistic age to the international hospitality of a social and industrial age which witnesses millions of immigrants seeking the advantages of a new country like the U. S. A., or Canada, or Mexico, or Australia.

Making the Social Order Christian

The whole spirit and language of our Lord in Matthew 25 must be interpreted in the light of modern conditions. When we have a Christian social order that really works there will be no poverty in the world and no swollen fortunes. There will always be inequalities in society, but never any justice. Commercialized vice will no longer be tolerated. Ignorance and superstition will be completely driven away by the diffused light of popular education. Selfishness, the tap root of all sin, will be destroyed, and sin itself in all its ugly immoralities and in all its refined forms will die. With sin dead, righteousness and peace, goodwill and brotherhood, and all that constitutes the kingdom of God will thrive.

There are two extreme views as to the method, viz., the premillennial method and the no-millennial method. The first view holds to the speedy return of Christ in person as he went away from the Mount of Olives when he ascended, and at his return he will usher in the millennium by which the social order will become Christian suddenly and miraculously. The other view holds to the law of progress by slow and painful gradations bringing the human race finally to perfection in its social order. Jesus seems to have held a modified form of both views. He certainly taught that his kingdom would come by revolution and crisis, and that he himself would return in person. He also taught just as clearly that the kingdom of God cometh not by observation, but by the spiritual transformation of men and women; and that he himself is ever present with his obedient disciples. There is no contradiction here. Jesus was true to the method of history. All human progress in the past has come by way of both creation and destruction, evolution and revolution, slow construction and sudden crisis. This is also the order of nature, according to science.

The balanced way is to cherish the hope and patiently plod on, remembering that one day with the Lord is not twenty-four hours but a thousand years.

The Order of Christian Yoke-Fellows

The Order of Christian Yokefellows is a comparatively new organization in the evangelical churches of this country, having its origin in the Tabernacle Baptist Church of Milwaukee, Wis., in 1917. The idea had its conception in the brain of the Rev. W. T. Dorward, pastor of that church, who realized as many other men of today, that there is a need in the present plan of the churches for such an organization, strictly masculine in its methods and activities, to be a channel for features of work beneficial alike to the denomination and community, and an organization with which the average man desires to be associated. Mr. Dorward is the supreme president of the order, which is rapidly expanding, particularly in the middle West.

The Order of Christian Yokefellows is interdenominational in its scope. The program is built up so that it may well engage the consideration and attention of all men eighteen years and over of any church and congregation, without disturbing any of the minor organizations or Sunday classes.

The local organizations are known as "Homes." The meetings are held monthly and are conducted somewhat along the lines of some of the older secret societies, with the working of certain degrees and other features of kindred nature. It has a tendency to be luring so far as the secrecy is concerned, to be uplifting in its presentation and to instill love of country and better citizenship.

Mr. H. A. Gaylord, Brockport, Monroe County, N. Y., has been appointed Supreme Deputy for the State of New York.

Her Going Away Hat

CHAPTER I.

ABOVE everything else, she was devoted.

She did things in the church that other people groaned over! Things for little children, story hours, etc.; World Wide Guild activities—if there was a play or pageant under way, look for her behind the scenes. She found enjoyment in doing these things, at least, up to a certain point; then she would wring her hands (or long to!) and wish that she could move without creaking. At this stage of the game her chief admiration in life was for a spider, that dauntless creature who could spin endless webs out of himself, yet be nothing worsted. "As for me," she would admit woefully, "I'm plain run dry!"

"Nonsense!" said the others blithely, and went their careful ways. So she kept on spinning webs. But ran dryer! "If that is possible!" she would whisper to her inner self, which had a bump of humor—so necessary for the best kind of church work, as you must have observed.

About this time, after three years of running mentally dryer and dryer, she became obsessed with the dream of summer conferences, capitalized in her own mind beyond the wildest advertisements of their directors. "For," said she to herself, "a summer conference is the kind of place where a run-dry person like me discovers new springs and comes home so brimful to overflowing that—" oh, that anything would be possible. And she painted fair pictures of her "anything."

But, save as she would, she never quite screwed her savings to the point of covering railroad fare, and registration, and a week's board. "I'm just generally no good," she sighed, "the pockets of my pocketbook are as empty as the pockets of my run-dry mind."

But never a word did she mention of her obsession to a single soul; for you can see for yourself that it would look as if she felt her past endeavors deserved such a shining crown. And she would have been the last person to suggest such a preposterous thing.

Luckily in every church there is a pastor,—or ought to be. And for every pastor, there is a pastor's wife,—or ought to be! And this particular pastor's wife appreciated every ounce of energy expended by this quiet young person; so she dreamed a dream one day. The longer she dreamed, the lovelier it seemed; but alas, like old Mother Hubbard she went to the church cupboard and—the cupboard was bare. Treasures do get that way in the best of church families.

"But this thing has got to be done! So we'll just have to make it highly compelling and deliciously secret," said she, dove-like, but as wise as a serpent, nevertheless.

So that is the way the Hat came to be discussed. Anyone may talk of hats, of course, but for one bit of summer millinery this seemed to be receiving more than its share of gloating approval.

"What a perfectly right thing to do!" smiled several ladies who were not habitually such cheerful givers. But a hat—oh, any woman dotes on buying hats. Human nater! The mothers of children were approached, and for the future good (as well as past good) of these young lives they warm-heartedly took a share in the hat. Even the deacons dove into their Sunday trousers' pockets—never had they been known to pay for feminine headgear so willingly. Meanwhile knowing smiles and mysterious remarks ebbed and flowed around our unsuspecting Girl-Who-Did-Things.

CHAPTER II.

The last event of her church duties before summer was a World Wide Guild meeting in June. Down deep in her run-dry mind she grumbled to a Blue Imp that all this program preparation of hers would probably prove quite useless, June being such a dwindling season. But—there was a crowd!

"Due to my rather awful poster," she decided ruefully, but contented with the apparent enthusiasm: the program went off of itself. But there was a climax to that meeting that she had nothing to do with, for having guided the happenings through the final hymn, beheld there entered one of her own Crusaders, disguised as a delivery boy, carrying a jaunty-looking hat-box with a monstrous tag.

Spellbound, hymn-book still in hand, she eyed this shining apparition advancing down the aisle straight toward her. Then, as the grinning messenger presented it to her, she saw that on the tag was her own name, also a very home-made rhyme which she read as one who had never read English words before:

"There is a good Lady so highly devoted That her beautiful constancy has been noted,

And the strangest part of said notes is that

They've looped themselves round her Going-Away Hat:

For while wearing outside this gay millinery

The inside of her head will grow more missionary—

Since the bits of green trimming which this lady sees

Are for tickets, and board bills, and conference fees!"

Well, words are words. And string is string. The words seemed to imply that if the string were loosened and the lid raised a hat would be there—the kind of hat known as a Going-Away Hat. Brides wear them on their wedding journeys, she said to herself, pretending to be calm; but actually there was not sufficient stiffening left in the ends of her fingers to do anything but fumble with the string.

The meeting noticed her obvious embarrassment, so it politely adjourned itself, and came swarming around her affectionately. Friendly hands removed the string and the lid, and there in all its glory lay the Going-Away Hat. Just a cheap little straw affair from the Five-and-Ten Cent Store it was, but glorified beyond belief by brilliant green loops and streamers, by rosettes and festoons of crinkly dollar bills. She held it in her two hands as if it were some sacred thing. All the pent-up desires of three years had crystallized in that gaudy bit of millinery! With a returning sense of humor she naively tried it on, and assured them of its perfect fit and huge becomingness. It was then that she saw in their own glad eyes that the joy was not exclusively hers: this was their happiest church occasion, too.

"Oh, I wish you could all come with me!" she cried, and vowed to bring so much back to these dear people that that "look" should always be in their eyes.

CHAPTER III.

Have you ever been doing something for years and years, blindly going round in a deadly circle, pouring out your very soul to make the wheels whirr, never doubting there was a reason for all the labor, but sure also that there were better ways of circling? Then you can picture what went on inside that young woman's mind during her seven conference days. The very carwheels chanted a little tune in her ears as they rolled her nearer the journey's end: "Going to be filled—filled—going to be filled . . ."

And she was! Filled is the only word to express it. Such eye-openers in the way of new methods, such training in how to do the very simplest things effectively, such stimulating contact with other leaders—actually, someone else had been pegging at the same tasks as hers. Well, hereafter they would correspond, and cheer each other on! Such widening horizons, such gripping world appeals, such visions of her own church functioning fully. She grew positively a-tingle to be home at work once more. "I've had vision enough to last me years on years," she thought, "but next year there'll be somebody in a rut, or maybe some new inexperienced soul, who should have a Going-Away Hat. I'll gladly give my share."

So all we need to add is that there's no patent on this kind of Hat and no copyright on this story: indeed, we devotedly trust you will copy right away, yourself.

The Young Reserves

Bill Hob-Nobs with Some Kings

By "PEGGY"

ONE of the stupidest afternoons Bill ever spent turned out to be the jolliest,—all on account of Uncletim. For a boy in Bill's grade at school had broken his ankle playing baseball, and the entire team felt so sorry about it that they decided to go over to see him. Bill says boys evidently weren't made for "paying calls," for a more tongue-tied set of persons you never saw. They began well enough:

"Hello Ruddy," they each sang out as they filed into his room.

"Hello," beamed Ruddy, lying in bed and terribly impressed to see so many visitors at once.

"How's your ankle?" asked Sam.

"N. G.," groaned Ruddy.

"Does it hurt?" asked Peter.

"Uh-huh."

"Let's see the cast on it," said Bill.

So everybody examined the cast, but in five minutes they knew it by heart, and tried to think of something else to talk about. Then the dreadful silence fell, the long-drawn out kind that makes the goose-flesh prickle, and the clock-ticks sound like thunder. Not a new thing could they think of to tell Ruddy; poor boy! they had never seen him in bed before,—Bill says it hardly seemed like Ruddy, but some stranger, and you simply can't tell team secrets to unknown boys. Luckily Uncletim went strolling by the house just then, Bill gave an inspired whistle, and the next thing they knew Uncletim was up in the room, talking to everybody as if he were their own special uncle (instead of ours.) He soon noticed the peculiar strain they were all under: nine husky boys sitting around the wall of a bedroom feel very much out of place! "A little action is what they need," said Uncletim to himself, adding out loud: "How would you fellows like to play King's Court with Ruddy and me? New game, just the thing for someone with a broken ankle."

A continuous beam shone from mouth to mouth all around that tongue-tied circle. "Fine!" they grinned, although Bill, being a relative, ventured to make a protest: "Kings are awfully out of date just now," he laughed.

"Not this kind," Uncletim assured him, and explained that every boy was to choose some king and act it out for the others to guess. There was action enough then, goodness knows!

Uncletim offered to act the first one to show them how it went: he stood there trembling all over, with his knees quivering and his head wobbling. "What King am I?" he asked.

"Do it again?" they requested. So he quivered once more.

"I have it!" laughed Ruddy excitedly. "SHIA-KING!"

"You've guessed," said Uncletim. "it's your turn now."

"There isn't much I can act in bed," sighed Ruddy thoughtfully; then, a twinkle came in his eye, "I've got a fine one," he called out, "watch me!" So while they watched he calmly went to sleep before their eyes, snored in a magnificent manner, then suddenly opened his eyes and stretched himself. "What king am I?" he asked.

It has just occurred to me that you may enjoy guessing these kings yourself, so I won't tell you the answers this week, write them down and see in next week's "Baptist" whether you have guessed correctly. Ruddy's will be number one.

Bill guessed it, so it was his turn to act King number two. He convulsed everyone by picking up Ruddy's shoes and pretending to eat them, he gobbled and gobbled. Then suddenly he began coughing and strangling and sputtering. What king was he?

Peter acted king number three by going around the room lifting things from the floor and from the bureau, after he had lifted everything that was liftable he said: "What king am I?"

Sam as king number four, did a highly uncomfortable thing,—armed with a pin he went around the room stabbing every-

What do We Plant When We Plant the Tree

By HENRY ABBEY

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship that will cross the sea.
We plant the mast to carry the sails;
We plant the planks to withstand the gales;

The keel, the keelson, and beam, and knee—
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the houses for you and me.
We plant the rafters, the shingles, the floors;

We plant the studding, the lath, the doors.
The beams and siding, all parts that be—
We plant the house when we plant the tree.

What do we plant when we plant the tree?
A thousand things that we daily see:
We plant the spire that out-towers the crag;

We plant the staff for our country's flag;
We plant the shade, from the hot sun free—
We plant all these when we plant the tree.

body and everything! They were glad when he sat down; besides, he's easy to guess, isn't he?

Walter, who is really rather vain anyhow, was king number five, and spent the entire time staring in the glass, fussing with his necktie, slicking down his hair, and arranging a pansy in his buttonhole. You know him, don't you?

King number six took a pillow in his arms, pretending it was a baby; he crooned a lullabye to it as he sat down in his chair and teetered monotonously back and forth, back and forth. Who was he?

King number seven was exceedingly impolite, he went around the room copying everything the other boys did, if they crossed their legs he sat down and crossed his, if they scratched their ears, he scratched his, etc., etc., laughing at them all the time, making fun of them. Do you know him?

King number eight seemed to be very thirsty, for he picked up all the empty tumblers in the room and pretended to drink and drink and drink. What's his name?

King number nine acted so busy and so energetic that the other boys thought at first he was trying to be a lunatic; but he was far too much in earnest,—straightening up the room, dusting the furniture, smoothing the bed cover, wiping the windows, even polishing Ruddy's shoes—surely no king could be busier than he. Can you guess?

It was a very jolly ice-breaker to say the least; just the sort of thing Uncletim always seems prepared to do at a moment's notice. He ended up the game cleverly, too, by reaching in his pocket to pull out a big cake of chocolate.

"I was going to give this to Bill and his sister Peggy," he explained (see what I missed, poor me!) "but there's enough to go around among us all, although not one of you will get a bite of it unless you can guess what king I am at present," and he snapped the chocolate bar into neat pieces; then one at a time the boys marched by him, whispering in his ear, some of them went away munching chocolate, but some of them could not seem to guess. Uncletim laughed: "Breaking! Breaking my promise, here's chocolate for those who didn't guess, too."

So altogether it was a jolly afternoon, and Ruddy says if he only had an Uncletim of his own to visit him he knows his bones would knit click-click all over him! We've never broken any bones, but the Hathaways, all the way from Timothy to father, know that Uncletim really can knit almost anything. He's a king called "Making people happy," you see!

LESSONS FROM THE SUN AND LIGHT
Psalm 74:12-17

By F. C. STIFLER

We read the Psalms but we seldom study them. Every young Christian should own a book like "The Messages of the Psalmists," by J. E. McFadyen, where he will find the Psalms classified and grouped together, just as an art student would group beautiful pictures in the alcoves of his gallery, according to their kind. Every gift of God becomes greater with ever so little study.

The seventy-fourth Psalm is one of those that reveals the great Author's love for and appreciation of nature. All ancient peoples wrote about nature. The human heart has always responded to its beauty, and its power and its beneficence. But the Psalmist writes of nature as one of the signs of God's love, where many other people of olden times worshipped God's natural creations as deities in themselves. Historians and travellers alike tell us of sun-worshippers and moon-worshippers. The winds, the sea, the trees and many other manifestations of God in nature have been deified.

But to the Hebrew worshipper, there was nothing but God. "Before the mountains were brought forth or ever Thou hast formed the earth and the world from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God," he cries. No matter how wonderful may be the sea and the storm and the sun and the flowers, all is evidence of God's love and care. God finally revealed himself in Jesus Christ, who was a Hebrew, trained in the Hebrew faith, because the religion of the Hebrews was the only religion that did not worship nature or man, but that put God behind, above and in everything.

When Jesus called himself the Light of the world, and our great hymn sings of him as the "Sun of my soul," we have the Christian interpretation of the old Hebrew teachings about the goodness of God as revealed by the sun.

The sunlight means health. Plants grow in it, and children do too. There are some diseases for which the doctor prescribes simply an outdoor life with plenty of sunshine. There is no medicine like it. Jesus is the great Physician. Just to live in his presence is all we need to rid our hearts of the meanness and pride with which they have become infected and diseased.

The sunlight means power. The great harbors of the north seas are frozen solid every winter. Suppose we should attempt to keep them clear with dynamite and hot torches and other devices known to industry. How futile it would be. But the sunlight, when spring has come, has power to remove the ice quietly and completely in a few days. Scientists are trying now to harness this measureless power for the purposes of industry. So great is the power of Jesus Christ in the life of every one who really accepts him.

The sunlight means salvation. It enables one to see where to stop and to avoid danger. We distinctively dread the darkness. We feel secure in the light. We welcome the day. So Jesus, the Light of the world, and the "Sun of my soul," is our Savior, revealing by his words, and by his life the whereabouts and the nature of our enemies, and pointing us to the straight and narrow path that leads to God's throne.

What Are we Going to Do About It?

The Committee on Education, representing thirty-three Protestant religious denominations and sixty-five state and provincial Sunday-school associations with a Sunday-school constituency of more than twenty million pupils, has issued the following statement:

"With industrial and economic stringencies weakening the agencies of moral and spiritual uplift; with commercialized amusements lowering the moral sanctions; with the shortage of teachers and the decreased efficiency of the public schools causing increased illiteracy; the home and the church cannot be indifferent to the religious nurture of their children.

"Investigations show that more than one-half of the children and youth of America under twenty-five years of age are not reached by any organized religious educational agencies. This condition leads to an alarming spiritual illiteracy which threatens the future of both church and state.

"Primary responsibility for remedying this appalling condition rests in the home and the local church. As President Harding says:—'The future of the nation cannot be entrusted to the children of America unless their education includes their spiritual development.'

"A better knowledge of childhood, better standards for training, a more adequate organization and equipment in the church school, a keener sense of community interests and the recognition of the necessity of closer co-operation of all forces serving the welfare of the child are the first steps to an improvement of conditions.

"To assist the local church and community in this enterprise, denominational and inter-denominational agencies of religious education have joined their leadership, and are at work upon a comprehensive program of Christian education for America."

Detroit Special

The department of religious education is planning that during the entire year there shall be a well-organized and persistent Sunday-school propaganda designed to magnify the importance of the Bible school to home, church, community and national life. Major emphasis will be placed upon the following points:

1. The utilizing to the maximum of every moment of the present Sunday-school hour by means of a more thoroughly prepared program of worship, commonly known as opening and closing exercises.
2. The encouraging of all churches to make financial provision for a daily vacation Bible school to be conducted by local leadership next year.
3. The organizing of a teacher training class in every school. This class should be an integral part of the Sunday-school curriculum, meeting at the regular school hour, using the "New Standard Teacher Training Course" as a text book. This class will provide for future teachers.
4. The organizing of a class meeting at some other hour to meet the needs of those already teaching, who desire better preparation for their task.

Believing that the purpose of the Sunday school is to win the scholars to Christ, to make like Christ and to train for Christ, we suggest:

1. Teachers' and officers' retreats for special prayer on behalf of the boys and girls.
2. Preparation of every lesson with the purpose stated above in mind.
3. Observance of decision or declaration day after adequate preparation.
4. A course of training for church membership.

That Impending Revolution

Evolutionist avows his belief and asks Fundamentalist what he intends to do about it.—Is told to give up Evolution or get out.

An Open Letter to Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D.

By ELMER W. POWELL

I HAVE received a copy of the Christian Fundamentals in School and Church. In it I find on page 19 the following quotation:

"If the annual meetings of the various denominations of last May and June were debating societies, we prophesy that the annual meetings of the coming summer will be revolutions."

Will you be good enough to explain publicly in an open letter to me what you mean. I am a Baptist. I believe in religious liberty, the freedom of conscience, the right of private judgment, the competency of the soul in religion and I openly confess to the world that I follow Christ and gladly take his name Christian.

In the name of God, amen; I will sign no creed. I will not accept a statement of faith from your hands nor from Pastor Massee nor from Pastor Myers. I do not ask you to accept anything from me for I accord you the rights I claim for myself.

What do you propose to do for me and my brothers and sisters who will not for one moment submit to anything you propose? Will you be good enough to let us know what is meant by "revolutions" according to your announcement?

So far as evolution is concerned, I believe with S. W. Williston, professor of paleontology in the University of Chicago: "I know of no biologist, whether of high or low degree, master or tyro, who ventures to suggest a doubt as to the fundamental truths of organic evolution."

I have no desire that you agree with me. What will you do to me now that I assert my disagreement. Do you propose to assume the right and authority to exclude all men of scientific mind from the fellowship of Baptist churches?

I agree with William Patten, professor of biology and zoology, Dartmouth College: "Evolution is the accepted doctrine of the natural sciences to the extent that it has long ceased to be a subject of debate in standard scientific journals or in the organized conferences of men of science. . . . allow me, a soldier of the ranks, to report that there is but one army in the field; the fight moves bravely on toward 'The Light,' and science and humanity lead."

I heartily agree with Prof. Frank R. Lillie, department of embryology, University of Chicago, excepting one word: "I feel pretty impatient over the statements of certain religious teachers that evolution has collapsed." My exception is, I am not impatient; I am amazed.

I agree with Charles B. Davenport, department of experimental evolution, Carnegie Institution, Washington, D. C. "I do not know of a single modern scientific man who does not believe in evolution."

I beg of you as a minister of Jesus Christ to tell me frankly what you propose to do to me and my brothers and sisters who would vigorously contend for your religious liberty and freedom of conscience and right of private judgment.

If we were out of the church you would try to win us to the church, which is most commendable, but since we serve Christ you propose a "revolution." In all good conscience we are striving for light and truth and brotherhood. We contribute ourselves and our money for the establishing of the kingdom of God on earth. I think I express the mind of my brothers and sisters when I say we will follow Christ or nobody.

The Bible Institute of Los Angeles has a definite doctrinal statement of faith "and all its teachers and directors, regardless of denominational affiliation, are required once a year to sign the statement of faith. . . . Failure to insist upon the promulgation of these truths or the permission of teaching contrary to this statement of belief would constitute ground for suit for the reversion of the money contributed to the original donors or heirs."

Article 13 says: "There is a personal devil, a being of great cunning and power, the prince of the power of the air. . . . He shall ultimately be cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, and shall be tormented day and night forever."

The Moody Bible Institute accepting the statement of Christian faith set forth by the International Prophetic Conference has no reference to the personal devil.

These are not Baptist institutions and yet they can disagree. I speak for myself. I accept neither statement. I am a Baptist.

Tell me plainly what you propose to do to me. I and my Christian brothers and sisters believe what Christ said: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall set you free." Will you harm us because we will follow truth?

An Open Answer to This Open Letter

By W. B. RILEY

THE above open letter is one of three communications reaching me from the same source within a week—a personal letter, a Minneapolis paper writeup indited by the same author, and this communication through "THE BAPTIST."

I do not at all consider it incumbent upon me to answer all letters addressed me, "open" or closed. But in this instance I willingly comply with the request of "THE BAPTIST."

I prefer to express what I have to say under four heads: 1—I count myself honored beyond my deserts. 2—I find myself informed about my faith. 3—I am consciously reminded of my ignorance. 4—I willingly express my judgment.

Honored Beyond my Deserts

I am, of course, amused that this communication is addressed to me individually. The words quoted as on page 19, of "Christian Fundamentals of School and Church" (a magazine I edit) as being my words, I cannot find in the magazine at all. They sound much like my thought; but they are not on page 19 of the magazine. That article was written by Rev. Peter Rose, F. R. G. S.

I should say that "Revolution" means "a successful revolt, or its results." But as one vote (and I have but one at my command) will not likely accomplish a successful revolt against the heresies of Modernism, I feel exactly as the stutterer expressed himself, upon being asked a question concerning a certain street and direction in the city, "There are a-a-a-a hundred thousand people in-a-n this city, wh-why-why pick on me?"

Informed About my Faith

I find myself very much interested in this "Open Letter" because of the information it gives me as to who is a "Baptist."

We have the clear statement "I am a Baptist." "I believe in religious liberty, the right of private judgment, the competency of the soul in religion etc."

If my brother will take the pains to read the United States Census Report on "Religious Bodies—1906" Part 2, p. 841, he will find the Unitarians expressing themselves in perfect accord with him. The language is this, "The Unitarians have no creed, and exclude no one from fellowship because of doctrinal opinions."

The man who does not propose to believe anything definite or abide by any creed, nor be hampered by any rules ought to join the "Eagles" not the Baptists.

When I separated from the faith of my Methodist forefathers, and from the creed of my Presbyterian educators, I did it solely because I found myself in agreement with the historic Baptist position, as expressed both in "Confessions of Faith" and the very general practices of that church. I have about as much use for, or confidence in a church without a biblical creed, as I have for a church building without foundation, walls, or finial.

Reminded of my Ignorance

The extensive treatment of the evolution theory by my brother confuses me and compels me to blush. For forty years I have been an assiduous student of this subject, and have on my shelves many books, and have borrowed from the public library as many as a score of books at a time, and have even dared to write books on the subject, and exercised the temerity of selling them; and now to discover that it is all because I know nothing of the subject. How discouraging! To wake up at sixty to find one's self a mental mossback—believing in the God of Genesis, the Creator of heaven and earth as reported by Moses, instead of "a Force" that effects affairs, as set forth in Descartes "Philosophy!" At the end of sixty years to find one's self still believing that his forefathers were men, as reported by Moses, instead of monkeys, as declared by Darwin! to wake up at the end of sixty years to discover that "Christ was no more Divine than I am," since both Descartes "Philosophy" and the Darwin "science" declare him a product of evolution; and that I have been an idolator all this time! to wake up at the end of sixty years and find out that my

What Century is This?

BY HENRY T. COLESTOCK

I CAME down to see you, Professor," said the Recent Graduate, after we had exchanged the customary greetings, "to get a little light on a communication I received the other day."

He handed me a letter. In the envelope were two sheets, the one a questionnaire, the other a form-letter which read as follows: "My dear sir: I am very much interested in the attitude of recent college graduates toward certain questions of great interest in the religious world at the present. I will esteem it a genuine courtesy if you will answer the enclosed questionnaire and return to me in the self-addressed stamped envelope herewith enclosed." At the top of the sheet in large letters was the line, "Committee on Conferences on Baptist Fundamentals;" the letter was signed by the chairman of the executive committee, a prominent clergyman whom I at once recognized as a leader in one wing of the denomination.

"At the last annual meeting of the Northern Baptist Convention," I told him, "there was a considerable discussion over 'Fundamentals.' Some of the conservative brethren have become suspicious of the teaching and influence of the various colleges connected with the Baptist denomination."

"The committee wants to find out what the colleges connected with the Baptist denomination have been teaching," I answered, as I was looking over the questionnaire.

Never Heard of Them

"But Great Scott!" objected the Recent Graduate, "Does any living man think that a modern college teaches anything on the majority of those questions? Why, in all my four years here, I never even heard a single allusion to the most of these topics."

Picking up the questionnaire from my study desk, the young man read:

"1. Do you believe in the virgin birth of Jesus?"

"2. Do you believe that he was the natural son of Joseph?"

"3. Do you believe that he had a pre-existence prior to his birth in Bethlehem?"

"What has your Alma Mater taught you on these topics?" I asked him, as he hesitated.

"Nothing! Nothing at all, Professor. What vague, unformed notions I may have on these theological questions I got years ago as a kiddie in the Sunday school at home. To tell the truth, Professor, I haven't a definite opinion on any of these three questions. Like dozens of other subjects, they are outside of my range of thought."

"Perhaps your Alma Mater has neglected you," I told him.

"By not taking up these topics? No, indeed!" he replied. "I can well imagine a group of medieval monks discussing the pre-existence of Jesus; but I cannot think of a group of college students today giving much time or thought to the subject. We live in a different atmosphere."

"And yet the writer of this letter refers to 'questions of great interest in the religious world at the present.' Too bad you cannot give the investigating committee some clue to what the faculty has been teaching on these subjects. Shall we take a glance at some more of the questions?"

(The writer of this article is professor of history in Bucknell University. He says of it that the article "embodies a kind of composite group experience—several cases blended, but all true to the student situation as I know it from a quarter of a century contact." It is printed here as a valuable contribution towards knowledge of what the students in our colleges are actually thinking.—Editors.)

He read:

"4. Do you believe that his death was vicarious, that is that he died as your substitute for the penalty of sin?"

"Just what does that question mean, Professor? So far as I understand it, I believe that our Saviour died for mankind; but I cannot think of him as being punished in my stead, as my substitute."

"That word 'substitute' is the center of a whole system of theology," I told him. "In the Baptist denomination the conservative wing holds to this doctrinal conception that Jesus was punished in the place of the sinner."

Liberals on the Cross

"What does the liberal wing believe?" he asked.

"Something quite different: that Jesus lived, suffered and died for us, in our behalf, in order to reveal to the world the true character of God. He suffered for us rather than as our substitute."

"I get you; and if I were a Baptist I know in which group I would belong. Our family are all Lutherans; but for the life of me, I don't really know what our church teaches on this subject. But what good would it do this Committee on Baptist Fundamentals to know the opinions or beliefs of a student who came from a Lutheran home?"

"And about three fourths of our students are from non-Baptist homes," I added.

"Would not the replies, Professor, be about the same anyway? Whether from Baptist homes or not, the replies would reflect the students' early Sunday-school training which is, I take it, about the same in all of the denominations."

"Doubtless you are right," I agreed with him. "Suppose you read the next question or two."

"5. Do you believe that he arose bodily from the dead?"

"6. Do you believe in the bodily resurrection of believers?"

"7. Do you believe that Jesus ascended bodily into heaven?"

"Why, Professor, I haven't any clear, definite conception on any of these questions; and what vague notions I may have are survivals from my early Sunday-school days."

"Too bad, my boy, that your college professors have so neglected your education," I laughingly said to him. "But let me join you in confessing that I, too, am quite content to leave these topics in the realm of the unknown. Many, many questions in religion are essentially topics upon which we cannot have complete knowledge. A religion without mystery is unthinkable."

"Thank you, Professor, for that statement. The next question reads:

"8. Do you believe that he will return bodily to this world to reign over the nations?"

"On this question," said the Recent Graduate, "I have a definite belief."

"Good for you!" I encouraged him.

"Yes, on this question I have a definite belief. Emphatically I do not believe that our Saviour will return bodily to this world to reign over the nations."

"Did you get this belief from your Sunday school?" I asked him.

"No, indeed!"

"From your college work, then?" I asked.

"No; at least not directly. It has taken possession of me gradually; has grown stronger and firmer each year. To me it is an essential conviction that the kingdom of God is spiritual; that the coming of our Saviour is an ever-present fact."

"The next question reads: '9. Do you believe that God answers prayer?'" I read from the sheet which he had laid on the desk.

"Real praying, according to my idea, is an intensive interview with God. It is something quite different from 'saying a prayer.' I cannot explain it; but I know that God answers prayer. To me this is a personal experience, one of the cornerstones of my religion."

"You are on the right track, my boy. Fellowship with God is the great fundamental in all religion. Prayer is indeed an interview, a visit with God. I will read the next question:

"10. Do you believe that regeneration, or the new birth, is necessary for the salvation of the soul?"

Where Experiences Differ

"On number ten I have no definite conviction," said the Recent Graduate, frankly. "I do not disbelieve the possibility of the new birth. Some individuals seem to have a marked experience; but speaking for myself, I cannot recall any such change."

"I understand," I told him. "Many persons come into fellowship with God by a slow and gradual process; others by a sudden surrender. I'll read the next question or two:

"11. Do you believe that the ultimate goal of the gospel is regeneration of souls, and immortality, or social betterment?"

"12. Do you believe that the emphasis of the gospel preached today should be on social betterment or on evangelism and soul-winning?"

"In my humble judgment, Professor, the greatest failure in all time is the lack of the church in putting its emphasis strongly enough on social betterment."

"Put it there, my boy!" I said, jumping from my chair and stretching my right hand to him, "You speak the sentiments of my own heart."

"Yes," he continued warming up to the subject in a degree I had not suspected, "the great mistake of the Christian church has been its neglect of social betterment. Because of this neglect, other organizations have had to take up the task which by right and priority belonged to the church."

"Now you are speaking like a student of history," I told him.

"Recently I became a member of our local Rotary Club. What is the program of the Rotarians? Social betterment—taking up the church's neglected task."

"But how about soul-winning?" I asked. "Should not that be one of the objectives in present-day preaching?"

"Getting individuals into right relations with God is always in order, of course. But we cannot stop with the individual; converting a few drunkards is not enough—we must remove the liquor traffic, social betterment."

"Seems as clear as day, doesn't it?" I added. "When we really get down to brass tacks, all of us believe in social betterment. The liberals and the conservatives differ only in emphasis."

"15. Do you believe the Bible to be inspired and in what way?" I read from the questionnaire.

"Does the committee suppose that last question can be answered on a line less than two inches in length—the space indicated on the questionnaire?" asked the Recent Graduate. "We had this subject up recently in the Bible class in our Sunday school and we spent a half-hour on it and then did not get through."

"What conclusion did the class reach?" I asked him.

John White a Live Wire

"Our leader, John White,—you recall John White, of course, class of 1912?"

"Very well," I told him; "one of the best men I have known."

"He certainly is a live wire. Well, John White summed up the discussion something like this—that the test of inspiration is the quality of the subject-matter. 'Every writing inspired of God is profitable.'"

"Whether in the Bible or not?" I asked.

"Certainly! White said that to his way of looking at it, God is all the time seeking to inspire men to express what is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in right-doing; that while the early biographies of Jesus and the other early interpreters of the gospel message will always have a pre-eminent place by their nearness to Jesus, yet in every age God is the inspirer of his earthly children; that it is quite as profitable to read some of the best religious writings of today as it is to read the best religious literature of the early church; the quality of the inspiration to be tested by the profitableness of the subject-matter."

"White has a way of making religious subjects so clear and plain, so natural, that it is difficult not to agree with him. His religious ideas are saturated with common sense. Talk about young men not being interested in religion! We have fifteen or twenty in our class—all young men in the neighborhood of twenty-five or thirty years of age; and every fellow is keenly interested in our class discussions; every man of us takes his religion seriously."

"I congratulate you on having White as your teacher. But let me see; we are not yet at the bottom of this list of questions."

"16. Do you believe the Church to be different from other institutions among men, and how?"

"I cannot see that it is different," said the Recent Graduate.

"Not a divine institution?" I asked him.

"How could it be! Any student of history knows what the church was before the Reformation; and since then the various Protestant branches of the church have given quite as much evidence that the church is a very human institution; very human in its financial management, very human in conducting its business affairs, in the calling or appointing of its ministers; very human, indeed, in its treatment of those of its members who differed in customs or beliefs. No, indeed, I see no reason whatever for calling the church a divine institution."

The Committee Will Get You

"I am afraid, my boy, that the Committee on Fundamentals would call you a rank heretic," I told him. "Nevertheless, what you say is true—every page of history is on your side. And yet I believe that the Christian church is a divine institution."

"In what way?" he asked. "How is it divine or different?"

"As a container of the spirit of Jesus. With all of its faults, blunders, mistakes and crimes, the church is different from other organizations, it partakes in some measure of the divine spirit of its Founder."

"Of course, I believe that the church ought to be different," he agreed; "and as a 'container of the spirit of Jesus,' to use your phrase, it is distinctive, easily distinctive, but I cannot quite see that the organization is anything else than very human."

"I appreciate your point of view," I told him. "But should we not think of churches as sacred edifices, while all other buildings are secular?"

"Not for one moment!" he exclaimed, rising to his feet and standing before me. "As I understand it, Professor, the very essence of Christianity is the abolishing of that old classification, sacred and secular. In the thought of Jesus no place was holy—men could worship God anywhere; no day was sacred above other days,—Jesus and his early followers repudiated the holy days of the Hebrew calendar, including the Jewish Sabbath; men should use rightly every day as it comes from the hand of God; no one race or class of persons in holy or sacred; all men are children of God and brothers one of another. Why, Professor, when we stop really to think about it, the teachings of Jesus constitute the most marvelous, the most revolutionary, and, at the same time, the most constructive program ever announced. Recently, White pointed out in our class, what I had never thought of before, that one of the greatest and distinctive features in the teaching of Jesus is his abolishing of that privileged class, the priesthood."

"Good for White!" I exclaimed. "You must have an interesting class. But shall we not see what the next question is like?"

The Faculty Under the X-Ray

"17. Looking back over the years spent in college what is your impression of the attitude of the faculty?"

"Professor, what century is this? From the wireless and the airplanes, from the moving pictures and submarines, from the many wonderful achievements in modern science, I have been able easily to agree with the calendar that this is the twentieth century. But, Professor, some of these questions cause me to doubt as to what century this really is—whether it is not the sixteenth or seventeenth, instead of the twentieth. But, pardon me; I interrupted you in the midst of that question."

"Looking back over the years spent in college what is your impression of the attitude of the faculty of your Alma Mater to the Bible; was it a scientific or a spiritual one? That is to say, did you receive the impression that the members of your faculty thought that the Bible was a result of evolutionary process or a direct revelation from God?"

"Why in the name of common sense and open diplomacy don't they ask the members of the faculty themselves what they believe about the Bible?" said the Recent Graduate, showing a rising tide of indignation. "I couldn't answer that question and I wouldn't if I could. We have all heard of neighbors who questioned children about their parents' affairs. Well, this seems to be in the same class—asking students about the beliefs of their professors! Do you mind telling me, Professor, what is back of this questionnaire, anyway?"

"Certainly not. A very definite situation is in the background. Recently the Northern Baptist Convention undertook a financial drive for a hundred million dollars, a certain percentage of which was to go to the denominational colleges, of which our college is one. Well, various Baptist churches refuse to co-operate. We did not reach the hundred million objective."

Why the N. W. M. Failed

"I understand, so far," said the Recent Graduate. "But what has this to do with the questionnaire?"

"The non-co-operating churches almost to a unit were under ultra-conservative leadership which, unfortunately, is not in sympathy with some of the dominant notes in modern scholarship. These leaders in the conservative wing of the denomination were not willing, very naturally, to cooperate in building up colleges whose faculties were leading the students away from 'sound doctrine.' Hence the questionnaire, an attempt to gather evidence to uphold the suspicion of the conservatives that the various denominational colleges are not upholding the traditional views and beliefs of the Baptist, and, therefore, should not receive the proposed financial support."

"Ah, that's it,—is it?" said the Recent Graduate. "I begin to comprehend the situation. Not being a Baptist I was entirely in the dark. But does the committee not understand that a large majority of our students are from non-Baptist homes and that their replies would reflect opinions and beliefs gathered from a wide range of church organizations? In my own case, my replies would reveal that I have grown up into as a member of the Lutheran church."

"Evidently the committee has not taken this into consideration," I replied. "But let us go on: I will read the next question:

"19. What is your estimate of the teaching value of the present Sunday school?"

"Of course, some good is received in the Sunday school—doubtless in any Sunday school a considerable amount of good is done; on the whole, however, I have my doubts as to whether some Sunday schools do not produce more harm than good."

"More harm than good? In what way?" I questioned him.

"What I have just said seems, I know, almost unpardonable; yet from my own experience I know it is true. Until I joined White's class, all of my earlier teachers in the Sunday school were men or women who, so far as their religious ideas were concerned, might have lived anywhere from John Calvin to Moody. They were utterly untouched by the dominant conceptions of modern thought. Consequently as a high-school lad I lived in two different worlds, one on Sunday and in quite a different world of ideas during the week in the public school. Before I entered college, my Sunday school instruction had been pushed back into a corner practically out of sight. I had given up the Biblical conception of creation; the Bible no longer seemed to be what my Sunday-school teachers claimed for it; the modern conception of evolution commanded my assent; mankind had known no earlier state of perfection, but had gradually risen from intense savagery to our present civilization. All science and history in the high school combined to detach me from what I had been taught by my Sunday-school teachers."

"Many another man has gone through a similar experience, my boy; I know every step of the pathway myself," I told him. "How did you get reconstructed—if I may use the word?" I asked.

"Well, when I entered college I was wholly indifferent to religion—in my mind religion and what I had been taught in the Sunday school were one and the same thing. As a freshman I found that most of my classmates were quite like myself—wholly indifferent to religion. Of course there were exceptions. For two years I lived in an attitude of growing indifference to everything religious."

"What influence did your studies have upon you during this time?" I asked.

"Most of them no religious influence either one way or the other. But in college as in high school, I found that the evolutionary philosophy of life was taken for granted; that in all science and in all history and literature the underlying conception was one and the same—the world as we know it is a gradual achievement. So I became more and more convinced that religion was a myth."

"May I ask—How did your various professors influence you during your freshman and sophomore years?"

"Well, Professor, since we are talking frankly about the subject, I will tell you just how I felt toward the whole faculty. For the life of me I couldn't understand the situation. Take the class in anthropology, or instance. The professor based everything on the truth of the evolutionary conception of life, and yet he was one of the pillars in the Baptist church. In botany and in geology the professor taught like an evolutionist; but on Sunday he went to church like a Christian. In biology the professor made it very plain that all life was a gradual unfolding; yet on Sunday he taught a class of boys in the Sunday school. And in your class in history, the very first day you gave us the definition that history is the unfolding experience of the race. What is that but evolution in other words? Having been taught in my Sunday school a certain traditional view of life which was so mixed up with religion that I could not separate the two, it seemed impossible for me to be, at the same time, in a friendly attitude toward both evolution and religion. Consequently I couldn't understand the double life of my professors."

"I, too, when I was in college, thought that some of my professors were heretics," I told him. "Why, in my sophomore year, if a committee had asked my opinion of the faculty I fear that had I given it frankly it would have condemned two or three of the members to the stake as rank heretics. But you have not told me what I want very much to know—just how did you recover your interest in religion?"

"In my junior year," replied the Recent Graduate, "I elected English Bible. That course turned the switch and started me in a new direction. For the first time in my life I saw what I should have been taught as a child—that the Bible is a record of human experience and as such presents in historical perspective the spiritual struggles of the human heart in its search for God. Gradually I rebuilt my conception of the Bible; gradually I came to see that religion is a personal relationship with God; and that each age is perfectly free to remake its customs and beliefs. Before my graduation, religion had become a vital factor in my daily life."

"Suppose you had not gone to college?" I asked.

"Most likely I would have gone through life without ever discovering the great fact that modern education and the true religious life are not hostile to each other.

"The Fundamentals"

BY W. W. KEEN

IF THE Des Moines Conference on "Fundamentals" is to assert that among those fundamentals are the doctrines that the earth and man have existed only for six or seven thousand years and that man is a "special creation," then I wish as one Baptist to make an earnest protest. I do not wish to have the Baptist churches stultify themselves in the eyes of all intelligent men, as did the Roman Catholic Church in the days of Galileo, and as Calvin did in the days of Servetus.

Professor Keith, the eminent British scientist, is now delivering a course of lectures at the Royal Institution, (see the British Medical Journal, April 16, 1921, and later issues), in which he says that "writers are now fond of saying that the Darwinian theory has broken down; but biologists know that it has been much better substantiated and in its broad outlines it stands." He then cites the many additions to knowledge in the sixty odd years since the "Origin of the Species", and the "Descent of Man." As he says, all embryology—a science which hardly existed in Darwin's day—supports Darwin. Fossil human skulls have been discovered with apelike features utterly unknown today. Tools and weapons, fashioned by man, buried one and a half million of years ago under rocks, have been unearthed. The chief outlines of the brain in animals, as he says, resemble those in man's brain, as I can personally testify from my long study of the brain and my many operation on the human brain. The centers for motion of the arms, legs, etc., in the dog's brain, as I know by scores of operations on man, are precisely the same as in man.

Again; the wonderful influence of the so-called "endocrine glands" and their "hormones" as investigated in animals, have been found to be exactly similar in man and again support Darwin.

The endocrine system consists of glands having no duct or tube as an outlet for their secretion, as have the kidneys, the glands secreting the saliva, etc. They pour their "internal secretion" directly into the blood stream. Among these are the thyroid gland (whose enlargement is a goiter), the pituitary gland at the base of the brain, etc. The nature of these glands and of their "hormones" has only been very recently discovered by physiological experiments on animals and observation has confirmed their existence in man. The hormones are secreted by the endocrine glands and set in action other organs even at distant points all over the body. They control the growth and development of the body.

The most remarkable instance of this on record was reported by my warm friend, the late Dr. G. A. Gibson, of Edinburgh, whose word I would guarantee. A lad of eighteen, who was one inch less than five feet in height, in six months grew seven inches under the stimulus of the hormone of the thyroid gland prescribed for him by Dr. Gibson. Better still, his brain developed equally with his body.

Without animal experimentation, we should be to-day wholly in ignorance of these powerful influences in the bodies of animals and man.

The description of the creation as embodied in Genesis, is a sublime allegory. The Bible was not intended to be a text book of exact science. We do not possess a single original manuscript of a single book of the Bible. All are copies made by fallible human hands.

I yield to none in my homage to this sacred book as a guide in upright living and in its wonderful story of the life of my Lord and Master, Jesus Christ, whom I adore as the Author and Finisher of my faith, and who gave his life for my redemption. But I refuse to accept the dictum of even an archbishop—a fallible man who lived 350 years ago—when that dictum is contradicted by all that we have discovered in the last three and a half centuries about the physical universe and about man and animals and their close inter-relations, anatomically, physiologically and in every other relation in life.

To refuse to accept Archbishop Ussher's cosmogony is not to impugn the Bible but does and ought to impugn the archbishop's unavoidable want of knowledge of that which has been discovered since his day. Were he alive today, I feel sure that he would be a doughty upholder of modern science.

All life is a stupendous whole developing by addition and modification during ages upon ages. Man stands at the head but is linked with his predecessors by the clearest demonstrable evidences on every side.

To declare that he is a "special creation" contradicts all the great body of facts in every department of modern knowledge.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

George Henry Whittemore

Professor Whittemore died after a brief illness, at his old home in Cambridge, May 6, 1921, in his eighty-second year. He was graduated at Harvard in the class of '60. After teaching in the high school of Jamaica Plain five years, he entered Newton Seminary and was graduated in 1868. Among his classmates were Prof. E. P. Gould long time professor at Newton, George W. Gile sometime principal of Colby Academy, Dr. S. B. Partridge, missionary at Bangkok, Siam, and Dr. C. H. Spalding. Professors Whittemore and E. P. Gould were ordained together in the Old Cambridge Church, September 6, 1868. Whittemore then served eight years as acting professor of the Hebrew Language and Literature in the Rochester Theological Seminary. Since that connection he has given his time to Gospel studies, scholarly pursuits, occasional ministerial service, and authorship. He edited the "Memorials of Horatio Balch Hackett," the famous New Testament scholar, in 1879. He was long secretary of the Harvard Biblical Club, and taught an adult Bible class in the Old Cambridge Baptist Bible school.

Emphatically was Professor Whittemore "A gentleman and a scholar." Fill up the terms to the utmost and you have a good description of the man. In quiet seclusion, he revelled in the chosen studies of his life, and in teaching and conversation he always modestly shared the gathered riches of the years. He had never married, but kept up the enjoyment of his old friendships, and to the last was keen in his intellectual interests, and in the delight of close contact with his alma mater. It was a pleasure to meet him. His urbanity was perfect; he was a gentleman of the old school, with kindest refinement of manner and expression. His present and former pastors, Drs. Kenneth C. Mac Arthur and Woodman Bradbury officiated at the largely attended funeral service, held in the old homestead in Harvard Street, Cambridge.

A Rare Ordination

It was that of Deacon Harvey E. Whitcomb of the First Church, Somerville. Think of a downright good man, quite sixty years old, who with the heartiest god-speed of his church and his brethren without, leaving a lucrative occupation to give the remaining years of his strength to the Christian ministry! He is equipped by training both as a doctor and an architect, and best of all by years of Christian experience and teaching. The council was refreshed by his unconventional Biblical intelligence, his sincerity, and his ripe spiritual preparation to lead a Christian church. The public service of ordination was hearty and impressive. Drs. C. H. Watson, F. F. Peterson, W. A. Kinzie and Pastor Chellis V. Smith officiated. The candidate continues a pastorate already begun, at Milton Mills, N. H., one of the strong rural churches in the Granite State.

"The Open Forum"

The writer was one among many who deeply regretted the discontinuance of the Open Forum in THE BAPTIST. It did such good service at that time of the "Fundamental" debate. Certainly it helped to clear the air by encouraging calm and sane as well as absurd expression, and by correcting the doctrinal perspective, which in spots plainly was "out." Also it told that to be a Baptist was to be a man without any sort of muzzle, and one who refused to be either an ostrich or an echo. What is a Baptist anyway but a sort of open forum? Curiously enough those who are widest open often are the ones to favor clamping the lid on others. Thus in some quarters there never will be hesitancy in speaking both in meeting and out of it. In other localities it is just as certain that silence will reign; sometimes from determination not to be dogmatic; at other times from indifference to what is regarded as the mere claque of literalism and religious stagnancy. That silence however is costly. Either it is misunderstood or misinterpreted. Thousands take it as a confession of unsoundness in the faith; and busy purveyors of "charges" against their brethren crow over the fact that their charges get no answer. The assumption is that they cannot be answered. Thus one side continues blatant and active—the other silent and passive, meanwhile the hearts of the people may be stolen away, and divisive fanaticism thrive and put us in danger. It would be noble and timely service if some of our real leaders who hold our confidence would convince us that they have something to say that Baptists ought to hear and for which many are listening. Dr. T. L. Anderson also regrets the lack of careful and thorough debate which would have prepared for calm and Christian action at Des Moines. The wrong men have uttered speech; the right men might have shown knowledge.

Something New at Newton

A new departure projected at the Newton Seminary proves that the old school is up to date. It is not exactly co-educational. It is a provision for Christian young women who after winning college degrees, feel called to further qualify for the special work of religious education in churches and Sunday schools. The course is open to a limited number of graduates with degrees; and has been prepared with careful thoroughness for those who know how to study.

A fine old mansion has been purchased close to the institution grounds, and refitted for the housing of the young ladies during their course. Fortunately for the experiment, Dr. E. F. Merriam and his daughter Miss Ida F. Merriam have consented to take charge of the home. Thus the domestic end of the enterprise begins with an oversight that is all that could be desired. Dr. Merriam is a graduate of Newton, a member of the board of trustees, also of its special committee of "buildings and grounds." He and Pres. Horr were classmates, also yoke-fellows in editorship of the old Watchman. Miss Merriam is a graduate of Wellesley, and has been devotedly enlisted in religious education. This seems like an ideal outfit at the starting of Newton's Young Ladies School of Religion.

Dr. Agar With the Ministers

Our national secretary of efficiency gave us an hour on Monday that bristled with practicality. He provoked an after quiz that was unusually brisk and pointed. Willingness, unity of effort, expectation, and achievement, were the paths to efficiency made clear. Of course the ministers were thinking hard of that often obstinately pre-occupied, though supposedly regenerated human nature in themselves and in the brethren with which they must work. But Dr. Agar earnestly claimed that a great deal could be done with it, and gave the proofs.

Not Very Refreshing

Both in print and out of it there is a passion nowadays to uncover the unbelief of the soul, and lay bare the misery of the spirit. It is akin to the impulse of the "fashionable" to flaunt the nakedness of their bodies. Constantly is evident in popular magazines and journals the buzzard habit of disgorging disgust of life, or deadly despair. The lamps of the writers have gone out, and they will have none of our oil. To a long-suffering public the thing is in bad taste and gets very stale. Doubt may be a personal affair, but so is faith. Philosophy may be somber, science dumb; and intellect may get feverish because forbidden to pick the locks of the future. But whence this license to throw confusion and difficulty in everybody's face? If, as Lowell says, "the good breeding of sorrow consists in never mentioning it;" and if soldiers choke back their death agony to ask how the battle is going, what is our warrant for giving publicity to a kind of guilty misery? As yet the most vociferous doubters are neither sorrowing nor dying. Often it is out of the limbo of egoism and defeat that the orgy of doubt is released.

Pagan reserve is better; or nature's sublime silence. Better the courage to be unhappy alone. If we have no sanctities, let us have some proprieties. Faith like statesmanship is a constructive faculty. The universe is big enough for it, but never too big. Joy and hope are contagious, as well as depression and the "ache of life." Humanity's true song is a Faith Song:—

"All I could never be;
All that is lost in me
Is yet in His Hand,
Who the Whole hath planned."

Annual Meeting of the Baptist Executive Council of Chicago

The year which closed May 1 has been one of the most outstanding years in the history of Chicago Baptists as far as their local missionary enterprises are concerned. The annual meeting of the council was held May 13 in the Immanuel Baptist church. The reports of Superintendent Otto and Director of Religious Education Gage and the various standing committees all gave indication that the year had been one of great activity and progress. The evening was divided into three parts; the board of directors met at 5:30; after dinner at 6:30 the members of the council convened for business, after which a general meeting was held in the auditorium. The general meeting was introduced with a stereopticon lecture on Vacation Bible Schools by Director Gage. Eight of our missionary pastors were called upon by the superintendent, each to state the most significant fact in connection with the work of his church during the past year. The reports were bright, snappy, and inspiring. Then followed the report of Superintendent Otto, succeeded by a series of stereopticon pictures setting forth some of the work of the past year in connection with the various churches and missionary enterprises stimulated by the cooperation of the council.

Among the views presented was one of the Pilgrim Negro church, the purchase of which had been negotiated by the council at a cost of $75,000.00; this church had grown from a membership of approximately 1,500 to something over 3,000. Another of the Negro churches was the Berean, which had completed a handsome new structure during the year and which now has a membership of over 1,000. One of the newest Negro congregations, the Mount Vernon church, had purchased a Lutheran church building and parochial schoolhouse during the year but had asked no help toward its purchase from the council, shouldering the entire burden itself, but had asked only the advice of the superintendent in regard to the work of its organization.

Work among the foreign-speaking people also showed decided growth. The mission formerly known as the Berwyn Bohemian mission has been organized into a church, and the Marigold Bohemian mission has been brought to the eve of organization. Missionary work was begun among the Rumanians, who have already increased in membership from twelve to nineteen, and among the Lithuanians, the latter having now the exclusive use of Raymond chapel, where their many-sided work is progressing.

Three English-speaking churches have secured new buildings during the past year. The Elmwood Park church, but four years old, has moved into its new structure, the total cost of the erection of which approximated $18,000. The Wilmette church is just completing its new building, a beautiful stone edifice erected at an outlay of approximately $125,000. The North Shore church has just completed one of the finest Baptist meeting-houses in the city at an expenditure of about $150,000.

Two new interests in the city have been started for English speaking people: Marquette Manor where, under the self-sacrificing and devoted ministry of Professor Detweller of Denison University, a small Sunday school was transformed into a large one, a church organization formed with a membership of about twenty-seven, lots were purchased at a cost of about $3,000, and a considerable payment made upon them; and North Oak Park where lots have been secured at a price of $3,500 and a beautiful portable chapel, which has been placed upon the ground, is about ready for occupancy.

The superintendent displayed pictures of unoccupied areas where large numbers of homes and two-apartment buildings have been erected and where no church privileges are as yet being offered, stating as he presented these pictures that these were but a few of the numerous areas which had not as yet been preempted by any Christian denomination and that the time was ripe for a great and aggressive forward movement of Chicago Baptists.

Withal the meeting was one of the most inspiring ever held by Chicago Baptists being full of stimulus and inspiration for a great forward movement.

The report of the treasurer showed that all bills had been paid and that a substantial amount had been added to the church edifice fund, and that, in spite of greatly increased expenditures, there remained a slight balance in the treasury.—Charles L. Major, Secretary.

Church News by States

Pacific Coast

EASTERN WASHINGTON

REV. JOHN A. SHAW, pastor First of Kennewick, has welcomed into the church seventy-eight members in the past year. Fifty-five of whom he has baptized. The Bible school is in a thriving condition, and congregations are the largest in the history of this church.

OREGON

CORVALLIS FIRST reports show that one of the greatest years in the history of the church had been brought to a very successful close. Against 106 new members received during the year thirty-seven were dismissed, leaving the present membership 317. A total of $12,224.25 was spent for all purposes. Among the many things accomplished has been the purchase of a fine parsonage, the ordering of an $8500 Kilgen pipe organ, Bible school equipment, basement improvement, equipping of a church office and study and the purchase of a multigraph on which the church prints its weekly bulletin. The total value of the church property has now reached $50,000 and about 80 percent to date has been paid in on the first year's quota of the New World Movement fund pledged a year ago when this church was the first in the State of Oregon to go over the top. A special personal workers' evangelistic campaign was conducted under the leadership of the pastor ending on Easter Sunday at which time seventeen were baptized making a total of thirty-six baptisms for the year. Out of this year's senior class at O. A. C. one of the members, Mr. William C. Whitaker, and his wife, will leave for Burma as missionaries this fall. Pastor W. A. Waldo would be glad to receive communications from parents who have or expect to have children attending the Oregon Agricultural College.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

FIRST, LOS ANGELES, James A. Francis, pastor, has just purchased a lot sixty feet in width adjoining its church property. This gives it a property 190 feet wide by 165 feet deep in the business district of Los Angeles just half a block from the main business street of the city. In the six years of Dr. Francis' pastorate membership has increased from about 500 to 1500. Three years ago its members thought they were very bold in proposing a missionary budget of $4,625, but during the past year they have actually raised $48,026.99 for benevolences, with a total amount contributed for all purposes of $80,459.18. During this same length of time the enrollment of the Sunday-school has increased from 300 to $50, with an actual average attendance for the last six months of 515.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Northern California Convention

The Northern California convention met for its sixty-ninth annual session with the Hamilton Square church, San Francisco, May 10, 11. Up to and including last fall the meeting has been held in the fall but the recently adopted constitution has changed the year of the convention to that of the Northern Baptist Convention. It had been planned to have this a brief session for the election of officers and transaction of necessary business and no appeal had been made for attendance as such an enthusiastic and well attended meeting was held at Visalia last November. So great, however, is the interest of California Baptists in the work of their convention that there was a total registration of 406 delegates and visitors.

Tuesday morning and afternoon the women of the state met for an interesting program at the First church. Mrs. L. J. Bishop of New York and Dr. C. R. Shepherd, director of work for Orientals were the chief speakers. At the same time the state ministers association met at the Hamilton Square church presided over by Pres. E. R. Bennett. The morning session was utilized for informal reports from pastors, evangelists and field workers participating in the recent state-wide campaign of evangelism. Sixty-seven meetings were held from January 1, to March 31, resulting in 571 baptisms, 158 added by experience and 121 by letter. A new tide of power has been felt in the churches participating which has not yet spent its force and many other accessions, coming since the campaign closed, might be credited to it. Only three or four professional evangelists were used in the campaign but pastors were assigned to help other pastors, in most cases outside the bounds of their own association. In the afternoon session Rev. C. H. Bancroft, who came to the state January, as director of rural work, through the co-operation of Dr. Harlan's department of the Home Mission Society, was given an opportunity to speak of the special needs and the opportunity of the rural fields. Though the last census shows that the cities have slightly more than half the population there is no place in the United States where the rural population is increasing as rapidly as in California, because of the profitable fruit industry and the subdivision of the rich land into small tracts for intensive cultivation. Half the churches of the state are rural and many more have a rural problem and responsibility. Dr. F. W. Padelford, executive secretary of the board of education gave a masterly address upon Christian education and then for more than an hour answered questions as to the educational institutions receiving support through the New World Movement.

The convention proper began its sessions Tuesday evening with Pres. Joel H. Smith in the chair. Dr. Padelford gave another great message taking as his text Ps. 145: 13, "Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom." He declared that the New World Movement is a declaration of faith, that faith is the key note of both the Old and New Testament, spiritual forces alone are unconquerable and a study of history is the surest antidote for pessimism. Dr. John Snape of Oakland, preached the annual sermon making a stirring appeal for the acknowledgment of the authority of Jesus and defined religion as the "life of God in the human soul overflowing in every act and relationship."

The Wednesday morning session was an open meeting of the board of directors attended by all delegates. Secretary Brinstad gave an interesting report indicating work undertaken and contemplated in evangelism, missions to the Indians, the Chinese and the Mexicans and for the rural fields. He reported on the New World Movement, a total of $144,097.57 collected, of which $77,925.79 was sent to the General Board of Promotion and $55,393.67 retained for work in the state. Treasurer J. O. Ernsberger reported disbursements for the six months, since the last meeting of the Convention, of $123,076.79, all bills paid and a comfortable balance in the treasury. He gave the record of per capita giving of California Baptists for missions from 1890, when it was one dollar, to 1920, when it was $8.20, with indication that it will be $14.75 in the present year. More than a score of pastors arose signifying that their churches were giving as much or more for the New World Movement than for their local work. Nearly as many pastors had their salaries raised since the New World Movement established a new standard of giving.

The election resulted in the choice of Rev. John Snape, of Oakland, for president, A. E. Heron of Sacramento for vice-president and Rev. C. E. Tingley, of San Francisco for recording secretary. Resolutions were adopted calling for higher educational standards in the ministry and instructing the state office to become a clearing house for the non-resident lists of the churches. The session closed with an inspiring missionary address by Prof. A. Mangano.

At six o'clock a Sunday school workers banquet, a large company of Sunday-school workers sat down to a banquet presided over by Director M. L. Thomas. A number of brief, practical after dinner speeches were made ending by a plea by Dr. R. M. West of the life work department of the General Board of Promotion, for sympathetic treatment of our older boys and girls at the most trying period in their development.

The evening session was given over to the young people who with great enthusiasm manifesting itself in special songs and other ways listened to reports and made plans for the approaching summer assembly at Asilomar. The program came to a fitting close in a mighty appeal by Dr. West for the consecration of life to the unfinished task.

The new board unanimously re-elected Secretary Brinstad.—C. H. Baneroff.

Rocky Mountain States

MONTANA

FIVE YEARS AGO when Rev. Chas. A. Cook became pastor of the First church, Butte, there was a debt of $24,147 on the church property and foreclosure proceedings were threatened. This debt, with added interest bringing it to about $25,000, has just been paid after a systematic and persistent campaign through one of the worst economic periods industrially in the city's history. The event was celebrated by the church with a banquet and general rejoicing. In this five-year period the missionary offerings increased from $215, in the year previous, to $2148.51 in the fiscal year just closed. In this time also 159 members have been received, ninety by baptism. After forty-two years since his ordination Dr. Chas. A. and Mrs. Cook will retire from the active pastorate and settle in Seattle where their children live. Mr. Cook will serve churches as pastor supply as opportunities may occur. The West Side church, Seattle, has engaged him for such service beginning the first Sunday in June.

WYOMING

CHUGWATER—Pastor Milstead is absent on account of sickness of wife's father. Splendid audiences morning and evening. Promise supplementary canvass for N. W. M.

GOSHEN—Eight baptized and a committee appointed to make thorough canvass of the church and vicinity.

COLPORTER, N. C. COGGIN, at Golden Prairie and Durham. Conditions are more hopeful in this large field.

CHEYENNE, SECOND, is doing good work and has an excellent Sunday-school.

LARAMIE is a trying field, but the pastor has some splendid helpers and is doing real foundation work.

MRS. FRANK EWEN, for a number of years leader in the church work of Shell and superintendent of the Sunday-school, died Wednesday, April 27.

TORRINGTON needs a man on the ground—a territory 60 by 100 miles, new towns springing up, great reclamation projects. Here is a place for a really "big" man.

COLORADO

CITY PARK, DENVER, with a membership of less than 300, began the year auspiciously by greatly exceeding its apportionment to the New World Movement and raising almost $60,000. One-fourth of this amount, falling due this last year, was considerably overpaid. The benevolent offerings (including $1,100 for European relief and a generous sum for the Chinese famine fund and other gifts) reached a total of $17,202, which was two and a half times more, for extending Christ's kingdom elsewhere, than was used for their own church expenses. Seventy-five have confessed Christ. Pastor Schoemaker was recently assisted in a three-weeks' series of evangelistic meetings by Rev. Frank E. Eden of Pueblo.

LAKE AVENUE CHURCH, Pueblo, has announced the adoption of articles of faith in harmony with those of the Fundamental movement and declaring ineligible to the pastorate or to any other office or teaching position any person "who is not sound in the faith so declared."

IDAHO

SAND POINT—During the last three months congregations have greatly increased, and a number of new members were received into the church. Junior and senior choirs, under the management of Herman Frank, are giving the services new zest. The Sunday-school is now averaging over 100 in attendance, having doubled itself in six months. On Decision Day twenty confessed a decision for Christ, seven of whom were received for baptism. Rev. N. Wakeham is pastor.

Mississippi Valley

KANSAS

REV. D. W. DURHAM has resigned at Reading and has moved from the field. Rev. O. M. Showalter of the state convention office has been supplying for them for a few Sundays.

REV. GEO. L. BURROUGHS, who is graduating from the Kansas City Seminary this month, has resigned at Valley Falls and has accepted a call from the church at Grand Junction, Colo. He begins his work there last of May.

REV. G. W. E. MERRIFIELD is closing his work at Fredonia. He has not announced his plans for the future. The Fredonia church is arranging to have Rev. W. H. Leyburn, one of the state field workers to supply for the church for a time.

REV. WALTER E. TANNER, associational evangelist of the Southeast association married recently Rev. Helen Hill, pastor of the Columbus church. They will make their home at Columbus. Miss Hill is the sister of Edith Hill-Booker, who was so prominent for many years in religious and temperance work in the central West.

REV. C. S. OSBORN of Churdan, Iowa, assisted the state director of religious education in three brief training schools in the state recently, being held at Hiawatha, Hutchinson and Wichita. Four churches were represented at Hiawatha, and church vacations schools will be put on at Horton, Morrill, Holton and possibly Hiawatha. Nine or ten churches were represented in the Wichita school, including Wichita, First, and El Dorado, and seven or eight churches of other denominations. Hutchinson will put on a church vacation school in East Side Chapel. First, Wichita and El Dorado will have schools, and there will be 14 or 15 other schools in Wichita. It now looks as if we would have more than fifteen schools in our Baptist churches in the state during this summer, more than twice as many as last year.

Colored Baptists of Topeka held a training institute for their Sunday school and young people's forces during the week May 8 to 15. Dr. S. N. Vass of Nashville, Tenn., one of the outstanding leaders was the principal speaker. The director of religious education for Kansas gave some assistance in young People's work.

PASTOR LESTER F. SAGE of Stratford, Okla., has been assisting Pastor Clark of Hewins in evangelistic meetings recently, with good success.

EVANGELIST P. C. NELSON is conducting an evangelistic and healing mission with the Swedish Church in Topeka. He is drawing great crowds of people. A number of people are being saved, and many are reported as having been healed of various afflictions. His services are demanding wide attention in the city.

REV. J. C. STANDLEE of Carlton had the assistance recently of Mr. and Mrs. Imrie in special meetings, with fine results in conversions and the church greatly revived.

MEETINGS conducted by Evangelist Armstrong and wife with Mt. Union in Pottawatomie County were fruitful in results. There were some thirty conversions. The church was strengthened by sixteen baptisms and four joining by relation.

REV. J. H. PENNOCK has resigned at Norwich and accepted the pastorate of the church at Las Animas, Colo.

REV. J. E. DENHAM of Wakita, Okla., has been called to the pastorate of the Medicine Lodge. He has held several pastorates in the state heretofore and is well known in that part of the state.

PASTOR R. W. MCQUERRY of Argonia has been leading his people in remodeling their church building, greatly increasing the capacity for Sunday-school work.

REV. F. E. CAREY, associational evangelist of the Chicaskia association held a meeting recently with the Pleasant Hill church, resulting in twelve addition. He had the assistance of Pastor Goodwin of Harper in the music and personal work.

PROF. D. B. DOWNER was recently bereaved by the loss of his wife. She had been a great sufferer for several months.

REV. E. H. WILLIAMSON, pastor of the Olivet church in South Rosedale was ordained recently to the gospel ministry. He is a student at the Kansas City Seminary, and is considered a fine student and preacher.

DR. J. J. ROSS, pastor of the Second church, Chicago, visited the Kansas City Seminary recently and spoke before the student body. He spoke on his experiences with Pastor Russel. Dr. Ross is to be with us at our assembly at Ottawa in July and will give a special series of messages.

MINNESOTA

REV. CHAS. BRAZDA, recently pastor of the Slovak church in Minneapolis, is now in charge of mission work in New Prague and Montgomery, and is finding encouragement there. Arrangements have been made at the latter place for the use of the Luthern church building on Sunday afternoons and this will greatly help in getting the people together. His auto is in constant use as he is going all over the country in the vicinity of New Prague and Montgomery.

REV. J. VANEK, formerly in charge of the Bohemian mission in New Prague, has been visiting Bohemian settlements in various sections of Minnesota and is finding considerable encouragement.

REV. R. N. CRAWFORD of Rangoon, Burma, has made two visits to Minnesota which have been very helpful and his addresses have been much enjoyed by those that have heard him. He spoke in several of the Twin City churches and at the Twin City Association. He has recently gone to the Lake Superior Association, First Church Duluth, Eveleth, Brainerd, Bemidji, Park Rapids, Detroit, Parkers Prairie, Spruce Hill Swedish, Long Prairie, Alexandria Swedish, Battle Lake, Breckenridge, and Willmar Swedish. He expects to be here during the summer, making his headquarters on the assembly grounds at Mound.

SOME OF THE MORE RECENT CHANGES in Minnesota are: Rev. W. D. Fuller from Akeley and White Oak to Frazee; Rev. A. E. Belstrom is to leave the Swedish church in St. Cloud and go to Edgewater church, Chicago; Rev. J. D. Wylie has closed his work at Lake City; Rev. V. Anderson has gone from Eveleth to Sandy Lake; Rev. J. C. Johnson has closed his work at Fergus Falls and goes to Sioux City, Iowa; Rev. P. O. Ekstrom and wife, of the Swedish church at Stanchfield, have gone for the summer to Sweden.

REV. ANTON HOK, of the Czecho-Slovak church in New York, will be in Minnesota from June 26 to July 24. Mr. Hok is a splendid speaker in English and has a fine story to tell. He can be secured by churches for evening addresses for simply a basket collection. Address Rev. E. R. Pope concerning this matter.

SOME RECENT BAPTISMS ARE: Windom, 10; Central church, Duluth, 34; Virginia, 5; Elim Swedish, Minneapolis, 6; Fergus Falls, 5.

THE CHURCHES AT MILLE LACS LAKE AND ISLE have jointly purchased a Ford touring car for the use of the pastor, Rev. O. Milton Lind. This is an absolute necessity if the work is to be done in the proper way. Several other churches in Minnesota ought to do likewise.

THE FINANCIAL OUTCOME of the New World Movement in Minnesota for the year was very satisfactory so far as receipts on pledges are concerned. Not all the pledges that we desire have been secured, but there has been pledged altogether $813,027.48. One-fourth of this amount would be $203,256.87. As a matter of fact there was paid in $216,745.89, which means that Minnesota has gone over the top in the matter of payments. These sums do not include any amounts that were credited to the state for the preceding year.

WE GLADLY WELCOME to Minneapolis and Minnesota Miss Evalyn Camp. She has spoken several times already in various churches, bringing an interesting and helpful message as of yore.

TWO ASSOCIATIONS have been held in Minnesota, the Twin City, meeting with the Calvary Church of Minneapolis; and the Lake Superior, meeting with the Central Church of Duluth. While the attendance at neither was very large, nevertheless there seems to have been improvement over some years. Interesting missionary addresses were given and the reports on the whole were encouraging. There is a good deal of work that ought to be done, but most of the churches are doing their best to meet the difficult problems with which they have to contend.

The reports of these two associations show a larger number of baptisms than the preceding year.

PILLSBURY ACADEMY at Owatona will hold its annual commencement exercises June 3-8.

BETHEL INSTITUTE at St. Paul announces a commencement program covering a series of related events from May 12 to June 10. The Academy commencement proper occurs June 7 and the seminary commencement June 10.

TRINITY CHURCH of Minneapolis, during the year just ended, gave nearly $30,000 to the New World Movement and counting other benevolences it amounted to over $30,000. This is in addition to a current expense budget of about $14,000. The church also shows a growth in membership, and new activity in all lines, especially among the different groups of young people.

OHIO

Cleveland Association

Cleveland Baptists are setting before them some great objectives that are challenging them to their very best. Recently the Euclid Avenue congregation went over the top in the big drive for half a million dollars to make possible the erection of a great downtown institutional church. The spirit in which this great congregation, under the inspiring leadership of Dr. Bustard, are facing this great obligation augurs well for its success.

The Lakewood Church, rejoicing in the fact that its pastor, Rev. I. N. DePuy, has decided to remain, although he was called to a position which many would covet. Recently this congregation has secured pledges for thirty thousand dollars for a new building. This, together with what assistance the Cleveland Association will be able to give, will make it possible to precede with the erection of the church almost immediately. It is the only Baptist church in this residential suburb, with a population of about 45,000. The present organization is doing splendidly, and with the aid of a new church, will in a very short time be numbered among the leading churches of the denomination.

The Madison Avenue Church, working in a difficult section, owing to the cosmopolitan character of the population, is also contemplating an advance. The present building will be remodeled during this season, at a cost of some $12,000 to meet the growing needs of the Sunday-school and young people's departments.

The First Church sent to the Promotion Board $56,862.07. This is seven times its former record. This church is facing the always difficult task of meeting changing conditions. It is now in the near down-town district, and the pastor, Dr. David Bovington, is ably leading the people into the demands of the new day.

The youngest of our churches on the Heights is not yet two years old, but at the annual meeting held a week or so ago, reported a Sunday-school with an average attendance of 200, membership of ninety, and contributions of over $11,000 for the year.

The meetings of the Cleveland Association held at the old historic First Church, on the 10th and 11th, were well attended, and were pervaded with a spirit of optimism and enthusiasm. The reports from the churches for the last year indicate that the city churches have had twice the number of baptisms reported in the preceding year.

In addition to increases for home expenses, as the result of the New World Movement, contributions to benevolences were three times those of the previous year.

There is a growing spirit of cooperation between the churches. We were pleased to have with us for the special addresses of the Association, Dr. Emory Hunt of Bucknell University, Rev. Bernard Clausen, the brilliant young pastor of the First Church of Syracuse, N. Y., and Dr. C. A. Brooks, of the Home Mission Board.

A CHANGE in the time of holding the Wooster Association is announced. It will be held with the Wooster church, June 7 and 8.

MICHIGAN

SUMMIT PARK church and community house, Battle Creek, was opened for service and worship on Sunday, May 15, the dedicatory address being delivered by Rev. Stewart B. Crandell of the First church of that city. A Sunday-school of nearly 100 members was organized, and meetings were continued during the week. Dr. E. W. Powell of Kalamazoo gave a rousing address for community night, Tuesday, and the following days of the week were devoted to the interests of the women, the girls and the boys. Speakers specially adapted to meet these lines of work were present to assist in forming organizations.

THE PROGRAM for the Michigan summer assembly to be held in Kalamazoo, July 21 to 29, is now complete and promises to be specially helpful, not only to young people but to Baptists generally. The pastors' summer school will be merged with this assembly, and special courses have been provided for the pastors. Arrangements have been made whereby board can be secured at a very low rate; and those who contemplate attending are urged to write immediately to Miss Ruth Vercoe, Bowen Hall, Kalamazoo, Mich., enclosing registration fee of $1.00, for full information.

MISS ALICE BRIMSON, Christian Americanization executive secretary spent two weeks in Michigan, organizing community service committees. Assisted by Miss Troeck, considerable calling was done in Lansing, Jackson, Flint and Port Huron; city chairmen were appointed in each of these cities, and definite, aggressive service will at once be entered upon, whereby the neighbor of the foreign tongue will be brought to feel that Christianity brings the world together in fellowship.

BETHANY, PONTIAC, called a council on May 4 for the purpose of ordaining to the gospel ministry Mr. Forrest W. Deane. Rev. H. Grimwood of Northville was chosen moderator and Rev. F. A. Burnett of Holley, clerk. The examination of the candidate as to his conversion, call to the ministry and views of Christian doctrine proved very satisfactory, and the ordination services were carried out in the evening. Sermon was preached by pastor T. W. Marsh. The church presented Mr. Deane with a Bible as a token of love and esteem. Mr. Deane is pastor at North Branch and Clifford churches.

THE TENTH ANNUAL SUNDAY SCHOOL and B. Y. P. U. convention which was held in Bay City March 31 and April 1 was by far the greatest in attendance, interest and enthusiasm of any yet held. Following Dr. West's stirring appeal for recruits in the army of Jesus Christ, 100 young people signed the pledges for life work. Besides Dr. West, of New York, Dr. A. T. Robertson of Louisville, Mr. Wilson Holmes of Ohio, Rev. Francis M. Stiffer of Illinois, Dr. T. J. Villers, Rev. Arthur V. Allen and Miss Alma Kurtz of Detroit, General Director Hudson and Directors Lawrence and Berry of Lansing contributed to the strong program.

Notes in a Bundle

The reports which come in from the churches are most inspiring; the evangelistic spirit has been pre-eminent throughout the state during the past months. Pastor E. Charles Caro, states that following the fine address of General Director Hudson on Mother's Day, one mother took a decided stand for Christ. Two fine young men have also recently come out on the Lord's side.—At Romeo, pastor F. Dewey Ehle has returned from Florida to find his people aggressive along all lines of Christian activity.—A devoted woman over seventy walks two miles to church services at Laingsburg.—The church building at Dewitt has been remodeled and is to be rededicated the second Sunday in June.—The largest audience in years was present on a very recent Sunday morning to greet pastor C. S. Burns at Ypsilanti. This church is doing things in that little city, and souls are being led very frequently into the baptismal waters.—Rev. H. A. Buell and his splendid wife were recently given a surprise in the form of a social evening, when they received a substantial gift. Their work is yielding good returns for their Master.—One of the best items comes from the First Church Muskegon of which John R. Estes is pastor: "The church voted to send the pastor to the Northern Baptist Convention in Des Moines, and also voted him a vacation in August." Their receipts the past year have been more than double any previous years, and forty-nine have been received into church membership.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

REV. C. C. KOCH, pastor of the Free Baptist church, Springvale, has been holding special meetings at Oakwood with good success. His sister, Miss Margaret Koch, is pastor of the church there, and the good work began by her was brought to a fine fruition by an exchange of service between brother and sister. At the Springvale church several have been received for baptism. Rev. Leon Koch, of St. Paul, is to assist his brother in special services at Shapleigh Corner.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the North York United Association was held at the Blaisdell Memorial Church, Waterboro, May 11. The day was full of good things and the fellowship was delightful. The closing service, in charge of Evangelist Harry Taylor and his daughter Ruth, was one of great power. A number of young people made decisions to live the Christian life.

SANFORD, Fred B. Hardy, pastor, reports a year of unusual prosperity. In addition to the great increase in giving to benevolent objects, caused by the impetus of the New World movement, the current expense fund was increased in a big way. The life and work of the church are in a wholesome condition. The prayer-meetings are inspiring. Sunday services are well attended and are uplifting in spirit. May 15, Pastor-Evangelist Evans, of the state board, gave a very interesting message in the morning and in the evening Miss Ruth Taylor spoke to a company which filled the auditorium.

PASTOR-EVANGELIST S. A. EVANS is holding a series of special meetings at Emery Mills and is bringing a blessing to this little community. Emery Mills is an outstation of the First Baptist Church in Springvale. Meetings are held each Sabbath, but no special meetings have been carried on there before for over twenty years.

PASTOR-EVANGELIST BENJ. BEATLY recently closed a campaign of special meetings in Springvale. The Free Baptist and First Baptist churches united for the meetings. Brother Beatly was secured after Dr. Rees found it necessary to leave Springvale for a campaign in Keene, N. H. About fifty decisions were reported.

MASSACHUSETTS

DR. R. S. MACARTHUR begins at Brookline June 5 and continues through the month, then takes up his notable summer service at Tremont Temple.

FIRST CHURCH, BOSTON, repeats its happy arrangement of last summer. Dr. Herbert S. Johnson preaches at the Commonwealth Ave. Meeting House in the mornings, and at Warren Ave. in the evenings. Special music, with the recollection of the success of last year, promise large congregations.

ON TWO SUNDAYS of the Union Summer Services at Brookline, Dr. C. H. Rust of Scranton, Pa., will be the preacher.

DR. ROBERT W. VAN KIRK is visiting old friends hereabouts. He is in the pink of preaching condition, and has a queer way of growing younger.

ESSEX STREET UNION CHURCH is spending $12,000 for a necessary and desirable enlargement of its plant, which will afford facilities for social and Sunday school work. And they have the money to pay for it all.

NEW YORK

THE FIRST CHURCH OF ROME is continuing its progressive march under new leadership, Rev. Ivan Murray Rose of Malone, N. Y., having taken up the pastorate May 1. In the morning a service of installation was held at which Rev. J. W. A. Stewart of Rochester made the chief address, his call being to a recognition of the reality of God. In the afternoon there was a combined communion and baptismal service when the new pastor led into the waters of baptism five fine young people. In the evening the vigorous young people's society merged its service into the regular worship and the pastor preached his first sermon upon the subject: "Incomparable Friendships."

ROCHESTER, LAKE AVENUE, raised last year for all purposes $107,155.18. It supports five missionaries: Rev. S. D. Bawden, Kavali, India; Rev. P. A. McDiamid, Redlands, Cal.; Rev. E. R. Brown, Los Angeles, Cal., Missionary to the Mexicans; Miss Lillie R. Corwin, Stewart, Nevada; Ishihara San, Tokio, Japan.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

SALTSBURG Church has voted $100 extra to the pastor, Rev. W. P. Wheeler, to defray the expenses of his vacation.

THE FIRST ANNUAL SACRED CONCERT by the choir of the Hungarian Baptist Church of Homestead, Rev. Arthur Stumpf, pastor, was given Saturday evening, May 7. The choir and band of the McKeesport Hungarian church, the choir of the First Church, Homestead and the orchestra of a French church at McDonald assisted. The concert was enjoyed by a large audience.

PITCAIRN CHURCH is sending its pastor, Rev. E. H. Baker, to Des Moines.

REV. R. T. KETCHAM, pastor of the Butler Church, has gone to St. Louis for a month to receive treatment for his eyes. Rev. Edgar Shade will supply the pulpit during his absence.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S BIBLE STUDY COURSE of the Turtle Creek church, Rev. M. Neilson, pastor, maintains an average attendance of twenty-five, while the interest steadily increases.

THE BIBLE SCHOOL of the 46th Street Mission touches regularly fifty-one families, twenty-six of these foreign-speaking and twenty-five English-speaking. The enrollment shows 50 percent foreign, and 50 percent American children.

OAKMONT CHURCH held its annual meeting May 4, and reported a net increase for the year in membership of thirty-nine with $6,049.04 raised for all purposes. Pastor Dunning points out that Oakmont's average giving was $33.55.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATTENDANCE of the McKees Rocks church, Rev. J. A. Clyde, pastor, has increased from 165 to 206 during the past year.

BELLEVUE CHURCH, Rev. Charles A. Decker, pastor, reports that thirty-one have been received into the membership. Over $17,000 was raised. There was a balance of $368 in the current expense treasury. The church voted a budget of $6,000 for local expenses for the ensuing year. This carries an item of $300 increase in the pastor's salary. Membership, 241; average giving per member, $70.54.

REV. A. P. MIHM has resigned as pastor of Temple Church to become Secretary of Sunday-school and Young People's work of the German Baptist churches of the United States. Mr. Mihm begins his new work September first, with headquarters in Chicago. His pastorate of eight years has been a notable one for Temple Church. The membership has steadily gained, organization bettered and efficiency increased. Two years ago the present fine church edifice was dedicated.

OAKLAND CHURCH missionary society sent Mrs. Safford to Washington and will send the pastor, Rev. R. M. Safford, to the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines.

WEST VIRGINIA

WEIRTON voted to send its pastor, Rev. Harry S. Matie, to the Des Moines Convention with all expenses paid.

Des Moines Convention

For the Des Moines Convention, the passenger associations have agreed to a round trip rate, of fare and one-half of the regular one way fare, with a minimum of one dollar for the round trip.

This rate is applicable from all stations north of the line of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers, except in New England where the railroads will maintain their present fares, but those living in that territory will participate in the reduced rate after they leave those lines, as indicated below.

From California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, an excursion rate of one and one-third fare has been arranged from June 1 to Aug. 15 inclusive.

Excepting those who live in the states of California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, members of Baptist churches and dependent members of their families who are attending the convention, desiring to avail themselves of the reduced rates, must secure identification certificates, which may be obtained from the secretaries of state organizations, from those arranging for parties to the convention, or from the undersigned. Those living in New England should procure these certificates, so that they can purchase through tickets from their home town to Des Moines, for while the New England fare will not be reduced, they may thus be able to participate in the reduction which is made west of the New England lines.

The reduced fare tickets will be on sale at the ticket office in your home town, to holders of certificates, on June 15-21 inclusive, with return limit of midnight, July 4, to those living in Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming. Those who live in Illinois, Iowa, Northern Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and States East of Chicago, the dates of sale will be June 16-22 and limit of final return, midnight of July 3.

Tickets must be validated at Des Moines for return, June 20-July 1 inclusive, by ticket agent at the regular ticket office of the line by which the passenger arrived; they will be good only on that line, and must be used on the day of validation.

If the above is not clear, or any further details desired, consult the ticket agent in your home town, who will be instructed therein.

State secretaries, transportation leaders, and others requiring certificates for use by those attending the convention from their localities, should apply at once for them to the undersigned.—W. G. Brimson, Manager of Transportation, Northern Baptist Convention.

"N. B. C."

BY H. G. WESTON SMITH

LAST year, on the way to the Northern Baptist Convention, we had a most refreshing experience. We met a real "Mr. Friend O' Man." He, too, was on his way to Buffalo and the seething convention hall. He was from the West. Stooped, and probably what most folks would call "homely," but beaming with a simple good nature that was born of the kind of religion that does not know that there are any theological differences anywhere—and does not care—he went from car to car trying to guess which people looked as though they were "bound for the convention." He was not a pastor. He was a layman. He was bringing to Buffalo the thing which above all else finally made us all more worthy of the meeting—love.

And this was his suggestion: "Say, don't you know? I think we ought to have some way of pickin' out the folks that's goin' to the convention, so as to git acquainted before we git there. Now they's a dozen people right on this here train, I bet you, goin' to that convention. And most of them is just hungry for someone to talk to."

He was right. He said a good deal more that was good Christian doctrine. But to the point—why should not all who are one the way to the convention, when they leave home, take a little one-inch square piece of white paper, print on it in ink "N. B. C.", and pin it on the lapel of the coat or in some other prominent place? Are Baptists too "proper" for such a human thing?

(Too Late To Classify)*WESTERN WASHINGTON

SEBRO WOOLEY—In a special meeting for the young people April 25, seventeen young people accepted Christ as their personal Saviour. To this number were added four others who accepted Christ at other services. The pastor, Rev. N. J. Barnes, is rejoiced at the evangelistic spirit in the church.

SOUTH BEND held its annual meeting April 29. The reports revealed a year of progress, notwithstanding financial depression and the removal of some active members. Extensive improvements have been made on the building, including the papering of the auditorium, strengthening of the foundation of the building, new steps and furnace at a cost of nearly $1,200, which has all been paid. In addition, members contributed labor valued at over $300. The benevolence treasurer reported $931.43 had been given to the New World Movement as compared to $240.00 for benevolences the year previous. This showed a splendid advance in missionary interest. Rev. J. L. Peringer is in the third year of his pastorate.

REV. T. W. HARRIS, of Caspar, California, has been called to Ferndale, made vacant recently by the resignation of Rev. C. A. Nethery.

REV. CHARLES T. GOODSSELL resigned the pastorate of the Central Church, Olympia, the resignation to take effect August 1. Mr. Goodsell has had a successful pastorate of this church for four years and it is with deep regret that the church accepts his resignation. He leaves to enter the University of Chicago next Fall for a further course of study.

FIRST, SEATTLE, is having a contest between classes in the Sunday-school for attendance and being on time. A loving cup has been offered as a trophy to the class having the largest number of points gained. The contest has awakened considerable enthusiasm and a wholesome spirit of interest, which is manifest in greater promptness and larger attendance.

Bible, believed to be "God-breathed," is nothing better than an evolution of thought, and that "all," I say all "The scientific minds oppose me," is most disheartening. And still further, to find myself charged with the awful intent of excluding from the church "all the scientific minds"—the god of force save me! The Christ (who was not my substitute, but, if he lived at all, was my example) show me the way!

And now, finally,

The Expression of my Judgment

In contemplation of the above I should hesitate to express else if my friend and brother were not so urgent about it; but I cannot afford to disappoint him. To allay alarm, let me hasten to say that personally I am not going to do anything to him, or to any who may agree with him. I would not think of doing to him what he and his followers did to the Michigan orthodox—disfellowship him without a hearing; and certainly I would not disfellowship him, if his one sin was his loyalty to the Book.

But my advice, if I must give it, is this—When a man thinks himself out of sympathy with the historic Baptist faith, viz, that the Bible is the Word of God and infallibly inspired, that Christ is the Son of God, begotten by the Holy Ghost, that the cross is God's means of salvation through the shed blood of His Son Jesus Christ, etc., I advise him to be as courageous as Crawford H. Toy. If he be a professor in a Baptist seminary leave the seminary; as honest as Dr. John Herman Randall, who, when he reached the point where he said, "My own conviction is that if 'all the creeds and dogmas and paraphernalia of the church could be set aside, nothing would be lost,'" go with his thinking and join the Unitarians.

That action would save the Baptist body itself the necessity of taking means to get rid of them. However great our loss in numbers, the Baptist denomination will be stronger in spirit the day that those who have quit our faith are refused our fellowship also. And if they will not voluntarily quit it, then, rather than suffer as the early Christians suffered at the hands of the Cerinthians, as the Presbyterians suffered at the hands of Socinians, as English Baptists suffered from Arianism, and the New England Congregationalists suffered by the parasitic Unitarian, let us take the sanitary course of self-cleaning, and begin by disinfecting our schools!

"You have uncovered a great question," I told him; "the question of the proper religious education of Protestant children—the most vital problem before Protestantism today. As matters now stand there is, as you say, a great gulf between the average Sunday school and the high school and college. I think you are right in your interpretation. Widespread indifference to religion is due largely to the fact that the boys and girls cease to believe what they are taught as religion. But look here! I see we have omitted one topic on the questionnaire. Number eighteen reads:

"What in your judgment is the remedy for our present low tide of spirituality in the churches?"

The Recent Graduate looked steadily at one of the pictures on the wall. As he did not speak, I re-read the question.

"Professor," said he, at last, "I am no expert on this question, and my opinion may not be worth very much. But I think I know what is the matter."

"Good!" I encouraged him. "What is the matter with our churches?"

"Malnutrition." He spoke the word with emphasis and decision.

"Malnutrition?" I repeated.

"Certainly, Professor; what else? Are not most weakened conditions the result of malnutrition? Churches are no exception. All life thrives best on fresh food. Any person can exist on canned vegetables and preserved meats for a while; but unless he has a liberal amount of fresh food mixed in with his diet, his physical fitness will deteriorate. As churches we are living too largely on a canned and a preserved diet, with low spiritual vigor the inevitable result. The remedy is obvious—the message of yesterday no longer meets the needs of today."

"But is not the gospel message always the same?" I asked, desiring to draw from him a fuller statement.

"By no means!" was his quick reply. "Our gospel is not a set of rules: no, it is rather a dynamic personality whose life and teaching must be freshly interpreted to each succeeding generation. Creeds and beliefs, like foods, contain their full vital element only when they are fresh."

"What changes in our religious diet would you suggest?" I inquired.

"The first change that I would make in every Sunday school, if I could, would be this," replied the Recent Graduate; "that every child be taught a modern conception of the Bible, especially such a view of the Old Testament as would safeguard him from the experience I went through."

"Very good," I encouraged him. "Any other changes?"

"Yes," said he; "in addition to giving every child a modern conception of the Bible as his Protestant birthright, I would have every Sunday-school teacher and every preacher as well aim at this objective—to make very clear that religion is a life rather than the acceptance of a group of beliefs. No one told me this, and I suffered because of its lack. Let the child be taught that religion consists in living one's life in loving relations with God; and that it is natural for beliefs to come and go, in the experience of the individual and also in the experience of the race—let the child be firmly grounded in this conception of religion and he will not think he is losing his religion when this or that belief no longer means anything to him."

"In other words, we must so teach our children in the Sunday schools that it will be safe for them to go to the public schools. Is that what you mean?" I asked.

"Exactly!" he exclaimed. "Either we Protestants should modernize our religious instruction or keep our children out of public schools," I suggested.

"That would be the Catholic solution of the problem; but as Protestants we cannot resort to that solution. Freedom of thought is the heart of Protestantism; and modern progress is the result of this freedom in thought and education which Protestantism has made possible. No; we must not think of laying any ecclesiastical hand on our public schools."

"In all of which I heartily agree," I told him. "Certainly, we should lay no ecclesiastical hand on our public schools."

"But would it not be equally perilous," asked the Recent Graduate, "for any church organization to sit in judgment upon what its colleges shall teach? And is not this questionnaire a step in that direction? When carried to its full expression is not the motive behind this investigation very similar to that which prompted the inquisition? For the life of me, Professor, I can see little difference—the desire to safe-guard 'sound doctrine'; and each falling into the same mistaken assumption that religion is a creed rather than a life."

"But the Committee on Fundamentals is composed of Christian gentlemen," I objected; "composed of men living in the twentieth century."

"All of which makes me wonder whether the war or something else has not turned back the clock of time two or three centuries. In brigandage and in highway robbery we certainly have slipped back among the robber barons of the Middle Ages; and who knows but that the members of this investigating committee have been caught up in a similar ebb of the tide?"

I could not help joining in with his hearty laughter.

"At any rate" I told him, as he arose to leave, "the committee has afforded me an enjoyable half-hour—I have been thoroughly interested in your point of view."

"Good-bye, Professor. I am glad to say that it pleases me mightily to have my Alma Mater investigated; it is another evidence that my professors have their face set toward a rising rather than a setting sun."

Luxuries for Missionaries

add to the correctness of mission accounts.

A sewing machine or two. Teaching girls and women to sew is a great means of getting the opportunity to teach them of Christ. Singer or White machines are best for India.

Gasoline table lamps, similar to the Coleman lamps, even a system using the hollow wire feed. These might be available from some home where electricity has been installed.

A gasoline engine, two or three horse power. This would give us a power plant for running small machines, pumping water, etc. If a pump should be available also it would give to us the blessing of running water in the house.

But all these are not the real second-hand luxuries! They are merely aids to efficiency. The great luxury we desire is an electric lighting outfit, similar to the Delco farm lighting plants. In some communities where city current has become available these individual plants have been dispensed with, and, as we do not have current in the towns in India, excepting in the larger cities, we do desire this. But—is it a luxury?

However there is one genuine luxury that we would like to have, mainly a player piano. There may be one in some home that is no longer needed and it would add a bit of cheerfulness to a lonely hour in India, as well as serve to entertain guests, both native and white. Incidentally we can play such an instrument better than an ordinary piano!

If any of these articles are available and in good condition, we will be pleased to use them in real service for the Master in India.

Address letters to "Luxuries," care of The Baptist, 417 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. I will then write to you personally.

Christian Living and Giving

turn she returned, and soon had occasion to enter that store room. And it must be that the dreaded germs were there, for the last child sickened, and they laid her away in the billowy field with the others. And the parents were left alone with their sorrow.

What then have I said? That when one yields himself to the Lord, the surrender must be complete. Summarized, it must be voluntary, that is, uninfluenced by extraneous circumstances; unselfish, that is, devoid of all ulterior purposes; final or beyond all recall; and complete, that is, with nothing withheld. This is the secret of Christian living.

It is also the secret of Christian giving. The Macedonian Christians had done a beautiful thing in their gifts to the suffering saints in Jerusalem. But they never would have thought of such a thing, if they had not first given themselves to the Lord. Which leads me to say that we can always measure the depth of a person's consecration, by his attitude toward the needs of the world; can estimate the depth of spirituality in any particular church by the generosity of its gifts. Failure in gifts reflects upon one's consecration. It shows that he is not as consecrated as he professes; for people give generously to missionary and benevolent objects, because they have first given themselves to the Lord. And if they fail of their best to such objects, it must be that they have first failed in not giving themselves completely to Him. This is an unerring criterion. Show to us the man who is largest in his thought and prayer toward the matter of missions and benevolence, and in return we can show the most consecrated man in his church. He may not be the largest giver, for he may not have it to give. That isn't the point. Show to us the man who thinks least upon these things; who protests when they are mentioned; who is alarmed lest the interests at home may be robbed because the interests abroad are fostered, and in return we can show the man who is least consecrated in all his church, and this not because he gives least, but because he thinks little, and prays little and yearns little. Therefore no man need continue in ignorance upon the subject of his own consecration, for the criterion is at hand. And no one need be in ignorance of the consecration of others. It is shown by their interest in people worse off than themselves.

Book Notices

"The Magician."

By W. Somerset Maugham. George H. Doran Co.

If you have never read Bram Stoker's gripping romantic story, "Dracula," the book under present review probably will prove to be a real "thriller." Somewhat the same plot is used. We have the same delfer in "the black art" the same attempt to foist this power upon the world, the like sacrifice of a beloved woman, and the same crisis at the close, when fire is fought with fire.

"True Love."

By Allan Monkhouse. Henry Holt and Company.

This volume, in spite of its somewhat inane title, is a definite contribution to the literature of today. It is a realistic record of the soul-development of a cultured dabbler in literature from the ante-war days in Manchester, through the storm and turmoil of the breaking of the Great War, to the final end—death in the Flanders trenches. Very little attention is devoted to the actual battle element. The author has stuck to his chosen topic—the spiritual evolution of the intellectual Geoffrey Arden, his ethical growth because of his deep love for a German-born actress, known as Sybil Drew, and the great tragedy of the blotting out of hearts and minds by war. It is a book of great interest, both as a fine contribution to the problem of war-madness, and as a literary product. The style and literary workmanship are of first-rank quality.

"The Pulpit and American Life."

By Arthur S. Hoyt, Professor of Homiletics and Sociology in Auburn Theological Seminary. The MacMillan Company.

A volume treating of the influence of notable American preachers in the life of our nation. As types of great preachers, Jonathan Edwards, Lyman Beecher, Channing, Bushnell, Henry Ward Beecher, and Phillips Brooks are presented. A biographical sketch is given and the characteristics of each one as man and preacher with his part in and influence on the national life. There are also interesting lectures on the Puritan preacher, the old and new evangelism and the present day pulpit. The contents are probably revised lectures given to seminary classes. The book is charmingly written. It pays particular attention to the mission and influence of the Baptists and names Roger Williams, Francis Wayland, E. G. Robinson and John A. Broadus as among the most representative pulpit men of pit men of their times. Kindly mention their times. Kindly mention is also made of Lorimer and Henson.

A WORTHY PROJECT

To all interested in the subject of church music the name and fame of the late Horatio Parker stands for a standard worthy of emulation and a solidity of creative achievement that must be of great and ennobling influence on the composers of the coming generation. In the special field of music for religious purposes, especially choral writing, this splendid composer stands virtually alone—certainly so in this country. His work is always representative of high ideals and sincerity of motive; even though we must admit a certain dryness of inspiration at times (and what composer does this charge not touch?) Yet nothing that came from the pen of Mr. Parker could fairly be classed as second-rate in workmanship or in construction. And when we have this technical facility combined with the flame of inspiration, then the result is in a class by itself. Therefore it is a fitting recognition of an honored name and honorable achievement that such a movement as is detailed below should be started by his admirers. The subjoined article is quoted from "The New Music Review," published by the H. W. Gray Co., 45 West 45th Street, New York City.

Horatio Parker left behind him an honored name and a life-work of achievement that calls for recognition. The plan to perpetuate his memory by a Fellowship of $50,000 for musical composition, bearing his name, in connection with the American Academy in Rome, has met with inspiring response. It is generally admitted that our young composers, after their studies are completed, should be matured in an artistic climate such as that of Italy. It is also important that their formative years should have the companionship and surroundings created by the society of other artists, such as they would have in Rome and Paris, with similar aspirations, rather than to live sporadically in a community chiefly commercial, with the immediate physical and mental burden of self-support.

The idea of the Fellowship is particularly appropriate in view of the interest that the late composer took in the proposed Prix de Rome. When the plan of a great prize was first considered (at a meeting at Mr. Otto Kahn's residence in 1919) Dr. Parker wrote: "The proposal outlines a scheme which I have always longed for, and which will prove most beneficial to music in this country if it can be consummated. I hope the plan can be carried out, and I shall be glad to have you call upon me for any service which it is within my power to render."

To the end that the fund may be completed, all who desire to testify their regard for the memory of one who commanded universal esteem, should intimate at once their desire to subscribe. Subscriptions may be pledged now, and payment deferred until January 1, 1923. Musicians will gladly join in the desire to honor Parker's memory by practical co-operation. The proposal made in the New Music Review last month to hold services and recitals, consisting partly or wholly of Parker's music, in aid of the fund has met with instant recognition. The first parish to respond to the invitation was St. James, Philadelphia, at which church there was a service on April 24, consisting of works by the late composer. The service was arranged by the Rev. Dr. John Mockridge, rector, and Mr. Wesley Sears, organist and choirmaster. Dr. Mockridge spoke of Parker's contributions to church music.

Messrs. Harold Bauer and Albert Spalding volunteered their services for a concert in aid of the fund, which was given at Woolsey Hall, Yale University, on April 20.

The treasurer of the fund is Mr. David Stanley Smith, Dean of the Music School, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

FOR THE SINGERS

From the publishing house of G. Schirmer, New York, comes an attractive little booklet containing thematic pages of sacred songs that by intrinsic merit have made a definite place for themselves during the past few years. Turning the pages we find such excellent examples of modern sacred solos as John Prindle Scott's beautiful "Come, Ye Blessed," the solemn "Lord, in this, Thy Mercy's Day," of Saint-Saens, the virile, dramatic "Blow Ye the Trumpet," of Andrews, the positive, melodious "The Lord is My Light," by Speaks, and the tender "Now the Day is Over," by the same composer. All told, there are twelve titles listed, and they are well-adapted for service use.

The editor of this page often wonders why the pianos of so many homes are almost swamped with the latest "popular music," cheap "jazz," badly written, cheaply printed, with inane or suggestive doggerel for texts, representing quite an outlay of money. And for what? I sometimes wonder at the evident care shown by many parents to censor and oversee what goes into the stomachs and on the backs of their children, and then at the little attention paid to the mental food that they get musically and otherwise. If the parents would divert only a portion of the wasted energy and money from the cheap popular stuff to a few well-chosen sacred songs and records, we would soon see a different attitude toward the music of the churches. How can we expect the younger element to support good music in the service if it is to them a closed book?

But this is a long way from what this item started out to be—a notice of a list of usable sacred songs. Send for this catalogue—it is called "Twelve Especially Effective Sacred Songs," published by G. Schirmer, 3 E. 43rd Street, New York, N. Y. The booklet is worth attention.

The Choir Herald, for April.
The Choir Leader, for April.

At this late day, there is little need for any particular analysis or discussion of these two popular choir-magazines. They are edited by experts in the field of church music, and they respond to public need and to public tastes. That the editors succeed in their endeavors is amply proven by the tremendous circulation attained by the two journals. The pertinent short articles are of great value to all interested in music for the church, and the music is well-adapted to the needs of the clientel served. Of the anthems issued this month in the easier of the two volumes, "The Choir Herald," of more than usual value is the brilliant "In the Rock of Our Salvation," by Lorenz, and the effective "Oh, could I speak," by Ira B. Wilson. Four usable numbers make up the musical menu of the "Choir Leader," purposed for the use of more advanced singers; they are "Spirit of Faith," by Wildermere, "Come, O Lord," by Fearis, "The Lord is My Light," by Wilson, and "Love Divine, All Loves Excelling," by Mendelssohn-Lorenz.

The Spiritual Reach of a Great Society

THE AMERICAN BAPTIST HOME MISSION SOCIETY labors in nearly every State in the Union, and in Cuba, Porto Rico,* Mexico, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Honduras.

Its missionaries work among twenty-two foreign-speaking racial groups and eleven Indian tribes in the United States.

It has an extensive missionary educational system among the Negroes, Indians (reaching twenty-three tribes), Spanish and other foreign-speaking peoples.

In Mexico it has a well-equipped hospital.

Special attention is given to Christian Community Service in urban and rural neighborhoods. Demonstration country churches are being established, equipment provided and staffs secured to spiritualize adequately all community contacts.

Through an adjustment with the Publication Society it pays the salaries of the colporter-missionaries and the missionaries on chapel cars and gospel cruisers.

Acting under a Brotherhood Committee, it establishes brotherhoods and stimulates their active program of service, which includes camp work for boys, in which the Publication Society and the Home Mission Society are jointly interested.

It stimulates Evangelism through wide areas and increases interest in this type of work among churches and pastors.

It aids, through its various departments and by the counsel of an expert architectural department, in the erection of churches, schools, parsonages and Christian community center buildings.

This Department of Architecture is organized for service and operates without profit to itself. It seeks to assist architects, churches and institutions to secure better results from money spent by making available the experience and study of specialists. Although the department charges one per cent of the estimated building costs for its advisory and consulting service in working out the requirements of a given building, the architect furnished with these requirements gladly deducts this one per cent charge from his usual fee. Hence the service of the department adds nothing to the building cost.

An International Seminary in East Orange trains missionaries not only for the racial groups in America but also to become leaders of their own peoples in Europe.

The Society conducts its work in closest co-operation with the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society and the American Baptist Publication Society.

The task of The American Baptist Home Mission Society grows as the nation increases. Its income has always kept pace with its opportunities. Opportunities are God-given.

Our nation must not fail spiritually. The Home Mission Society must do its best to prevent the spiritual collapse of the nation.

The Home Mission Society must be ready for the long future and for every contingency in missionary undertakings.

The Home Mission Society has the vision and faith. Its legion of supporters are urged to pray daily for its missionaries and its secretaries and that our Lord may provide new friends and adequate funds.

Problems in Condensation

Our rewrite editor deserves the sympathy if not the prayers of our readers (Amen!—Rewrite Editor). We have news enough (including publicity) to fill each week several magazines the size of THE BAPTIST. In a recent number of this paper we find a news item stripped of mere words. Here it is: "— church, with Pastor —, has gotten out of debt, put in electric lights, repaired the parsonage, had a great revival and the pastor is resigning." Talk of self-abnegation!

Killam's Kollum

Kures, Not Kills

We have of late sought contributions from a number of laymen, among them the genial president of the Ohio Baptist Convention. We were beginning to despair of success in the case of some of them when we received at the hands of Mr. E. H. Rhoades of Toledo the following dedicated to the editor of this Kollum: "To Killam, famous for his Kindly Kollum, where with Kalculating Koolness he Kills (Kures not Kills—Editor) Kronik Kickers." It's Kures not Kills. With this slight amendment we accept the eulogy. Having made such a noble beginning we shall expect frequent contributions from the pen of Mr. Rhoades. Tell us how Ohio maintains the largest list of subscribers to THE BAPTIST of any state in the convention?

Death to Autocrats

We are constantly receiving vexatious questions which correspondents want answered in this Kollum. Some of them we cannot answer (Honest confession); some of them we will not answer (Personal perversity); and some of them we dare not answer (Safety first). Here is one of the latter: "Would you accept a call to a 'one-man' church?" "Which is the better a 'one-man' church or a 'one-woman' church?" While not attempting to discuss the question of relative values let us say right here that if we weighed 200 pounds and were full of red blood we would prefer the former. THE BAPTIST does not believe in autocrats, even those with D.D.'s.

Labeled Goods

There is a vast difference between speaking the truth and speaking the truth in love. There are some religious (very religious) sheets coming to our desk, which judged by their vitriolic attacks upon the brethren who chance to differ in the slightest degree from their editors, are not true to their labels. It is a day of labeled goods. We suggest that these journals should be re-christened, The Baptist Menace. We refer the whole matter to the Pure Food Department.

Can You Beat It?

"I enclose a very important notice for your paper. Please do not put it in some obscure corner. Can't you put it in Killam's Kollum?" Brethren, this is going too far. It is almost tempting providence. This is the publisher's page. It is devoted to the serious business of showing the thousand ways in which the denominational periodicals—THE BAPTIST and Missions—serve our great work. No one is supposed to read this Kollum except from a sense of duty. We cannot grant the request.

Conference on Evangelism the Supreme Task of Christianity

The following call has been issued to the state secretaries and evangelists and other special servants of the churches by Dr. H. F. Stilwell and Dr. T. J. Villers:

"We are in the disappointing aftermath of the great world war. We had hoped that with its cessation we should have come into a new and positive spiritual awakening. It has not come but instead we are in the midst of great uncertainties. As a denomination we are confronted with disturbing problems, the solution of which demands spiritual courage and definiteness. Never before have we been confronted with opportunities of such magnitude and importance. Essentially we are dealing with spiritual realities and our supreme need is divine leadership. We need the consciousness of a new life, a more abundant life. Somehow we must find this.

"For the past three years we have realized in some measure that we were passing through experiences of unusual character and preceding the conventions of Atlantic City, Denver and Buffalo, we were impelled to a prayerful and serious contemplation of the spiritual significance of our times. A series of quiet hours were arranged on two days preceding the sessions of the convention. In these quiet retreats not only were those of us who were there led to a keener appreciation of our individual responsibility but our vision of our task was greatly enlarged, a new dedication of ourselves to its accomplishment evoked and a rare unity of fellowship and purpose was experienced.

"As we approach the convention to be held in Des Moines we are increasingly impressed with the significance of its sessions. We shall meet in the consciousness of a world restlessness which affects every human relationship. We need to stand upon the heights for a wider outlook in order to go into the future unafraid.

"At no time since He was here has the character of Jesus been so outstanding as now. At no time has the evangel of Jesus been so compelling. We would see Him. He has the wisdom which will quiet our questionings. He has the power that can solve all our problems and in His intimate presence all controversies are stilled. As never before do we need to hear him say: 'I am the way,' to open our hearts to the influences of His evangel and to regird ourselves for its effective world-wide proclamation.

"To this end the department of evangelism of the Home Mission Society, in co-operation with the committee on evangelism of the Northern Baptist Convention, has arranged a series of inspirational conferences and retreats for Sunday morning, afternoon and evening, Monday morning and afternoon, preceding the opening session of the convention.

"Let us come together—the missionaries, state convention workers, evangelists and all other special workers—before the active work of the convention commences, for a fellowship of prayer and contemplation, for a sincere heart-searching and a regirding for the greater tasks of the tomorrow."

The meetings will be held in the First Church and the following program carried out:

Sunday morning; 10:30—The Message of Evangelism, Rev. Carl D. Case. Afternoon; 2:30—A Retreat; 2:45—Meditation—The Dynamic of Evangelism, Rev. Fred Berry, Rev. A. B. Strickland; 3:05—Inquiry—The Value of Associate Prayer, Rev. ## Notice of Pastors' Conference

The pastors' Conference of the Northern Baptist Convention will hold its first Annual Inspirational Meeting at the First Baptist Church, Des Moines, Monday evening, June 20th, at 7:30. There will be three addresses: The address of the President, outlining the purpose and scope of the Conference, by the retiring President, Rev. Arthur T. Fowler, D.D. Rev. Ambrose M. Bailey, First Baptist Church, Seattle, Wash., will speak on "The Place of the Christian Minister in these Reconstruction Days." President Weeks, of Bacone College, Oklahoma, will give the closing address on "The Minister's Spiritual Life."

There will be a business session at some hour during the Northern Baptist Convention, for the election of officers, and an address by Dr. Tomlinson, of the Ministers & Missionaries Benefit Board.

IMPORTANT TO BAPTIST CHURCHES

In the Baptist of June 26, 1920, attention was called to the organization of the MUTUAL INSURANCE CORPORATION with a Baptist Advisory Board as follows:

W. G. BRIMSON, President Baptist Executive Council, Chicago, Ill.

E. A. MEYERS, Attorney, Chicago, Ill.

CLIFTON D. GRAY, President Bates College, Lewiston, Me.

E. L. KILLAM, Managing Editor, The Baptist, Chicago Ill.

CHARLES L. MAJOR, Manager Chicago Board, American Baptist Publication Society

BAPTISTS CAN SAVE MONEY

This committee has given considerable attention to the matter and are convinced that Baptists can save money on church insurance through the new organization. There has already been a good response.

THE MUTUAL INSURANCE CORPORATION has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Illinois. Legal reserve for security of policy holders same as stock company.

All policies on church properties are FULLY SAFEGUARDED, being doubly protected since all such policies are issued by THE NATIONAL MUTUAL CHURCH INSURANCE COMPANY OF CHICAGO until the new company has accumulated sufficient business to warrant its assuming risks on its own account. Protection at COST. NO ASSESSMENTS. Premiums can be paid in annual installments covering a three or five-year period.

For full particulars address HENRY P. MAGILL, Manager, 108 South LaSalle Street or 1509 Insurance Exchange, 175 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Rev. David Foster Estes who for twenty-nine years has been head of the department of New Testament Interpretation in Colgate and for twenty-three years librarian of the university has resigned, under the orders of his physician, and will leave about July 1 for Los Angeles where he and his wife will hereafter make their home. A fuller statement will appear in our next issue.

New Hampshire Baptists were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Rev. Ira M. Baird in Nova Scotia. He had spent the winter in the South on account of ill health and only recently did he resign his church at New London where he has served since 1912. Mr. Baird has filled a large place in the community and in Colby Academy where he was teacher of Biblical literature.

The large audience over which Mrs. George W. Taft so efficiently presided at the recent Woman's Jubilee in Chicago will be surprised to know that she went almost immediately thereafter, as planned, to the hospital and underwent an operation for chronic appendicitis. The operation was serious, but quite successful and Mrs. Taft is recovering rapidly, though a complete rest of some months will be necessary from her many activities as mistress of the Northern Baptist Seminary, and as a leader in missionary and church work.

The beautiful new building of the First Church, Danville, Ill., Rev. F. L. Enslow, pastor, was struck by lightning recently. It is reported that the surroundings looked as if a cyclone had passed that way. The damage of about $2,000 was fully covered by insurance. This amount will pay for adequate insurance for many years to come.

In October last, Dr. Clarence E. Lapp went to Fayetteville, N. C. after a serious operation in July, from which recovery seemed impossible. He has surprised surgeons, friends, and family, by a remarkable return to practically his former strength. He with Mrs. Lapp will return to Granville, O., early in June. All invitations for service "between pastorates" have hitherto been refused, but now if sent to Granville, O., will receive consideration.

A Pre-Convention Conference at Des Moines

By GWENDOLYNE J. COLLING, SECRETARY

On Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, June 21, the second pre-convention conference will be opened at Des Moines. Dr. J. C. Massee, chairman of the executive committee on Conferences on the Fundamentals of the Baptist Faith will preside and bring an opening address on "The Present Denominational Situation." In this address Dr. Massee will set forth openly the things of greatest interest in the denominational life today, especially those matters about which controversies have arisen. Following the opening address Dr. John R. Sampey of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary will bring a message on "What Jesus Christ Thought About the Old Testament." Dr. Sampey is one of the widely-known outstanding scholars of the continent—for a quarter of a century librarian of the seminary and professor of Hebrew and Old Testament literature. He is profoundly conservative and his message is sure to create great interest. At 10.45 a.m. Dr.

Jacob Heinrich of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary will speak on "The Authenticity and Authority of the New Testament." Dr. Heinrich is reputed to be one of the great thinkers as he is also thoroughly scholarly. This message is bound to create a profound sentiment. Following Dr. Heinrich's address there will be an hour for open conference on vital questions as, for instance, the place of the Bible in Baptist schools and the presence of undesirable teachers in the same.

In the afternoon two great messages will be delivered. Dr. T. T. Shields, of Jarvis Street Church, Toronto, is known as the outstanding stalwart defender of the faith in Canada. He has made a great fight for orthodoxy in the Canadian convention, and won it. He will speak on "The Cross and the Critics." His personality as well as his message will make a tremendous appeal to the conference. Dr. D. F. Rittenhouse of the First Church, Columbus, is one of the younger men in our convention. He has already established for himself a great reputation as a preacher and a thinker. He is doing a very fine constructive work in the great but difficult church in Columbus. He will speak on "The Proof of the Resurrection and its Meaning to the Ministry." At the close of Dr. Rittenhouse's address there will be another hour for open discussion at which such questions as "Doctrinal Unity," and the "Place of Doctrine in Life" will be taken up.

It is probable also that at this session the conference committee will present a statement of belief for Baptists, for adoption or rejection by the Conference.

On Tuesday evening two great messages of far-reaching interest will be brought. The first will be by Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland, Ore., one of the great preachers and leaders of the Pacific Coast, on "The Return of the Lord." This is a theme which has agitated the convention for a number of years. Dr. Hinson is well equipped to speak impartially and with profound wisdom on this most vital theme.

The closing address will be by Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of the Southwestern Theological Seminary of Ft. Worth, Texas, on "The Central Passion of the Gospel." Dr. Scarborough is not only president of the seminary but was the director general of the $75,000,000 campaign among Southern Baptists. He is a man with a great passion and a great message and with a tremendous influence throughout the great Southland. His message will be a fitting close to the conference.

This conference is bound to be of tremendous interest and of great importance to the convention itself. It is the only place in our denominational life where an open forum for the discussion of doctrinal views is to be had. It may well prove to be a safety valve for the convention. The discussion this year of a doctrinal statement of belief will doubtless be far-reaching in its effect. Should such a statement be adopted none can tell the extent to which its influence may reach.

Delegates to the convention should by all means prepare to reach Des Moines not later than early Tuesday morning, June 21. Entertainment can be had upon the same conditions as during the convention.

The Baptist

The Significant Convention at Des Moines

MOST Baptists can go back in memory to the time when the annual meetings of the societies were notable for the smoothness with which the delegates assembled ratified the actions or proposals of their leaders. Now and then there was debate but the meetings were strictly of the cut-and-dried order.

Whatever else may be true of the Northern Baptist Convention as at present organized this charge cannot be brought. Program committees make careful plans and succeed, as this year, in presenting programs of the utmost merit, but always there is chance for debate and for the expression of the will of the democracy. Some years that expression is more pronounced than others, but there is never a year when it is lacking. The convention is master of its own doings and never surrenders its authority except when it feels that it is placing this in the hands of men fitted to carry out its expressed or unexpressed will.

A year ago at Buffalo, feeling ran high and the convention was notable for the frankness of opinion which characterized its sessions. This same frankness will mark the meetings to be held, June 22-28, at Des Moines, but there is no reason for expecting stormy sessions or bitterness of feeling. The discussion of the months since Buffalo has served to inform men and to give to all of us a better understanding of the points which are being contested. If men will keep on saying exactly what they mean and using terms in their true meaning, not imputing to men motives which do not belong nor calling them names which are not appropriate, we shall easily be able to come through this period to an era of good feeling. Baptists have always done this and will again. It is neither fair nor just to assume that all Baptists are ultra-liberal or ultra-conservative. The great mass occupy a middle position, and this great majority is about due to assert itself. No one really expects this great body to go farther in expressions of belief or opinion or in radical action than Southern Baptists have done. There is room within the evangelical position as held by Baptists for many shades of opinion.

Praise is due the program committee for its good work. Seldom has there been presented a better-balanced program or one which has in it more of the elements of information and inspiration. And this is good. For we have started well on a great task. The second mile is now before us; we must be sure that we get our second wind and have the goal clear in view. Any man or woman who will follow through this program with care will realize again the power and scope of the missionary, evangelistic and educational goals which Northern Baptists have placed before them.

The report of the committee on adjustments, appointed at Minneapolis, will certainly be of interest. This committee has before it the task of recommending improvements in the machinery through which Northern Baptists are working. Experience has indicated various lines along which improvements can be made. Nobody proposes to scrap the Board of Promotion, but it is easily possible that the board may be improved and that better correlation may be had between it and our great societies. This report will possibly be in the hands of our people before the convention. THE BAPTIST hopes to be able to print in an early number an abstract of its recommendations.

The report of the committee on schools, appointed last year, is certain to mark a step in advance in the relation between the denomination and its educational agencies. Never was education more important than now; and never was there greater need for the churches that this education shall be secured in a religious atmosphere. One can hardly expect a committee to solve the entire problem in a year, but one can expect that it shall present certain sets of facts, determined by first-hand investigation, and shall open the way for future work. THE BAPTIST had hoped to be able to present this report in the present issue but is not able to send this report in the present issue but is not able to ever, that the convention will take no radical action without allowing time for mature deliberation. Matters of great moment are not to be subjected to snap judgment.

The Golden Jubilee of the Baptist woman will stand out prominently at Des Moines as a landmark of Baptist history, a milestone of Baptist advance and a monument of missionary achievement.

There are some who think that there may be presented to the convention the question of the adoption of a doctrinal standard for our schools and churches, ministers and missionaries. In next week's issue we shall present the two sides of this question in articles written by prominent ministers of the denomination. We advise that you look for this issue and order extra copies for your friends.

Nothing before the convention, however, should be allowed to take attention from the fact that this gathering marks the end of the first collection year of the New World Movement. There is significance in every detail—the amount of money collected, the cost, the per capita giving of the denomination, the immediate outlook, the results in new recruits for home and foreign fields, the training of the churches in matters of organization and stewardship, the spiritual results of the movement, and all the other matters which are part and parcel of the New World Movement. For much we can thank God and take courage. From much we can learn important lessons for the future.

For weeks THE BAPTIST has been urging that churches send their pastors to this epoch-making convention. Once more we repeat the advice. Salaries are not such that ministers generally can go on their own charges. Churches which wish to have the vision and to do their full part in the world-wide work will gladly invest the money necessary to send their pastor—their local expert and principal promoter—to Des Moines.

Let us make this a really representative convention;

let us go in the spirit of prayer and of devotion to our Lord's work; let us go in a brotherly attitude towards all the men with whom we may differ; and there can be no question of the outcome. The Des Moines convention will then be remembered as a meeting which served to promote the greater glory of God.

What Our Soldiers Fought For

SOLDIERS of the United States were fools to fight in France for flags and flowers."

That foolish thing was said by an orator on the street corner the other day. It was about equally important with the croaking of a frog. A passer-by with a sense of the ludicrous might have whistled and said, "Go it, wind-jammer!" But a policeman, by a psychological process peculiar to certain of the species, discovered in the speech a grave menace to the nation, arrested the speaker and thus converted a crank into a "martyr."

Of course the soldiers would have been foolish to fight in France or anywhere else merely for flags and flowers. But the man who saw in the world war nothing more than decorative symbols must have been asleep for twenty years.

Long before the war observant men foresaw, and when it came they saw, that it involved real issues of empire; of human rights, liberties and welfare; of law and justice; of democracy and autocracy; of national constitutions and international relations; of Christianity and paganism; of the foundations of future civilization.

Our soldiers fought for liberty, justice, law, democracy and international peace. So all the Allies, speaking through their governments, declared in pledges as solemn as a nation can give. They professed to be calling our boys to one of the great crusades of history. So our boys understood and so they answered the call.

That the things they fought for could not have been secured without their sacrifice was the fault of other men. If those things shall hereafter fail of achievement, the blame for the failure will rest on other men—or if it shall rest upon the soldiers themselves in any measure, it will come upon them through their future betrayal in politics of the cause they so nobly supported on the field of battle.

That this nation is for the moment failing to make good the pledges it gave them and to support the principles in behalf of which it called them to battle, is natural to the confusion of the times, was to be expected and will probably be temporary. And in any case it cannot dim the moral meaning and splendor of their deeds.

Has Jesus a Social Mind?

SOCIETY is simply people living together, and civilization is the way it is organized. Does Jesus care how they live and get along together?

He has now the same kind of a mind he had when he walked on earth: if we cannot so suppose, then we are at sea so far as understanding him is concerned. Did he do or say anything in the interest of good society then? Is he doing anything in its interest now? Have we any light from him to guide us in our dealing with social problems? The Bible fairly runs over with answers to these questions.

He insisted on social virtues such as love, service and helpfulness. He announced the Golden Rule. He reaffirmed the spirit and teaching of the Hebrew prophets whose writings are saturated with social motives, ideals, maxims, principles and precepts, and whose whole interpretation of the significance of the rule of God (the Hebrew Theocracy) was social. Some of his finest parables, such as the "Good Samaritan," the "Rich Man and Lazarus" and the "Great Judgment," are almost purely social in their significance. He restated and vastly enriched the idea of the kingdom of God as the perfect product of perfect spirituality. He projected the best life for all.

These features are not merely casual in his teaching. His program of life work as he defined it and carried it out corresponded with his teaching.

A deep philosophy of life is involved. Religion, in its very essence, is the social spirit. The more evangelical the faith of a Christian becomes, the richer it becomes also in social meaning and fruit. Salvation and civilization are poles of the same sphere of faith and life.

What Jesus is now doing in the actual experience of his people confirms this understanding of him. Christian conversion creates in the soul of the convert a passion for others' welfare. It creates in him a mind fit for society and sends him out in quest of a society fit for his mind; that is, it socializes him. Unless it is denatured by subsequent worldliness or by perverted teaching, it naturally unfolds in a growing devotion to doing all possible kinds and degrees of good to others. He wants civilization to be as good as he has found God to be, and does his best to make it so. He lives for the kingdom of God.

* * *

We have seen in one of our Southern exchanges that the Southern Baptist Convention, recently held at Chattanooga, represented on the part of the 10,000 delegates, the various societies and the entertaining city an expenditure of something like $1,000,000. The figures are used as an argument for biennial or even triennial conventions. Let us estimate that the cost of the convention at Des Moines, figured in the same way, will not be far from $500,000. Should this fact have a bearing on the question of biennial sessions? Democracy is not necessarily denied because public officials are elected for terms of two or four years in the United States; can denominational officials be trusted less than these public officials?

The Jubilee Year

BY NELLIE G. PRESCOTT

ON April 17, 1873 in Chicago, Mrs. Robert Harris, as president, called the Woman's Baptist Missionary Society of the West to order for its second annual meeting. In her address of welcome occur these words: "Let us on this anniversary day hear the voice of our Great Leader summoning us to go forward and let us take as our motto the words of the immortal Carey: 'Expect great things from God; attempt great things for God.'"

Six days later, April 23, 1873, in Boston occurred the second annual meeting of the Woman's Baptist Missionary Society of the East, the president, Mrs. Gardner Colby, presiding. From her opening address we quote the closing sentence: "We have put our hand to a great work; let us never think of turning back; never remit in the least our efforts to promote the cause of Him who came to seek and save that which was lost."

With these brave words did the Baptist women of the East and of the West step out on their great adventure of faith fifty years ago. Over a path untrod before, they have gone steadily forward, not seeing many a time even the next step ahead. Yet always they have been true to the challenging words of that first president—"Let us never think of turning back."

Now from the hilltop of the Golden Jubilee, they look down upon the path which has been made with such infinite care and unceasing prayer—to find that through the years the narrow path of inexperience and pioneer work has widened to a broad, firm road of recognized activities for the women of our Baptist churches.

First: Baptist women have become educators of note, determining the policy and supervising and supporting more than 1,000 schools. These include kindergartens, primary, grammar and high schools scattered about in five different countries, in ten established mission fields. It is necessary to conform to the demands of the British educational code throughout India, the educational department of the Japanese Imperial Government, the Educational Commission in the Philippines and the Educational Association of China. In addition, they are co-operating in three different countries in the founding and support of three arts colleges and one medical college.

There are in all these schools and colleges more than 120,000 young people who are receiving their first knowledge of Christian ideals, faith and living. These are under the instruction of more than 1,700 teachers who, with comparatively few exceptions, are products of our Baptist mission schools and living witnesses of the power of Jesus Christ.

Second: Baptist women have not only become educators along general lines but they are also specialists, for there are, in addition, schools of more technical and vocational character; normal schools for teacher-training, kindergarten training schools, fine Bible training institutions, schools where industrial courses are given and nurses' training schools.

Third: They have become careful students of social problems and in each country have undertaken some definite work to meet an urgent social condition. There are orphanages, homes for widows, schools of mothercraft and Christian social work in the congested centres of large cities.

Fourth: Baptist women have gained experience as directors of evangelism, for in addition to the Bible training schools, they support 300 women who give their time to the direct preaching and teaching of the Bible. There are hundreds of Sunday schools, visitation in thousands of homes, and many informal Bible classes held on verandas and in jungle villages.

Fifth: They have become medical directors in the attempt to teach the lessons of spiritual regeneration through the relieving of physical suffering. Twenty-six hospitals and dispensaries bear a mute but effective witness to this attempt to teach the love of Jesus through the gentle touch of the Christian doctor and nurse. In addition more than 100 assistants have been trained to give competent aid in these hospitals and dispensaries.

MRS. GARDINER COLBY
First President of the Society

Sixth: These Baptist women in fifty years have become experienced financiers through collecting, investing and dispensing their own funds. In 1872, $29,997 were the receipts of the two treasuries of the societies of the East and the West. In 1920, the forty-ninth year of their history, more than $1,000,000 was handled in the treasury department of the society. In addition, they have acquired property in every mission field and now own scores of houses and school buildings of all sizes and description. carry deficits for any period of time. Seventhly and lastly: Baptist women in the service of their King. Through joy and through sorrow, they have become students of character. They have learned to know the Mohammedan woman and the Hindu, the Buddhist, the Confucianist and the Animist; the woman of the hill tribes and of the plains; the caste and the outcaste. To each and all the gospel has been given in the form and manner best fitted to meet the need. And not only to the women and girls of the Orient has this careful consideration been given, but also to the young women of America, as in constantly increasing numbers they have expressed a desire to go to the uttermost parts of the through illness and through health in the days of preparation and of service, these young women have been followed with the understanding sympathy of Baptist women.

As the experiences of fifty years culminate now, in the Golden Jubilee, again the words of that first president sound clear and true from the Atlantic to the Pacific and around the world, "Let us never think of turning back." Thus with "our eyes to the hills, our trust in God, our faith the victory" we turn from looking at the widening road of the past to a future all unknown but already bright with the promise of larger opportunities for service than women have ever yet attempted. The beginnings have been noble, the growth commendable, but the task in 1921 is unfinished while there remain millions of women who can neither read nor write and whose hearts have never opened to the message.

From Denver to Des Moines

Baptists have crowded many years into two—Denver program was a bold venture of faith—Denomination unified for a great advance.

BY EBENEZER STONE

IT IS a long way from Denver to Des Moines. Into the two short years since we met in the "Mile High City," Northern Baptists have crowded an immense amount of history. More perhaps than we have ever put into any two years before. It was a momentous hour when by a unanimous vote we decided to undertake a share of the kingdom work that was commensurate with our resources, but vastly beyond anything we had ever dreamed of before. Then, in order that we might carry this great program through, we reorganized our whole machinery on a modern, co-operative basis in accordance with plans approved by many of our leading business men.

Do Results Justify the Venture?

What have been the results? Have they justified the radical changes inaugurated? These questions are worthy of a serious answer. Without doubt some mistakes were made. We learn our most important lessons by experience. We are learning by that method now. But some great gains have been achieved.

First and perhaps most important of all, we have unified the missionary appeal. This gain alone is worth all it has cost. The missionary cause always has been one. The whole missionary enterprise is a unit. It is the effort on the part of the church of Christ to secure his enthronement as Lord in the hearts of all people everywhere. It is no more important to produce this result in one portion of the world than it is in another. But we had succeeded most remarkably in dividing this great appeal into many parts simply because we had committed the promotion of various phases of the appeal to various groups of men and women. And that phase had come to seem the most important which had been committed to the most astute and successful group of promoters. No one could for a moment proclaim this situation as ideal. It had little to commend it.

The new program has aimed at a complete reversal of this policy. By taking the business of promotion out of the hands of separate groups and putting it into the hands of one group, though made up withal for the most part of the same persons, the whole missionary appeal has been reunified. It stands out now as it always should have stood as one great cause. The results have been apparent in many directions. This new program has given great acceleration to a process of unification which was already under way in many churches. Most of our churches are now facing their missionary task as one, rather than as divided.

It Fulfilled Their Hearts' Wish

This change has met a hearty response in most of our churches. To them it has meant the fulfillment of a long cherished desire. They have never been divided in their interests and they have long wished that their promoters might see the missionary appeal as they have seen it. The churches, if they can voice their mind, will never permit their promoters to go back to the old plans.

This does not at all mean that we should cease to present to the churches and interest them in various phases of the missionary work. This must never come to an end.

The missionary enterprise is the scene of all its activities; but these activities are phases of our enterprise, not competing enterprises. We hope that our promoters will not cease to present the various phases of our great missionary program, in season and out of season. We shall demand this at their hands. It was all well enough to emphasize the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund as an end during the strenuous days of the campaign, but that fund is not really an end, it is only a means to an end, and the various phases of the great unified work which it is to finance must now be brought to the fore. We think that this one end of unification is worth all that this new program has cost.

raising of over twelve million dollars in a single year for our missionary and educational work is an achievement that can not be minimized. That this would have been possible without such agencies as the boards of promotion no one has suggested. The largest sum of money which the denomination ever raised before was the six million dollars secured by the National Committee of Northern Baptist Laymen, the organization out of which grew the General Board of Promotion. To that should be added perhaps one million more se-giving of any small group of men but of the very much higher standard of giving of large numbers of our people. Most of our people are giving as they never gave before. This means a new interest in the kingdom.

Then last of all we must not overlook the spiritual results which have been attained. These are the most important and the most significant. Not for a long period have we had such a quickened spiritual life in our churches nor so many accessions by baptism. The reports which have been coming in from all over the country, are such as to give joy to the heart of all of those who love their Lord. What else should we have expected? Were we not told that if we would bring in the tithes the should be opened? Has not God been true to his promise?

We do not pretend that we did a perfect thing at Denver—far from it. There is room for experiment. We shall make it. There have been some most unfortunate incidents. There is still much misunderstanding, but we have discovered during the year that as the real facts about this New World Movement have been explained and the situation has been clearly set forth, misunderstanding has been eliminated and critics have become friends and supporters more closely united.

It is a long way from Denver to Des Moines. We have traveled a long road. We have seen many things. We are confident that as we look back over the years to Denver, we shall set up a stone and say, "Hitherto hath the Lord led us."

cured in other ways for the state conventions and city mission society. That within two years we have been able to almost double that amount is in itself most remarkable. We may find flaws in the Board of Promotion. It may need amending in some minor particulars, but no loyal Baptist who cares supremely for the advancement of the kingdom of his Lord, can do anything else than render most generous and unqualified praise for the achievements of this board. Let him who criticizes point to a greater achievement.

This great fund of twelve million dollars is the result, not of the large

The Life That Counts

The life that counts must toil and fight;
Must hate the wrong and love the right;
Must stand for truth by day and night:
This is the life that counts.

The life that counts must aim to rise
Above the earth to sunlit skies;
Must fix its gaze on Paradise—
That is the life that counts.

The life that counts must helpful be;
In darkest night make melody;
Must wait the dawn on bended knee—
This is the life that counts.

The life that counts must helpful be;
The cares and needs of others see;
Must seek the slave of sin to free—
That is the life that counts.

Look, and You Will Know Why

WHY Northern Baptists have chosen Des Moines as the seat of their fourteenth annual convention is a question that answers itself, after a glance at the fruitful city, on the banks of the Des Moines and the Raccoon Rivers.

Des Moines, the capital of Iowa and the largest city in the state, conveniently situated on the main railroad lines, 312 miles west of Chicago, is a place where any traveller might well spend several days with

The city has 20 public parks, (with a total area of 260 acres,) and four public playgrounds. The Iowa State fair grounds, covering 277 acres, lie on the east side of the city, while a mile to the south is Fort Des Moines.

There are in the neighborhood of 400 industrial establishments in Des Moines. Among the leading industries are printing and publishing, foundry and machine-shop products, patent medicines and druggists' pre-unusual profit and interest. It is rich both in natural resources and in its buildings. Its form of government makes it one of the few cities in the United States where every citizen has a direct voice in city rulings. Thousands of young men and women flock to it every year because of its educational institutions. There are in the city nearly 100 Protestant churches of various denominations.

Visitors to Des Moines should make a point of seeing the State Capital Buildings, which cost, with their grounds, $3,000,000. Other buildings of unusual interest are, the State Historical Building, the U. S. Government Building, the City Hall, the County Court House, the Coliseum, and the public library. Of course, the most interesting of the educational institutions, from a Baptist point of view, is Des Moines College, a co-educational institution under Baptist control, established as long ago as 1865, and claiming among its alumni many of the best known Baptist leaders of the present days. Other educational institutions in the city are Drake University, Highland Park College, Grand View College, Still College of Osteopathy, Capital City Commercial College, the Cumming Art School and three public high schools.

parations. Besides these, there are a number of flour and grist mills, and lumber mills.

The commission form of government has been in effect in Des Moines since 1908. The entire voting population, under this form of city government, biennially elects five members on a non-partisan ticket, who become commissioners subject to recall on the petition of one fourth the entire number of registered and qualified electors. The people vote directly on the disposal of all franchises, and have the power to force the passage of any law or ordinance.

The city has an interesting, if fairly brief, history. Fort Des Moines was established in 1843 to guarantee government protection to the Sac and Fox Indians. Three years later it was rather extensively settled by emigrants from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri. The town of Des Moines was incorporated in 1861, and in 1867 it was granted a city charter. The same year it was made the State Capital, in place of Iowa City.

Churches in the Receiving Line

Baptist Churches of Des Moines throw open their doors to the Baptists of the North, and with a genuine Iowa welcome, say, "Come on!"

DES MOINES is a city of churches, there being in the neighborhood of one hundred churches of various denominations in this city. Among these are several strong Baptist churches, the largest being the First Baptist Church, with a membership of between eight and nine hundred. At present the First Church is without a pastor. Rev. Howland Hanson, now of Morgan Park, Ill., occupied the pulpit for fifteen years previous to his resignation last September.

The Forest Avenue Baptist Church has about five hundred members. It is located in the north central part of the city, and the pastor is Rev. H. R. Best, who is also chairman of the General Committee on Arrangements for the Northern Baptist Convention.

The Galilee Baptist Church is located in the east section of the city, and the pastor is Rev. Frank A. Case, who was for several years Superintendent of Missions in Des Moines. This church has about one hundred and seventy-five members.

The Calvary Baptist Church has between one hundred and fifty and two hundred members, and is located near the State Capitol. The pastor is Rev. H. O. Meyer.

In addition to these churches there are two chapels, the Lake Park Chapel, the membership of which is credited on the roll of the First Baptist Church, and the Bethel Chapel, whose members are credited on the roll of the Forest Avenue Church.

The Swedish Baptist Church has about one hundred and seventy-five members. The pastor is Rev. Axel Rendahl.

The Danish Baptist Church is smaller, and doesn't have a regular pastor, but Rev. N. S. Lawdahl acts in this capacity.

In addition to the white Baptist churches in the city, there are several strong colored churches. The Corinthian Baptist Church has a membership of about seven hundred and fifty, of which Rev. G. W. Robinson is pastor, and the Maple Street Baptist Church, with a membership of six hundred and twenty-five, of which Rev. Mr. Bates is pastor. Another colored Baptist church recently organized is the Union Church, of which Rev. E. L. Griffith is pastor.

Baptists of Iowa

BY H. R. BEST

Baptists in Iowa began with a love story in Kentucky—First church was organized in settler's cabin—Red skins and log huts marked the landscape—Pioneer church sounded the social note—Swift growth.

THE beginning of Iowa Baptists like the beginning of the race, is veiled in romance. There was no Garden of Eden with its fruits and flowers, its cooling shade and spice-laden zephyrs, but love there was, and the same olden, golden glory that arches above the rose-misted dreams of youth lit the scene.

We open this sketch therefore, with a pair of lovers in the old Brush Creek Baptist Church in Kentucky, —William Manley and Hepzibah Mathes. These two not only loved each other but soon learned to love God, and were baptized into the fellowship of the church by one Rev. Johnson Graham. Soon these two were wedded and then the scene suggests those infinite repetitions which are as old as the love making of the first pair amid the rustling fig leaves, and which are as new as the last thrill of the last pair of lovers who find "love at first sight" and stand beneath the trembling maple boughs with the silver moonlight casting its spell—but we must forbear.

Love, Red Skins, Log Huts

Well, these two hearts beating as one, moved from the old Kentucky home and in 1834 crossed the Father of Waters and settled in Iowa at a point where Burlington now stands.

Iowa, then a part of the great American desert, was the haunt of the Red Skins. A few log huts occupied by white people were the only finger boards that pointed to future greatness; there were no religious services or religious organizations.

These young Baptists brought with them the Articles of Faith of their church in Kentucky. In a little while they found a few others who desired religious privileges and together, they invited the Rev. John Logan of McDonough, Illinois, to visit the settlement and preach to them. According to Rev. S. H. Mitchell, author of "Historical Sketches of Iowa Baptists": "On the 19th day of October 1834, Elder Logan and Gardner Bartlett arrived in the settlement. On the same evening at the home of Noble Hously, Elder Logan preached what is believed the first sermon ever preached in this part of Iowa by an evangelical minister to a congregation of white people."

Eleven Supplied Leaven

This historian goes on to tell us that the next day a regular Baptist church was organized at Long Creek which later became the old Danville church. The following the the charter members: Enoch Cyrus, Rebecca Cyrus, Anna Cyrus and Frank Cyrus; Rachel and Mary Ann Dickens; Noble and Naomi Hously; William and Hepzibah Manley; and Jane Lamb. The Articles of Faith from the Brush Creek church, Kentucky, were adopted and are preserved until the present time.

From the simple beginning as stated above, one church of eleven members, there began to radiate christian influences. The leaven worked and the salt was applied, the little church grew and other ministers began to visit the various fields. These pioneer preachers were mostly from Illinois, and carried their torches of divine life to the crude settlements, that began to spring up in that elder day.

The second church was founded by Elders James and Moses Lemen and John Clark who hailed from Rock Springs, Ill. This church was a few miles from Burlington and was called at first, "The Baptized Church of Christ—Friends of Humanity." Something about this name has a sound of the modern social note and gleams like a star of prophecy above the horizon of these early beginnings. We are sorry to relate, however the name was later changed to the Rock Springs Church and the church soon ceased to exist.

The third Baptist church was organized a few miles north of Burlington in 1838 and the fourth in Lee County in 1839.

These three churches formed themselves into the first association. They met in a grove fourteen miles west of Burlington; the combined membership was ninety. Ten delegates were present at this memorable meeting. Nine of these delegates sat in a row on a log while the moderator stood before them, leaning on a chair, and directed their deliberations. This association, they first named the "Iowa Baptist Association" but later it was called the "Des Moines Association," which was later divided between two associations and the name lost.

At the end of the first decade, 1844, larger results began to appear. There were then 592 Baptists in the state; there were 42 baptisms reported that year.

In 1852, eight years later, there were three associations, fifty churches and 1996 members. At that time there was a Baptist to every 115 population, and there were thirty ministers.

Swift On-Going

The following years, 1852 until the beginning of the Civil War, are the most remarkable for growth in early Iowa Baptist history. The very next year the reports show four associations, sixty-five churches, thirty-six ministers, 299 baptisms and 2385 members. In the year 1858 there were 1890 baptisms; 1859 there were 1173 baptisms; and in 1860 there were 1324; this was a period of great revival.

SECOND CHURCH—STILL STANDING

It is not possible to tell the thrilling story of the work of our great Home Mission Society in its relationship to these pioneer days, but very soon after the organization of the society and in less than two years after the very beginning of Baptist work in Iowa, we find the Home Mission Society sending its representatives to preach to these pioneer people. Our people are more or less familiar with these great early efforts through the middle west, inspired and guided by this great organization. It constitutes a thrilling period in Baptist history.

During the years of the Civil War and following for a time, there was necessarily great depression; the church always suffers under war. Beyond question, it is better in defensive war to fight than to surrender one's principles, but war on any other ground is the most destructive, anti-Christian, and the most unholy experience that can come to human life. Surely we have had this lesson burned in, in the brief space intervening between the World War and today. If ever there was a time when Christian people should gird themselves and enter upon a league of churches to save the world from ultimate wreck and ruin in the return of wars, the fierceness of which staggers the imagination, that time is on us now.

Panic and Pother

The money panic of 1893 naturally impeded religious work. For many years a constant tide of emigration has flowed into the states further west. Those coming in to take their places, have not contained the large percentage of Baptists as former years. These are facts that help to explain why the Baptists are not more numerous in Iowa than they are.

Iowa Baptists, like all other Baptists, have had their disagreements. These splendid folk would be the last people on earth to claim perfection for themselves. Far be it from me, a "tender foot" in the state, to attempt to censure them for their past failings. We believe, however, that all will confess that Iowa Baptists have sometimes practiced their privilege of independence; they would not be Baptists if they did not. Some one has said, "a religious fool in any other denomination is a fool with a string on him, but a Baptist fool is a fool at large," but this saying is entirely too harsh to apply to the Iowa situation. Naturally, however, in our strong love of freedom, our individuality sometimes runs away with us, and good and wise brethren often emphasize their differences far more than their likenesses. Whatever there may be in the past of these Baptist controversies, it is our judgment that most of it "has flowed over the dam." As we see the situation today, our Iowa Baptists are facing the future. We are learning that the spirit of Christ in the heart is the "fundamental" and that we can find fellowship and can co-operate in the tasks of the Kingdom though we may not be able to agree on definitions and pronounce our shibboleths exactly alike.
